messe of pottage to that Prophet in the Lions den; as it seems to be but a Jewish fable, so the Jew that invented it, grounding his conceit upon this text, would expresse thus much, that as pottage (that succus benignus, as Keckerman calleth it) preserveth this naturall life from perishing: so doth faiths acting upon the promises, and extracting nourishment from the same, maintain life spirituall: and thereby it was that Daniel stopped the mouthes of the Lions, Heb. 11. How Habakkuk taketh out this his own lesson of living by faith, and not by sense, see chap. 3. 17. Although the fig-tree shall not blossome, &c. See here the life of faith, in the fail of outward comforts, so true is that of Solomon, Prov. 2. 7. The Lord layeth up sound wisdom for the righteous: When he is in greatest straits, then he hath such quietnesse, soundnesse, and presence of minde, as bears him up above all troubles: like as blown bladders do the body aloft all waters. Faith furnisheth him with strongest and most satisfying joyes; such as the flames cannot dry up, nor rivers of blood drown: faith actuated upon the promises maketh the beleever walk above the middle region of the air (as it were) in a continuall serenity, as Enoch did: and seal-eth him a double charter of privative, and positive priviledges. See it set down 1 Cor. 3. 21, 22, 23. Faith makes him live in the mouth of death, by strengthening him against the horrors of it Psal. 23. 4. Rom. 8. 38. Heb. 11. 31. 1 Cor. 15. 55, 56, 57. and by shewing him heaven beyond it, Heb. 11. 13. and therein freedom from all evil, fruition of all good.

Verse 5. Yea also because he transgresseth by wine ] Or, How. Much more because he is a wine-bibber, perfidious, proud, neither keepeth at home, &c. These four faults the Prophet here layeth to the charge of the Babylonian, and there-hence inferreth for the comfort of the distressed captives, that his destruction cannot be farre off: and therefore the just should mean-while, live by faith, and bear up under affliction. For if those that beleve not the promises, but shift and shirk for help and comfort elsewhere, shall smart for their unbelief, as vers. 4. where shall those appear that are here described? shall these bipedum nequissimi, worst of men escape by iniquity? Never think it. First, their drunkennesse alone would undo them; as it did Amnon, Elah, Nabal, Belshazzar, Bonosus, &c. Aristotle saith, that double punishments are due to drunkards: first, for their drunkennesse, and then for other sinnes committed in and by their drunkennesse. Nebuchadnezzar (or, as some will have it, Belshazzar) is here called wine, or, (by an ordinary ellipsis) a man of wine: not onely Meribibulus, but a deep and desperate drunkard, a very tunnish (as Diotimus of Athens was called,) a hogshhead, as young Cicero. No wonder therefore though he were all the rest that followeth. 1. Perfidious, to those that committed themselves to his trust, or made leagues with him, which he kept no longer then stood with his profit. 2. Proud, or Arrogant, Prov. 21. 24. See Dan. 4. 30. how he spreads his peacocks tail, and prides himself in it: his great wealth tumoured him up with great swalth. 3. He keepeth not at home ] Non habitabit, his own country will not contain him, but he encloseth all nations in his draw-net, chap. 1. 15. 4. He enlargeth his desire as hell ] which hath its name in Hebrew, from its unsatiableness, Prov. 30. 15, 16. and in Latine it is called Infernus ab inferendo, say some, from the devils continuall carrying in souls thither, and yet it is not filled. and is as death ] which is the end of all men, Eccles. 7. 2. the way of all flesh, 1 King. 2. 2. of all the earth, Iosh. 23. 14. the house appointed for all living, the great Congregation-house, Job 30. 23.

Τὸς μεθύοντι
διπλα τὸ ἐπὶ
τίμῃ. Arist.
Ethic. l. 2. c. 3.
γόνυ. Elian.
lib. 2. cap. 41.

Sheol.

and cannot be satisfied ] Lust is unsatisfiable, and whatsoever it getteth, is but as fuel to the fire. Ambition groweth as the Crocodile doth, as long as he liveth. It rideth without reins, and there is no hoe with it.

but gathereth unto him all nations, &c. ] All that he could come at; All Asia, and a great part of Africa; and could never have enough, till his mouth was filled with a spade-full of mould. Therefore, he shall not keep home, (so some read the words above in this verse) Ideo non manebis in habitaculo His kingdom shall not long continue, but after a few years be over-turned by the Persians: this golden head (as Daniel calleth the Babylonish Monarchy) held not up above 170: years, if we reckon from Merodach-Baladan the first founder, to Belshazzar, slain by Cyrus, who translated the kingdom to the Persians, Dan. 5.

Verse 6. Shall not all these take up a parable against him? ] Shall not the Babylonian, Ionian, who is now a terrour; be ere long a scorn? shall he not inherit with ignominie, reproach?

and a taunting proverb against him? Heb. An interpretation, and riddles: For example, Woe to him that increaseth that which is not his: that is both a proverb (because in many mens mouths) and an interpretation, because it is plain and perspicuous. But that which followeth is a riddle. That ladeth himself with thick clay. This Nut must be broken up, ere the kernell can be come at. See Judg. 7. 13.

Woe to him that increaseth that which is not his Heb. Lo, lo. Some render it, Hoe, he that multiplieth not for himself, but for another, sc. for the Medes and Persians, not Woe, but Hoe; a note of insulting, and upbraiding, answerable to the Latine Vah, Vah, tunc ille es, &c. Ah sirrah, are you he that increaseth that which is not yours, &c. Euge, Euge, tūc ille es.

Vesibibro.

how long? This is the common complaint of the oppressed nations, groaning out their grievances, and longing for deliverance from those troublets of the world. Neither is this usque quo in vain; for God is gracious: and may better stile himself then the great Turk, Awlem Penawh, that is, The worlds refuge: the poor mans King, as James 4. of Scotland was called.

and to him that ladeth himself with thick clay] With gold and silver, that guts and garbage of the earth; fitly called clay, because of the clogging and polluting property: and said to load people, as a sumpter-horse laden with treasure all day, but at night turned into a stinking stable, with his back full of gauls, and bruises. He that first called Riches, Bona, Goods, was mistaken; the Scripture calleth them, Thorns, snares, thick clay, &c. a great burden to the owner, according to the proverb, Magna navis, magna cura. A great ship is a great care: and the lading oft proves no better then that which Captain Forbisher brought back with him, after his Voyage to discover the Straits, viz. a great quantity of stones, which he thought to be Minerals: from which, when there could be drawn neither gold nor silver, nor any other mettall, they were cast forth to mend the high-ways. This was labour in vain, pressure to no purpose: and no lesse is theirs that heap up riches without right, Jer. 17. 11. or, if by right means, yet set their hearts upon them, Psal. 62. 10. still striving (as they say the toad doth) to die with as much earth in their mouths as may be; till at length their Never-enough, be quit with fire-enough in the bottom of hell. Necessan the Lawyer was wont to say, He that will not venture his body, shall never be valiant: he that will not venture his soul, never rich. O curva in terras anima, & celestium inanes. Is it nothing to lose an immortal soul? to purchase an everlasting death? to sink into the bottomlesse lake under this thick clay.

Camd. Elisab.
189.

Verse 7. Shall they not rise up suddenly that shall bite thee? Rent and tear thee, as hunting-dogs do the beast they pursue. See Esay 13. 14, 21. Jer. 58. and 51. The interrogation here used, importeth both the certainty of the thing, and their security: as if no such thing could possibly befall them: Suddenly therefore, saith the Prophet, shalt thou be surprized, and spoyled by the Persians, when thy city Babylon is held impregnable, and boasteth of provision enough laid in for twenty years siege. Security is the certain Usher of destruction; as we see in Benhadads army, and those Midianites, Judg. 7. and the Amalekites, 1 Sam. 30. and Pompeyes marching against Cesar; and the French at the battle of Agincourt: so confident they were of a victory, that they sent to our King Henry 5. who was then in the field against them, and gat the day, to know what ransom hee would give, &c.

Speed. 795.

Verse 8. Because thou hast spoyled many nations God loves to retaliate (as hath before been oft observed) to spoil the spoilers, by a remnant of the people, by such as were of no note, and much unlikely to do such exploits. Thus he spoiled these Babylonians by Cyrus, and his Medes; the Persians, by Alexander and his Macedonians (whom they so slighted, that Darius in his proud Embassie to him, called him his servant, but himself the King of kings, and Cousin of the gods.) So the Roman Empire was miserably rent and torn by the Gothes, Vandals, Hunnes, Lombards, people not before heard of: and the Greek Empire, by Turks, Tartars, Saracens, Scythians, &c. that it might the better appear, hac non sine numine fieri, that it was the Lords own doing: who often suffers his enemies, like Adoniah's guests, guests,

guests, to feast and frolick in a jocund security and promise of continued prosperity: But at last, when they are at the height of their joyes and hopes, he confounds all their devises, and layes them open to the scorne of the world, and the spoyle of the remnant of the people whom they vilified.

Rev. 16. 6.
Psal. 55. 23.

[because of mens blood] Heb. bloods, every drop whereof had a tongue to cry to God for vengeance saying, Give them blood to drink, for they are worthy, Oh let not bloody and deceitfull men live out half their dayes. That souldier can never answer it to God that hath not a good cause, and striketh not rather as a Justicer, then as a souldier.

Ishon.

[and for the violence of the land] Heb. of the earth, though principally of that land of desires the promised land, and the inhabitants thereof whom he that touched, touched the apple of Godseye, that little man in the eye that may not be medled with Zach. 2. 8.

[of the city] Jerusalem, called the city by an excellency, and by a better right then ever Rome was. See Lam. 1. 1. and Jeremies elegie there over it, when captivated by these Chaldees.

Verse 9. Woe to him that coveteth an evill covetousnesse] For there is a good covetousnesse (which few are guilty of) 1 Cor. 12. 31. Covet earnestly the best gifts: And yet shew I unto you a more excellent way: Covet earnestly the best graces, such as are faith, hope and charity, these are better then gifts. A shop full of barrells enrich not, unlesse they be full of commodities. Gifts (as to heaven) are but the lumber of a Christian: 'tis grace makes him rich toward God, and of that he cannot be too covetous. But the covetousnesse of the Caldeans here threatened and thundered against, was of another nature. It is called an evill covetousnesse, and hath its name in the Originall of piercing or wounding, as Joel 2. 8, and fitly, both in respect of a mans self 1 Tim. 6. 10. and others Prov. 1. 19. Am. 9. 1. and here. Woe to such, and destruction too, as Hof. 7. 13. The Lord to shew his just indignation against Covetous persons smiteth his fists at them, as Balac did at Balaam Num. 24. 10. See Ezek. 22. 13. Behold, I have smitten mine hand at thy dishonest gaine which thou hast made, and at thy blood which hath been in the middst of thee. Now lest people should object or conceive that those were but great words: and that the Lord would not do so as he said; or that they should deale well enough with Him: therefore it followeth verse 14. Can thine heart endure, or can thine hands be strong in the dayes that I shall deale with thee? I the Lord have spoken, and will do it,

De vita Constant: lib. 5.

[to his house] i. e. to his family and posterity, which he intends to advance, but indeed undoes them, by leaving them a curled hoard of ill-gotten goods: wherein they do them a greater displeasure then Joab, and Gebezi, did in leaving their children the leprosy for a legacy. Job speaketh chap. 15. 34. as though the wicked, when they set up their houses by pilling and polling, by getting riches without right, did but make a stack of wood, and then comes a spark of Gods wrath, and makes an end of all. As in another place, Brimstone, saith He, shall be scattered upon his habitation chap. 18. 15. so that if the fire of Gods displeasure do but light upon it, &c. Thus Dioclesian that cruell persecutor had his house wholly consumed with lightening, and a flame of fire that fell from heaven upon it, as Eusebius tells us. Add hereunto, that many times there comes a son that is as good with a fork, as his father was with a rake: as great a spend-all, as his father was a get-all.

[that he may set his nest on high] and there feather it at his pleasure (see Obad 4.) and secure his children, like as the Eagle builds on high, to save her yong from the serpent that seekes to destroy them.

[that he may be delivered from the power of evill] which he hath cause to feare from others, to whom he hath been so injurious and oppressive. But how will he be hid or freed from the terrours of his own guilty conscience: well he may build cities with Cain, and set up high towers with Phocæus, but what said the oracle to him? Though thou set up thy strong-holds as high as heaven, yet sin at the foundation thereof, will soon overturn all, and lay it level with the ground.

Verse 10. Thou hast consulted shame to thy house &c.] Thou hast taken a wrong course both for thy house of the kingdom (so the Persians called the kings palace

Dan.

Dan. 4. 27.) which shall be blown up: and for thine own private family and posterity: it is not all thy care, paines, plotting and practising, that can preserve it from ignominy and utter ruine. God will turn thy glory into shame, and make thy name to rot and stink as putrified flesh Prov. 10. 7. and ver. 9. He that perverteth his wayes shall be known. And when such a man is raked up in the dust, his evill courses shall be cast as dung in the faces of those whom he leaveth behind him. What fooles then are Extortioners, Muckwormes and Cormorants, that live miserably and deale unjustly, opening the mouthes of all to cry out upon their craftinesse, covetousnesse and cruelty, and yet think to raise up their houses and advance their names, and adorne their children with glory and estimation?

by cutting off many people] A poore glory it was to Sylla to have made such a mercilesse massacre at Athens: and after that, to have proscribed and slaine 4700. citizens of Rome, as he caused it to be publicly recorded, videlicet ne memoria tam praelara rei delueretur, saith mine Authour. So for Julius Caesar to have been the death of a million of men, Mahomet the great Turk, of 800000. So for Stokeley bishop of London to boast upon his death-bed, that he had in his time brought to the fire fifty heretikes, as he called them: or for the bloody Spaniards, that they have murdered fifty millions of Indians in 42. yeers, as Acofta the Jesuite testifieth.

σφαγήν αἰε-
λούς.

Johnst. de
Nat. Const.

and hast sinned against thy soule] The worth whereof is incomparable, the losse irreparable, as Chriit (who only went to the price of soules) telleth us Mat. 16. 26. It was therefore no ill counsell that Francis Xaverius gave Iohn 3. King of Portugall to meditate every day a quarter of an houre on that divine sentence, What shall it profit a man to win the world, and lose his soule? Neither was it any evill answer that Maximilian (King of Bohemia, afterwards Emperour) gave the Pope, who perswaded him to be a good Catholike with many promises of profits and preferments: the king answered, I thank your holinesse: but my soules health is dearer to me then all the things in the world. This pleased not the Pope, who said that it was a Lutheran form of speech: and yet that of Lewis king of France about the yeer 1152. pleased him much worse, who cast his Bulles (whereby he required the fruites of vacancies of all Cathedrall Churches of France) into the fire, saying, I had rather the Popes bulles should roast in the fire, then that my soule should fry in hell.

Hist. of Counc. of Trent. 429.
Speed 496.

Verse 11. For the stone shall cry out of the wall, and the beame out of the timber shall answer it] Here are wofull Antiphonies screech-owles of woe cry aloud from the beames of the oppressours chambers, and make most hideous noises in the eares of their consciences. So that although none other should dare to mute against them, or accuse them of wrong-dealing; yet their very houses built by rapine and blood shall testifie against them: so shall other creatures that grone under their abuses Rom. 8. 19, 20, 21, 22. They seeme all to say unto us those 3. words, saith Hugo, Accipe, Redde, Fuge; Accipe beneficium, Redde Officium, Fuge Supplicium.

Lib. 2. de Ar-
cap. 3.

Now if we harken not to them but do the contrary, they shall be one day as so many swift witnesses against us.

and the beame out of the timber shall answer it] Tignum è ligno respondet ei. An allusion to responsores, as in Quires and musick: And perhaps the Prophet here tacitely taxeth the Babylonian luxury in keeping Quiristers and Musicians for their sinfull delight. God, saith he, will fit you with other singsters shortly, that shall twit you by turns with your murders and ravages: for the stone shall cry out of the wall, Woe to him that buildeth a town with bloods: and the beame out of the timber shall answer it, And wo to him that stablisheth a city by iniquity.

Verse 12. Wo to him that buildeth a town with blood] This seemeth to be the senselesse creatures black Cantus (as they call it) chaunted out against the wrong-doer, by Gods own appointment, cui obscura clarent, muta respondent, silentium conficiunt, saith an Ancient,

— cui servi ut taceant, jumenta loquentur,

Juvenal.

The very beasts have a verdict to passe upon oppressours; as the dumb Ass did upon Balaam: yea the lifelesse creatures shall ring a dolefull knell of Woe and alas alasse in their cares, and cry them guilty: as the earth did Cain, and the heaven did Phocas; and as the tignum e ligno doth here Nebuchadnezzar. His town of Babylon was built in blood by Semiramis who slew her husband, so was Rome by Romulus, so was Alexandria in Egypt by Alexander that great man-slayer, the founder of populous No. of whole Woe reade Nab. 3. 8, 10. with the Note. And for Alexander himself, he lay unburied thirty dayes together, neither did his bloody conquest above ground purchase him any title for an habitation under ground. The like befell our Conquerour William, who laid his foundation here upon fire-works: and was punished in his posterity for his depopulations at Newforrest, and elsewhere.

Speed.

and stablisheth a city by iniquity] That thinketh so to stablish it, but it proveth otherwise. Josephus telleth us that Nebuchadnezzar set three severall walles of brick about his Babylon, one within another: but all would not do, when once God took it to do. Oppression is a bony sin Am. 5. 12, 13.

Joseph. lib. 10. chp. 11.

Verse 13. Behold is it not of the Lord of hosts, that the people shall labour in the fire] Labour in vaine to quench the fire, wherewith Babylon shall be burnt, Jer. 51. 58. Or have laboured to no purpose in building that city, and enlarging that Empire, which now God will have down. Is it not evident, that they have lost oleum & operam, yea hazarded their own lives, as those do that strive against a flame. What profit hath he that laboureth for the wind Eccles. 5. 16. much lesse he that laboureth in the fire, that devouring element. See Esay 33. 14. Possibly he may be saved himself, yet so as by fire, but his work shall be burnt, that losse he shall suffer 1 Cor. 3. 15. As they that seek after the Philosophers stone labour in the very fire to as little purpose as may be: for they must use so much gold, and spend so much gold, and then perhaps they can turn as much into gold by it, as they have spent in making of it. Hence One calles Alchymy A multiplying of something by nothing; Another, an Omne, Aliquid, Nihil. Another an art without art, never taught by Moses and Miriam, as some have doted, and delivered, that this was a peece of their Egyptian learning. But it is certain that those holy soules never either learned or taught any such laborious losse of time and money. Demetrius Phalerens complaineth of these Alchymists long agoe not without indignation quod certis consumptis incertorum gratia, qua se capturos sperabant, non ceperunt, quod vero habebant abjecerint, that they cast away certainties for uncertainties, that they attained not what they hoped for, but cast away what they had. Julius Scaliger also Fornaculas istas odi, saith He, odio plus quam Vatiniano. Sunt enim noctua ad aucupia crumenarum. I cannot abide those fornaces: indeed they are pick-purses &c. know there is a true Alchymy called by some the Spagirick art, being in great use in physick. This I condemne not, so it be warily and wisely dealt in. But this by the way only. It seemed to some an impossible thing that Babylon should so suddenly be destroyed as was foretold verse. 7. It will be done cito, cito, penitus, suddenly, surely, severely, saith the Prophet, for the Lord of Hosts hath undertaken the doing of it. Annon ecce a Domino exercituum? (so the Hebrew hath it by an emphaticall Aposiopesis) Is it not, (look you) of the Lord of Hosts? The people shall labour in the very fire,

Athenaus

Ad Cardan. exerc. 23. p. 100.

the nations also shall weary themselves for very vanity] Viz. in seeking to save Babylon, which by a divine decree is to be destroyed without remedy, Psa. 137. 8. So is Rome that other Babylon Rev. 18. 2. cito isidem casura, si vos essetis viri, said Petrarch long since. It would soon be down, would you but stand up as men. Neither shall the Jesuites (that ultimus diaboli crepitus) be able to uphold it: there is a cold sweat upon all the limbes of Antichrist already.

De rem. ut. fort. dial. 118.

Verse 14. For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord &c.] He shall make himself a glorious name among the nations of the earth, by executing vengeance upon Babylon, and so pleading the cause of his oppressed people (whom he seemed, during their captivity there to neglect) that men shall have cause to say, Verily there is a reward for the righteous: verily there is a God that judgeth in the earth, Psal. 58. 11.

as the waters cover the sea] the chanell of the sea: that is plentifully, and abundantly, See a like promise, Isay 11. 9. but to another purpose. That's a famous promise of the comming and kingdome of Christ: and so some Interpreters apply this, this. Wherein though they seem to be mistaken, considering the context: yet the Ancients rightly here-hence argued, that Christ would certainly come again to judgement, because many wicked men escape in this world without condigne punishment, which then they shall be sure of, 2 Thes. 1. 6, 9. Then all shall be set to right, though now they may seem lesse equally carried: and the reason of Gods proceedings with men shall be cleared up, which now also we are bound to beleieve to be (sometimes secret, but) ever just. At the day of judgement we shall see an excellent harmony in this discord of things: and all obscure passages shall bee made as plain to us, as if they were written with the most glittering Sun-beam, upon a wall of Chryftall. Then shall this sweet promise have its full accomplishment. The earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea, in greatest abundance, and redundancy.

Verse 15. Wo unto him that giveth his neighbour drink ] The Babylonians (among other their flagitious practises afore-mentioned) were much addicted to drunkennesse, as is recorded by Herodorus, Ctesias, and others. Their land was sick of drink, and would therefore spew them out: They themselves were men of wine, verse 5. (See the Note) and should therefore drink deep of the wine of Gods fierce wrath. They drank to their neighbours, or companions, not in a way, either of curtesie, or charity, but purposely to intoxicate them, to make them drunk, that they might either deride them, or abuse them to filthy pleasure, or both: they buckt them with drink, and then laid them out to be sunn'd, and scorned, as Noah was by his gracelesse sonne. Therefore as he cursed Ham (though Scaliger excuse him) and it stuck to his posterity for ever: so doth God here denounce a woe to drunkards, and so sets it on, as no creature shall ever bee able to take it off.

that puttest thy bottle to him ] Not thy bowle onely, but thy bottle, that he may drink, and be drunk, and spew, and fall, &c. Jer. 25. 27. This is ordinarily practised by our Roaring-boyes, (as they will needs be called by a wofull prolepsis, Here for hereafter) in their Cyclopicall, κυκλοπικῶς. Either by perswasions, or threats, the bottle is set to the mouth, and must be emptied, ere it come thence. The civil, sober, and temperate man is urged, and it may be forced to swallow down long and needlesse draughts (as a horle doth a drench) by domineering drunkards, that they may see his nakednesse, triumph over him, as laid up, or (as the new terme is) satisfied. Their vile courses are here graphically, and in lively colours described by the holy Ghost; to set forth the hatefulness thereof, and how wofull will be the issue. There are that read the words thus. That puttest thine anger to him, thy fervour, and thy fury, viz. if he pledge thee not whole-ones, and drink not all the Outs, as they call them. Domitius, the father of Nero, slew Liberius, an honest Roman, because he refused to drink so much as he commanded him. Others read it, That puttest thy poison to him: and indeed, Ebrietas est blandus demon, dulce venenum, suave peccatum, &c. Drunkennesse is a fair-spoken devil, a pleasant poison, a sweet sinne, which he that hath in him, hath not himself, and which he that runs into, runs not into a single sinne, but is wholly turned into sinne. How often, (saith a grave Divine) have I seen vermine sucking the drunkards blood, as fast as he, that of the grape, or mault, yet would he not leave his hold, or lose his draught? Gualther reads it, Conjungens fervorem tuum, Joyning thine heat, inflaming thy self, that thou mayest drink him under the board. This was great Alexanders sinne, and ruine: so it was M. Antonies, (who wrote a book of his abilities to drink down others) and before them both Darius's, as Athenaus hath left recorded. How much better his successour Ahasuerush, who made a law at his great feast, that every man should drink according to his pleasure, Esth. 1. 8. So Minos, king of Creet ordered, that his subjects should not drink one to another, eis alium, unto drunkennesse.

Sueton.

De sua bibacitate librum conscripsit seu potius evomuit.
Metod.

Quinetiam Sparsa mos est laudabilis ille, Ut bibat arbitrio pocula quisque suo.

Among the old Germans, diem noctemque continuare potando, nulli probrium, saith Tacitus, It was no disgrace to drink night and day together. It is still the sinne of Camd. Elis.

231.

of that nation, as Gualther upon this text heavily complaineth; and it is grown to a proverb, the Drunken Dutch-man. Of them, the English, much commended for their sobriety, learned in the Netherland-warres, to drown themselves by immoderate drinking: and by drinking to others healths, to impair their own: so that in our dayes came forth the first restraint thereof by severity of lawes, saith Camden: who yet, being so great an Antiquary, could not but know, that in the year 959. Edgar king of this land, made an Ordinance for putting pinnes in cups, that none should quaffe whole ones.

Natal. Comes Epist. 84. damon meridianus

Heyl. Geog.
793.

Luke 16.

And makest him drunk also] Robbest him of himselfe, and layest a beast in his roome. The same Hebrew word Zolel signifieth a drunkard and a vile person: filthy venomous creatures breed in those fennish grounds Iob 40. 21. Behemoth lieth in them; which Gulielmus Parisiensis applyeth to the Devil in drunken hearts: whereas in dry places, sober souls, be walketh about seeking rest but findeth none Mat. 12. 43. The very Heathen in hatred of this sinne fained that Cobali (an hurtfull and pernicious kind of Devils) accompanied Bacchus: and that Acratus, or the intemperate Devil was their Captain. Seneca calleth it a voluntary madnesse, another a noon-day Devill, no more a night-walker, as once, 1 Thef. 5. 7. The Lacedemonians punished it severely; so do the Turks at this day, powring ladle-fuls of boyling lead down their throats sometimes: and at least bastinadoing of them on the bare feet, till they are disabled for walking in haste again to their conventicles of good-fellowship. Morat Bassa commanded a pipe to be thrust thorow the nose of a Turk, which was found taking Tobacco: and so in derision to be led about Constantinople. Let men shun this shamefull sinne; and be farre from drawing others to it: for have they not sins enough of their own to answer for? Must they needs go to hell in company? Dives desired that his brethren and companions in sinne, might not come to that place of torment. This he did, not out of any good will to them, but because he knew, if they were ever damned, he should be double-damned.

That thou maist look on their nakednesse] Those parts that nature would have covered are called nakednesse per Antiphrasin. To look on them with delight, is by some held a sinne against Nature: the ground of their opinion is, Gen. 3. 7. To make men drunk for that purpose, is worfe. But if for further abuse of their bodies to uncleannesse, (as Attalus the Macedonian dealt by Pausanias a young Courtier, who afterwards slew King Philip, because he would not punish Attalus, for so doing) that's worst of all: and hath a woe, woe, woe, hanging at the heeles of it.

*Pausaniam so-lutum mero At-talus non sua
tantum verum
et convivarum
libidini, velut
seorum, vile subjecti, ludi-briumque omnium mercedem
reddidit.*
Lucifer. theat.

*Homo virum similimus. Et rigida innu-
cia. Vell. lib. 2.*

Verse 16. Thou art filled with shame for glory] Or, more with shame then with glory. That is thou shalt be filled shortly with ignominy for that glory wherein thou presently pridest thy selfe: thy drunkenesse shall redound to thine utter disgrace, as it was to Darius, Alexander, Antoninus, Bonofus, Trajan (a good Emperour otherwise, but a drunkard, and a pederast, as Dio Cassius reporteth him.) Yea Cato, that most severe censurer of other mens manners; to whom it was sometime objected (how deservedly I know not) quod nocturnis potationibus indulgeret, that by night he would drink soundly. This is a blurre to him, if true, and confutes that elogium given him by Paterculus, that he was omnibus humanis vitiis immunis, free from all vices, and as like vertue her selfe as might be. In Scripture, the drunkards stile begins in lawlesnesse, proceeds in unprofitablenesse, ends in misery; and all shut up in that denomination of his pedigree, A sonne of Belial.

Drink thou also] Sith thou art so able at it (sith thou hast so well deserved that infamous Epitaph of a certain drunkard.

Johnst. de Natur. constant.

Hec, hic situs est Offellius Buratius Bibulus, Qui dum vixit, aut bibit aut minxit. abi praeceps)

Drink another while of the cup of shame and sorrow: take thy part of all manner of miseries Ier. 25. 26. Obad. 16. Snares, fire and brimstone, and an horrible tempest shall one day be the portion of thy cup: For the righteous Lord loveth righteousnesse Psal. 11. 6. 7. Yea he loveth to retaliate and will therefore make these drunkards drink also: and those that made others drunk that they might look on their nakednesse, to lie with their fore-skins uncovered to their perpetual reproach. Uncircumcision was a shameful spectacle indeed among that people.

The

The cup of the Lords right hand shall be turned to thee] Heb. turned about, or shall turn it selfe, quia rerum omnium vicissitudo: thy turn is now come to take off the dregs of Gods cup of calamity Ier. 25. 15. that hath eternity to the bottome.

And shamefull spewing shall be on thy glory] Kikalon a compound word, the vomit, of ignominy: a fit punishment for filthy drunkards, who break their heads, as swine do their bellies, over-charge their stomachs as dogges do their gorges, and then disgorge themselves in a shamefull sort, as Antonius did at Narbon amidst his guests at a feast: and as Eccius, Luthers great adversary, whom he merrily called Ieccius, from his casting: as Tiberius was nicknamed Biberius.

shall be on thy glory] The Hebrew word for glory, properly signifieth weightinesse: as the word twice here used for shame, signifieth lightnesse: an elegant opposition, shewing that whatsoever the Babylonians gloried in, and held themselves honourable for, should be lightly accounted of, and lie buried in the sheet of shame; as in a dung-hill of filthy vomit.

Verse 17. For the violence of Lebanon shall cover thee] Here, for the comfort of Gods people (which is the main scope of this prophesie) he repeateth the chief causes of Babylons calamity: viz. her cruelty to Lebanon, that is, to all Judæa (a part being put for the whole.) Or else he speaketh of the violence done to the Temple, which was built of the cedars of Lebanon; as was likewise the Temple of Diana at Ephesus made of Cedar-wood. The devil loves to be Gods ape. This violence in firing the Temple, and desolating the countrey, shall cover thee all over, as a garment doth the body: yea, it shall be as the shirt, made for the murdering of Agamemnon, where the head had no issue out.

and the spoil of beasts which made them afraid] Men are here called beasts, as the land, Lebanon: these were spoiled and terrified, these were murdered and massacred by the Chaldeans, who shall therefore be severely punished, and this written, as it were, over their heads, to signifie for what they suffer. Because of mens blood, and for the violence of the land, of the city, and of all that dwell therein. See the Note on verse 8.

Verse 18. What profiteth the graven image] The Chaldees promised themselves much help against their enemies from their idols: and were ready to say, as that Roman Emperour Antoninus the Philosopher did, when he was to meet his enemy, Non sic deos colimus. ut ille nos vinceret. We have not so served the gods, as that he should overcome us. The Prophet here rejecteth their confidence, and layeth open their folly. See the like, Ier. 10. 8, 14, 15. Zech. 10. 2. Esay 44. 16, 17, &c. Confer Ier. 51. 47, 52. Ezek. 20. 30, 32.

*Ita refer. - Vulcat. Gallic.
in Avid. Cass.*

that the maker thereof hath graven it] And can he hope for help from the work of his own hands? can the image give that to others, which it hath not for it self? In Henry the eights time, one Mr. Cotismore was accused of heresie, for saying, that Images were but Carpenters chips; and that when men go to offer to them, they did it to shew their new gear. The men of Cockram, not pleased with their new Rood, quarrelled with the joyner, and refused to pay him: he complained to the Major of Doncaster, who gave them this counsell; Pay the poor man his money, and go your wayes home, and look on it, and if it will not serve for a god, make no more ado, but clap a pair of horns on his head, and so he will make an excellent devil. This the Parishioners took well in worth: the poor man had his money, and diverse laughed well thereat: but so did not the Babylonish priests, saith Mr. Fox. Horace brings in Priapus, that ridiculous garden-god, saying, thus,

*Act. & Mon.
763.*

Ibid. 1340.

Olim truncus eram ficulnus, &c.

He thought no otherwise of the Images of Jupiter, and the rest: but durst not say so, for fear of the people. So that of him it might be said, as Augustine doth of Seneca, who wrote a book against superstitions, but colebat quod reprehendebat, agebat quod arguebat, quod culpabat, adorabat, he reproved them, but yet used them.

*De civ. Dei.
lib. 5. c. 10.*

the molten image, and a teacher of lies] Pictura falsa veritas est, saith One. It is but a shadow of the person that it representeth. God cannot be pictured, or expressed

O o

In vii Num.
Lib 15.

Par. Proleg.
in Genes.

pressed by any image. Images of Christ are not onely defects, but also lies, saith the Homily against perill of idolatry, set forth in Queen Elizabeths dayes. Irenaus reproveth the Gnosticks for carrying about the images of Christ, made in Pilates time, after his own proportion, Lactantius saith, that there is no religion where there is an image. Varro had said the same long before him, as Austin reciteth him. Plutarch saith, it is sacriledge to worship by images, &c. and telleth us, that Numa forbad the Romans the use of images in temples; neither had they any for the first 170. years together, no more had the Persians, saith Strabo, nor the old Germanes, saith Tacitus. The old Britones indeed had their idols, Portenta diabolica (so Gildas calleth them) penè numero Egyptiaca vincentia, ugly for shape, and almost as many as the Egyptians for number. These all fell down together, when Christ was first known here (as they say the Egyptian idols did, when Christ with his parents fled thither, for fear of Herod) but Antichrist soon set up others in their stead, and taught the people that they were Lay mens books. But if they be lying teachers, (as here they are called) they must be lying books too; and therefore not to be read by any that would receive the love of the truth, that they may be saved. Bern in Swisserland, was the first town, that after the Reformation, was purged of images; making a bone-fire of them, on an Ashwednesday. The like was done here in England, in King Edward 6. his raigne, on that very day wherein the victory was gotten at Mulseborough in Scotland: and now I hope we are rid of them for ever. The Turks will not endure them, no not upon their coynes; becaufe of the second Commandement: for they also do so honour Moses his writings, that they kisse any piece of Paper, wherein any thing of his is written, and do exceedingly hate Papists for their abominable idolatry: as do likewise the Jewes.

that the maker of his work trusteth therein ] Which he would never do, if not bewitched, and bereft of his right mind. To trust in a god of a mans own making, is a prodigious errour, a stupendious stupidity.

to make dumb idols ] In the Hebrew there is an elegant Agnomination, Elilim illemim, speechlesse, No-gods, that give no answer to their suitours, and — quorum sunt numina nominatantum.

Thef. Ling.
sanct.

Spec. Eur.

Esay 42.8.

Verse 19. Woe unto him that saith to the wood, Awake ] It is wood still, and yet he saith to it, Awake, Arise, &c. as if he would deny his own reason, and un-man himself. When Hezekiah saw that such was the venome of the Israelitish idolatry, that the brazen-Serpent stung worse then the fiery, he pulled it down, and in contempt called it Nehushtan, that is, a piece of brasse, 2 King 18. 4. Pagnine rendreth it, anulum. Marinus, aniculum, that is, parum quid aris, a little piece of forry brasse. The Jewes at this day say, that as long as they see the Preacher direct his speech and prayer to that little wooden crucifix, that standeth in the pulpit by him, to call it his Lord, and Saviour, to kneel to it, to embrace it, to kisse it, to weep upon it, (as is the fashion of Italy) this is preaching sufficient for them: and perswadeth them more with the very sight of it to hate Christian religion, then any reason that the world can alledge to love it. Woe therefore to those Popish-Idolaters, becaufe of offences: destruction to them, that thus say to the wood, Awake, and to the dumb stone, Arise ] A prayer, fit to be prefer'd to God onely, (as Psal. 35. 23.) who giveth not his glory to any other, nor his honour to graven images. He that is the right object of mens prayers, must be omnipotent, omnipresent, omniscient, a God also in covenant with us, &c. Is any wood or stone so? Is it not inutile lignum a dead stock? Eben dumam, a dumb stone? Our English seems to come of the Hebrew.

It shall teach ] Dumb, and yet teach? Others read it questionwise, Ipse doceat? Can it teach? What better lesson can ye learn from it then a lie, as verse 18? Bid adieu to it therefore, as King Hen. 8. did to the Pope (if he had done so to Popery too, it had been better for him) in his Protestation against him. England is no more a babe, to be led and fed with lies—. Surely except God take away our right wits, not onely the Popes authority shall be driven out for ever, but his name also shortly shall be forgotten in England. We will from henceforth ask counsell of him and

AB. & Mon.
990.

and his when we list to be deceived, when we covet to be in error, when we desire to offend God, truth and honesty &c.

behold it is laid over with gold and silver] q. d. Come and see, beleve your own eyes at least, behold the matter, form, workmanship of this new-made god, and grow wiser. The Rood of Grace with all its trinkets, the blood of Hales (that notable impostor) was laid open at Pauls crosse by Cromwell, and there viewed and torn in peeces by the people.

Ibid. 1084.

there is no breath at all in the midst of it] No soule, not so much as that of a beast. O pulchrum caput, sed cerebrum non inest, said the ape (in the fable) coming once into a cavers shop. The best thing that an image can teach a man is, that it self is dumb and dead: and that the maker thereof cannot give life and breath to it, much lesse a deity.

Æsop.

Verse 20. But the Lord is in his holy Temple] It is not enough to condemne superstitions: but we must know and serve the true God in a true manner. Tully wished that he could as easily find out the true religion, as disprove the false ones. Cambyfes destroyed the Egyptian idols, rather in scorn of all religion, then hatred of idolatry. Lucian feared the heathen-gods: and yet was an enemy to Christianity. Erasmus was no Papiist, nor yet good Protestant. Henry the 8. despised the old religion, and yet envied the new. There are many (said He in Parliament) that are too busy with their new Sumpsinus: and others that dote too much upon their old Mumpsinus &c. Hence it is that the Prophet here to those dunghill-deities of the heathens, those dead idols, opposeth the living and onely true God, Jehovah, saith he, is in his holy Temple: that Esseniat who hath his being of himself, and gives being to all things else (ὁὐκ ἐκ ἀλλοτρίου St. Paul elegantly expresseth it Act. 17. 25. He is in his holy Temple, sc. in heaven by his power and glory, and in his Church on earth by his grace and goodnesse. The use of which doctrine followeth.

De nat. deus.

let all the earth keep silence before him] Heb. sc. or be still, all the earth &c. Reverentia causa silete, Tremble at his judgements, trust in his promises, wait upon him in his ordinances, walk before him in obedience, speake not of him or to him, but as knowing your distance, your infancie. In speaking of God, our best eloquence is silence, saith Mr. Hooker. In speaking to him, quanta cum reverentia, quanto timore, quanta humilitate, accedere debet à palude sua procedens & repens vilis ranuncula, saith Bernard? with what reverence and godly feare, with what humility, should a poor small frog, creeping out of his mud, draw neer unto this great God, before whom Angels appeare with greatest self-abasements? what abhorrency then and self-annihilation can be sufficient to accompany our approaches to this great God of heaven? And how should the enemies of the Church stand in aw, and even quake before him, wriggling into their holes, as wormes do, when it thundreth, and being all hush, as sheep are before the wolfe, birds before the hawk, all the beasts of the field before the lion when he roareth.

Bern. de divers. 25.

CHAP. III.

Verse 1. A prayer of Habbakkuk the Prophet] Habakkuk signifieth a Wrestler, that by closing striveth to get the better, as hath been before noted on chap. 1. 1. To close with the adversary is the best way to supplant him, or to avoid the blow: so is running in to God, the way to escape him. The Prophet had heard Gods speech and was afraid verse 2. He saw his wrath ready to break forth; and therefore gets in with him by this prayer. He knew that,

Flectitur iratus voce rogante Deus.

Ovid.

God suffereth himself oft to be overcome by the prayers of his people: and yeeldeth much unto them, when most bitterly bent Mat. 24. 20. he therefore fers shoulders and sides to work, and wrestle lustily in this chapter. He knew it was a Prophets work, to pray as well as preach: and between these two, to divide his time. God forbid (saith Samuel, who is reckoned the first of Prophets)

Act. 3. 24.

נְבִיא

Lam. 3.

Ἀκούσας δὲ.

phets) that I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for you: I will also teach you the good and right way 1 Sam. 12. 23. So doth this Prophet: he both preferreth a prayer (the word, say some, signifieth such a prayer as is made by a Mediator before a Judge; we have an advocate with the Father 1 Ioh. 2. 1.) and dedicated the same to the people, to be used by them in the time of the captivity: which yet they shamefully neglected to do, as Daniel acknowledgeth chap. 9. 13. or if they did any thing towards it, they merely sought themselves in it, and so lost their labour, Zech. 7. 5. whereas had they prayed as here is prescribed, confessing their sins, and beseeching God not to deal with them after their deserts, but according to his ancient loving kindnesse that never faile, they might have found mercy. The Altar of incense stood against the Mercy-seat: and Rev. 9. 13. the prayers of the Saints from the foure corners of the earth sound and do great things in the world, make it ring. It was the speech of a learned man: If there be but one sigh come from a gracious heart, it fills the eares of God, so that God hears nothing else.

upon Sigionoth] Vocabulum Musicum est, cuius ratio Hebrais ignota, saith Buxtorf: it is a Musical terme, the reason whereof is unknown to the Hebrew-Doctors at this day. Yet Rabbi Salomon (and with him the most Interpreters) rendereth it pro ignorantis, for ignorances, or as touching his own and his peoples errors; which the prophet here (convinced by Gods former answer to his expostulation) confesseth with confusion of face. Ignorance surely is a blusfull sin; especially if affected and delighted in (as the Hebrew word seemeth to imply, confer Prov. 5. 19. and 20. 1.) Privative ignorance, though it do somewhat excuse a man (sc. a tanto, not a toto, Luk 12. 47.) yet is it a sin to be confessed and bewailed: for Christ died for the not-knowing of the people Heb. 9. 7. and destruction is threatened pro non-scientia, or lack of knowledge Hof. 4. 7. But Calvin well observeth here, that the Prophet by begging pardon for ignorances, doth not omit his own and the peoples more grievous sins: but sheweth, that men must also be sensible of their lesser lapses, and cry out with David (after whose example this whole song is framed) Who can understand his errors? (or ignorances unwitting and inconsiderate sins?) O cleanse thou me from secret faults. Psal. 19. 12.

Verse 2. O Lord I have heard thy speech and was afraid] Audivi auditionem tuam. I have heard (not thyfume, or thy report, as some render it, unlesse it be in the Prophet Esays sense, chap. 53. 1. but) thy preceding discourse, in answer to my disceptation. I have heard that the Babylonians will come, and that my people must into captivity. This was no pleasant hearing: for we all naturally shrink in the shoulder, when call'd to carry the crosse: but those that do what they should not, must look to hear and feel too, what they would not.

and was afraid] Fear is constrictio cordis ex sensu mali instantis, a passion of the soule shrinking in it self from some imminent evill. The wicked heare and jeere: or their feare driveth them from God, as it did guilty Adam. Contrarily, the godly tremble at Gods judgements, whiles they hang in the threatenings: and draw nigh to him with intreaties of peace. In this feare of the Lord is strong confidence, and his children have a place of refuge, Prov. 14. 26.

O Lord preserve thy work in the midst of the yeares] i. e. Preserve alive thine Israel, that work of thine hands Esay. 45. 11. together with thy work of grace in their hearts: keep that spark alive upon the sea of tribulations and temptations. The Angels (saith a Reverend man) are kept with much lesse care, charge, and power, then we: because they have no biasse, no weights of sin bung upon them &c. There is not so much of the glory of God (saith Another) in all his works of Creation and Providence, as in one gracious action that a Christian performeth.

in the midst of the yeares make known] sc. thy power in perfecting thy glory, and not forsaking the work of thine own hands Psal. 138. 8. It was Luthers usual prayer, Confirm, O God, in us, that thou hast wrought: and perfect the work that thou hast begun in us, to thy glory. So be it. So Q. Elizabeth, when prisoner at Woodstock, pray'd thus: Look Lord upon the wounds of thine hands: and despise not the work of thine hands. Thou hast written me down in thy book book of preservation with thine own hand : O read thine own hand-writing, and save me, &c. But what meant the Seventy here to translate, In the midst of two beasts : which whiles Ribera striveth to defend, he tells us a tale of the babe of Bethlehem, born in a stable, and laid in a manger betwixt two beasts, an ox and an ass. It may very well be, that the Church here prayeth for Gods grace and favour, during the time of her captivity.

Act. 4. Mon.

In wrath remember mercy] In commotione ira : when thou art most moved against us, and hast as much adoe to forbear killing of us, as thou hadst to forbear Moses, when thou mettest him in the Inne, then remember to shew mercy, call to mind thy compassions which fail not. Look then upon us, and be mercifull unto us, as thou usest to doe unto those that love thy name, Psal. 119. 132. The wicked are threatened with an evil, an onely evil, without any mixture of mercy : this the Prophet here deprecate, and beggeth mercy. Per misere mei, tollitur ira dei. Engl. Elif. pag. 134. ἐν μέσσω δύο ζώων.

Verse 3. God came from Teman] The Prophet alludeth to that of Moses in his Swan-like song Deut. 33. 2. and alledgeth Gods benefits of old, for his own and their present confirmation of faith : without which prayer would be to no purpose : hence effectually prayer is called the prayer of faith, Jam. 5. 15. Faith is the foundation of prayer, and prayer is the fervency of faith. Whatsoever ye ask believing, ye shall receive, saith our Saviour. Cast thy burthen (or thy request) upon the Lord saith David. To help us so to doe, it is of singular use to consider what God hath done heretofore : for thou hast, thou wilt, is an ordinary medium of Scripture Logick, see Psal. 85. 1, 2, 3, 4. There be six Hasts drawing in the next, Turn us again &c. ver. 4. See also 2 Cor. 1. 10. Gods Majesty & might when he gave the Law in Sinai, is here set forth, to shew how easily he can, if he please, turn again the captivity of his people, as the Streams in the south. Ezek. 7. 5. Mar. 7. Psal. 55.

And the holy One from mount Paran. Selah] He that is Holiness it self (a title farre too good for that man of sinne, that Merum Scelus, the Pope, Philip the Faire of France did him right, in writing to him thus Sciat tua maxima Fautitas &c. Be it known to your Foolishnesse, not to your Holiness) and that must be sanctified in righteousness Esay 5. 16. mount Paran was contiguous to the mountains Sinai and Teman, otherwise called Seir for its roughnesse Deut. 33. 2. Selah. This the Seventy make to be a musick notation, rendring it Diapsalma. It seemeth to import an asseveration of a thing so to be, and an admiration thereat. The Jews at this day use it in their prayers for Legnolam i. e. For ever, or Amen. It is probable, that the Singers of the Temple came to a Selah (which word is used 92 times in Scripture, and onely in Psalms and Songs) they made a pause, that the hearers might stay their thoughts awhile upon the preceding matter, worthy of more then ordinary observation. Hence Tremellius and Iunius expresse Selah by the adverbs Summe Maxime, Vehementissime, Excellenter. It was doubtlesse a singular mercy of God to his people of Israel, that he came from Teman &c. to speak with them from heaven : and there to give them right Judgements, and true Lawes, good Statutes and Commandements, Neh. 9. 13. 14. This when he did. Psal. 126. 4.

His glory covered the Heavens, and the Earth was full of his praise] The Law was given in a most majestick manner (see Exod. 19.) partly to procure reverence to the doctrine of it, partly to set forth the nature and office of it, which is to terrify Offenders, and to drive them to Christ : and partly also to shew that God hath power, and weapons enow, to defend those that keep his Law, and to punish such as would draw them off from their obedience thereunto. That's a pious meditation of a Reverend Writer, if the Law were thus given, how shall it be required ? If such were the Proclamation of Gods Statutes, what shall the Sessions bee ? I see and tremble at the resemblance, &c. Dr. Hall

Verse 4. And his brightness was as the light] The glory of the Lord was as a devouring fire on the top of the mountain. Exod. 24. 17. the noon-day light, the Sun in his strength was nothing to this incomparable brightness, which was as the light, or as the Sun : see Iob 31. 26. and 37. 20. Hence the Heathens called Apollo or the Sun Orus, (which is the word here used) Hence also the Greek began to see.

He had been coming out of his hand] Or, bright beams out of his side, as the Sun hath : The eyes of the Lord are in every place Prov. 15. 3. and every man before him is all wisdom, Iob 34. 22. the whole world is to him as a Sea of glasse, a clear transparent Rev. 4. 6.

transparent body, he shines and sees throw it. Gods hand or side is said to be horned in the sense, that Moses his face was. Exod. 34. 30.

And there was the hiding of his power] Not the revealing of it, but velamen, symbolum, integumentum, the veil, the cover, such as God put over him when he shewed Moses his glory. He could see but his back parts, and live: we need see no more, that we may live. God is invisible, incomprehensible, and dwelleth in light unapproachable. How little a thing doth man here understand of God, Iob 26. 14. the greatest part of that he knoweth, is but the least part of that he knoweth not. Surely as a weak eye is not able to behold the Sun, no nor the strongest eye without being dazled: we cannot look upon it in rota, but only in radiis: so here we cannot see God in his Essence, but onely in his effects, in his works and in his Word, where also we have but a shew, but a shadow of him, we see but his train in the Temple as Esay: the holy Angels cover their faces with their wings as with a double scarfe before Gods brightness, which would put out their eyes else Is. 6. 3. see Psal. 104. 2. 1 Tim. 6. 16.

ΣΗΛΑΖΟΥ

Verse 5. Before him went the pestilence] Dever the word signifieth such a disease, as cometh by a divine decree. So Hypocrits call the pestilence τὸ Θῆον, because sent by God in a spiritual manner, a stroke of his own bare hand as it were. Here it is made one of his Apparitours or purfivants, sent before him to destroy the Canaanites, as it had done the Egyptians.

Lib. de Missa
privat.

And burning coals went out at his feet] Or, the carbuncle burning bile Deut. 32. 24. The Vulgar translateth it the devil, Others ἄρθεξ a deadly inflammation, whereof good Oecolampadius died, and was lamented by Melanchthon. But Luther very uncharitably (the best have their failings) wrote that he beleevd Oecolampadius ignitis Satanae telis & hastis confossum, subitanea morte periisse, that Oecolampadius died suddenly, being stabb'd to death with the fiery darts of the devil.

Verse 6. He stood and measured the earth] Not Josuah but God brought his people into the promised land, and divided it amongst them, Psal. 78. 55. Like as also he had divided the whole earth by bounds and borders to the several Nations Psal. 74. 17. and doth still appoint men the bounds of their habitations Act. 17. 26.

Camd. Elif.

He beheld and drove asunder the Nations] He did it with his looks, as it were: that is, with very little adoe. Let the Lord but arise onely, and his enemies shall be scattered, let him but frown, and they fall before him: If Augustus could frown to death Afinius Pollio: and Queen Elizabeth her chancellour Haiton, what shall we think of Gods bended brows?

And the everlasting mountains were scattered] i. e. those kingdomes of the Canaanites that were held firm and unmoveable as the mountains, yea rivetted as it were upon eternity, see Num. 13. 21. 31, 22. These were scattered, diffilerunt fell in peeces, and leapt this way and that way, as stones broken with a great hammer. God threshed these mountains, and beat them small, he made the hills as chafe Isay 41. 15. No worldly height could stand before him. By mountains here some understand Kings and Princes, as by hills, those of inferiour rank.

ΣΥΤΕΧΘΕΥΕΣ

His wayes are everlasting] Heb. his walks or journies, that is, his government of the world by his power and wisdom is perpetual, he never casteth off the care thereof: There are that referre the word his to the Canaanites, who had of old possessed the land without disturbance; But the former sense is the better.

Verse 7. I saw the Tents of Cushan] King of Mesopotamia, who tyrannized over Israel eight years, after Josuah's death: God selling his people to him for naught, and not increasing his wealth by their price, Psal. 44. 12. Judg. 3. 8. But delivering them in the end by that valiant Oihniel, who brought the tents of Cushan under affliction or vanity. Some render it propter iniquitatem, because of iniquity, and set this sense upon it: It was for sinne that God sold his people into the hands of Cushan Riskathaim, and yet afterwards sent them a Saviour: why then should they now despair of a seasonable return out of captivity, though by their sinnes they have provoked the Lord to wrath: sith if they returne unto him and seek his favour, there is yet mercy with the Lord that he may be feared? Loe, this is the right use of histories: and this is our duty to make observations to our selves, as did the Prophet here, I saw the tents of Cushan: I considered the thing that hath been, it is the same which shall shall be, and that which is done, is that which shall be done &c. Eccles. 1. 9. Historia fide monstrat. Dicuntur &c. τὸ ἰσχυρὸν τοῦ κυρίου.

And the curtains of the land of Midian did tremble] Cortina vel pelles &c. When by the sword of the Lord and of Gideon they were cut off and discomfited Judg. 7. 7. &c.

Verse 8. Was the Lord displeased against the Rivers? As Xerxes, that brutish man, was against the Hellespont, for battering his bridge of boates, beating it and casting a pair of fetters into it? Was God thus angry against Jordan, and against the red-Sea? No such matter. If God seem angry at any time against the reasonlesse, or livelesse creatures, it is for a punishment of mans sin. But here his end and purpose was to shew; that he did ride upon those horses and charrets (the rivers, and sea) for the salvation of his people. He did so when time was: and that he will do so again, when time shall serve, this question in the text shews, that there is no question to be made of it.

Verse 9. Thy bowe was made quite naked ] sc. Out of the case. He meaneth, thy power was clearly manifested, and powerfully exerted against the nations above mentioned: so that all men might see plainly, that thou wert that man of warre, Exod. 15. 3. which shootest thine arrowes at a certainty, and never missest thine enemies, thy but-mark. See Job 16. 12.

according to the oathes of the tribes, even thy word ] i. e. according to thy promises to thy people, confirmed with oathes, even those sure mercies of David, or assured to David. Some render it, according to the oathes, those props of thy word. His word is sure and sufficient of it self: but, for our better settlement, and as a prop to our faith, He hath bound it with oathes: that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have strong consolation, Heb. 6. 18. For now we may say with Solomon, For thy words sake, nay more, For thine oathes sake, and according to thine own heart hast thou done all this, 2 Sam. 7. 18, 21. Thy love moved thee to make promise, yea, to give oath: and now thy truth bindeth thee to performe. All thy pathes to thy people now are mercy and truth, Psal. 25. 10. not mercy onely, but mercy and truth: not by a providence onely, but by virtue of a promise, ratified with an oath: This is sweet indeed; this deserves a Selah] to be set to it.

thou didst cleave the earth with rivers] Exod. 17. 6. Psal. 78. 15, 16. Deut. 8. 15. Neh. 9. 15. This cleaving the hard Rock, and setting it abroach, this turning of the flint into a fountain, Psal. 114. 8. was a work of Omnipotency, and is therefore so much celebrated. It maketh much to the miracle, that the earth was cleft with rivers: this importeth both the plenty and the perennity thereof: for the Rock, that is, the river out of the rock followed them, 1 Cor. 10. 4. left in that dry and barren wilderness they should perish for want of water. The same God also who had given his people petram aquatilem, gave them pluviam escatilem, (as Tertullian phraseth it) Manna from heaven, Quails in great abundance, and never was Prince better served in his greatest pomp. He also defended them from the fiery serpents, and delivered them from a thousand other deaths, and dangers: all which mercies are here implied, though one onely be instanced: and all to ascertain the Saints how much God setteth by them, and what he will yet do for them, as occasion requireth. As he made the world at first, that he might communicate and impart himself to his Elect: so for their sakes doth he still preserve and govern it, ordering the worlds disorders by an over-ruling power, for his own glory, and their eternall good.

Tertul. de patientia.

Verse 10. The mountains saw thee, and they trembled ] sc. At the promulgation of the Law, Exod. 19. 17. Psal. 114. 4, 6. when God came with ten thousand of his Saints, Deut. 33. 2. and so terrible was the earth-quake, that it wrought an heart-quake, even in Moses himself, Heb. 12. 21. It is the office of the Law to do so: and happy is he, who terrified, and thunder-struck by the threats thereof, runnes to Christ for refuge, as to One who is able to save to the utmost them that come unto God by him, Heb. 9. 25. Some take mountains metaphorically, for the Mighties of the earth, and read it thus. The mountains saw thee, and they grieved. See Num. 22. 3. Job. 2. 9, 10, 11.

The over-flowing of the water passed by] the inundation of Jordan passed into the

the dead-sea, the lower part of it, I mean : like as the upper stood, and rose up upon an heap, Josh. 3. 16. being bounded and barred up by the Almighty power of God.

Gualth.

the deep uttered his voice, and lifted up his hands on high ] i. e. summo consensu suffragatus est, &c. It voiced, and voted for Gods judgements; helping forward the execution thereof.

Buchol.

Verse 11. The Sun and Moon stood still in their habitation ] viz. In the dayes of Joshuah, and upon his prayer, chap. 10. 12, 13. whereupon One crieth out, O admirabilem piarum precum vim ac potentiam quibus etiam caelestia cedunt, &c. O the admirable power of prayer, that worketh wonders in heaven! and oh the heroicall faith of Joshuah, the trophies whereof hee set in the very orbes of heaven.

As the sword of the Lord
and of Gideon.
Judg. 7. 18.

at the light of thine arrowes, they went ] By these shining arrowes, and glittering spears, some understand that terrible lightening, mixt with that horrible hail, Josh. 10. 11. with Exod. 9. 23. and then it is figura plane poetica, a Poeticall expreision: for the Poets call lightening Διὸς Βέλος, Joves arrow. See the like Psal. 18. 14. The huge hail-stones were Gods glittering spears, wherewith he slaughtered his enemies. Others suppose, that these things are meant of the arms and weapons of the Israelites, called Gods arrowes and spears, because used at his command, and ordered by him. This fence Gualther liketh better, as most comfortable to Christian warriors, who fight the Lords battels.

Verse 12. Thou didst march thorow the land in indignation ] Heb. Thou didst walk in pomp, as a Conquerour, thorow the land, sc. of Canaan, in contempt of the opposite forces, treading upon the necks of thine enemies, Josh. 10. 24.

thou didst thresh the heathen in anger ] See Amos 1. 3. Mic. 4. 13. God, by the hands of Joshuah, did all this. The most of the old inhabitants were destroyed. Some few fled into Africk, and left written upon a pillar for a monument to posterity; We are Phœnicians, that fled from the face of Joshuah the son of Nave.

Camd. Elisab.

Verse 13. Thou wentest forth for the salvation of thy people ] q. d. Thou wast Generalissimo in your expeditions, in the dayes of the Judges, who therefore were so successfull. How could they be otherwise, when God came with them into the field? If Q. Elizabeth could take for her Motto, Cui adhaere, praest, He to whom I adhere, prevaileth, how much more may Almighty God say as much?

even for salvation with thine anointed ] i. e. with David, 1 Sam. 16. 12, 13. 2 Sam. 5. 3, 16. and 19. 22. and 22. 51. Psal. 20. 7. a lively type of Christ, that Messiah the Prince, the mystery of which promised Saviour, the ancient Jew-Doctours confessed to be contained in this text. It is not altogether unlikely, that the Prophet might intend here to point at Jesus Christ, when he saith, for salvation (Jeshang, whence Jesus) for thine anointed, or thy Christ. There are that read the words in the Future-tense, thus: Thou shalt go forth for the salvation of thy people, sc. when Messiah that great Sospitator cometh: thou shalt wound the head of the wicked, sc. of the Devil, Rom. 16. 20. Thou shalt make naked the foundation of his kingdom, unto the neck. Selah: thou shalt utterly destroy sin, death, and hell: A remarkable mercy indeed, a mystery of greatest concernment, and most worthy to be considered. Gualther carries the sense this way: and yet addeth, that if any please to refer the words to the history of the old Testament, they must be understood of those tyrants that persecuted the true Church, and whom God for Christs sake subdued and subverted, together with their kingdoms.

Acts 26. 7.

Verse 14. Thou didst strike thorow with his staves, the heads of his villages ] Heb. thou didst pierce, or bore thorow, as with an awger, with his staves (a Metaphor from shepherdy, according to that, Psal. 23. 3. thy rod and thy staffe, &c.) or, with his tribes (the Δωδεκάφυλον) that entred the land of promise: with these men, or with these weapons, though never so unlikely, thou diddest by the hand of David, wound the hairy scalp of thine enemies, those Pagans and persecutors: and much more wilt, by the Son of David, subdue Satan and his Complices.

they came out as a whirl-winde to scatter me ] Heb. they tempested, they raised an hurly-burly, being turbulent spirits, as the devil is, to disperse me, as the dust of the mountains is scattered before a whirl-winde.

their rejoycing was as to devour the poor ] i. e. Poor me, they devoured in secret, as if God had been nothing aware of their doings: and this was their exultation,

or

or rejoycing: they took pleasure in their cruelty, and promised themselves impunity.

Verse 15. Thou diddest walk thorough the sea &c. ] q. d. Shall they thus prevaile by iniquity? and did they carry the ball upon the foot till they had gotten the goale? Hath ever any waxed fierce against God, and prospered, Iob. 9. 4? I trow, not. Thou that of old didd'st walk through the red sea, did'st tread it, or, foot it, and that most swiftly, as if thou had'st had thy change of horses.

Psal. 56. 7.

thorow the heap of great waters ] which thou laid'st on heaps for thy peoples sake, so that, instead of being swallowed up, they were preserved thereby: Thou Lord, I say, hast many times since, (when all hope failed) opened a faire way for thy servants to escape out of greatest dangers: and so I trust thou wilt againe, when they most stand in need of thine heavenly help. Cum res est in acie novacula &c. God will be seen of his in the Mount.

Verse 16. When I heard, my belly trembled &c. ] Heard what? That speech of thine, verse. 3. whereunto the Prophet now returneth (after a long digression for the peoples support and comfort; Digressions in divine discourses are not alwayes and absolutely unlawfull. God sometimes draweth aside the doctrine, to satisfie some soule which the preacher knowes not: and, sparingly used, it quickeneth attention.) O Lord I have heard thy speech (touching Israels captivity, chap. 1. and after that, the Chaldeans calamity, chap. 2.) and was afraid verse 3. Neither was this a slight or sudden pang, and soon put over: but such as soaked to the very roots, so that my belly, or my heart in my belly trembled; See Prov. 20. 27.

my lipps quivered ] through want of naturall heate, which in this fright was gone inward to succour the heart: as souldiers upon the approach of an enemy run into the castle.

at the voice ] at the dreadfull denunciations of judgements.

rottenesse entred into my bones ] Poetico more ex signis describit, saith Gualther. The Prophet, in manner of a Poet, describeth his great feare, by the gracious effects and signes thereof in his body.

that I might rest in the day of trouble ] This was the fruit of his holy feare of Gods imminent judgements, and that contrition of spirit that followed thereupon: viz. that both Hee, and all that took part with him in those pious practises of sensibleness and self-abasement, should have peace with God, and be able to call their soules to rest in the evill day.

when he commeth up &c. ] i. e. The Chaldean spoiler.

he will invade them with his troops ] Or, cut them in peeces. And that this was done, See 2 King. 25. and the book of Lamentations thorowout. Howbeit in judgement God remembreth mercy, as the Prophet had pray'd: for besides the favour that the Jews found at Babylon by meanes of Daniel and others, Cyrus having taken that city gave commandment, that no Jews, or any that spake the Syri-an tongue should be hurt, as Xenophon relateth: and after this he gave them free leave to return home.

Verse 17. Although the figtree shall not blossom ] Here the Prophet sheweth a well settled and a sedate mind indeed: that he had attained, and by prayer waded unto a blessed composednesse and sabbath of spirit, such as the cock on the dunghill medled not with, neither knoweth the worth of: it being the most precious and peerlesse jewel that ever the heart of man came acquainted with. It hath been before noted, that the Prophet here taketh out his own lesson of living by faith in the faile of outward comforts. Origens teaching and living were said to be both alike: Habakkuks were so. Divinity is practicall: If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them: As lessons of Musick must be practised, and a copy not read onely, but imitated: so is it here. It is a blashful thing quando dicta factis erubescant, as Tertullian hath it; when mens lives put their words to the blush, when Sanctiores sunt aures plebis quam corda sacerdotum, there are more heavenly doctrines in the peoples eares, then ever were in the preachers heart, as Hilary hath it: when (as One said of Erasmus his Enchiridion) there is more holinesse in an Authours book, then in his bosom:

Plus sanctimonia conspicitur in ipso libello, quam in libelli Authore.

Exemplis

Exemplis sanè qui docet, ille docet.

*Arist. Rhetor.
Epist. ad Ephef.*

*Mr. Sam.
Crook,*

Aristotle requireth in a Teacher, that he shew himself a patern of his own rules : and it is a good thing to teach (saith Ignatius ; ἐὰν δὲ λέγῃς ποῖός if thou practise the same that thou teachest. That is an excellent commendation indeed that is given to a late eminent Divine amongst us, that his life was but one continued Commentary upon his doctrine : and an exemplary sermon consisting of living words, or of words translated into works. The just shall live by his faith, saith Habakkuk : and that I do so, it shall well appear by my living upon God, when I have nothing else to subsist with ; by beleiving him upon his bare word, and that against sense in things invisible, and against reason in things incredible.

Although the figtree &c. .q d. Let warr come on, and with warr famine ; as it befell Jerusalem at the last siege in the dayes of Zedekiah, 2 King. 25. 3. Jer. 52. 6. Lam. 2. 11, 12. there was no relief left for the people, the enemy had eaten up all, as Joel 2. and made cleane work, so that faithlesse men were woe-begone, and ready to run mad for the sight of their eyes Deut. 28. 24. with 51. and to devour their own fingers, as Pope Boniface 8. did, when shut up close prisoner in St. Angelo and sorely straitened.

Verse 18. Yet I will rejoyce in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation] This joy of the Lord was the Prophets strength, and kept his head above all waters of affliction. So it was Dauids at the sack of Ziglag 1 Sam. 30. 6. when Saul at the same time for want of it ran first to the witch, and thence to the swordpoint. A Good man hath God for his portion : and if any occasion of discontent or trouble befall him, he retireth into his Counting-house, and there seeth himself so well stored with unloosable graces and invaluable priviledges, that he cannot be greatly moved Psal. 62. 2. His soule in greatest straights can magnifie the Lord, and his spirit rejoyce in God his Saviour. Disquieted he may be sometimes for a season, till he hath recollected and better be-thought himself, we are staggering faith the Apostle, but not wholly sticking 2 Cor. 4. 8. for not the evenest waights but at their first putting into the ballance do somewhat sway both parts thereof, not without some shew of inequality, which yet after some little motion do settle themselves in a meet poise and posture:

Verse 19. The Lord God is my strength] And hence his joy of faith, and ability to beare up under pressures of afflictions as a man that is well lined within, and hath abundance of good blood and fresh spirits, can endure to go with leese cloths then another &c.

And he will make my feet like bindes feet] As these do swiftly and suddenly run up to the top of inaccessible rocks, so shall I quickly escape out of trouble, and walk upon mine high places againe in the holy land : Yea as Jacob after he had conversed with God at Bethel, lift up his feet and went lustily on his way to Padan-Aram, so shall I go lightly on my long journey to heaven ; and, having my soule suppled with the oyle of spirituall joy, I shall find it made more litch, nimble and ready to every good work.

Gen. 29. 1.

to the chief-musitian on my stringed instruments] This is David-like indeed, as in the whole prayer or long he resembleth that sweet finger of Israel : and the verse hath caused a cloud. Euthymius saith of David, that he was Primi regis & lingua & cor & calamus, the tongue, hart, and pen of almighty God. In the primitive times, happy was he held that could repeate aliquid Davidicum, any thing of Dauids doings. Our king Alfred translated the Psalter himself into his own Saxon tongue. Andronicus the Greek Emperour made it his manuell, his Vade-mecum. It appeareth by the contexture of this whole chapter, that the Prophet Habakkuk was well versed in the Psalms, which is a sweet field and Rosary of promises, a Summary of the old Testament saith Luther : the good soules Soliloquie, saith Another ; wherein are Amulets of comfort more pleasant then the pooles of Heshbon, more glorious then the tower of Lebanon, more redolent then the oyle of Aaron, more fructifying then the dew of Hermon &c. Most worthy to be laid up in that Persian casket embroydered with gold and pearle which Alexander reserved for Homers Iliads. Our Prophet as he partly imitated, and partly transcribed them in this Canticle, yea in this verse ( Confer Psalm. 18. 33, 34. ) So he concludeth as David many times beginneth, To the chief-chaunter or Musick-master, or To him that excelleth, &c. in the art of singing and playing on Instruments, those holy Levites whose charge it was 1 Chron. 9. 33. and for whom he doubted not but God would afford and provide new matter of Psalmody, by compassing his people about with songs of deliverance, Selah Psalm. 32. 7.

---

A Com-

---

A
C O M M E N T
O R,
E X P O S I T I O N
Upon the Propheſie of ZEPHANIAH.

C H A P. I.

Verſe 1.

*Hebraei Prophetarum patres, quot quot nominatim recensentur, ipſos
quoque prophetas
ſuiſſe dicunt.*

THE Word of the Lord which came unto Zephaniah] which is (by interpretation) Gods Secretary, or Hidden-one, Pſal. 27. 5. and 83. 3. Or, as Hierome and ſome others will have it, Gods Watchman Ezek. 3. 2. and 33. 7. A fit name for a Prophet. the ſon of Cuſhi, the ſon of Gedaliah &c.] Theſe were, if not Prophets, (as the Jew-Doctours make them) yet men famous in the Church: as were Alexander and Rufus, though they be but mentioned and no more, Mark 15. 21. in the dayes of Joſiah] who rained one and thirty years, but being in his minority, began not to reform religion, much corrupted in the dayes of his idolatrous father Amon, till the eighteenth year of his raigne, 2 King. 22. 1. and 23. 22. whether before or after the Reformation, the word of the Lord came unto Zephaniah, Interpreters agree not. Jeremiah (his contemporary) began not to prophecy till the thirteenth year of Joſiah's raigne Ier. 1. 1, 2. at what time, (viz. in his twelfth year) he had begun to reform with a great deale of zeale, 2 Chron. 34. 3. but with all he met with a great deale of oppoſition from the Princes and people who had been woefully hardened and habituated in their idolatry under Manaſſeh and Amon, and therefore with much difficulty drawn off. Zephany and Jeremy were ſingular helps no doubt, to that peerleſſe king in his zealous undertakings for God. But why he ſhould ſend to Huldah the Prophetesse, rather then to either of them 2 King. 22. 13. what other reaſon can be given but that ſhe dwelt in the Colledge at Jeruſalem, and ſo was next at hand? And why He went up againſt Pharaoh Necho, and ſent not firſt to any Prophet to aſk their adviſe, what can we ſay but this, that ſometimes both grace and wit are aſleep in the holieſt and wariest breſts? and that the beſt of Gods Saints may be ſometimes miſcarried by their paſſion, to their coſt?

Ver. 2.

Verse 2. I will utterly consume all things from off the land] Exordium plane tragicum. A tragical beginning of a terrible sermon. Hard knots must have hard wedges; hard hearts, heavy menaces: yea handfuls of hell-fire must be cast into the faces of such, that they may awake out of the snare of the devill, by whom they are held captive at his pleasure. 2 Tim. 2. 26. It is in the Hebrew, gathering I will gather all things &c. q. d. g. I will pack up, I will take mine owne, and begone. Converram & convasabo omnia, I will sweep away all by the beesome of my wrath, and leave a clean land behind me, for the finnes of those that dwell therein. The doubling of this denunciation Colligendo Colligam importeth the certainty, verity and vehemency thereof.

Saith the Lord] Dictum Jehovæ. You may beleeve it therefore: for every word of his is sure, and cannot be broken Iohn 10. 35. may not be slighted or shifted off Heb. 12. 25.

Verse 3. I will consume man and beast] Heb. I will gather (as verse 2.) them, and cast them away as they do the sweepings of the house. See the word used in this sense, Psal. 26. 9. Gather not my soul with sinners &c. God gathereth his people for a better purpose: both while they are alive, Psal. 27. 10. and when they dye, Esay 57. 1 The righteous is taken away (Heb. gathered) from the evil to come: as a Shepherd gathereth his sheep when a storm is coming: or as a master of a family doth his jewels, when his house is on fire. But as for the wicked, they are gathered too, but it is for slaughter, as beasts in a pound, malefactors in a prison: and at the last day the tares shall be gathered and bundled up together for hels Furnace, Mat. 13. 41. 42.

I will consume the souls of the heaven] Made for mans use, to be to him for food, Gen. 9. 2. for physick and for delight, as companions of his life: hence it is threatened as a judgement to him to loose them Ier. 4. 25. and 10. and here.

An the fishes of the Sea] Made likewise for mans use to feed him, Num. 11. 5. 22. Luke 24. 42. hence the latine piscis of pasco to feed, and the Hebrew Berechah for a fishpoole: the word signifieth a blessing Gen. 12. 2. with N. b. 2. 14. Now the Lord here threateneth destruction to beasts, birds, and fishes, not by way of Hyperbole, as the Rabbines dreams: but because in common calamities, in warlike tumults, and when God will destroy a people indeed, the beasts also are killed up, the fowles hunted away, the fish-pooles waited, &c. Let those that will not beleeve this, look into Illyrium, Thracia, Macedonia, Greece, and divers parts of Turky, laid utterly desolate and empty both of men and other creatures. Hierome upon this text, and likewise upon Hos. 4. affirmeth the same of his native countrey, wasted so with Warre, ut, præter cælum & cœnum, & crescentes vipres & condensa sylvarum, cuncta perierint, that besides ayre and earth, and briars, and Forrests, all was destroyed. And that we may not wonder at this severitie of God, hear what the same Father saith elswhere of his ungracious countrymen: In mea patria deus Ven er est, & in diem vivitur, & sanctior est ille qui dior; In my countrey their belly is their god, their glory is in their shame, they minde earthly things: and so their end hath been destruction, and utter desolation, as Phil. 3. 19. Gualthers Note here is very good: herein we may observe, saith he, the judgement of God and his wonderfull providence: that whereas we see in populous places, rivers and pooles to abound with fish, woods and fields, with birds and beasts, though they bee continually caught, and carried away: yet where there want men to make use of them, there are few or none to be found. For as they were all made for man, so when men are consumed, they also are consumed, as is here threatened. Non ita temerè fieri putemus, &c. Let Gods hand herein be acknowledged, and his anger appeased by faith in Christ Jesus and repentance from dead works, that our land may be sowed with the seed of men and of beasts.

Epist. ad Clremar.

And the stumbling-blocks with the wicked] Those Balaams blocks, those moments and monuments of idolatry, that so much offend God, and cause offence and ruine to those that worship them, (as Eucherius interpreteth it) who are here called wicked, with an accent, and by a specialty.

In lib. Reg.

And I will cut off man from off the land] Even the better sort of men too, who shall be wrapt up together with the wicked in the common calamity. The good figges as well as the bad are packt to Babylon; but with this difference that God will there set his eyes upon the good for good. Ier. 24. 6. as the corne is cut down as well as the weeds; but for better purpose.

Saith the Lord] who hath spoke it twice that you may once well observe it, and lay it to heart.

Verse 4. I will also stretch out mine hand upon Judah] To whom I have so long stretcht out my hand in vain to reclaime them. Esay 65. 2. Prov. 1. 25. If God do but put forth his hand to afflict, as Satan solicited him to doe against Job, chap. 1. 11. and 2. 5. who can abide it? but if he stretch it out as here, woe be to those that must feele the waight of it. His hand is a mighty hand. 1. Pet. 1. 6. the same that spansse the heavens; and holds the earth as a very little thing Esay. 40. Lord, saith David (who had felt it in part) who knoweth the power of thine anger? Even according to thy fear, so is thy wrath. q. d. Let a man fear thee never so much, he is sure to feele thee much more who falleth under the stroke of thine heavy hand. Oh keep out of his fingers, who can crush us to death before the moth, Job. 4. 19.

And upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem] who are therefore worse then others because they should be better: and shall fare the worse for their external priviledges wherein they glory.

And I will cut off the remnant of Baal from this place] That which remained since Josias's reformation 2 King. 23. 3. 4. 5. saith Diodate shall a Nation be born at once Esay 66. 8?

And the name of the Chemarims) Baals chimney-chaplines, They are translated idolatrous priests, 1 Chron. 23. 5. But because we find them here mentioned as distinct from the Priests, therefore many Expositores hold that they were certain Ministers of their idolatry different from the priests; such as the Monks are among the Papists. The vulgar rendereth it Editnos Underlings to the other Priests: Elias in Tisby saith they were such as were shut up in cloisters, Chemarim Atrati thy are called, either from their black garments, or because they were smutched with burning incense, or from the brand-markes they had superstitiously set upon their bodies, or because of their pretended fiery zeal and fervency in their religion, such as are the Sacerdotes Seraphici among the Papists, who falsely and foolishly call them, the Lights of the World; sc. to light them into utter darknesse.

Verse 5. And them that worship the host of heaven upon the house tops] Called elsewhere the Queen of heaven, the constellations and heavenly bodies: whom they thought to worship so much the more acceptably, if in an open place, and on high, in the very sight of the starres. Observent ista qui hodie Astrologiam judicariam profitentur, saith Gualther, Let those amongst us observe this, who professe judiciary Astrologie: for these worship the starres no lesse then did the heathens of old, and doe openly bring in Heathenisme again; whiles (first) they call the starres by the names of those heathenish deities, that ought to be abolished: and next, they subject to those starres all events of things, yea man himselfe as touching all his manners and fortunes, which the Scripture affirmeth to depend upon the eternal providence of God alone. This is intolerable impiety and they that fall into it, shall not escape the just judgement of God.

And them that worship, and that swear by the Lord (or to the Lord consecrating themselves as by oath to his service) and that swear by Malcham] that is, by their King, as the Egyptians did of old, Gen. 42. 15. The Spaniards at this day, in the pride of their Monarchy are grown also to swear by the life of their King. There are a sort of mongrell Christians in the East called Melchites, as one would say Of the Kings Religion, because they resolved to doe as Melech the King commanded them, though it were to make a mixture of religions, as these in the text would, and as our late Modelatours Sancta Clara, and others, of whom one said well, that they had made a pretty shew, had there been no Bible, to tell us, that the jealous and just God hateth and plagueth halting betwixt two, lukewarmnesse and neutrality in religion, all drow-baked duties, speckled birds, plowing with an Oxe and an Asse, mingled feeds linsey-wolfsey garments Lev. 19. 19. Upon which text the Doway Doctors note is, Here all participation with heretiks and schismatiks is forbidden. But by Malcham most understaud here an Idoll of the Ammonites, otherwise called Melech served in Tophet near to Ierusalem, and in the mount of Olives, called therefore the mount of corruption 2 King. 23. 13. Which God could not but see, as oft as he looked out of the Sanctuary. These worshippers of Malcham would not utterly utterly renounce the true God, but they would set up others with him as partners: this would not be endured. Such were of old the Samaritanes among the Jewes, the Ebionites among the Christians, the Papists at this day, who swear by God and Saints, and pray to God and his Saints, and commit themselves to them (together with God) as their Tutalars and Patrons.

Espec. Eux.

Niceph.

Verse 6. And them that are turned back from the Lord ] Not grosse idolaters, but yet treacherous backsliders, that fall off from their former forwardnesse, that turn from the holy Commandement, 2 Pet. 2. 21. that depart à post Dominum, from after the Lord, as the Hebrew here hath it, Apostates, those worst of men; that do not onely not fulfill after the Lord, as Caleb, but utterly forsake him. An heavie judgement awaiteth such. God shall lead them forth with the workers of iniquity, &c. Psal. 125. 5.

and those that have not sought the Lord, nor enquired after him ] diligently sought him, Heb. 11. 6. zealously enquired after him, as after a lost jewel, Jer. 29. 13. God will visit for unzealousnesse; and curse those that do his work carelessly, cursorily, in a perfunctory, formall, bedulling way.

Verse 7. Hold thy peace at the presence of the Lord God ] When his hand is upon thy back, let thy hand be on thy mouth. Chat not against him, murmur not at his menaces, but stand mute before him. He is the Lord God, Three in One, and One in Three: thou art also alwayes in his presence, which thou canst not flee from them, Psal. 139. therefore see Hab. 2. 20. with the Note and the rather because God stands over thee with his judgements.

for the day of the Lord is at hand ] wherein he will powerfully declare himself to be a God that cannot lie, and that his wrath is quo diuturnior et minaciôr, the longer in coming the heavier it lights. This was soon after fulfilled in the death of their good king Josiah, with whom died all the peace and prosperity of that people: and Judea often changed her masters, but not her miseries, till at length shee was carried captive to Babylon.

For the Lord hath prepared a sacrifice ] That is, a bloody slaughter of you, by the cruel Chaldees, who shall sacrifice you, that have so much gloried in the multitude of your sacrifices: and God shall glorifie himself as much now in your just destruction, as ever he did in your forefathers commendable devotion.

he hath bid his guests ] The Babylonians, and (after they have filled themselves) the birds, and beasts, as Rev. 19. 17, 18. so that ye shall have sepulturam in sepulcrum, a gravelesse buriall.

Verse 8. And it shall come to passe in the day of the Lords sacrifice ] Or, good cheer: for at their sacrifices they used to feast their friends: and here the Lord is providing dainties for his guests; viz. the flesh of Princes, gallants, courtiers, vers. 9. merchants, 11. who use to eat the fat, and drink the sweet, nourishing their hearts as in a day of slaughter: and now also for a day of slaughter: when the beasts shall tear their flesh, and the birds bare their bones. Jam. 5. 5.

that I will punish the Princes and the Kings children ] Who might seem to bee safest of any, and farthest off from danger: but Gods hand can easily reach them, and shall do with the first, because their faults flie fast abroad upon those two wings of Example and Scandal. See this threatening fulfilled in Josiah's sonnes (those degenerate plants, Heroum filii noxa.) Jehoahaz ambitiously stept into his fathers throne before his elder brother, and was soon after carried down to Egypt, and there slain. Jehoiakim the elder brother succeeded him: but rebelling against the king of Babylon, he was carried captive, and dying by the way, was buried with the buriall of an asse, being cast out to be torn by birds and beasts, according to this prophesie. Jechoniah came after, and was likewise carried into captivity: but because he hearkened to Jeremiah, perswading him to yeeld, and to go into voluntary banishment, he had some good dayes toward his latter end, Jer. 52. 31, 32. Lastly Zedekiah, another sonne of Josiah, was made king; who as hee was worse then the former, so he sped worse. See Ier. 39. 6, 7. potentes potentior torquebantur. Jer. 22.

and all such as are clothed with strange apparell ] Those gallants, that imitated in their raiment those whom they most inclined to; some the Egyptians, others the Babylonians. A vanity not known in England, they say, till the warres in Camd. Elif.

215.

Oh what enemy of thine hath taught thee so much vanity? said Mr. John Fox to his son, returning from his travels, and attired in a loose Outlandish fashion. Hist. of Modern Divi. pag. 279.

Holland. And (as ex malis moribus bona leges) then first were great ruffes, with huge wide sets, and cloaks reaching almost to the ancles, no lesse uncomely then costily, restrained by Proclamation. Now, what so common with our fashion-mongers (against whom this is a stinging and a flaming text) then to bee clothed with strange apparell, a la mode de France especially, and other Popish countries. But what faith One, Borrow not (fashions) of the Egyptians: if you do, you may get their biles and botches: of the Polonians, lest you get the plica Polonica in your hairy scalps: of the French, lest the lues Gallica befall you. Those that affected the Babylonian habit, were sent captives to Babylon, Ezek. 23. 15. and those proud Dames (whose wardrobe is inventoried, Esay 3. 16. &c.) were a cause that the mighty men fell in battle, ver. 25. 26. Seneca complaineth, that many in his time were more solicitous of their attire, then of their good behaviour; and that they had rather the Common-wealth should be troubled, then their locks, and set looks. And doth not our age abound with such fantastical Cincinnatiuli.

Verse 9. In the same day also will I punish all those that leap on the threshold ] i. e. Great mens officers, who by an absolute power went into other mens houses, and to whom no doors were shut, saith Mr. Diodate. These leap upon the threshold, that is, with great impudency, and insolency, they invade and spoil other mens houses, and do what they list, like so many Lurdaines, or Lord-dames: neither dare any question, or controul them. Loe such things were done in good Josiah's dayes, without his consent, or so much as knowledge: for none might be suffered to come to him with a complaint; all wayes being shut up by those great Ones about him, whose houses were by that means filled with violence and deceit ] that is, with those ill-gotten goods, got by wrench and wile from the right, but unrelieved possessours, through the might and flight of those unconscionable under-Officers.

Verse 10. There shall be the noise of a cry from the fish-gate ] called also the first-gate, Zach. 14. 10. whereat the Caldeans entred, and caused a great hubbub, as in such a case is usuall.

Jerusalajim.

and an howling from the second ] Called by the Chaldee Paraphrast, the bird-gate: there was also one called the horse-gate, Jer. 31. 40. Some understand the text, not of any gate, but of the second part of the city: for there was the upper town, and the lower town, (whence Jerusalem is of the duall number) and the tower of David, on the hill of Zion. Others, of the Colledge where Huldad dwelt, 2 King. 22. 14. a school of learning, as the Chaldee interpreteth it, and called Mishneh, as you would say, a place of repetition, or of catechising the younger sort; with whom nothing sticks but what is repeated to them over and over, as the knife goeth over the whetstone. Shanan & Shanah repesire, sicut in acuendo. See Deut. 6. 7.

and a great crashing (or shivering, Heb. shebhar) from the hills ] Gareb and Goth, Jer. 31. 39. and the rest that were round about Jerusalem, Psal. 135. 2. The Prophets scope is to shew that all places shall be full of tumult and out-cry, upon the approach of the enemy. They that would not listen to the sweet voice of God inciting and inticing them to repentance, have now their ears filled with hideous and horrid notes, and noises.

Verse 11. Howl ye inhabitants of Maktesh ] Or, of the mortar, or of the low and hollow place, of the base-town, where corn was brayed in mortars, before Mills were in use. These are here called upon to turn their laughter to mourning, and their joy into heaviness, to weep and howl for the evils that shall come upon them, Jam. 4. 9. and 5. 1. but especially for their sinnes, the cause of those miseries: for Gods judgements upon sinners are feathered from themselves: as a fowl shot with an arrow feathered from her own body.

for all the merchant-people are cut down ] The merchant-men were wont to furnish the mortar-men, such as dealt in corn, Spicery, and the like. These shall be cut down, as being more like Canaanites (a people devoted to destruction) then Israelites, a people saved by the Lord, the shield of their help, and the sword of their excellency. Deut. 33. 29. See Hof. 12. 8. with the Note. He is a merchant, the ballances of deceit are in his hand, he loveth to oppress. See Amos 8. 5, 6. Mic. 6. 10, 11, 12. Merchandise well managed, is of great use to Kingdoms and States, for many reasons. 1. For descrying the counsels and strength of other Nations. 2. For procuring Vide Carol.

Paschalij legat.
cap. 7. p. 24.

procuring the love and friendship of forreine Princes and people. 3. for exchanging of commodities: for non omnia fert omnia tellus. 4. for gaining experience of many and great matters: this caused Thales, Hippocrates, and Solon to exercise merchandize. 5. It occasioned the building of many famous cities. Massilia for one, as Plutarch writeth. Neverthelesse this honourable profession is much abused by those whom Nahum calleth cankermouths chap. 3. 16. for their covetousnes luxury, oppression, bringing in unnecessary wares (that emasculate and dissolve mens spirits) and hereticall books that undoe their soules; and lastly for their carrying out the wealth of their country to strangers, yea to enemies sometimes. Hence they are justly cut down by God, and are to be ordered by the Magistrate according to Lev. 19. 35, 36. Dent. 25. Ezek. 45. 9, 10, 11, 12.

all they that bear silver are cut off] The rich traders that had marcupia plena, and carried money in great burthens, these shall be also cut off or silenced, have nothing to say for themselves why they should not be destroyed with the rest, as those that have been involuti argento as the vulgar translation hath it here, so wrapped up in their money, and affected to it, as that it hath rather possessed them, then they it. Cor habent in are non in athere, their heart goeth after their covetousnesse Ezek. 33. 31. Here they are called Portatores argentei silver-carriers, sumpter-horses, laden with thick clay. Silver is that which the basest element yeeldeth, the most savage Indians get, servile apprentices work, Midianitish Camels carry, miserable muck-worms admire, covetous Jewes swallow, unthrifty Ruffians spend &c. It is to be wondred (saith One) that treading upon these minerals, we cannot condemn them. They lye furthest from heaven: and the best of them are in India furthest from the Church: and yet how many doth money make to run quick to the devill on an errand, and payes them home for their paines?

Verse 12. I will search Jerusalem with candles] which yet he needs not do, sith the darknesse hideth not from him, but the night shineth as the day: the darknesse and the light are to him alike, Psal. 139. 12. Confer Job 34. 22. Ier. 23. 24. Deo obscura lucent, muta respondent, silentium confitetur, Night will convert it self into noon before God, and silence become a speaking evidence. His eyes also are a flaming fire, that needs no outward light, but sees by sending out a ray &c. but when Jerusalem is threatened to be searched with lights, the meaning is, that it shall be set all upon a light fire, and the inhabitants ferretted out of their lurking-holes, their Princes and potentates pulled out of privies and sepulchers by the pursuing enemy, as Hierome out of Iosephus here affirmeth they once were. Besides that, they shall be brought to a particular and punctuall account for their sins: God will be very exact and accurate with them that way; setting all their evill deeds in order before their eyes Psal. 50. 21. and bringing wrath upon them to the utmost 1 Thess. 2. 16. This is fearefull Psal. 130. 3. and shall be fulfilled especially at the last day, when wicked men shall give an account minutatum of all their Atheisticall thoughts Psal. 14. 1. ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him Iude 15. with the whole world flaming about their ears 2 Pet. 3. 7, 10, 12. 1 Cor 4. 5. 2 Thess. 1. 8.

and punish the men that are settled on their lees] Coagulati curded or thickened, congealed and condensed: that are habituated and hardned in their evill practises, that have got a sward, nay a hoof upon their hearts; that have brawny breasts, and horny heart-strings; that stick stify in the mire of their sins as Moab Ier. 48. 11. and, being deeply drowned in the world, are desperately divorced from God, whom they basely fancy to be a God of clouds, one that howere he speak big words, yet will do neither good nor hurt.

— mibi hac mortalia curat.

that say in their hearts] As that saplesse fellow doth Psal. 14. 1. Some set their mouths against heaven, and shame not to utter their reasonings and resolutions of this kind. These are Epicuri de gregi porci: such as was Lucretius, Diagoras, Horace with his 521

Horat. Serm. *

— credat Indæus apella.
Non ego, namq; deos didici securum agere eunum &c.

Let the Jews beleve a Providence: not I &c. saith that profane Poet. But behold here were Jews yea and that in good Iosiah's dayes, that said in their hearts (those feculent hearts of theirs, full of dregs and dross.)
the Lord will not do good, neither will he do evill]

Nec bene pro meritis capitur, nec tangitur ira.

Of such practicall Athiests that say in their hearts there is no God, and live thereafter, there are great store even amongst us: of such dust-heaps we may find in every corner. And when men are once arrived at this Terra del Fuogo this desperate degreë of Atheisme, what wonder though they run riot in all sinfull licentiousnesse.

Verse 13. Therefore their goods shall become a booty] Their evill-gotten goods
Ecc. 4. 1, 2, 3. ver. 9. 11. (for a proof of my providence which they blushed not to deny) shall be carried away by the Chaldees, to their unmedicinable sorrow and heart-breake.

and their houses a desolation] because built in blood. See Nab. 2. 11, 12.

they shall also build houses but not inhabite them &c.] Ex lege mutuatur minas. That they might the more regard his words, The Popet makes use of the menaces of the Law Deut. 28. 30. 39. whereof the Prophets were Interpreters: applying, as here, the generall doctrine thereof to the people of their times. To rebuke or exhort men in good words, in Gods own words, is the readiest way to prevaile with them: unlesse they be Lucifuge scripturarum (as Tertullian saith of the Marcionites and Valentinians) which yet will take hold of them howsoever Zech. 1. 6.

De Resur.
carn.

Verse 14. The great day of the Lord is neer, it is neer] It is the day of the Lord, that fatall day appointed by him to ruine the nation: for with him it is all one whether it be done against a nation, or against a man only Iob 34. 29. Next, it is his great day; because therein the great God will set himself to do great matters: How much more at the day of judgment called also a great day Rev. 6. 17. and 16. 14.

This great day is neer, yea very neer, it hasteth greatly] it hath wings and wind under those wings, as Zech. 5. 9. it will be upon men ere they are aware: neither will any thing more hasten it then their security, and searelesnesse. Think the same of the last day which cannot but be at hand, and then the transgressours shall be destroyed together: the end of the wicked shall be cut off Psal. 37. 38.

even the voice of the day of the Lord] Methinks I heare it.

Ovid. 5. Fast.

Fallor? an arma sonat? non fallimur, arma sonabant.
Mars venit, & veniens bellica signa dedit.

Surgite mortui
venite in iudicium.

Hierome speaketh thus of himself, whether I eat, or drink, or sleep, methinks I heare that last trump sounding these words in mine eares, Arise ye dead and come to judgment. A very necessary meditation.

the mighty man shall cry there bitterly] How much more the turba imbellis, the weak and cowardly? they shall take up a loud lamentation, and cry with the breaking of their loines.

Verse 15. That day is a day of wrath, a day of trouble, and distresse &c.] By this Synathroismos or heape of words, the Prophet would affray and arrouse the dead and dedolent sinners, settled upon their lees, so wedded and wedg'd to their wicked practises, that nothing can sunder them, but an extraordinary touch from the hand of heaven. See Joel 2. 1, 2, 3. and Amos 5. 18, 19. 20. with the Notes, and consider what the terrour of the Lords last day will be.

Verse 16. A day of the trumpet] with its horrid Taratantara and alarme] not of those that shout and praise God, neither with a noise of joy and triumph as Numb.

Num. 23. 21. Pſal. 47. 5. Ezra 3. 11. 12. but of thoſe that ſhout with broken ſounds in the day of battel, as Amos 1. 14. in claſſico with a vociferation, and horrible howling, ſuch as the Turks at this day make, when they ſtorm a city. Turk Hiſt.

againſt the fenced cities and againſt the high-towers] wherein ye truſt, but in vaine. Theſe high-towers were built at the corners of the walls. Hence the Hebrew text here hath it, Againſt the high-corners. Great men and ſuch as beare up the weight of the common-wealth are ſometimes called by this name 1 Sam. 14. 38. Draw ye neer hither all ye chief of the people: Heb. All ye corners. See the like Zach. 10. 4. Judg. 20. 2. Neither men nor meanes were ever true to thoſe that truſted them. Our help is in the Name of the Lord, that ſtrong tower where to the righteous run and are ſafe Prov. 18. 10.

Verſe 17. And I will bring diſtreſſe upon men that they ſhall walk like blind men] The Dutch have a Proverb, God puts out the eyes of him whom he intendeth to deſtroy: i. e. he beſotts and infatuates them, they ſhall be conſilij & auxiliij inopes: in rebus liquidis aqua barebit, they grope for the wall like the blind, they grope as if they had none eyes, they ſtumble at noon-day as in the night, they are in deſolate places as dead men, Eſay, 59. 10. This was long before threatened Deut. 28. 28, 29.

becauſe they have ſinned againſt the Lord] Sin is the mother of miſery. See my Love-tokens pag. 111, 112. &c. and their blood ſhall be poured out as duſt] Then which nothing is more vile and abject, the enemy ſhall make no more of ſpilling their blood, then of ſprinkling a little duſt.

Copioſiſſimè & abjeſtiſſimè. Tatrou.

and their fleſh as dung] ſpread upon the land to manure it. The Hebrew word for fleſh here may ſeem to ſignifie wormes-meat. Our bodies are no better, why then do we pamper and prink them up?

Lechum. Druf.

Verſe 18. Neither their ſilver nor their gold ſhall be able to deliver them in the day of the Lords wrath] We were not redeemed with corruptible things as ſilver and gold 1 Pet. 1. 18. Money hath drowned many a ſoule 1 Tim. 6. delivered none. See Prov. 11. 4. with the Note, Eſay 13, 17. Ezck. 17. 19. It is righteousneſſe and not riches that delivereth from death Prov. 10. 2. Money can neither pacifie God, nor ſtill the conſcience, nor ſtop the enemies mouth, but inflame them rather with an unſatiſfiable deſire of enjoying all, as Rome did the Gaules, and Cyprus the Romanes: and as the pearles, uſually caſt out with the flood, and gathered at the ebbe, drew Caſars affection for the conqueſt of Brittain.

Sextus Rufus.

Sueton.

but the whole land ſhall be devoured by the fire of his jealousie] The ſins of Gods people are not onely diſobediences but treacheries; becauſe of the covenant. God is thereby provoked to jealousie which is cruel as the grave, or hard as bell; the coales thereof are coales of fire which hath a moſt vehement flame. Cant. 8. 6. the word ſignifies the conſuming flame of God.

for he ſhall make even a ſpeedy riddance of all them that dwell in the land] Sweet cleane by God with the beſom of deſtruction: ſo that the land was deſolate after them Zech. 7. 14. Affliction roſe not up the ſecond time, Nah. 1. 9. See the Notes there, and learn to give God the glory of his ſeverity againſt ſin,

CHAP. II.

Verſe 1. Gather your ſelves together, yea together) Excutite vos, iterumque excutite. Fanne your ſelves, yea fanne your ſelves. The precept is doubled, as it is likewiſe Num. 3. 40. and 2 Cor. 13. 5. to ſhew the neceſſity of our doing it, as alſo the utility if well done, and laſtly our croſſneſſe and averſneſſe thereunto, together with Gods exceeding great deſire that it ſhould be thoroughly done for our greateſt good. Grievous things he had threatened in the former chapter: all which to prevent, he here preſcribeth them a courſe of ſelf-examination, and thereupon ſound converſion: ſo true is that of an ancient Ideo minatur Deus ut non puniat, God doth therefore threaten that he may not puniſh. It is as if God ſhould thus ſay, Behold

Tremell.

Iſid.

Behold thou art in danger of destruction ; is it not therefore high time to search, yea to be serious and exact in the scrutiny ? to gather thy dispersed wits together, to summon the sobriety of thy senses before the barre of thy best judgement ? to consider and consult what is fit to be done in this case ? to have thine eyes in thine head, with Solomons wise man Eccl. 2. 14 Yea to have thine eyes like the windows in Solomons Temple, broad inward 1 King. 6. 4. Mens minds are naturally as ill set as their eyes : they turne neither of them inward. Lamia-like they are sharp sighted abroad to discern other mens faults: but blinde at home to take notice of their own. Nature shewes no sinne : what is our iniquity or our sin, said those in Jeremy when wrath was even breaking out upon them Jer. 16. 10 ? so Hos. 12. 8. Men deal with their souls as some doe with their bodies ; who, when their beauty is decayed, they desire to hide it from themselves by false glasses, and from others by painting : so their finnes, from themselves by false glosses, and from others by excuses. But he that thus hideth his finnes cannot prosper, Prov. 28. 13. he must not look for gains his prosperity 3 Joh. 2. but for further hardnesse of heart, Prov. 28. 14. and hor- rour of conscience Psal. 3. 1. 3. For God will not scarfe mens bones before they are set, nor lap up their sores before they are searcht. Wherefore Search you, search you O Nation, &c. Search your selves to the quick, sift you to the branne, lay your hands upon your hearts, thrust them deep into your bosomes with Moses, so shall you take them out again leprous as snow Exod. 4. 6. Commune with your consciences and be still, or make a pause. Psal. 4. 4. lay a peremptory charge upon them to be true to you, and to doe their office impartially, in laying open how many trans- gressions are wrapt up in your finnes, Levit. 16. 21. in bringing them all forth to you, as they in Ezra brought forth the vessels of the Sanctuary, by number and by weight, in their circumstances and aggravations. Why should God say unto thee of thy finnes,, as once Samuel did to Jesse of his sonnes, Are these all thy children ? Conscience, if not charged to the contrary, and well watched, will either lye to thee, as Gebezi did to his Master : or at least subtract a part of thy finnes, as Ananias and Saphir did a part of the price. Search therefore, and follow your work close, that ye may say with Ephraim Jer. 31. 19. After that I was made known to my selfe, I repented, and with David, I examined my wayes, and finding all out of order, I turned my feet to my testimonies, Psal. 119. 59.

Ezra 8. 34.

ut veniant de-
siderati omnium gentium Jun.

O nation not desired] As not desireable : having nothing of worth in thee wherefore any should be found of thee, or seek any further after thee, Daniel was a man of de- sires, chap. 9. 23. David a man after Gods own heart. Moses fair to God, Acts 7. 20. The Saints are the desired ones of all Nations, as some read that text Hag. 2. 7. The precious sonnes of Zion comparable (not to silver onely, as the word here used import- eth, but) to fine gold, Lam. 4. 2. As for the wicked, they are all drosse, Ezek. 22. 18, 19. and God doth so little desire them, as that he putteth them away, or maketh them to cease as drosse, Psal. 119. 119. and commandeth others to doe the like by them, Prov. 25. 4, 5. Some take the words in the active sense, and render them, O nation not desirous : viz. to search thy wayes and turne again to me. Thou that hast no minde to be dealing with thy selfe, or to draw nigh to me, but hadst as leife bee knockt on the head, as doe either : Gens vacua desiderio. O nation void of any good desires. Whereas ota Christiani hominis vita sanctum desiderium est, the whole life of a good Christian is one continue desire after God, his kingdome, and the righteousnesse thereof. Mat. 6. 33. he followeth after it Prov. 21. 21. as an Ap- prentice followeth his trade, though he be not his craftsman. Some faint de- sires, luskish longings, short-winded wishes may be found in a wicked man ; but they rise not up to the full height of well-knit resolution for God. Like they are to Meteors that are carried above the earth, but not united to the Element of fire : therefore they fall and return to their first principles : like ice which melteth in the day, and hardeneth again in the night : like the sluggard in his bed, that puts out his arme to rise, and then pulls it in again. See Psal. 78. 34. 38.

August.

Verse 2. Before the decree bring forth] The decree is great-bellied, and will short- ly bring forth, if not prevented. There is an execution towards : and if course bee not timously taken, ye are like to pay, not the debt onely, but charges and damma- ges : Look to it quickly before the decree &c. Here are three cautionary Befores, as there are four comfortable Yets to be read Zach. 1. 17. God yet offers them mer- cy cy as Alexander did those he warred against, whiles the lamp burned : and as Tamerlane, whiles the white flag was hanged out. See Ier. 18. 7. 8.

Before the day passe as the chaffe] Before that day of the Lord that is near, very near, chap. 1. Verse 14. 15. Passe upon you, and ye become as chaffe before the wind, as the dust of the mountains before the whirlwind. O fan you, fan you: or else God will fan you after another fashion; search you, or he will soone search you with candles, chap. 1. 12. gather your selves together, or he will gather your souls with sinners, and your lives with bloody men, Psal. 26. 9. would men but judge themselves, God would not judge them, 1 Cor. 11. 31. did they but see their sinnes to confession, they should never see them to their confusion Prov. 28. 13. would they but meet God, as Abigail did David, they might disarm his indignation. Saving a little pains in this case, doubleth it: and the best that can come of negligence is repentance. It is better that we should try our selves, then that he should try us in his furnace of temptation, or other affliction. Do it therefore before the day passe as the chaffe, or before the chaffe or stubble passe in that day, passe before the wind where with God shall winnow you, who would not winnow your selves. The scholer that will not scan his own verbes, shall find that his master will scan them to his cost. And the tradesman that will not cast up his books, shall have his books to cast up him at length.

Before the fierce anger of the Lord come upon you] As a mighty torrent of fire, such as you are never able to avoid or abide. Abused mercy turneth into fury: neither will God suffer his patience to stand still for a sinning stock. Twice in a breath these hypocrites are here told what to trust unto, for more suretie.

Verse 3. seek ye the Lord all ye meek of the earth] Here the prophet turneth himselfe to the better sort: for upon those hypocritical halters afore mentioned he had but lost his sweet words; he did but wash a blackmore. We read not in Scripture of any hypocrites conversion; and what wonder? for whereas after sinne, conversion is left as a means to cure all other sinners, what means to recover him who hath converted conversion it selfe into sinne? This made our Saviour say to his Disciples concerning the Pharisees those cankered hypocrites, Let them alone, Mat. 15. 14. and himselfe weary of wasting words upon them called to the multitude and said. here ye and understand, verse 10. In like sort this Prophet here, Seek ye the Lord: for it is past time of day with them to seek him: therefore they shall goe with their flocks, and their herds to seek the Lord, but they shall not find him: he hath withdrawn himselfe from them. Hos. 5. 6. Concerning seeking the Lord see the Note on Am. 5. 6. 8.

All ye meek of the earth] This is the character, the distinctive note of a true Christian: who as he is sure to be afflicted (affliction and meeknesse grow both upon the same root in the holy tongue) so by affliction hee is meekened and mortified, his flesh is crucified with the affections and lusts: and so he is fitted to seek the Lord, to lie at his feet and say, speak Lord, for thy servant heareth. The meek and lowly ones are they whom God will teach Psal. 25. 9. beautifie Psal. 149. 4. Isaie 54. 29. 19. and 61. 1. save, God will save the humble person, Job. 22. 29. Now meeknesse and humility are a pair of twin-sisters, never asunder. See how they goe coupled, Mat. 11. 29. and the Seventy render this text, all the lowly of the earth, that are as low as th earth, in your own eyes and esteeme.

Which have wrought his judgement i. e. have been doing at it, qui fecistis precepta et si non perfecistis who aime at perfection though ye cannot attain to it, who thinke upon his Commandements to doe them, having respect to them all, and wishing well to the worke, Psal. 118. 5. 6. which God graciously accepteth as a working his judgement and yet would have you to abound more and more. Wherefore,

Seeke righteousness, seek meeknesse i. e. further measures of holinesse, and degrees of grace. Let him that is holy be holy still, let him persevere, grow, and advance forward toward the high prize proposed unto him: taking for his motto, that of Charles 5. Plus ultra further yet, perfecting holinesse in the fear of God, 2 Cor. 7. 1. So 1 Tim. 6. 11. But thou O man of God, (that is, O godly man, as the life of God is put for a godly life, Eph. 4. 18. see 2 Kings 4. 9.) fly these things (what things? heterodoxies. ver. 3, 4, 5. and love of money ver. 9, 10.) And follow after (Gr. persecute

ταπεινὸν Septuag.

Sorores collationes.

ταπεινός,
quasi εὐλαβεινός.
sola aquinus.
Psal. 103. 18.

persecute, pursue alacriter & acriter) righteousness, this is the totum hominis Eccl. 12. 13. the bonum hominis Mic. 7. 8. and by way of distribution comprehendeth (as to God) godliness and faith, (as to men) love, patience, meekness.

It may be ye shall be hid in the day of the Lords wrath] possibly ye may, probably ye shall be; pardon of sinne ye shall be sure of; mitigation also of sorrow, if not prevention: saved ye shall be, or more gently handled, or so inwardly calmed, that ye shall be able to call your souls to rest, when others are at their wits ends. You shall be safe under the covert of Gods wings, and in the hollow of his hand: when others that are without God in the world, shall be as a naked man in a storm, an unarmed man in the field, or as a ship at Sea without anchor, subject to dash and split against rocks, and quick sands.

Verse 4. For Gaza shall be forsaken and Askelon &c.) Here is dainty Rhetoricke in the Originall. This Prophet was (as Quintilian saith a good Oratour ought to be) Vir bonus, dicendi peritus, a good man, and a master of speech. The Hebrew tongue seemeth to have bin in the prime and flourish when Esay, Micah, and Zephany prophesied, like as the Latine was about Tullies time. The Philistines are here threatened, for a terrour to the impenitent Jews, who should tast of the same whip, and for the comfort of the Godly, who should be hid when these their enemies should be utterly destroyed. Gaza was so forsaken, according to this Prophecie, that it was thence called Gaza the desert: Askelon according to its name became ignis ignominia the reproach of the fire that wasted it, and (as a mercilesse element) laid it desolate. Ashdod (called in the New Testament Azorus Act. 8.) shall also (according to its Eymon) be wasted with fire, and her inhabitants driven into a far country as Captives at high noon, when the Sun (in those hot climates especially) is most parching and scorching: they shall be driven out with all the disadvantage that may be.

Virg.

ma is e begi
&c.

And Ekron shall be rooted out] Ekron was the place where Beelzebub the Prince of Devils had his throne. The Poets put it for hell: Flectere si nequeo superos, Acheronta movebo. Threatened it is therefore here (not without an elegancy that cannot be englished) with utter extirpation. The grand-devill had nested and nestled himselfe as near the holy land as might be: but he shall not long rest there, the Hebrew child will disquiet the great Pan: &c.

Verse 5. Woe to the Inhabitants of the sea coast] These were the Philistines: they lay between the Jewes and the Sea: God having so disposed of it, that his people might not have much commerce with forreign nations nor learn their manners. Into havens and maritime towns there is usually a conflux of vices, like as there is of waters into the Sea: witnesse Tyre and Sidon, Corinth, Cartage, Capernaum, &c. Hence that proverb maritimi mores: and that censure of such people littorales auri, horridi, immanes, latrociniis dedit omniū denique pessimi. Those that dwell by the Sea-side are usually ill-conditioned, fierce, cruell, theevish, and the worst of men. These Philistines were no better, and are therefore here put under a woe, and threatened with utter destruction.

The nation of the Cherethites] i. e. Destroyers: so the Philistines had stiled themselves, as glorying to have conquered and cut off many people. The old Latine translation rendreth it Gens perditorum The nation of Destroyers: so doth Aquila, Theodotion, and Symmachus. Now it comes to their turn to be destroyed, according to Esay 33. 1. That these Cherethites were a sort of Philistines See 1 Sam. 30. 14. 16. Ezek. 25. 16. That they were valiant men appears by that legion of them that guarded David 2 Sam. 9. 4. and 15. 18. and were highly esteemed by him, because they stuck to him in his affliction at Gath, and also when Abisolom was up in arms 2 Sam. 15. 18.

the word of the Lord is against you] And not onely against Israel. This was spoken, as for the terrour of those Philistines, who thought themselves out of the reach of Gods rod, and slighted his word, so for the comfort of the people of God, who thought much that themselves should be so severely dealt with, and the uncircumcised Philistines scape scot-free.

O Canaan the land of the Philistines] Indeed of the Israelites, Iosh. 13. 3. but held by force by the Philistines, who were of the stock of the Canaanites, but not subdued subdued; and had detained part of the land from the right owners for 800. years and upwards; and now they come to be reckoned with. Subito tollitur qui diu toleratur.

I will even destroy thee, that there shall be no inhabitant] No settled inhabitant, that shall fix there, as the word signifieth. Thus Pœna venit gravior, quo magis sera venit, the longer God staves, the heavier he strikes.

Verse 6. And the sea-coasts shall be dwellings and cottages for shepherds] It shall be waft and untilled, and therefore unfrequented by any but shepherds, who pitch their tents up and down, where they may best feed their flocks in desert places.

and folds for flocks] God may do thus in his just judgement upon his enemies, that live in his good land, and not by his good lawes: but wo be to our Depopulators, that drive out men, and put in cattle: that betray townes, as Rome did Carthage, with a distinction, We will save the city, but destroy the towne. How dangerous it is to prove Abaddons, appeareth by Gods punishing hand upon William the Conquerours, issue in New-forrest, wherein 36. Parish Churches had been demolished by him, with the removing of all the inhabitants, to make room for beasts, or dogs-game. There his second sonne Richard was gored in hunting by a Deer; Rufus his other sonne, mistaken for a Deer, was by chance shot thorow with an arrow. Henry likewise his Nephew, whilest he hotly pursued the chase, was struck by a bough into the jawes: and, as Absalom, left hanging untill he died.

Speed.

Verse 7. And the coast shall be for the remnant of the house of Judah] Who had not onely their owne countrey kept empty for them all the 70. yeers of captivity, and not any displaced to make room at their return, (see the Note on Zach. 7. 14.) but liberty to make use of the Philistines countrey: which was also further subdued by the Maccabees, but especially by the Apostles, who preached the Gospel, and planted Churches in those parts, as we read in the Acts chap. 8. 26, 40. and chap. 9. 32, 35, 36.

they shall feed thereupon] They shall go in and out, and find pasture, under the great Shepherd and Bishop of their souls, who shall feed them daily, and daintily among the lillies by the powerfull preaching of the Gospel among them.

Joh. 10.
1 Pet. 4.

In the houses of Ashkelon shall they lie down in the evening] Ubi temporis circumstantia securitatem notat, saith Gualther, The circumstance of time noteth their spirituall security: evenings are oft dark and dangerous. They shall lie down as cattle do, that take no care; they know whom they have trusted, and are fearlesse.

for the Lord their God shall visit them] Visit and redeem his people, raising up an horn of salvation for them, Luke 1. 68, 69. His visits are not empty visits, Psal. 8. 5. his favours are not like the winter-Sun, that lighteth, but heateth not, &c.

and turn away their captivity] to their unexpressible comfort, Psal. 126. 1. But especially when Christ ascending up on high leadeth captivity captive, &c. Col. 2. 14, 15. Ephes. 4. 8.

Verse 8. I have heard the reproach of Moab] How can he but hear who is all ear? who is both above us, and within us, in whom we subsist; Col. 1. 17. And what will he sooner be sensible of then the reproachings of his people? See Esay 37. 23. and 57. 3, 4. But draw near hither ye sonnes of the sorceresse, the seed of the adulterer, and the whore. (See how he becalls them) Against whom do ye sport your selves? against whom make ye a wide mouth, and draw out the tongue? are ye not children of transgression, a seed of falsehood? The Moabites and Ammonites were great jearers of the Jews, and revilers of their religion. These reproaches leniter volant, non leniter violent, cruell mockings the Apostle casteth them, Heb. 11. 36. David felt them as a murdering weapon in his bones, Psal. 42. 10. God will call such men to an heavey reckoning one day as deride the power of godlinesse, and the professors thereof. Rede saith, that this was the great sinne of the ancient Britanes, immediately before their destruction by the Saxons: and it is at this day both a presage and desert of our ruine, that as the Turks count all fools to be saints, so men with us account all saints to be fools.

and the revilings of the children of Ammon] How good they were at it, we may see in those words of Sanballat, and his copelmate Tobiah the Ammonite, Neh. 4. 2, 3. words as full of pride and scorne, as profane wit, or rancoured malice could make make them: and they lay so heavy upon Nehemiahs spirit, that hee could not ease himself but by breathing heavenward, verse 4. Hear, O our God, for we are despised, and turn their reproach upon their own head, and give them for a prey in the land of captivity, &c. Hear, saith Nehemiah: I have heard it, saith God. Thou hast seen it, saith the Psalmist, for thou beholdest mischief and spite to requite it with thine hand, Psal. 10. 14.

and magnified themselves] by speaking big and blustering words, bubbles of words, great swelling words, full of wind, 2 Pet. 2. 18. these shall finde, that such words are not winde, but will be required in fire, Jude 15. God is an utter enemy to boasting and threatening Bragadochios.

Verse 9. Therefore as I live [ This is Gods oath: so, As true as I live, Num. 14. 21. with Psal. 95. 10. therefore they are to blame that use it in their common talk.

Surely Moab shal be as Sodom, &c. ] Whereas they think that I either hear not their revilings, or regard them not, I shall make Moab and Ammon smart and smoak for them.

even the breeding of nettles and salt pits ] They shall not indeed be consumed with fire from heaven: but their land shall lie waste for a long season. Nettles grow in barren places, and are good for nothing, unlesse it be the buds at first coming. Pliny writeth, that where salt is digg'd, little good else groweth. See Judg. 9. 45. Psal. 107. 34.

for a perpetuall desolation ] Certain it is, that those nations carried captive by Nebuchadnezzar were never restored: but that in after-times a mixt multitude of vagrants, out of many nations met there, taking upon them the old title of Arabians, and living by rapine and robbery. Out of these came Mahomet, founder of the Turkish Empire and Superstition, who overturned the Christian Churches, there planted by the Apostles, ( as was here fore-prophecied, The residue of my people shall spoil them, &c. See verse 7. ) Confer Gal. 1. 17. and soon over-run all the East and South, as Popery did all the West and North, at the same time.

Verse 10. This shall they have for their pride ] Moabites were as much noted for their pride, as now the Spaniards are: and are therefore here devoted to destruction. Pride goeth before a fall, &c. A bulging wall stands not long: a joynt luxated and swelled, will that be down, cannot be set. God resisteth the proud, 1 Pet. 5. 5. he bringeth those ungodly down to the ground, Psal. 147. 6.

because they have reproached, &c. ] And all this out of the pride of their hearts, which breaketh out, as a master-pock, in their carriage: so that the pride of Moab resisteth to his face, and it shall be to him an abomination of desolation.

Verse 11. The Lord will be terrible unto them ] For he shall march forth in battle-array against proud persons, 1 Pet. 5. 5. and stain the pride of all their glory: he will pull them down from their pinnacle of self-exaltation, and make them know themselves to be but men. Atilas, king of the Hunnes, proudly gave out, that the starres fell before him, the earth trembled at his presence, and that hee would bee the scourge of all nations. But what became of him? He died suddenly by a flux of blood, breaking out at his mouth and choking him, on his wedding-day at night. It were easie to instance further, in Pharaoh, Nebuchadnezzar, Antiochus, Herod the king of Tyre, &c. With God is terrible Majesty, Job 37. 22. he is terrible to the kings of the earth, whiles he cutteth off their spirits. Heb. he slippeth them off, as one should slip off a flower betwixt ones fingers; or a bunch of grapes off the vine; so soon is the businesse done.

For he will famish all the gods of the earth ] He will cast them into an atrophy, into a consumption. This was fulfilled, partly when Nebuchadnezzar destroyed the Nations, and proclaimed the true God to be the onely God, but principally when Christ came in the flesh, and sent out his Apostles to decry those Heathen deities, and to preach the everlasting Gospel, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, &c; and worship him that made heaven, earth, sea, and fountains of waters, Rev. 14. 7. Now it was, that Satan fell like lightening from heaven, the oracles were silenced, the Heathen Emperours amazed at the prevailing power of the Gospel in despite of them, the very names of most of the gods of the earth were abolished, the Temple of Apollo at Delphos fired from heaven; and at that very

Hist. Nat.
l. 31. c. 7.

Avnt dars-
tal.

P. Joins.

Psal. 76. 12.

Dan. 4.

very time when Julians embassadours were there to enquire what should be the issue of the Persian warr. Thus the Heathen superstition fell flat to the ground, their gods were famished for want of worshippers and sacrifices &c. And the same we hope and wait for to befall the Antichristian roat and religion. That Idol is grown very leane, and hath lost a collop as we say. Bellarmino is very sensible, and bewailes the businesse, that ever since we began to count and call the Pope Antichrist, he hath suffered no small decayes and losses in the christian churches. He hath indeed, and more and more shall do till he be left as leane as a rake, and all his plumes pulled, his credit crackt, his honour laid in the dust.

Lib. 3. de Pont.
Rom. cap. 21.

and men shall worship him] Heb. bow down to him. He is thy Lord, and bow thou down unto him, Psal. 45. 11. Body and soule both must stoop to God: and both at once 2 Cor. 6. 20. Swenckfeldians (Stinkfeldians Luther called them from their ill favour) take away all externall service: so do the Nicodemites. Hypocrites draw nigh to God with their lipps only, when their hearts are elsewhere: their bodies are in facellis, their hearts in sacculis as Ezek. 33. 31. But the true Israelites give God both inward and outward worship: he doth ponere dextram in pectore, as Perfius phraseth it: being shod with the preparation of the Gospel, he treads it not awry, neither too much outward as the formalist; nor too much inward as the Swenckfeldian. He looks upon our late worship-scorners, our high-attainers as the last brood of Beelzebub: and reckons that to cast off ordinances is to cast away the remedy 2 Chron. 36. 15, 16. Prov. 29. 1.

Zanchy.

ὁ ὁμοειδής.

every one from his place] Not at Jerusalem only as once, Ioh. 4. 21. but in all places, pure hands and hearts shall be lift up, without wrath, without doubting: both in church and chamber: any place whatsoever shall be a sufficient oratory, so that God be worshipped in spirit and in truth, and the publike not neglected.

1 Tim. 2. 8.

even all the Isles of the Heathen] that is, all countries, though not encompassed with the sea: for the Jews called all lands Islands which they could not come at but by water. That God shall be worshipped in the foure corners of the earth, see the Note on Deut. 6. 4. It was the last speech of dying Chrysostom, Glory be to God from all creatures: Let the Jesuites at the end of their books subscribe Laud Deo & beata Virgini, Let this be the badge of the Beast: let us cry To God alone be glory all the world over.

Verse 12. Ye Ethiopians also, ye shall be slaine by my sword] which is long enough to reach you, though far remote. The Poets faine that Jupiter was won to be feasted by the Ethiopians: but that shall not save them from Gods fore and great strong sword. Nebuchadnezzar, to whom God had given Ethiopia, and Egypt and Saba as a ransom for his people Esa. 43. 3. See Prov. 11. 8. with the Note. The Ethiopians and Egyptians were subdued together Ier. 46. 2. Esa. 18. 1, 2. It is now inhabited by the Abyssines (a kind of mongrell-christians) and called Prefter-Johns country; where they say they have this custome amongst others: In their great solemnities they have a cup of gold born before them, filled within, and besmeared without with dirt, yet so as the gold appeareth: and next to this cup is carried a crucifix. Hereby they would shew that man should be pure as gold: but being within and without defiled by sin, he is restored by Christ crucified, so as that the gold of Gods graces appeareth in him here in part, and shall do hereafter in all perfection.

Verse 13. And he will stretch out his hand against the North] i. e. against Assyria (which lay North from Judea) as is presently added by way of exposition. The Scripture sometimes hath its own interpretation annexed as Ioh. 2. 19, 21. and 7. 39. Howsoever, the Rabbines have this saying amongst them, Nulla est obiectio in lege qua non habet solutionem in latere; i. e. there is not any doubt in the Law, but may be resolved by the context.

Selnecc. padag.
Christ. p. 2.
pag. 118.

and destroy Assyria] cast this rod of his wrath into the fire, after that he had worn it to the stump (as that Martyr said) upon other nations.

and will make Niniveh a desolation] See Nah. 2. with the Notes.

Verse 14. And flocks shall lie down in the midst of her &c.] Here are various and vehement expressions of the dreadful face of her desolations. Omnia congerit qua vastitatem horribilem denotare solent, saith Gualther, because it was held a thing almost

almost impossible that Niniveh should be destroyed. Hence that admiration of bystanders and beholders ver. 15. But what can be impossible to the Almighty? and what will not He do for his churches cause and comfort? See ver. 6.

all the beasts of the nations] which shall come from far to haunt this new-desert, beau-desert. See Isai. 13. 21, 22. and observe that Parallell texts, like glasses set one against another, do cast a mutuall light. The lapidary brighteneth his hard diamond with the dust shaved from it self: so must we clear hard scriptures, both the Cormorant (or Pellican) and the Bittern] Those inaupticate birds of prey that are signes both of Gods curse and mans misery Esa. 34. 11. The former hath its name in Hebrew from vomiting, and seemeth, saith One, to be the same that we call the Shovelard, which swalloweth shellfishes, and after vomiteth them to get the fish. The later liveth about lakes, saith Pliny, and with her beake beateth the fish out of the shell with great vehemency.

shall lodge in the upper-linells of it] beautified with pomegranates, flowers and other curious garnishes, as are wont to be seen at the porches of palaces.

their voice shall sing in the windowes] the black Saints; as they say; where was wont to be heard all manner of musick and melodious noises, Luxus cedit in lulum, their merry dances shall end in a miserable downfall.

desolation shall be in the thresholds] which were wont to be worn out with the abundance of clients and parasites, tracing over them.

for he shall uncover the cedar-work] i. e. God, or the enemy by Gods appointment, shall uncover the roof made of Cedar, for better continuance. Cedar is strong and durable: and by reason of the drynesse of it the timber chawneeth not, rotteth not: yea, it hath a property to preserve other things from putrefaction, saith Scribonius. The Ninivites raftered their houses with it, as they say the Africanes do with whale-bones. But now that God shall barr them and expose them to the injury of wind and weather, how can they stand? and what can be in the thresholds but desolation?

Verse 15. This is the rejoycing city] Exultabunda, that could stand on no ground, but was ready to leape out of her skin as it were: her inhabitants were meer mirth-mongers altogether set upon the merry pin: like the people of Tomburum in Africke, who spend their whole time in singing and dancing. Now the case is altered, and the Church, out of zeale for Gods glory, thus insulteth over them.

that dwelt carelessly] As if scituate in the clouds, above all feare; and altogether insuperable. Security ushereth in destruction. See Ier. 49. 31, 32.

that said in her heart I am, and there is none besides me] This was a proud word indeed. I am is one of Gods Almightyes names Exod. 3. 14. and There is none besides me, is one of his titles Esa. 45. 5. 21. and 48. 12. Thus empty man would be somerbing (the toad would swell to the bignesse of an ox) though man be born like a wild-asses colt Iob 11. 12. and man being in honour understandeth not, that he is, or shortly shall be, like the beasts that perish: that die of the murraine, and so become carrion good for nothing.

Psal. 49. 20.
preibus morticinis. Tremel.

Unde superbis homo cuius conceptio turpis, Nascepana, labor vita, necesse mori?

How is she become a desolation!] Here the Prophet Niniven in Theatro statuit, & traducit apud Iudeos (saith Calvin) setteth Niniveh upon the stage, and sheweth his Jewes the tragicall end of her: how she should wonderfully be brought down beyond all expectation. God delighteth to make himself marvelous: he is the onely true Thaumaturgus.

every one that passeth by her shall hiss and wagg his hand] In scorn, horror and disdaine; and why, See Nah. 3. 19. with the Note. Lam. 2. 15, 17. 1 King. 9. 8. Ezek. 27. 36. Mic. 6. 16. Surely God scorneth the scorners Prov. 3. 34. and maketh that the mercilesse find no mercy, Iam. 2. 13.

CHAP. III.

Verse 1. WOe to her that is filthy and polluted] Meaning Jerusalem, once a faithfull city, now an harlot, ſædiſſimum proſtitutum, of the kind of thoſe fordid men who are called Barborita, of their miry filthynesse, whom Epiphanius and Oecumenius ſpeak of. The word here rendred filthy comes from a word that ſignifieth dung, or that ſignifieth an example: and ſo it is a metaphor taken from light women that are carted in a diſgracefull way and made a publike example, an infamous inſtance. It is rendred alſo glutinous, or all craw as Levit. 1. 16.

Iſay 1. 21.

כאן

מגדל דגמא.

Ingluvies & tempeſtas, barathrum; macelli.

To the oppreſſing city] Prædatrici, that maketh a prey of others (either by force or fraud) as the ſilly dove is made a prey to the hawk and other ravenous birds.

Verse 2. She obeyed not the voice] ſc. of her teachers, nor enclined her ear to them that inſtructed her, as Prov. 5. 13. Hence ſhe was ſo filthy and oppreſſive: who if ſhe had harkened to whoſome counſell, and hidden the word of Gods grace in her heart, would have purified her ſelf even as He is pure, 1 Iob. 3. 3. and not have exacted money and corn, but have left off that uſury Neb. 5. 10.

She received not correction] or discipl. ne, as being incurable or incorrigible, pining away in her iniquity Lev. 26. 39. and not accepting the chaſtiſement of her ſin,

She truſted not in the Lord] but knockt at the creatures doore for help in her diſtreſſe, and made fleſh her arme, her heart departed from the Lord Ier. 17. 5. This God taketh very ill Ier. 2. 12. 13. as he hath very great reaſon: Confidence being the leaſt and yet the beſt we can render to him for all his benefits.

She drew not neer to her God] Though he were her God, yet ſhe gat as far from him as ſhe could: and, like a wild beaſt, would not be tamed nor managed by him. Now if theſe be undoubted arguments of a filthy and polluted State, as ſurely they are, what ſhall we think of our ſelves, who are as deeply guilty as ever Jeruſalem was in the promiſes? what ſhall the Lord do, or what ſhall he not do rather to a nation ſo incorrigibly flagitious, ſo obliged, ſo warned, ſo ſhamefully, ſo lawleſſly wicked?

Verse 3. Her Princes within her are roaring lions] Roaring over the meaner ſort, and tearing them with their claws, See the Notes on Mic. 3. 1, 2, 3.

her Judges are evening-wolves &c.] See Hab. 1. 8. This rapacity and bribery they had learned (likely) under Manaſſes and Amon: and exerciſed under good Ioſiah, who either knew it not, or could not redreſſe it. Eſt ergo periculi plena reiſ. forma, quæ ab uno dependet, ſaith Gualther here. And Tertullian telleth us, that one ſpeciall thing the Primitive Chriſtians pray'd for the Emperour was, that God would ſend him Senatum fidelem a faithfull Senate, pious Councelloours, good under-officers. Of Aurelians Councell it was ſaid, that by them the good Emperour, who might know nothing but as they informed him, was even bought and ſold. Alphonſus King of Arragon ſaid, that Princes were for this, in a worſe condition then other people: becauſe they could ſeldome heare the truth of things. Auguſtus bitterly bewailed the death of Varus: becauſe now, ſaid he, I have none about me that will deal truly with me. The Grand Signior goes oft abroad that he may receive poor mens petitions, and right them upon the greateſt Baſhawes, who, bewitcht by bribery, have denied them juſtice. And hence it hath been ever obſerved, that few of his chief officers die in their beds. Theſe evening-wolves many times have not a morrow left them to gnaw the bones in.

Tert. Apol.

Grand. Signi.
Serag. 148.

Verse 4. Her Prophets are light] Raſh, headlong, ſutious, debauched (as the French tranſlateth it) aeriall, fantaſticall, waighleſſe, worthleſſe men, ſuch as in whoſe doctrine there is no authority, in whoſe life no gravity, ſtaiedneſſe, ſeverity, conſtancy: like the planet Mercury, they can be good in conjunction

Rodolphus
Archb. of Canterb. next after Anſelm was ſurnamed Nu-gaz for his jeſting & toying.

with good, and bad with bad: like that French Apostate, of whom Beza saith, that he had religionem ephemeram, for every day a new religion, ab his ad illos, ab illis ad hos leviter iens & levius transiens, double-minded and unstable in all his wayes, Jam. 1.

and treacherous persons] Viri perfidiarum, most perfidious persons, This is their true title, whom the world counteth, and calleth facile, facetious, fair-conditioned, comorting, condescending, people-pleasing preachers. Can there be a worse treachery then to betray mens souls, as your Aiones and Negones do, that cry peace, peace, and so cozen men to hell.

her priests have polluted the sanctuary] Or holy services.

Cum caelum terra commiscet sacra profanis.

God looks to be sanctified in all those that draw nigh unto him, Levit. 10. 3. that they should be singularly holy, handling the word sanctè magis quàm sciè (as One once told the wanton Vestall) and living so, that malice it self may be silenced. God of old appointed both the weights and measures of the sanctuary, to be twice as large as those of the Common-wealth: to shew, that hee expects much more of those that serve him there, then he doth of others. See 1 King. 7. 15. with 2 Chron. 3. 15.

they have done violence to the law] sc. by their crafty and perverse glosses, setting it on the rack as it were, and so making it speak more then it would: tawing it with their teeth, as shoemakers do their upper-leather, forcing it two miles, when it would go but one, yea murdering it, as Tertullian saith of some, quod eadem scripturarum faciant, that they slaughter the scriptures, to serve their own purposes: for which cause also he calleth Marcion the heretike, Murem Ponticum, the Rat of Pontus, for his arrodng and gnawing the text.

Verse 5. The just Lord is in the midst thereof] The unjust Princes were said to be in the midst of Jerusalem as roaring lions, vers. 3. Here the just Lord is also said to be in the midst of her, as a sin-revenging Judge. He sitteth as God in the midst of those uncircumcised vice-gods, (as I may in the worst sense best terme them) he sets a jealous eye upon all their unrighteous proceedings, and is with them in the judgement. Neither eyeth he them onely, but all others in like sort: as the king in the Gospel came in to see his guests. His eye, like a well-drawn picture, taketh view of all that come into the room. O that we could be in his fear all the day! O that we would ever walk in the sense of his presence, and light of his countenance!

Nè pecces, Deus ipse videt, bonus Angelus astat, &c.

Sinne not: for God seeth thee, the good Angels stand about thee, Satan will accuse thee, Conscience will give in evidence against thee, Hell will torment thee: A reverend and religious man had this written before his eyes in his study.

he will not do iniquity] i. e. He will not let enormities go unpunished, nor passe by the infirmities of his people without a sensible check, Psal. 99. 8. See Hab. 1. 13.

Every morning doth he bring his judgement to light] Daily and diligently doth He both threaten by his Prophets, and execute with his hand, the menaces of his mouth upon those that will not be warned, that refuse to be reformed. He hath in a readinesse to revenge all disobedience, 2 Cor. 10. 6. Maturely he will do it, and accurately: It is his mornings work, Psal. 101. 8. like as it is theirs to rise early, and corrupt all their doings, vers. 7. He will be up and at it as soon as they.

he faileth not] As he may seem to do, when he forbearerh. Non desit, He will not be wanting to his office, to proceed against the uncounsellable.

but the unjust knoweth no shame] He can blush no more then a sackbut, as the proverb is. Such an impudency hath sinne woaded in his face, that he basheth nothing. Et pudet non esse impudentem, he is past all grace, as we say, and as good at resisting the Holy Ghost, as ever those Jews were that had a whores fore-head, Jer. 3. 3. sinews of iron, and brows of brasse, Esay 48. 49. When neither fear of God,

Noli peccare, nam Deus videt, Angeli astant, diabolus accusabit, conscientia testabitur, Infernus cruciabit.

God, nor shame of the world will rein men in, what hope is there of such? Illum ego periisse dica cui periit pudor, saith an Heathen. He is an undone man that knoweth no shame. Prevent it in time: for the modest beginnings of sinne at first will make way for immodest proceedings. The thickest ice that will bear a cart, beginneth with a thin trembling cover, that will not a pibble.

Curtius.

Verse 6. I have cut off the nations] And hang'd them up in gibbets, as it were, before your eyes, for your admonition, ut ruina majorum sit cautela minorum; that their destruction might be your instruction: that seeing your neighbours house on fire, you might look to your own: that observing other to suffer ship-wrack, you might see to your tackling. This is the use God expects we should make of his judgements upon others, Luke 13. 3, 5. and 17. 26, 29. Matt. 12. 13, 41. 42. 1 Cor. 10. 1, 2, &c. and surely he deerveth to be made an example, that will not take example by others.

Greg. Mor.

their towers are desolate] Or, their corners, &c. of their munitions, whereon towers were set. Or their extremities, &c. I have over-turned them from one end to another. Drusus and Ribera interpreteth it of their Princes. See the Note on chap. 1. 16.

I made their streets wast, &c.] See chap. 2. vers. 5, 6, 14, 15. To the end, that when my judgements were thus on the earth, the inhabitants of the world (but especially of the Church) might learn righteousness, Esay 26. 9. that the righteous seeing the vengeance, might wash his feet in the blood of the wicked, Psal. 59. 10. taking warning by his harmes. Observe here by the way, what great account God makes of his people, sith for their instance and instruction, hee thus wasteth the wicked: like as the Persian kings, when their sonnes had committed a fault, made their servants to be beaten before them.

Verse 7. I said surely thou wilt fear me] As in a schoole, when one boy is whipt, the rest tremble; and as in the Common-wealth, pœna ad paucos, metus ad omnes: so it should be in the Church. Other mens woes should be our warnings: others sufferings our sermons; others lashes our lessons: Gods house of correction, a school of instruction, where we should hear and fear, and do no more so, Deut. 17. 13. He that trembleth not in hearing, shall be crused to pieces in feeling, said that Martyr.

and receive instruction] This I promised my self of thee, but am disappointed, Jer. 5. 3. See verse 2. thou art therefore ripe for destruction.

So their dwelling should not be cut off] They should have redeemed their sorrows, and saved their citie. And this God speaks to others, as weary of speaking any longer to them, to so little purpose.

but they rose early and corrupted, &c.] Manicabant, they made hast, that no time might be lost: they wofully wasted that best part of the day, the morning, (which πρωινην ὥραν, furthereth every businesse) in corrupting their practises, doing evil as they could. Once (saith a Reverend man) Peters argument was more then probable; These men are not drunk, for it is but the third hour of the day. Now, men are grown such husbands, as that by that time, they will return their stocks, and have their brains crowing before day.

Drunk. exp. by D. Harris.

Verse 8. Therefore wait ye upon me, saith the Lord, &c.] Stand forth, and hear your doom: which that ye may know, that I do not precipitate, or rashly passe upon you. Wait ye upon me, &c. and yet that ye may not presume upon my patience, know that there is a day set, a determination setled for your full payment.

Nostri Deus subitis non damnat crimina pœnis: Compensat longas sed gravitate moras.

to gather the nations] To put them up as it were sheep, into a pound for slaughter. See more of this Jer. 25.

to pour upon them mine indignation] Here's mention made of Gods prey, of his indignation, fierce anger, fire of jealousy against nations and kingdoms: the better to perswade people to that which they are so hardly drawn to beleieve, viz. that God is not made all of mercy: but, though fury be not in him, to speak properly, Exod. 34. 7. Isay 27. 4. Yet that he will not by any means Clear the guilty, but punish them severely, taking vengeance of their inventions, Psal. 99. 8.

Verse 9. For then will I turn to the people a pure language] Then, when my sword hath rid circuit, Ecclef. 14. 17. and bin bathed in the blood of all nations, for their many and mighty sinnes; I will turn to the people, I will turn mine hand upon the little ones; mine elect, that remnant reserved for royal use. These I will bring, not into the fire onely, but through it, and will refine them as silver is refined &c. Zach. 13. 7, 9. so that their tongue shall be as choice silver, Pro. 10. 20. their lip shall be a pure lip, as it is here, a lip of excellency, Prov. 17. 7. so that they shall scatter pearls, Mat. 7. 6. throw abroad treasure, Mat. 12. 35. even apples of Gold in shrines of silver, Prov. 25. 11. they shall purifie themselves, as God is pure. Old things shall be past with them, all things shall become new: new constitution, new communication, new conversation. Look how the Conquerour sought to bring the French tongue into England, commanding it to be taught in schooles, spoke in courts &c. so doth the Lord Christ, whorideth about the world upon his white horses, the Apostles and other Ministers, conquering, and to conquer, Rev. 6. 2. where-ever he prevails, hee turneth to such a pure language, even the language of Canaan: not the Hebrew tongue (as R. Abraham senses this text) which all nations shall speak, saith he, in the kingdome of Christ (what they doe in heaven, I have not to say, some are confident) but words of grace, Col. 4. 6. words of truth and sobernesse, Act. 26. 25. right words, Job. 6. 25. spiritual speeches, Ephes. 4. 29. Scripture language, 1 Per. 4. 11.

That they may call upon the name of the Lord] As all Gods people doe, 'tis their character 1 Cor. 1. 2. he hath no dumb children, they no sooner breath but pray Act. 9. 11. for prayer is the breath of the spirit, Rom. 8. 26. and the fruit of faith: hence it is called the prayer of faith, and under the phrase of calling upon the name of the Lord here is meant beleiving in his name, and reposing upon Christ for safety here, and salvation hereafter.

To seeve him with one consent] Heb. with one shoulder, that is, unanimously, and with conjoynd endeavours. A metaphor from oxen yoked & letting their shoulders together to the work: or else from porters, who set their several shoulders to the same burden. The Saints may the better doe so, because they have the Spirit to lift with them and over anent them, as the Apostles word importeth Rom. 8. 26. Let them therefore endeavour by all good means, to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, Eph. 4. 3. that they may say as holy Miconius did of himselfe and his colleagues at Gotha in Thuringia, Cucurimus, certavimus, laboravimus, pugnavimus, vicimus, & viximus semper conjunctissimi. We ever ran together, strove, laboured, fought, vanquished and did altogether, in much peace and concord. This is Christian-like indeed, See Act. 1. 14. and 2. 1. 46. and 4. 32. animo animaque inter se miscbantur, saith Tertullian, they were all of one heart, and of one minde. The very Heathens acknowledged that no people in the world did hold together and love one another, so as Christians did. To see their travels, (saith Master Fox concerning the Saints here in times of persecution) their earnest seeking, burning zeal, readings, watchings, sweet assemblies, love, concord, godly living, faithfull marrying with the faithfull &c. may make us now in these our dayes of free profession (but lamentable divisions) to blush for shame. They served the Lord with one shoulder, we shoulder one another: they kept unity with purity without schisme, much lesse heresy, glorifying the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ with one mind and with one mouth Rom. 15. 6. with a pure lip, as it is here: we are quot homines, tot sententia; so many men, so many mindes. How many religions are there now amongst us, saith one? Old heresies new vamped? Our Saviour Christ saith, if the Son of man come, shall he find faith &c? Yes sure he may find many faiths: so many men, so many faiths. Pudet opprobria nobis &c. It is not peace but party that some men mind, saith another: their chief studies are studium partium, & studium novarum rerum, part-taking, and novelling. But what saith the Apostle? If ye speak with several tongues, will not he that comes in think ye are mad? so when the world hears of so many dissonant opinions; will they not think wee are runne wild? Is it not a shame to us, that the Turks should say, we may sooner look that the fingers on our hands should be all of one length, then that the Christians should be ομοθυμαδον

υπο ζυγον
ερα. Sept.

συναπλάμ-
βανεται

Act. 15. Mon.
750.

1 Cor. 14. 23

be all of one judgement? why should any Julian jeare us for our divisions? why should any Campion hit us in the teeth with our many sects and schismes? Pardon may be got for our other sinnes by faith in Christs blood; discordiam neque si sanguinem fundamus expiabitur (saith Oecolampadius to the Lutherans of his time) our scandalous discords God will judge.

*Ad fratres in Suetia Lubec-
tan.*

Verse 10. From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia Heb. of Chush, that is of Arabia Chusæa which lay betwixt Judæa and Egypt. Confer Esaie 18. 1, 7. Some understand it of Ethiopia which is beyond the river Nilus, and hath two very great rivers. See this in part fulfilled by that Ethiopian Eunuch Act. 8. neither may we think that he was alone in that countrey, Matthias the Apostle is said to have preached the Gospel to the Ethiopians. The large region of Nubia there had from the Apostles time (as 'tis thought) professed the Christian faith, till about 200 years since it forsook the same. The kingdome of Habassia held by Presbyter John, are yet Christians differing from us in a few ceremonies onely. See the Note on Chap. 2. 12.

*Euseb. lib. 1.
cap. 1.
Alvarez hist.
Ethiopic.*

*See Breerw.
Enquiries.
156. 197.
159. 174.*

My suppliants My praying people, that ply the throne of grace, and multiply strong suits pouring out a flood of words in humble supplication (as the Hebrew signifieth) continuing instant in prayer, as knowing that their safety here and salve on hereafter is of me alone.

Even the daughter of my dispersed Jews and Gentiles, elect of both sorts Joh. 11. 52. scattered here and there as the salt of the earth upon the face thereof, to keep it from putrifying, Danani thinketh that there is mention made of the daughter of the dispersed affectionately: namely, both to describe the earnestnesse of the Saints in serving God (for women quicquid volunt, valde volumus) and that this so goodly and joyfull a spectacle or sight of women worshipping and serving God, and of Virgins especially, might stirre up and move affections. It is easy to observe, that the New Testament affordeth more store of good women then the old, who can make masculine prayers, mingled with tears: And as Musick upon the waters sounds further and more harmoniously then upon the land, so doe prayers well watered.

Shall bring mine offering Heb. my meat-offering, or rather my wheat-offering, their bodies and souls, Rom. 12. 1. that best of sacrifices, for a reasonable service, a solemne present: such that the Chaldee paraphrast might expresse; He translateth it thus: They shall bring as presents unto me the banished of my people, who were carried captive, and shall return by my mercies. Some think that here is foretold the return of the Jewes to their own land, toward the end of the world, to set up the spirituall worship of God there: the famous Church that shall be among them, full of sanctity and ridde of all wicked ones, verse 11, 12, 13. the joy and gladnesse that shall possesse their soules verse 14. through Gods removing of all cause of fear from them verse 15. the encouragement they shall receive from others, verse 16. and (which is the cause of all this) the apparent arguments of Gods great love and favour, verse 17. the quality of those that shall be received to be citizens of this New Jerusalem, verse 18. the utter rooting out of all their enemies, verse 19 the fame and dignity that this Church of the Jewes shall be of among all nations, verse 19. 20. Thus they: quàm recte iudicium sit penes Lectorem.

Minchabbi

Verse 11. In that day shalt thou not be ashamed There is an holy shame for sinne, such as was that of Ezra, chap. 9. 6. of the penitent Publican, Luk. 18. 13. and of those good souls in Ezekiel, who blushing and bleeding loathed themselves for their abominations. To be ashamed on this sort is no shame, but a signe of that godly sorrow that worketh repentance never to be repented of, and not to know shame, to be frontlesse, and impudent is the note of a naughty man, Verse 5. But that which God promiseth here is, that he will cover their sinnes, not impute them Psal. 32. 1. 2. and that he will by his grace preserve them from scandalous and reproachfull practises that might render them ignominious and despicable, see Psal. 19. 39. shirring upon them himselfe, and giving them honour in the hearts of others, as he did Solomon.

Ezek. 16.

Them that rejoyce in thy pride Or, in thine excellency, as Psal. 68. 35. that is in thine external priviledges, wherein thou hast hitherto so prided thy selfe, as the onely people of God, holy and beloved.

And

and thou shalt no more be haughty] Stand upon thy tip-toes, upon thy pantofles, as if there were none such.

because of mine holy mountaine] Ier. 7. 4. The Temple of the Lord, the Temple of the Lord &c. cryed they aloud that nothing cared for the Lord of the Temple. So the Jesuites and their Romish crew cry, the Church, the Church, the Catholike church, ad ravim usque like so many oyster-wives: but this is not the guise of Gods people. He will purge his church of such Formalists.

Verse 12. I will also leave in the midst of thee an afflicted and poor people] Poor and therein afflicted, therefore despised. Poverty is an affliction, and makes a man trodden upon. Men will be sure to go over the hedge where it is lowest. Hence St. Paul ioynes them together, I have learned to want and to be abased. They that want must look to be abased. This thy son saith He Luk 15. 30. not, this my brother: he would not once own him, because in poverty. But though men will not, yet God will Iam. 2. 5. Rev. 2. 9. I know thy poverty, but that's nothing, thou art rich: poor in spirit, rich to God-ward, glorying in nothing but this, that thou understandest and knowest me and my will, thy self and thy duty Ier. 9. 23. and art therefore a rich Cargazon, a full Magazine, such as the world is not worthy of.

and they shall trust in the name of the Lord] As having nothing else to trust to. So St. Pauls widdow indeed, being desolate and left alone, trusteth in God, who whiles she had an husband trusted too much in him. 1 Tim. 5. 5. A noble-woman of Savoy, mother to John Gilear Duke of Millaine after her husbands decease, caused a coyne to be made, upon the one side whereof she drew these words, Sola facta solum Deum sequor, Being left alone, I trust in God alone.

Verse 13. The remnant of Israel shall not do iniquity] Sanctity and security are here promised to all the citiz'ns of the Church. Being justified by Christ they shall do righteousness and truth: there shall no way of wickednesse be found in them Psal. 139. 24. they shall be kept from foule flagitious practises, neither shall they wallow or allow themselves in any known sin unrepented of. Their spot, if any, shall be the spot of Gods children Dent. 32. 5. involuntary and unavoidable informity, such as there is a pardon of course for: onely they must sue it out by praying daily, Forgive us our trespasses.

Nor speak lies] For that's a foule fault, and rarely found in a Saint Esay 63. 8. For he said, Surely they are my people, children that will not lie: So he was their Saviour. It was wont to be as currant an argument, Christianus est, non mentitur, He is a christian, he will not lie, as afterwards it was, Hic est frater, ergo mendax, This is a friar, and therefore a liar. Sophronius testifieth of Chrysostome, nunquam eum mentitum fuisse, that he was never heard to tell a lie. Whereas of Pilat Egippus telleth us, that he was Vir nequam & parvi faciens mendacium, a naughty man, and one that made little conscience of a lie. It may seem so indeed by that scornfull question of his, What's truth? Ioh. 18. 38

neither shall a deceitfull tongue be found in their mouth] Their pure lip ver. 9. is not used to the language of hell, their spirit without guile Psal. 32. 2. produceth speech without deceit: for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh, Mat. 12. 34. See the Note there.

for they shall feed and lie down] shall have all that heart can wish, or need require; plenty, safety, security &c.

and none shall make them afraid] So as to make them dee iniquity or speak lies: as very good men when frighted have dared to do: witnesse Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, but especially David, deeply guilty of this sin 1 Sam. 21. 2, 8. and 1 Sam. 27. 8, 10. In the sense of which sin he prayeth, Remove from me the way of lying Psal. 119. 29. we also should pray, Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from that evil one, the father of lies. And having the shepherd of Israel to feed us and tend us; we should not feare Psal. 23. 2, 3. but chusing rather to dye then to ly, to suffer then to shift, commit the keeping of our souls to him in well-doing, as unto a faithful Creatour 1 Pet. 4. 19.

Verse 14. Sing O daughter of Zion, shout O Israel:] Joy is the just mans portion, which the wicked may not meddle with Hos. 9. 1. In the transgression of an evill man there is a snare or a cord to strangle his joy with, to check and choke all his comforts, but the righteous sing and rejoyce Prov. 29. 6. they are commanded

*Nil habet in-felix pauper-tas durius in se, Quam quod ridiculos, domi-
nes facit.*

Tho. Walsingh.

did toto do: yea the command is doubled and trebled here and elsewhere in both Testaments: and it is a sin for such not to rejoyce, as well as not to repent.

be glad and rejoyce with all the heart] which no wicked man can do: his mirth is but the hypocrisy of mirth: like a little counterfeit complexion. It may smooth the face, never cheer up the heart: like a slight dash of raine that soaketh not to the roote: or a handfull of brush wood or seare thorns under the pot Eccles. 7. 6. As their humiliations are but skin-deep, they rent their garments and not their hearts, they grieve in the face, and not in the heart Mat. 6. 16. so do they rejoyce in the face, and not with all their heart 2 Cor. 5. 12.

Verse 15. The Lord hath taken away thy judgments] i. e. He hath remitted thy sins, removed thy punishments, turned againe thy captivity as the streames in the south, commanded his Prophets saying, Comfort ye, comfort ye my people &c. Esa 40. 1. 2. tell her that all accusations and actions laid against her in the court of heaven are non-suted, and Gods wrath appeased. This is the summe of all the good news in the world: this is a short gospel.

he hath cast out thine enemy] As rubbish and sweepings of the house are cast out: so hath God dealt by thine enemies corporall and spirituall: that thou being delivered out of the hands of both, might serve him without feare, in holinesse and righteousnesse before him all thy dayes Luk 1. 74. 75.

הכח re purga-
re evertere significat.

the king of Israel even the Lord is in the midst of thee] In the many testimonies of his powerfull and gracious presence: yea, he hath set him up a mercy-sear, a throne of grace, and bidden thee come boldly thereunto Heb. 4. 16.

thou shalt not see evill any more] sc. so long as thou retainest God with thee, who is both a sun and a shield Psal. 84. 11. and children have a place of refuge Prov. 14. 26.

Verse 16. Feare thou not] why shouldest thou whilest the king of Israel is in the midst of thee? Be of good cheer said Cesar to the ferriman in a storm, thou canst not miscarry: Casarem enim fers & fortunam Caesaris, so long as Cesar is in the same bottome with thee. May not the church much more gather comfort, having God in her company; and so many of his servants to say to her, Feare thou not? True faith quelleth and killeth distrustfull feare: but awfull dread it breedeth, feedeth, fostereth and cherisheth.

and to Zion, let not thine hands be slack] Remollescant. Let not thy feares weaken, but rather waken thy diligence in well-doing: lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees Heb. 12. 12. Up and be active: pluck up your good hearts, and buckle close to your businesse: your task is long, your time short, your master urgent, your wages unconceivable. It troubled a martyr at the stake, that he should then go to a place where he should ever be receiving wages, and do no more work. Up therefore and be doing. Be not slothfull, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises Heb. 6. 12. Spontanea lassitudine morbus loquuntur, faithlesseesse argueth a diseased soule.

Hippot.
Aporis.

Verse 17. The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty] Even the mighty strong God Esay 9. 6. the Giant, as the word signifies, the champion of his church. He being in the midst of thee cannot but see how thou art fet upon; and how many dangers and difficulties thou encounterest with, and will send thee in new supplies Eph. 1. 19. seasonable succour.

He will save] This properly signifieth the privative part of mans happinesse: but includeth also the positive. Jesus will do all for his people.

He will rejoyce over thee with joy] As a bridegroom doth over his bride Esa. 62. 5. He will take special complacency and content in thee, being made accepted in the beloved Eph. 1. 6.

Gesti super te latria.

He will rest in his love] And seek no further. Heb. He will be silent in his love, passing by small faults without any the least signification of his displeasure: as if he were even fond over his church, and did err in his love towards her, as husbands are licenced to do toward their wives Prov. 5. 19. Some render it obmutescet in amore suo he shall be dumb in his love, so as he cannot speak through excess of love. Lovers are so transported sometimes, that they cannot utter their minds.

He will joy over thee with singing] As a father doth over his child whom he beareth in his bosome, or dandleth on his knee.

Verse 18.

Verse 18. I will gather them that are sorrowfull for the solemn assembly] which now they cannot celebrate, as being in captivity; and are therefore in great heaviness; as was David Psal. 42. 2, 3, 5. Nothing goes nearer to a good heart then to be debarred the benefit of Gods holy ordinances, then to heare the sabbaths mocked at by the enemies as these good soules did Lam. 2. 7. and to be asked as David was, Where is now thy God Psal. 42. 3. All outward comforts in this case are meer Ichabods. When the Ark was taken, Eli could live no longer: that word struck him down backward, and killed him in the fall. No sword of a Philistine could have slaine him more painefully: neither is it easie to say whether his neck or heart were first broken.

who are of thee] True children of the church, as appeareth by their strong affections to the ordinances 1 Pet. 2. 2. Luther said he would not live in Paradise without the word: as with it he could easily live in hell. An infant cannot be quieted with gawdes or fine cloaths without the dugg: so neither can a true christian with any thing, but the publike services, the solemn assemblies.

to whom the reproach of it was a burden] It lay heavy upon their spirits, and made them send up many a deep sigh to God, who heareth the breathings of his people Lam. 3. 56. and will restore comfort to such his mourners Esa. 57. 18. He that helped his Levites to bear the Ark, will help those that grieve at the want of it, and grone under the reproach cast upon it, which they ever honoured as the face of God Psal. 105. 4. Yea as God himself Psal. 132. 5.

Verse 19. Behold at that time I will undoe all that afflict thee] Heb. Behold Me: Look not to thy self as unworthy or unlikely to inherit such precious promises: for, not for your sakes do I this saith the Lord God, be it known unto you, but for mine own holy Names sake Ezek. 36. 22, 32. your unworthinesse shall serve for a foile to set forth the freenesse of my love: your unlikelinessse, the greatnesse of my power: my grace is sufficient for thee, my strength is perfected in thy weakness 2 Cor. 12. 9. Againe, look not to thine enemies, how many and mighty they are, how witty and wealthy, how active and combined (loricatus incedit Satan & cataphraetus, said Luther) let thine eyes be upon me, as Jehosaphats were when he knew not whither else to look 2 Chron. 20. 12. let thine heart be lift up in my wayes, as his was 2 Chron. 17. 6. behold me, behold me Esa. 65. 1. Look not downward on the rushing and roaring streames of miseries and troubles which run so swiftly under thee, for then thou wilt be giddy: but look upward and stedfastly fasten on my power and promise: beleeve in the Lord thy God, so shalt thou be established: beleeve his Prophets, so shalt thou prosper 2 Chr. 20. 20. thine enemies also shall be found liars unto thee, and thou shalt tread upon their high places Dent. 33. 29. I will undo them, saith God here Heb. I will do them (per Antiphrasin: ) or I will bruise them and break them in peeces, as R David rendreth it, by comparing Ezek. 23. 3, 21. I will not only repress them but root them out. Those that offer violence to the Church like blind Sampson, they lay hands upon their pillars, to pluck the house upon their own heads.

and I will save her that halteth] As enemies shall not hinder the Churches happinessse, so neither shall her own infirmities. Grant she be lame and luxated, maimed and disjoynted, so that she goeth sideling and halteth down right Psal. 38. 17. Say she be driven out of her countrey as an exile, out of all companies, as an outcast (whom no man seeketh after Jer. 30. 17.) and out of all good conceit of her self, as an abject, vile in her own eyes, not fit for the communion of Saints, or kingdome of heaven: Yet I will save her, I will gather her: like as the gathering host in the wilderness (see Iosh. 6. 9.) took up the lame, feeble, and those that were left behind. See Mic. 4. 6. with the Note, and Ezek. 32. 16. I will seek that which was lost, and reduce that which was driven away &c.

and I will get them praise and fame in every land &c.] So that glorious things shall be spoken of thee, O city of God: As thy sin shall be remitted, so thy name shall be healed, thy fame spread, per ora hominum volitabis, I will fashion mens opinions of thee, so that those that formerly shamed and shunned thee, shall highly esteeme thee, and stand for thee.

Verse 20. At that time will I bring you againe] And this I tell you againe, that you may the better beleeve it: only you must wait my time, for in time will I bring bring you againe, and in time will I gather you, and in time will I make you a name and a praise among all people of the earth, as before I promised: but you must give me time to do all this. He that beleeveth maketh not hast. The vision is yet for an appointed time Habac. 2. 3. See the Note there. Limit not the Holy One of Israel, set him not a day, say not Now or never: wake not your beloved till he please. He is a God of judgement, and waiteth to be gracious Esay 30. 18. Have patience therefore, yea let patience have her perfect work Iam. 1. 4. that ye may receive a full reward 2 Ioh. 8. For behold I come, and my reward is with me, to give you an expected end Ier. 29. 11.

when I turn back your captivity] Heb. Captivities: that is, all foure captivities together. For the Jews were carried captive to Babylon 1. under Manasseh 2 Chron. 33. 11. 2. Next, under Jehojachim 2 Chron. 36. 6. 3. under Jechonias 2 King. 24. 12. and 2 Chron. 36. 10. 4. Lastly, under Zedekiah 2 Chron. 36. 17. 2 King. 25. 6. All these shall be brought back together by an eminent and signal deliverance.

before your eyes] Those eyes of yours that failed almost for my salvation, and for the word of my righteousness Psal. 119. 123. shall see the accomplishment thereof, and be satisfied Psal. 54. 7. and 92. 11. Dexter tibi pra laetitia saliet oculus.

saith the Lord] This is the seal of all, and security sufficient, for Dei dixisse est fecisse: God will not suffer his faithfulness to faile, nor alter the thing that is gone out of his lipps Psal. 89. 33, 34.

Laus Deo in æternum.

A Com-

A C O M M E N T
O R,
E X P O S I T I O N
Upon the Propheſie of H A G G A I.

C H A P. I.

Geneſ. Chro.
not.
Verſe 1. noteth

N the ſecond year of Darius the King ] Not of Darius the Mede, as Genebrard doteth, for he was predeceſſour to Cyrus Dan. 5. 31. And Haggai prophesied after Cyrus and Cambyſes, Ezra 4. 5. and 5. 1. Neither of Darius Nothus; as Scaliger in his book De Emend: temporum (the doctrine whereof is almoſt wholly fictitious, ſaith One; and founded upon the confines of Nothing: ) but of Darius,

Herod. in Ithalia.

Herod.

πάλιν ἐπὶ Δαρείου γε-νέσθην.
Plato lib. 3. de 1 gib.
Prov. 21. 1.

ſon of Hyſtaſpes, who ſucceeded Cambyſes in the kingdom of Perſia; being choſen king by the Peeres, upon the neighing of his horſe firſt, as Herodotus teſtifieth. Whether this Darius were the husband of Queen Eſther, as ſome affirm, or her ſon, as Others, (and was therefore ſo favourable to the Jews) I undertake not to determine: Onely take notice, that by Heathen Hiſtorians it is ſaid, that the wife of this Darius was called Atoſſa, which ſounds in part ſomewhat like Hadaffah, that is Eſther, chap. 2. 7. Hadaffah was her own Hebrew name: and, after ſhe was made Queen, ſhe was called Eſther. He is called Darius the King, as if he were the Onely King on earth. His ſucceſſour Darius in his proud Embaſſy to Alexander, called himſelf the King of Kings, and Couſin of the gods: and for Alexander, he called him his ſervant: But Alexander ſoon after became his Lord. For the Kingdom of Perſia was loſt by that Darius, as it had been reſtored by this to its former ſplendour, after the havock made by Cambyſes; who among other vile acts of his (as Wickedneſſe proceedeth from the wicked, according to the proverb of the Ancients 1 Sam. 24. 13. ) forbade the building of the Temple Ezra 4. 12. But He who ſets up Princes at his pleaſure, and turns their hearts whither ſoever he will (as the plow-man doth the water-courſe with his paddle, or the gardiner with his hand ) turned here the heart of this great King to his people the the Jews: so that he made a new decree for the advancement of the building, Ezra 5.8. God also seasonably stirred up Haggai, and Zachariah to quicken the people, (who were soon after their return from Babylon, grown cold again and careless) and so blessed their Ministry, that the House, that is, the Sanctuary, and the Holy of Holies, was finished in four years space, or thereabouts, Ezra 6.14. The outward Court, and so the whole Temple, in three years after that; as Iosephus witnesseth.

Antiq. l. 11. c. 4

Func. Chronol.

Mic. 6.9

Tunc etiam,
doli plus valet arte malum.Prophetarum
ora sunt Dei os Christi.Festivus &
latus.

Chap. 2.

евпрадъствоу.

He is called Shesbazzar,
Ezra 1.8.

In the sixth moneth] In the 3444. year of the world, as Funccius computeth it, in the Calends of September, (confer chap. 2. 19.) when the Jewes were ingathering their harvest, and fruits; and found a dearth toward. This the Prophet makes use of, pressing it upon the people, as a just hand of God upon them, for slighting and slackening the rebuilding of his house. It is good for Gods Ministers to set in with him, to strike while the iron is hot, to cry, Hear ye the rod; and who hath appointed it: for as iron is very soft, and malleable, whiles in the fire, and as molten metals are fit for the mould; so when men are under the crosse, they are more easily wrought upon; they will hearken to instruction; that before laught at it, as the wild asse doth at the horse and his rider, Job 39. 18. The wild asse, that is used to the wilderness, though she kick up her heels, and snuffe up the wind at her pleasure, so that they that seek her will not weary themselves, yet there is a time when she may be taken; in her moneth they shall find her; Jer. 2. 24.

In the first day of the moneth] Heb. In one day. One for first is ordinary in both Testaments, Gen. 1.5. Num. 29.1. Dan. 9.1. Mat. 28.1. Joh. 20.1. 1 Cor. 16.2. The time of this Prophecy (as of others, 1/a. 1.1. Jer. 1.2,3, &c.) is precisely noted, to teach us what account we should make of Gods Oracles, and inspirations; and how God will one day reckon with us for the helps we have had, and the time we have enjoyed them. He sets down all: how much more should we, and live up to our means & mercies, propagating our thankfulness into our practise? Jeremy prophesied forty years, but with ill success: it was his unhappiness to be Physician to a dying State. The Holy Ghost sets a special mark upon these forty years of his prophesying, Ezek. 4. 6. by bidding the Prophet lie fourty dayes upon his right side, and bear the iniquity of the house of Judah fourty dayes, a day for a year. came the word of the Lord] i. e. he began to prophecy, as Ezra 5. 1. being sent and set a work by God, whose alone it is, to make meet Ministers of either Testament, 2 Cor. 3. 5. to send, gift, and bless them, Jer. 23. 21.

by Haggai the Prophet] Heb. by the hand of Haggai, that is, by his means, and Ministry. See the Note on Mal. 1. 1. Haggai signifieth merry, and pleasant, as at a solemn feast: which name of his excellently suiteth both with the time of his prophecy, viz. after the return from captivity, see Psal. 126. 1, 2. and also with the matter whereof he treats, and whereto he drives, Christ, the Desire of all nations. Wilt thou be merry at any time? saith Seneca, think on Cesar: canst thou be sad, and he be in health? How much more cause have wee to be to be merry in the Lord Christ? Let us keep the feast with all solemnity: let us keep holy-day, sith Christ our Paschever is sacrificed for us, 1 Cor. 5. 7, 8. Let this swallow up all our discontents, and crown the calender of our lives with continuall festivals: Let the ransom of the Lord return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads, &c. Esay 35. 10. The Septuagint ascribe certain of the Psalmes to Haggai, and Zachary, in the titles they prefix: though some think that the Hallelujah-Psalmes (as they are called) because they begin and end with Hallelujah, or, Praise ye Lord, were sung by the Jews, returning out of Babylon; those two Prophets beginning the tune, or giving the verse (as they call it.) And hereunto the Prophet Jeremy might have an eye, chap. 31. 12. Therefore they shall come and sing in the height of Zion, and shall flow together, to the goodnesse of the Lord, &c. unto Zerubbabel the sonne of Shealtiel] Philo saith, he was also called Barachias, others Phadaias, out of 1 Chron. 3. 17. His name Zerubbabel signifieth, either Born in Babel, or, Far from confusion. A Prince (of all men) should observe order, keep the peace. By the Lawes of England, a Noble-man cannot be bound to the peace; because it is supposed that the peace is alwayes bound to him, and that of his own accord, he will be carefull to keep others in good order. But what a reg-

Dio in vit.
Neron.

num Cyclopicum was at Rome in Nero's dayes, Quando poterat quisque eâ, quam cuperet potiri, negare licebat nemini? Tum servus cum Domina, presente Domino suo, & gladiator cum virgine nobili inspectante patre rem habuit, &c. Blessed be God for better times.

Lib. 1. de leg.

Aug. epist. 179

→ In loc.

M. Pemble.

Governour of Judah ] Or, Duke, Captain, Provinciall, President. The many-headed Multitude hath need of a Guide, who may be ἀσπυεὶ καὶ οὐρανοῦ, peaceable and prudent, (saith Plato) to keep and care for the well-fare of his subjects. Such an one was Zerubbabel, Nobilis genere, nobilior sanctitate, Noble by birth, but more noble by his piety: drained from the dregs, and sifted from the brannes of the baser sort of people. In the seventeenth year of his age, he led back part of the people from Babylon to Jerusalem; where he continued Governour for the space of fifty eight years, saith Grynæus. Those that make Darius in the Text, to be Darius Nothus, must needs allow him a much longer life and government: which God, say they, granteth to some, because hee hath something to bee done by them. The Revolution of States may here also be remarked. This people was first governed by Judges, or Captains: then by Kings, and now by Captains again. So the Principality of Edom, as it began with Dukes, and rose to Kings, so it returned to Dukes again, after the death of Hadad, in Moses his time, 1 Chron. 1. 51. Gen. 36. 43. Adeo nihil est in vita firmum aut stabile. So uncertain are all things.

* Ἀσπυεὶ καὶ οὐρανοῦ
τὸ εἶναι.

Bernard.

Turk. hist.

Acts 3. 15.
Heb. 4. & 7.

and to Joshuah the sonne of Josedech ] A brand pluckt out of the fire, Zech. 3. 2. and therefore the fitter for such a preferment, ut in alto positus non altius sapiat. David came not to the kingdom, till his soul was even as a weaned childe, Psal. 131. 2. Queen Elizabeth swam to her crown, thorow a sea of sorrows. Matthias King of Hungary, was taken from the prison to the throne. But, to the businesse: Joshuah the High-priest was a type of Christ, in regard, 1. Of his name, which signifieth a Saviour. 2. Of his Office of High-priesthood. 3. Of his partnership with Zerubbabel, in reducing the people home to their own countrey. The Lord Christ, is both our Prince of life, and our mercifull and faithfull High-priest, ever living to make request for us.

Calvin in loc.

M. Leighs
treat. of Divin.
ep. Ded.

the high-priest, saying, ] Zerubbabel and Jehoshuah were the Chieftains of the people: and though not themselves in fault, or at least nothing so much, (for they were both very religious) yet they were not so forward and forth-putting as they should have been in so excellent a work. Howsoever, if the task be not done, the Task-masters are beaten, Exod. 5. 14. It is the misery of those, that are trusted with authority, that their inferiours faults are beaten upon their backs. If the people gather Manna on the Lords sabbath, Moses and Aaron shall hear, How long refuse ye to keep my commandments? Exod. 16. 28. It is Mr. Calvins opinion, that Haggai therefore addressed himself to these two principall persons: to the end that they might joyne their forces with him, in reprehending and exciting the people to the Lords work. When the word and the sword go together, there is great likelihood of much good to be done. Upon the sword of Charles the Great was written, Utriusque tabula custos. And Queen Elizabeth riding progresse once in Suffolk, said, that now she saw the reason, why that County was so well governed, for she observed that all the Justices coming to meet her, had every one his Minister next to his body.

Verse 2. Thus speaketh the Lord of Hosts, saying, ] This title is oft used in these three last prophecies (eighteen severall times in that eighth of Zachary) because, being to build, they had many enemies; therefore had need of all encouragement. And Hierom in his Prologue noteth it as an act of great courage in Haggai and Zachary, that against the Edict of King Artaxerxes (or Cambyses) and the oppositions of Sanballat, and other potent Adversaries, they should stir up the people to build the Temple: and as an act of heroically faith in the Prince, priest, and people, to set upon the work, and finish it, Not by might, nor by power, but by the spirit of the Lord of Hosts, Zach. 4. 6. See more of this title in the Note on Mal. 3. 17. Doct. 1.

this people say ] Words then have their weight: neither are mens tongues their own: but there is a Lord over them (Psal. 12. 4.) that will call them to a strict account of all their waste words, Mat. 12. 36. and hard speeches, Jude 15. and then they shall experiment that by their words (which they happily held but winde) they they shall be justified, and by their words condemned, Mat. 12. 37. How good is it therefore to carry a pair of ballance betwixt the lips? Nescit pœnitenda loqui qui proferenda prius suo tradidit examini, saith Cassiodore; He that weighs his words before he utters them, shall prevent an after-reckoning for them.

the time is not come, the time, &c. ] He repeateth their frivolous and frigid excuses, in their own very words; that he may the better confute them, and the sooner bring them to a sight of their sinne. Sinne and shifting came into the world together, Gen. 3. 12. And this is still the vile poison of our hearts, that they will needs be naught, and yet never yeeld, but that there is reason to bee made, and great sense in sinning. These Jewes (likely) had both Scripture and Reason to plead for their backwardnesse (as there is no wooll so course, but will take some colour: and the suggard is wiser in his own eyes, then seven men that can render a reason.) For Scripture: To every thing there is an appointed time, a set season, such as we can neither alter nor order, Eccles. 3. 1. and verse 3. There is a time to break downe, and a time to build up. And that this time to rebuild the Temple was not yet come, some might pretend, that the seventy years foretold, were not yet fully expired: others (with more shew of reason) that they had been too hasty in laying the foundation long since, as appears by their ill successe, and many adversaries: that, God who had dwelt so long in a Tabernacle, and was now worshipped at his new-created Altar, would bear with them, if they first built their own houses, and then be more free to build his House, which they intended to do hereafter, with great care and cost. This is still the guise of gracelesse procrastinators, to fuinne and fool away their own salvation. Hereafter, say they, may bee time enough, and what need such hast to build the spirituall Temple? In space comes grace, God is more mercifull then so: and at what time soever a sinner repents from the bottom of his heart, &c. Fools and blind men (as our Saviour calls the Pharisees) that thus stand trifling, and baffling with God, and their souls, being semper vituri, as Seneca saith, alwayes about to do that, which if not well done, they are utterly undone for ever: for upon this little point of time hangs the crown of eternity. The gales of grace are uncertain, the day of grace, (which is very clear and bright) is usually a short one. Non licet in bello bis peccare, said Lamachus to a souldier of his brought before him, and pleading he would doe so no more: So God will not suffer men twice to neglect the day of grace, which, if once past, will never dawn again. Let none therefore when prest to the present Now of meeting God by repentance, answer as Antipater King of Macedony did, when one, presented him a book treating of happinesse & χολδζα I am not at leisure: Or as Archias the Theban, when forewarned of a conspiracy against him, cast the letters by, with In crastinum seria, and was slain ere the morrow came. Or as these Cumtators in the Text, that had oft in their mouth, The time is not come, the time &c. left the very next minute they be cut off by death from all further time of repentance, acceptation and grace for ever. Men may purpose, promise, expect a time of healing and happinesse, when they shall be deceived, and find a time of terrour and torment, Jer. 14. 19. Some, when a dying, would have given a world for time: as I have heard (saith a Reverend man) one crying day and night call time again: but that could not be. As in warre, so here, none are permitted to erre twice. Time must be taken by the forelock, as being bald behind.

Verse 3. Then came the Word of the Lord &c. ] Then after a short silence, as it were, proferitur Domini quasi cogitata responsio follows the Lords elaborate and deliberate answer, not without some touch of holy tartnesse, at their ingratitude: for, of all things, God can least endure to be slighted, where he hath better deserved. He looks upon such with anger, being grieved at the hardnesse of their hearts, Mark. 3. 5. He complains of such with a sigh; Ab sinfull nation, Isa. 1. 4. he is ready to rid his stomach of them, verse 24. Ah, I will ease me &c.

Verse 4. Is it time for you, O ye, to dwell in your cieled houses, &c. ] Not covered onely, but cieled with cedar, (as the Chaldee here hath it) arched and garnished, as the Greek, carved and trimmed, as Ambrose rendreth it. Sure, either your beds are very soft, or your hearts very hard, that you can, not onely come into the tabernacles of your houses, but give sleep to your eyes, or slumber to your eyelids. Before ye have found a place for the Lord, an habitation for the mighty God

Ufus est munus ut rei indignitatem amplificaret.

Prov. 26. 16.

Hieronym. R. David.

Mat. 23. 17.

Posthas occasio calva.

Ribera,

Lib. 3. epist. 12.

Psalm. 132. 4, 5.

Turk. hist.
τὰ τῷ Θεῷ
προσβύτερον
ἢ τὰ τῶν
ἀνθρώπων.
Herodot.

τὰ τῷ Θεῷ
τῷ Θεῷ.
Mat. 22. 21.

Cicero.

2 Cor. 5. 1.

Fren. Hist.

Hcb. 12. 16.

Mat. 10.

Job 16. 15. 16.
18. 21.
1 Cor. 12. 21.

Col. 3. 2.
Phil. 2. 21.

of Jacob. Good David, could not finde in his heart to dwell in an house of Cedar, when the Ark of God dwelt within curtains, 2 Sam. 7. 2. Valiant Uriah, deemed it altogether unfit and unreasonable, that when the Ark, and Israel, and Judah abode in tents, he should goe to his house to eat, and drink, and to take his ease and pleasure, 2 Sam. 11. 11. Solomon first built an house for God, and then for himself. The Christian Emperours, Constantine, Theodosius, Honorius, &c. exceeded in building Churches, which, from their stateliness, were stiled Basilica, or places for a King. The very Turks at this day, though content to dwell in mean and homely houses, yet their Moschees or Meeting-houses, are very sumptuously built, and set forth. It is a principle in Nature, that the things of God are elder, and more to bee respected then the things of men. A professor of the Turks law proclaims, before they attempt any thing, that nothing be done against religion. This is better then that which was written over the gate of the Senate-house in Rome (which yet is not to be disliked, in its place and order) Ne quid detrimenti Resp. capiat. Give unto Caesar the things that are Caesars: but with all and above all, Give unto God the things that are Gods: The Greek article is twice repeated by our Saviour, when he speaketh for God, more then when for Caesar: to shew, that our special care should be, to give God his due, to seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and then all other things shall seek us. Cetera aut aderunt, aut cetera non oberunt. But most people are so busied about their own houses, their cottages of clay, the body, that Gods house, the soul lies wast and neglected: The lean kine eat up the fat: the strength of the ground is spent in nourishing weeds. Earthly mindedness sucketh the sap of grace from the heart, as the Ivy doth from the Oake, and maketh it unfruitfull. Men are so taken up about the world, that they think not on Gods kingdom: as the Duke of Alva told the French king, who asked him whether he had observed the late great Eclipse? No, said he, I have so much to doe upon earth, that I have no leisure to look toward heaven. But is not one thing necessary, and all other but by-busineses? And have we not in our dayly prayer, five petitions for spirituals, and but one for temporals? Are we not taught to make it our first request, that Gods name may be hallowed, though our turnes should not be served? Is not Esau stigmatized for selling his birth-right, for a mess of broth? And is not Shemei chronicled for a foole, who, by seeking after his servants, lost his life? Pope Sixtus for a mad man, that sold his soul to the devil, to enjoy the Popedom for seven years? what shall it profit a man to win the world and lose his own soul? to win Venice, and then be hanged at the gates thereof, as the Italian proverb hath it? Surely such a mans losse will be 1. Incomparable, 2. Irreparable: for what shall a man give in exchange of his soul? It was no evill counsel, that was given to John the third, King of Portugal, to meditate every day a quarter of an hour on that divine sentence. It would be time well spent to ponder as oft and as long together on this Text, Is it time for you, O ye, that are so sharp set upon the world, so wholly taken up about your private profits, your pleasures and preferments, to fit in your ceiled houses, as Ahab once did in his ivory Palace, or Nebuchadnezzar in his house of the kingdom (as he vain-gloriously calleth it, Dan. 4. 30.) and Gods house lie waste, and his service neglected, to whom we owe our selves, 1 Cor. 6. 19. our lives Mat. 16. 25. our parents, children, friends, means Mat. 19. 29. our gifts and abilities, 1 Cor. 4. 7. our honours and offices, Psal. 2. 10, 11, 12. all that we are, and have? How justly may God curse our blessings, (as he threateneth these selfe-seeking, God-neglecting Jews both here, and Mal. 2. 2.) scatter brimstone upon our houses, dry up our roots beneath, and above, cut off our branches, drive us from light into darkness, and chase us out of the world with his terrors. Surely such are the (ceiled) dwellings of the wicked, and this is the place of him that knoweth not God, that inverteth the order appointed of him, by coveting, not the best gifts, but an evil covetousnesse, Hab. 2. 9. by setting his affections, not on things above, but on things on the earth, by seeking their own things, every man, and not the things of Jesus Christ.

Verse 5. Now therefore thus saith the Lord of hosts] Haggai was but a yong man, saith Epiphanius: Now therefore, left any one that heard him, should despise his youth, and slight his doctrine, he shews his authority, he comes to them cum privilegio, he delivers not the conceptions of his own brain, but the Word and mind of God.

God. For as Chrysostom saith of St. Paul, so may we say of all the rest of the pen-men of the Holy Scripture, Cor Pauli est cor Christi, their heart is Christs own heart: and their words are to be received, revered and ruminated, not as the words of mortal men, but (as they are indeed) the words of the everliving God, 1 Thef. 2. 13. Excellently spake he who called the Scripture Cor & animam Dei, the heart and soul of God. It is, every whit of it, divinely inspired, or breathed by God, saith the Apostle, and is profitable both for reproof, and for instruction in righteousness. See an instance hereof in this Text, together with the Prophets rhetorical artifice in first chiding, and now directing them to reprove, and not withal to instruct, is to snuffe the lamp, but not powre in oyle, that may feed it.

Greg. in Reg 3

2 Tim. 3. 16.

consider your wayes Heb. set your hearts upon them, diligently recogitate, and recognize your evil doings; and so shall ye soon find out the cause of your calamity, Judge your selves, so shall ye not be judged of the Lord, accept of the punishment of your iniquity: so iniquity shall not be your ruine: your wrath, but not your ruins. Capite consilium ex rebus ipsis, vel experimentis. Learn at least by the things ye have suffered: Let experience the mistrisfe of fooles, reduce you to a right mind. Lay to heart your manifold miseries, those δυστυχαιοι ἀμειβοι as one calleth them, Free School-masters, curst enough and crabbed, but such as whereby God openeth mens ears to discipline, and eyes to observation of his works, and their own wayes; according to that of Ezechiel, chap. 40. 4. Son of man behold with thine eye, and hear with thine ears, and set thy heart upon all that I shall shew thee &c. the senses must be exercised that the heart may be affected with the word, and works of God; according to that mine eye affecteth my heart, Lam. 3. 51. and Solomon gat much of his wisdom by observation, as appeareth by his Ecclesiastes which some have not unfitly called Solomons Soliloquy. It is but little that can be learn'd in this life, without due and deep Consideration: which is nothing else but an act of the Practical understanding, whereby it reflects and staies upon its own intentions: and, comparing them with the rule, it proceeds to lay a command upon the will and Affections to put them in execution. Thus David considered his wayes, and finding all out of order, he turned his feet to Gods testimonies, Psal. 119. 59. And, to still Gods enemies, Psal. 4. 4. he bids them commune with their own hearts and be still, or make a pause, viz. till they have brought their consideration to some good upshot and conclusion. For when consideration hath soundly enlightened a mans mind, informed his judgement according to that light (that candle held to his mind) and determined his will according to that judgement, it must needs bring forth sound resolutions, purposes and practises; as it did in the Ninivites, Ephraim, Ier. 31. 19. Iosiah, 2 Chron. 34. 27. the Prodigal, Luke 15. the Church in Hosea, chap. 2. 6. 7. She considered she was crossed and hedg'd in with afflictions, and resolveth to return to her first husband. The contrary inconsideratenesse is complained of as a publique mischief. Ier. 6. 8. and 8. 6. and 12. 11. They have laid it waste: and being waste it mourneth unto me: The whole land lieth waste, because no man layeth it to heart, that is, considereth deeply of the cause of its desolation. Without this, though a man had all possible knowledge lockt up in his brain and breast, it would be but as rain in the middle region, where it doth no good; as the horn in the Unicorns head, where it helps no disease; or as fire in a flintstone insensible and unprofitable, till beaten out by sound consideration: This makes knowledge to become experimental, as Psal. 116. 6. and Rom. 8. 1, 2. this is to follow on to know the Lord. Hos. 6. 3. as without this, mens knowledge is but a flash, and may end in ignorance and profanenesse: because never formed and seated in their hearts, never digested by due meditation and application to their own consciences.

1 Cor. 11. 30.

Le. it. 26. 41.

Ezek. 18. 38.

Job. 36. 8, 9;

10.

Verse 6. Ye have sown much and bring in little] This was visible to them: and they are called upon to consider it. The Philosopher affirms that man is therefore the wisest of creatures, because he alone can compute and consider. And yet how little doth man respect this priviledge, without which he were to be torred with beasts, or mad men? God harkened and heard, but no man spake advisedly, no man repented of his wickednesse saying, what have I done? no man humbled himself under the mighty hand of God, though God thrust him down, as it were, with a thump upon the back. Most mens minds are as ill set as their eyes are; neither of them look inwards. Lord, saith the Prophet, when thy hand is lifted up, they will not see, but they shall see &c. Esay 26. 11. So, when Gods rods call for reformation, they will not heare it and who hath appointed it, but they shall heare Iob 33. 15. Conscience, their domesticall Chaplaine, shall ring this peale in their eares, Consider your wayes: Ye have sowed much but brought in little &c. Omnia fuisitis & nihil profuit, you have tried all wayes to live, and 'twill not be, laboured all night, and taken nothing, laboured in the very fire, and wearied your selves for very vanity Hab. 2. 13. as those that seek after the Philosophers stone, the most they can look for is their labour for their paines. Either vanity or violence hath exhausted you, as Zach. 8. 10. and Gods vengeance is visible enough in those secret issues and draines of expence at which your estates run out, because he puts not his holy finger on the hole in the bottome of the bag. For it is his blessing alone that maketh rich Prov. 10. 23. and except he build the house, they labour in vaine that build it Psal. 127. 1. There is a curse upon unlawfull practises, though men be never so industrious, as in Iehojachim. Ier. 22. And all their policies without dependance upon him for direction and successe, are but Arena sine calce sand without lime; they will not hold together, when we have most need of them, but fall aunder, like untempered mortar. Hence the Psalmist assureth us, that Promotion comes neither from the East, nor from the West, nor yet from the South where the warme sunshine is, but from the Lord: he putteth down one, and setteth up another. So Hannah, The Lord, saith she, maketh poor, and maketh rich: he bringeth low, and lifteth up 1 Sam. 2. 7. And albeit no man knowes either love or hatred by all that is before them, because all things come alike to all Eccles. 9. 1, 2. (God maketh a scatter as it were, of these outward commodities: good men gather them, bad men scamble for them) yet if he blow upon a mans estate, and by losses and crosses so beat him down with his own bare hand (as here in the text) that either he hath not to eat, or dare not eat his fill, for feare of wanting another day, or if he do eat, yet the staff of bread being broken, and for want of Gods concurrence, he eats and is not satisfied &c. he hath but prisoners pittance, which will neither keep him alive, nor yet suffer him to dye, he is to be very sensible of it, to consider his wayes, and looking upon his penury (as a peece of the curse for neglect of Gods service Levit. 26. 14. &c.) to deprecate that last and worst of miseries, the judgement of pining away in their iniquities Verse 39. This is worse then any scarcity, then any bulimy or doggish appetite, a disease common in times of famine. The righteous cateth to the satisfying of his soule: but the belly of the wicked shall want Prov. 14. 25. As his belly prepareth deceit Iob 15. 35. so it suffers deceit; imposturam faciunt & patiuntur, as the Emperour said of them, that sold glasse for pearles. Fumos vendidi, fumo pereat, as Another. Te looked for much and loe it came to little, as it followeth verse 9. and why? but because they thought every little too much for God, and all well saved that was kept from him, Mal. 3. 9, 10, 11. See the Notes there. The Popish Commentators upon this text call upon the people, (if ever they meane to thrive) to keep holydaies; to heare Masses &c. yea some Priests in Gersons time publickly preached to the people, that whosoever would hear a Masse, he should not fall blind on that day, nor be taken away by suddain death, nor want sufficient sustenance &c. This was more then they had good warrant to promise; and yet they are beleevd. Shall not we learn to live by faith, to trust in the Lord and doe good? so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed, Psal. 37. 3. The wicked in the fulnesse of their sufficiency are in straits. Ieb. 20. 22. Contrarily, the godly, in the fulnesse of their straits are in a sufficiency: and this is the gain of godlinesse. 1 Tim. 6. 6. Piety is never without a well-contenting sufficiency, it hath treasure that faileth not, bags that wax not old, Luke 12. 33. And shall have hereafter riches without rust, wealth without want, store without sore, beauty without blemish, mirth without mixture &c.

Jer. 8. 6.

*Non erit cecus,
nec subito morietur, nec carebit sufficienti sustentatione.*

Verse 7. Consider your wayes] See ver. 5. Do it early, and earnestly. Excutite vos, iterumque excutite, as Tremellius rendreth that in Zeph. 2. 1. Search you, search you, O Nation not worthy to be beloved. So Lam. 3. 40. Let us search and try our wayes. Not search only but try, and as it were sift them to the brann. So 2 Cor. 13. 5. Examine your selves whether ye be in the faith: prove your own selves, as it were with redoubled diligence, in a most needfull but much neglected duty, duty, of dealing with your own hearts. But if ye will not, see that flaming place Ezech. 16. 43. If men will not judge themselves, God will: as though scholars will not scan their verses, their masters will. Men are as loth to review their actions, and read the blurr'd writings of their own hearts, as School-boys are to parse their lessons and false Latines they have made. But as he who will not cast up his bookes, his bookes will cast up him at length: so those that will not consider their wayes, and take themselves to task, shall find that sparing a little paines at first will double it in the end: and that the best that can come of this forlorne negligence, is the bitter pangs of repentance. Oh therefore that, with Solomons wife man, we had our eyes in our heads, and not in the corners of the earth! And that our eyes were, like the windowes in Solomons Temple, broad inward, that we might see our sins to confession, so should we never see them to our confusion. The Israelites confessed their murmuring and stubbornness, when God sent evil Angels amongst them, that is, some messengers of his wrath and displeasure. The Prophet Haggai here would have their posterity consider and better consider, sith the hand of God was so heavy upon them, and that he came against them as it were with a drawn sword, how they might disarme his just indignation by a speedy reformation. To which purpose he addeth

Verse 8. Go up to the mountaine, and bring wood &c. ] Set upon the work, and be serious: build the Temple with like zeale as Baruc repaired the wall Neb. 3. 20. accendit seipsum, he burst out into an heat, being angry with his own and others sloth: and so finisht his task in a short time. It must be an earnest, upright, and constant endeavour of reformation, that must follow upon our sense of sin, and feare of wrath: or else all will be but monus aliquis evanidus (as Calvin on the text hath it) a very flash: It will be but as prints made on water; as soon as finger is off, all is out. It was certainly therefore an excellent saying of Luther (though condemned for hereticall by Pope Leo the tenth) Optima & aptissima penitentia est nova vita. Amendment of life is the best repentance: neither is there any wiser way to break off our sins, then to practise the contrary duties. He that repents with a contradiction (saith Tertullian) God will pardon him with a contradiction. Thou repentest and yet continuest in thy sin. God will pardon thee, and yet send thee to hell. Those that will have God to take pleasure in them, as in his Temple, to love them and come unto them, and make his abode with them Ioh. 14. 23. to dwell in them, and walk in them (as they did in Solomons porch, and other walks and galleries about the Temple Zach. 3. 7.) to be glorified in them (accounting himself to receive, as it were, a new being, by those inward conceptions of his glory, and those outward honours we do to his name) they must go up to the Mountaine, not of Lebanon (though that was a pleasant and plentiful place Deut. 3. 25.) but of Heaven, that Hill from whence comes their help, and bring wood, (growing wood Cant. 1. 17. living stones 1 Pet. 2. 5.) and build the house 1 Cor. 3. 9. Eph. 2. 22. laying faith for a foundation, love for a covering, having hope for a pinnacle, humility for a pavement &c. washing it with teares, sweeping it by repentance, beautifying it with holiness, perfuming it with prayers, hanging it with sincerity &c. So shall Christ the King be held in the galleries Cant. 7. 5. he shall covet their beauty Psal. 45. 12. and be held fast bound to them in the bands of pure affection, and spirituall wedlock. He will take pleasure in them, as he did in those that prayed in or toward the Temple Deut. 12. 11. 1 King. 8. 29. as he did in Daniel that man of desires chap. 9. 23. in David Gods corculum or darling 1 Sam. 13. 14. in his Hephzibah or sweet-heart the Church Esay. 62. 4. called elsewhere the beloved of his soule, or his beloved soule: And he will be glorified in them by their spirituall sacrifices 1 Pet. 2. 5. reasonable services Rom. 12. 1. performed in spirit and in truth Ioh. 4. 24. by some one of which God is more glorified then by all the actions of unreasonable or unregenerate creatures.

Verse 9. Ye looked for much, and loe it came to little ] Spes in oculis, luctus in manibus, as Hierome here. The hope of unjust men perisheth Prov. 11. 7. etiam spes valentissima his likelyest hope, as some render it: he thinks himself sure, as Esay did of the blessing, but he only thinks so: God cuts off the meate from his mouth Ioh. 1. 16. takes away his corn in the time thereof Hos. 2. 9. confutes him in his confidences, which prove like the brookes of Tema. Job. 6. 17. and serve him, as Abshaloms mule did her master: his high hopes hop headlesse, as One phra-seeh it. It falleth out with him as with those perverse Israelites in the wildernesse made to tack about two and forty times, after that they thought themselves sure of the promised land.

Eccles. 2. 14.

1 King. 6. 4.

2 Cor. 6. 16.

I did blow upon it] i. e. I dispersed it with ease. By a like phraze (for sense) God is said Esa. 25. 11. to spread forth his hands in the midst of his enemies, as he that swimmeth spreadeth forth his hands to swim: and to bring down their pride, together with the spoiles of their hands, with greatest facility. The motion in swimming is easy, not strong: for strong violent strokes in the water would rather sink then support. In like sort God blasted their treasure, or blew their hoards hither and thither, he consumed their substance and cursed their blessing, as Mal. 2. 2. See the Note there.

why saith the Lord of hosts? because of mine house that is wast &c.] Their sin of preferring their own private interests and self-respects before Gods work and service is here repeated, and exaggerated, as the ground and cause of all their calamities: And all little enough to bring them to a sound and serious sight and hatred of their sins. Such a deep kind of drowinesse hath surprized us, for most part, that whereas every judgement of God should be a warning-peale to repent, we be like the smiths dog, who the harder the anvil is beaten on, lyeth by and sleepeth the sounder: Or like the silly hen, which loseth her chickens, one by one by the devouring kite, and yet as altogether insensible of her losse, continues to pick up what lieth before her. This is to swelter and pine away in iniquity, as if nothing could awaken men Lev. 26. 39. and it is threatened last of all, as worse then all their losses, captivities &c. A lethargy is no lesse deadly then the most tormenting disease. Let ministers therefore, by such forcible and quick questions as this in the Text, and otherwise, arroute their hearers (as they once did here their deare friends in the sweating sicknesse, who, if suffered to sleep, dyed certainly) that they may awake, and recover themselves out of the snare of the devill &c. It is well observed by One, that the devils particular sin is not once mentioned in Genesis, because he was not to be restored by repentance: But the sin of Man is enlarged in all the circumstances. And why this? but that he might be sensible, ashamed, and penitent for his sin. They say in philosophy, that the foundation of naturall life is feeling; no feeling, no life. And that the more quick and nimble the sense of feeling is in a man, the better is his constitution. Think the same of life spirituall, and of that hidden man of the heart, as St. Peter calles him.

and ye run every man unto his own house] Or, ye take pleasure every man in his own house. q. d. Ye are all self-seekers, private-spirited persons, ye are all for your own interest: Like the snail that seldome stirs abroad, and never, without his houle upon his back: or like the Eagle, which when he flies highest, hath still an eye downward to the prey, that he minds to seize. In parabola ovis capras suas querunt. They serve not the Lord Jesus Christ but their own bellies: or if they serve Christ, it is for gaine, as Children will not say their prayers, unlesse we promise them their breakfasts. In serving him, they do but serve themselves upon him; as those carnall Capernaïtes did Job. 6. Well might the Apostle complaine as Philip. 2. 21. And Another since, that it is his Pleasures, his Profit, and his Preferment, that is the naturall mans Trinity: and his carnall self that is these in Unity. May he be but warm in his own feathers, he little regards the dangers of the house. He is totus in se, wholly drawn up into himself, and insensible of either the publike good, or common danger: though the water-pot and speare be taken from the bolster, yet he stirs not. Farr enough from St. Pauls frame of spirit or speech, Who is offended, and I burn not? farr enough from his care and cumber, anxiety and solicitude for the house of God, and prosperity of his people 2 Cor. 11. 28. Nothing like they are to Ambrose, who was more troubled for the state of the Church, then for his own dangers? Nothing like Melancthon, of whom it is said, that the ruines of Gods house, and the miseries of his people made him almost neglect the death of his most beloved children. True goodnesse is publike-spirited though to private disadvantage: as Nature will venture its own particular good in the house

Rom. 26.

good for the generall, so will grace much more. Heavy things will ascend to keep out vacuity, and preserve the Universe. A stone will fall down to come to its own place, though it break it self in twenty pieces. It is the ingenuity of saints, in all their desires and designs to study Gods ends more then their own: to build Gods house with neglect of their own, as Solomon did: to drown all self-respects in his glory, and the publike good, as Nehemiah did: of whom it might be more truly said, then the Heathen Historian did of Cato, that he did καταμανεῖν τῷ κοινῷ, over-love the Common-wealth, and that he did --- soti genisum se credere mundo, beleve himself born for the benefit of man-kind.

Dis.
Lucan.

Verse 10, 11. Therefore the heaven over you is stayed from rain, &c. ] It's never well with man ( whose life is ever in fuga, as the Philosopher hath it, and must be maintained by meat, as the fire is by fuell ) till God hear the heaven, and the heaven hear the earth, and the earth hear the corn, the wine, and the oyl, and these hear Jezreel, Hof. 2. 21, 22. where we may see the genealogie of these good creatures resolved into God. The earth ( though a kind mother ) cannot open her bowels, and yeeld seed to the sower, and bread to the eater, if not watered from above. The heaven ( though the store-house of Gods good treasure, which he openeth to our profit and nourishment, Dent. 28. 12. ) cannot drop down fatnesse upon the earth, if God close it up, and with-hold the seasonable showres. This the very Heathens acknowledged in their fictions of Jupiter and Juno: and the Metapontines, having had a good harvest, consecrated χρυσον θυσιας, an harvest cut in gold, to their God, in the Temple at Delphos. Now, when a rabble of Rebels shall conspire against God, and fight against him with his own weapons, as Jehu did against Jehoram with his own men, what can He do lesse then cut them short? then make them know the worth of his benefits by the want of them? then call for a drought, ( verse 11. ) and so for a dearth, ( which inevitably followed in those hot countreys ) and consequently for pestilence and sword, the usuall concomitants? The Septuagint for drought here ( by a mistake of points ) translate a sword. And in the Originall there is an elegancy past Englishing. Because my house is chareb, that is, wast, therefore I have called for a choreb, a drought, or for a chereb, a sword, which shall in like sort lay your land wast, and make your houses desolate: according to that is threatened, Dent. 28. and Matth. 23. 38. And in the very next chap. verse 7. Christ telleth his Apostles that those refractory Jewes, and others, that rejected Him the true Temple, in whom the Godhead dwelt bodily, that is Essentially ( and not in clouds and ceremonies, as once between the Cherubims, which they used to call Shechinah ) because they loathed the heavenly Manna, therefore they should be pined with famine. They that would have none of the Gospel of peace, should tast deeply of the miseries of warre. They that despised the onely medicine of their souls, should be visited with pestilence. The black horse is ever at the heels of the red; and the pale, of the black, Rev. 6. 4. As there hath been a conjuncture of offences, so there will be of miseries: A conflux of them abideth the neglecters of Gods House, the contemners of his Gospel. Ursine tells us, that those that fled out of England for Religion in Queen Maries dayes acknowledged that that great inundation of misery came justly upon them, for their unprofitableness under the means of grace, which they had enjoyed in King Edwards dayes. Zanchy likewise tells us, that when he first came to be Pastour at Clavenna, there fell out a grievous pestilence in that Town, so that in seven moneths space, there died 1200. persons. Their former Pastour Mainardus, that man of God, as he calleth him, had often foretold such a calamity, for their profaneness and Popery: But he could never be beleaved, till the plague had proved him a true Prophet; and then they remembered his words, and wisht they had been warned by him. Let us also fear, lest for our many and bony finnes ( as the Prophets expression is ) but especially, for our hatefull and horrible contempt of his servants and services ( never the like known ) we pull upon our land Amos his famine, not of i. e. fortis bread, but ( which is a thousand-fold worse ) of hearing the words of the Lord. A famine long since foretold and feared by our Martyrs and Confessours; and now, if ever ( if God forefend not ) in proximu to fall upon us, as the most unworthy and unthankfull people that ever the Sun of heaven beheld, or the sun of Christs Gospel shone upon so fair, and so long together. The best way of preventi-

Sirabo.

Pro choreb
legunt cherib.

Coli 2.9.

Zanch. Miscel.
ep. ad Lan-grav.

Am. 5.12.
Peccata offes
ad i. e. fortis

Am. 8.11.

on

on is prevision, and reformation: beginning at our own, as Gideon did at his fathers household, Judg. 6. 27. And the best Almanack we can rely upon for seasonable weather, and the lengthening of our tranquillity is our obedience to God, love to our neighbours, care of our selves, &c.

Verse 12. Then Zerubbabel the sonne of Shealtiel, &c. ] So mighty in operation, so quick and powerfull is the good word of God in the mouthes of his faithfull Ministers, when seconded and set on by his holy Spirit. See for this, Esay 55. 10, 11. Jer. 23. 28, 29. Act. 19. 20. 1 Cor. 14. 24, 25. Heb. 4. 12. See that scala cæli, ladder of heaven, as One calleth it, Rom. 10. 14, 15. and consider how mightily the word of God grew and prevailed in those primitive times. It spread thorow the world like a Sun-beam, saith Ensebius: it was carried about into all places as on Eagles, or rather as on Angels wings. Athanasius of old, and Luther alate were strangely upheld and prospered against a world of Opposites to the truth they preached. Farellus gained five great cities with their territories to Christ. How admirably and effectually King Edward the sixth was wrought upon by a sermon of Bishop Ridleys, touching works of charity; see his life written by Sir John Heywood, Pag. 169, 170, &c. It is the spirit that quickeneth the seed of the word, and maketh it prolificall, and generative. And as in the body there are veins to carry the blood, and arteries to carry the spirits that quicken the blood; so is it with the word and spirit in the soul. If Gods Spirit open not mans heart, the word cannot enter. If he illighten not both Organ and Object, Christ, though never so powerfully preacht, is both unkent, and unkist, as the Northern Proverb hath it: The word heard profited them not, because not mixt with faith in them that heard it, Heb. 4. 2. They heard it onely with the hearing of the ear, with that gristle that grew on the outside of the head: whereas they should have drawn up the inward ear to the outward, that one and the same sound might have pierced both. But this all that hear cannot do, because all are not of God, Joh. 8. 47. and so have not his ear-mark, spirituall senses habitually exercised to discern good and evil, Heb. 5. ult. they have an heavy ear, which is a singular judgement, Esay 6. 10.

Melch. Ad. m. in vit. Farell.

With all the remnant of the people ] i. e. The generality of the returned captives, followed their leaders. Remnants they are called, because but few in comparison of those many bedge-rogues Mr. Dyke calleth them, potters they are called, 1 Chro. 4. 23. men of base and low spirits, that dwelt still in Babylon among plants and hedges: being the base brood of those degenerated Israelites, who when liberty was proclaimed for their return to Jerusalem, chose rather to get their living by making pots for the king of Babylon. These are ancient, or rather obsolete things, as Junius rendreth it, worn out and forgotten: and indeed they deserve to be utterly forgotten, and not written, or reckoned among the living in Jerusalem, Esay 4. 3.

Obeded the voyce of the Lord their God ] with the obedience of faith: and this they did by the good example of their Rulers. Thus, when Crispus the chief Ruler of the Synagogue beleaved, many of the Corinthians beleaved also, Acts 18. 8. When the kings of Judah were good or evil, the people were so likewise. Great men are the looking-glasses of their countrey: according to which, most men dresse themselves. Qualis Rex, talis grex. Why compellest thou the Gentiles, said Paul to Peter, sc. by thine example, to Judaize, Gal. 2. 14.

and the words of Haggai the Prophet ] whose mouth God was pleased to make use of. And this is added for a confirmation of the Prophets calling to the work; because of long time before, there had been no Prophet among the people, nor any to tell how long, as the Church complaineth, Psal. 74. 9.

as the Lord their God had sent him ] Heb. according as the Lord their God had sent him, after the same manner they heard, and obeyed the Prophet, as the Lord had sent him: they did not wrest his words to a wrong sence: nor did they question his Commission; but receiving it as the word, not of man, but of God, they set forthwith upon the work, yeelding as prompt and present obedience, as if God with his own mouth had immediately spoken to them from heaven.

and the people did fear before the Lord ] as if He himself had been visibly present in his own person. So Saint Peters hearers, Acts 10. 33. Now therefore, say they, they, we are all here present before God, to hear all things commanded thee of God. If young Samuel had known that it was the Lord that called him once and again, he would not have returned to his bed to sleep. If men were well perswaded that the God of heaven bespeaks them by his faithfull Ministers, they would not give way to wilfull wandrings, but hear as for life, and fear to do any thing unworthy of such a presence: they would work out their salvation with fear and trembling, yea work hard at it, as afraid to be taken with their task undone. They that fear the Lord will keep his covenant, saith David. Fear God and keep his commandments, saith Solomon. And, in every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness, is accepted of him, saith Peter, Acts 10. 35.

Psal. 103. 13
Eccles. 12.

Verse 13. Then spake Haggai the Lords messenger Or, Angel. See the Note on Mal. 1. 1. Then speaks Namely on the four and twentieth day of the month, as it is in the last verse: untill which day they had been building; for three weeks together. But Governour Tatnai and his complices came upon them, and discouraged the people, and hindered the work, Ezra 5. 3. It was but needfull therefore, that Gods command should be repeated, and a speciall promise added, I am with you, saith the Lord. Where we may well take up that of Tully concerning Brutus his Laconicall Epistle, Quam multa, quam paucis! how much in a little. I am with you, saith the Lord, you need not therefore fear, what man can do unto you. God is All-sufficient to those that are Altogether his. See 2 Chron. 15. 2. The Church is called Jehovah Stammah, that is, The Lord is there, Ezek. 48. 35. God is in the midst of her. Shee shall not be moved, Psal. 46. 5. Immuta manet, may better be her Motto, then Venice's. She is surely invincible, Zach. 12. 5, 6, 7. as having a mighty Champion, even the holy One of Israel: and this makes her (though but a Virgin) to laugh to scorn her proudest enemies: yea, to shake her head at them, Esay 37. 22, 23. as rather to be pitied then envied. There were they in great fear, (saith David, of the Churches enemies) for why? God is in the generation of the righteous, Psal. 14. Hence those Philistims were so woe-begone, 1 Sam. 4. 7. And the Egyptians no lesse, Exod. 14. 25. Let us flee, say they, from the face of Israel for the Lord fighteth for them. What shall wee then say to these things? saith Paul, (who had often heard when he was in the enemies hand, Fear not, I am with thee) If God be for us, who can be against us? who dare be so fool-hardy? so ambitious of his own destruction? Hath ever any waxed fierce against God and prospered? Job 9. 4. Where is Pharaoh, Nero, Nebuchadnezzar, &c? Was it safe for these, or any any other to provoke the Lord to anger? were they stronger then he? Oh that men would (according to Solomons counsell) meddle with their match, and not contend with him that is mightier then they! Can God be with his people, and see them abused to his face? Will they force the Queen also before him in the house? Will they, Giant-like, fight against God? will they needs touch the apple of his eye, that tenderest piece of the tenderest part? Will they invade his portion, plunder him of his jewels, pull the signet from his right hand? Surely God is so with his people, that as he taketh notice of the least courtesie done to them to reward it, (even to a cup of cold water) so of the least affront, or offence to revenge it, be it but a frown, or a frowne, Gen. 4. 6. Num. 12. 10. Better a millstone were hang'd, &c. Better anger all the witches in the country, then one of Gods zealous witnesses, Rev. 11. 5. Death cannot hurt them, Psal. 23. 3. Hell could no more hold them (the pains of hell gat hold on David, but he was delivered, Psal. 116. 3.) then the Whale could hold Jonas: It must needs render them up again, because God is with them. Now I had rather be in hell (saith Luther) with God, then in heaven without him, and it were far safer for mee.

Cant. 2. 15

Esth. 7. 2

Verse 14. And the Lord stirred up the spirit of Zerubbabel, &c. Here's the Appendix of the foregoing sermon, whereof we have heard but the brief Notes. That one word, I am with you, seconded and set on by Gods holy Spirit, set them all awork. How forcible are right words? One seasonable truth falling on a prepared heart, hath oft a strong and sweet operation, sc. when God is pleased to work with it, and make it effectuell: this, man cannot do, no more then the husband-man can make an harvest. The weapons of our warfare are mighty, through God, to the pulling down of strong-holds. Luther having heard Staupicius say, that that is kindly repentance which begins from the love of God, found from that time forward the practise of repentance far sweeter to him then before. Galeacius Caracciolum, an Italian Marquesse, was converted by an apt similitude used by Peter Martyr, reading on the first Epistle to the Corinthians. Dr. Taylor, Martyr, blessed God, that ever he became fellow-prisoner to that Angel of God, (as he called him) John Bradford. Senarclaus (in his Epistle to Bucer, prefixed before the history of the death of Iohn Diarius, slain by his own brother, as Abel was, for religions sake) I remember, saith He, when he and I were together at Newburg, the day before his slaughter, he gave me a great deal of grave and gracious counsell, Ego verò illius oratione sic incendebar, ut cum eum differentem audirem, Spiritus Sancti verba me audire existimarem, i. e. I was so stirred up with his discourse, as if I had heard the Holy Ghost himself speaking unto me; so fervent was he, and full of life; for he first felt what he spake, and then spake what he felt. So should all do, that desire to speak to purpose; and then pray to God, as for a door of utterance, so for a door of entrance to be opened unto them; such as St. Paul had to the heart of Lydia, and as Bishop Ridley had to the heart of good King Edw. 6. whereof before.

Job 6. 25

2 Cor. 10. 4

and they came and did work.] The Governours also, by overseeing others, and ruling the businesse by their discretion. Where Gods glory and the common good is concerned, all sorts must set to their helping hand.

Verse 15. In the four and twentieth day.] See the Note on vers. 13. The time is diligently noted, to teach us to take good note of the moments of time, wherein matters of moment have been, by Gods help, begun, continued, and perfected in the Church. This will be of singular use, both for the increase of faith, and of good affection in our hearts.

CHAP. II.

Verse 1. IN the seventh moneth, in the one and twentieth day of the moneth.] This is the Preface to the fourth sermon, as some reckon it: noting the exact time when it was delivered. See the Notes on chap. 1. 1. and 15.

came the word of the Lord.] This he often inculcateth, to set forth the truth of his calling, and validity of his commission. See the Note on chap. 1. ver. 5.

by the Prophet Haggai.] Heb. by the hand of the Prophet. See the Note on Mal. 1. 1.

Verse 2. Speak now to Zerubbabel, &c.] The better to hearten them on in the work, the Prophet is sent again to them, with a like message as before. Note here. 1. That there are none so forward for God and his work, but may stand in need of continuall quickening: there being more snares and back-biaßes upon earth, then there are starres in heaven: and the good gift of God having so much need of righting up: For, like a dull sea-coal-fire, if it be not now and then blown, or stirred up, though there be no want of fuell, yet will of it self at length dye and go out. Besides that, every inch, every artery of our bodies, if it could, would swell with hellish venome to the bignesse of the hugest Giant, that it might make resistance to the work of Gods sanctifying Spirit. Let us therefore consider one another, and study every man his brothers case, to stirre up, or whet on to love and good works. God will not forget this our labour of love, but abundantly both regard and reward it, Mal. 3. 16. See the Notes there. 2. That continuall preaching, makes men continue in well-doing. Therefore it was, that Barnabas was sent to Antioch, Acts 11. 22, 23. who, when he came and had seen the grace of God was glad, and exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord. And hence also it was, that Paul and Barnabas (chap. 14. 21.) returned again to Lystra, and to Iconium, and Antioch, confirming the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith, &c. And ordaining Preachers every where for that very purpose, for the increase of their knowledge, for the strengthening of their faith, for the help of their memories, and for the quickening quickening of their affections. Gutta cavat lapidem, non vi sed sapè cadendo. Gods tender plants need be often watered, that they may spring and sprout.

and to the residue of the people? Non enim sacris Eleasiniis, quæ in vulgus spargi nefas erat similia sunt oracula Dei, saith an interpreter here. Gods oracles are not to be hid from the common sort, as Sibylla's were, and as the Popish Doctors hold, lest men should be made hereticks thereby, that is, right beleivers. It is heresy, saith One of them to read the scriptures. It was the invention of the devil, saith Another. An husbandman reading the scriptures was posselt, saith a third. It is not needfull for the common sort to know more of Gods mind then the Articles of the Creed, saith Aquinas, Bellarmine &c. John Barclay in his Parænesis, excusing the church of Rome for taking away the scriptures from the Vulgar, saith thus, Sed de his quoque providit Ecclesia concionibus, in quibus Evangelia referuntur &c. But for this, the Church hath made sufficient provision by appointing Sermons to be made upon the Gospels for the day, and by permitting books of devotion wherein much use is made of the holy Scriptures. And for the historical part of the old Testament, saith he, men may read Iosephus his Antiquities, where it is set down more plainly and plentifully then in the Bible &c. But I am weary of raking in this foule channel.

Plantas tenellas frequentius adaqueare proderit. Primas.

Grynæus.

Verse 3. Who is left amongst you that saw this house in her first glory? Some such there were amongst them (as is here implied) and these must needs be very old, sixscore at least, some say more. Zorobabel might well be one of these; for he was a chieftaine in the first yeere of Cyrus, Ezra 2. 2. And Jehoshuah the high-Priest might be another: for he came out of Babylon with Zorobabel at the same time Ezra 2. 22. We see by experience, that mens lives are daily shortened. Naturall reasons whereof may be these. 1. Untimely marriages. 2. Cloying our bodies with variety of meates, and so digging our own graves with our own teeth. 3. Much ease and delicacy. The supernaturall reason may be, that so the world may sooner come to an end. God maketh hast to have the number of his Elect fulfilled, and therefore dispatcheth away the generations, shorteneth life for his Elects sake, fetcheth home his pilgrims, makes their dayes few though evill (Gen. 49.) takes them away from the evill to come &c. death being to them arumnarum requies (as Chaucers Motto was) yea janua vita, porta cæli, the day-break of eternall brightnesse.

Bern.

and how do ye see it now? It is a part of old mens prudence rightly to compare things long since past with things present, and so to conjecture at things to come. Thus the prudent person, by discourse of reason, foreseeth an evill and hideth himself, when the yong foole passeth on and is punished.

is it not in your eyes? that is in your thoughts; for God taketh notice of the inward workings of the heart 1 Sam. 16. 7. Psal. 139. 2. 1 King. 8. 39. For he made the heart, and must therefore know all that is in it: as a watch-maker knowes all the wheels and motions of the watch. He also will bring every secret thing into judgement Ecles. 12. 14. Therefore thought is not free (as foolish folk dote either from the notice of his eye (he had soon found out these Jews, when they did but despise the day of small things in their hearts Zach. 4. 10.) or from the censure of his mouth Heb. 4. 12, 13. Rom. 7. 14. (the law is spirituall and meets with involuntary motions to sin, ver. 7.) Or lastly, from the stroke of his hand which is a mighty hand 1 Pet. 5. 6. and falls very heavy Deut. 29. 19: even for a root of bitternesse, as it is there, for vaine thoughts Ier. 4. 14. how much more for mischievous, murderious, covetous, vainglorious and adulterous thoughts &c. It were good therefore to write upon walles and windowes (yea would it were written upon the tables of our hearts) that short Motto, which as short as it is, yet our memories are shorter, Cave, Deus videt. Take heed, God looks on: for he is omnipresent and omniscient.

is it not in your eyes in comparison as nothing? A meer Non-ens or nullity? not fit to be named in the same day with the former Temple? For, first Cyrus appointed the full proportion of this second House, the height thereof threescore cubites, and the breadth thereof threescore cubites Ezra. 6. 3. which was but one half so big as Solomons Temple, Herod indeed, to curry favour with the Jews (which yet would never be) built upon Solomons foundation, and bestowed a great deale

Lib. 15. Ant. cap. 14.

of cost, if we may beleve Iosephus. But so could not these Jews do, that returned from Babylon: for they were (secondly) but few, and those also poor, and, though helped both by Cyrus and Darius, yet they were glad to build the Temple of common stone, and unpolished, nothing like those precious carved stones wherewith Solomon built 1 King. 6. Thirdly, God hereby would draw their minds from the legall ceremonies and services; the Sun of righteousness being now ready to arise upon them, the day-spring from on high to visit them. Howbeit, because they could not have so glorious a Temple as the former, they slighted it in their thoughts, and would have neglected it: Learne hence, That men naturally account as nothing of Gods service, if not accompanied with outward pompe and splendour. The Israelites in the wilderness would needs have a calf, (as the Egyptians had) made of their Jewels and ear-rings. Ieroboam would have two, and those of gold. Nebuchadnezzar dedicated a golden image with all manner of musick Dan. 3. The people wept when the foundation of this Temple was laid Ezra 3. 12. because nothing so magnificent as the former. And the Papists explode our religion in comparison of theirs, because nothing so pompous and plausible to the rude people, whom they deceive with apish toys and trinkets, shewes and pageants. In their petition to King James they pleaded for their religion, that it was more pleasing then ours, and more agreeable to nature. John Hunt a Roman Catholike in his humble appeale to King James thus blasphemeth: The God of the Protestants is worse then Pan God of the clownes, which can endure no ceremonies nor good manners at all. Many, like children, like that book best, that hath most babyes in it: neither will they eat their milk, but in a golden dish. This proceedes from a blind understanding and carnall affection. The Church in its infancy was inticed with shewes and shadowes: but now God requires a reasonable service, he calls for spirit and truth.

Chap. 6.

Verse 4. Yet now be strong O Zerubbabel &c. Here he exhorteth all ranks, first to good Affection, Be strong or of a good courage: Secondly to good Action, Work, or Be doing: for affection without action is like Rachel, beautifull, but barren. Be strong so as to prevaile and carry on the service, all discouragements notwithstanding. Those that will serve God in the maintenance of good causes must be courageous and resolute 1 Cor. 16. 13. For otherwise, they shall never be able to withstand the opposition that will be made either from carnall reason within, or the World and Devill without, for want of this spirituall mettle, this supernaturall strength, this spirit of power, of love, and of a sound mind, 2 Tim. 4. 7. opposed to the spirit of feare that cowardly passion that unmans us, and expectorath and exposeth us to sundry both sins and snares: when he that trusteth in the Lord shall be safe Prov. 29. 25. Here then that we fault not, budge not, betray not the cause of God, nor come under his heaveie displeasure, who equally hateth the timorous and the treacherous; let us 1. Be armed with true faith: for, Fides famem non formidat, faith quelleth and killeth distrustfull feare. 2. Get the heart fraught with the true feare of God: for as one fire, so one feare drives out another Mat. 10. 28. 1 Pet. 3. 13, 14. 1. Get and keep a clearing, chearing conscience: for that feareth no colours, as we see in St. Paul, Athanasius, Luther, Latimer, and other holy Martyrs and Confessours. 4. Think on Gods presence, as here, Be strong, and be doing, for I am with you. Though David walk thorough the vale of the shadow of death, that is of death in its most hideous and horrid representations, he will not feare: For why? thou art with me, saith He, Psal. 23. 3, 4. Dogs and other creatures will fight stoutly in their Masters presence. 5. Consider your high and heavenly calling and say, Shall such a man as I fly &c? Either change thy name, or be valiant, saith Alexander to a souldier of his that was of his own name, but a coward. Lastly look up, as St. Steven did, to the recompence of reward, steale a look from glory, as Moses Heb. 11. 26. help your selves over the difficulty of suffering together with Christ, by considering the happinesse of reigning together. Thus be of good courage, or deale couragiously, and God shall be with the good, as Iehosaphat told his Judges when to go their circuit.

Charachunde
iq. uen valeo.
Sept. uerum.
ἐπιμαρτυρῶ
ἐν ἑαυτῷ.

Et Turnum fugientem hac
terra videbit?
Virg.

2 Chro. 19. vlt.

Num. 23. 10.
Ruth. 1.

and work.] Good affections must end in good actions, else they are scarce sound, but much to be suspected. Good wishes (and no more) may be found in hells mouth Num. 23. Orpah had good affections, but they came to nothing. God must must be entreated to fix our quick-silver to ballast our lightnesse, to work in us both to will and to doe, that it may be said of us, as of those Corinthians, that as there was in them a readinesse to will, so there followed the performance also. 2 Cor. 8. 12. Desire and Zeal are set together, 2 Cor. 7. 11. desire after the sincere milk, and grow in grace 1 Pet. 2. 2. John Baptists hearers so desired after heaven, that they offered violence to it Mat. 11. True affections are the breathings of a broken heart, Acts 2. 37. Rom. 7. 23. But the desires of the slothful kill him, Prov. 21. 25. Virtutem exoptat contabescitque reliquit, Good affections are ill bestowed upon the sluggard, sith they boyl not up to the full heat and height of resolution for God, or, at least, of execution of his will. The sailes of a ship are not ordained, that she should lie alwaies at rode, but launch out into the deep. God likes not qualmy Christians, good by fits, as Saul seemed to be when Dauids innocency triumphed in his conscience, or as Ephraim, whose duties were dough-baked, and whose goodnesse was as the morning-dew &c. Be ye stedfast and unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. Stick not at any part of it: difficulty doth but whet on Heroick Spirits as a boule that runs down hill is not slugged, but quickened by a rub in the way. If this be to be vile, Ile be yet more vile, 1 Sam. 6. 22. who art thou, O great mountain? Before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain. Zach. 4. 7. And hee said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weaknesse. 2 Cor. 12. 9.

Pnf.

1 Cor. 15. illi.

Rev. 2. 17.

Psal 73. 23, 24.

Apl. &amp; Mon.

For I am with you [saith the Lord of hosts] By a twofold presence. 1. Of help and assistance. 2. Of love and acceptance. Of the first, see chap. 1. verse 13. with the note there. The second seems here intended. The Jews were poore, yet God assureth them they had his love. So had the Church of Smyrna Rev. 2. 9. I know thy poverty, but thats nothing, thou art rich, rich in reversion, rich in bills and bonds: yea rich in possession, or All is theirs, they hold all in capite: they have 1. plenty. 2. propriety in things of greatest price: for they have God All-sufficient for their portion, for their protection, I am with you, saith he, and that's enough, that's able to counterpoise any defect whatsoever, as we see in David often, but especially at the lack of Ziklag, where when he had lost all, and his life also was in suspense, the Text saith, he comforted or encouraged himselfe in the Lord his God, 1 Sam. 30. 6. whereas Saul in like case, goes first to the witch, and then to the swords point: A godly man, if any occasion of discontent befalls him, retires himselfe into his counting-house, and there tells over his spiritual treasure: he runs to his cordials, he reviews his white stone, his new name (better then that of sonnes and of daughters, Isay 56. 5.) he hath meat to eat that the world knoweth not of, the stranger meddleth not with his joy. Virtus lecythos habet in malis. Tua presentia, Domine, Laurentio ipsam cruciculam dulcem fecit, saith a Father, Thy presence O Lord made the very gridiron sweet to the martyr Laurence. It made the fiery furnace a gallery of pleasure to the three worthies, the lions den an house of defence to Daniel, the whales belly a lodging-chamber to Jonas, Egypt an harbour, a sanctuary to the child Jesus &c. He goes with his into the fire and water, as a tender father goeth with his child to the Surgeon. Nevertheless, saith David, I am continually with thee, thou hast holden me by my right hand. Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel: and afterwards receive me to glory. Again, I am with you; that is, I will accept your worships, though in this meaner temple. If God may have the substance of worship, hee stands not much upon the circumstance. The sick may pray upon their beds, the persecuted in chambers, Acts 1. yea in dens and caves of the earth, Heb. 11. 38. The Church in Queens Maries dayes met and prayed off together in a cellar in Bow-church-yard. It was one of the laws of the twelve tables in Rome, Ad divos adempto castè, pietatem adhibento, opes amovenio. Sacrifice and Offering thou didst not desire (viz. in comparison of obedience, 1 Sam. 15. 22.) but as a better thing, mine ears hast thou opened, Psal. 40. 6. Hypocrites by cold ceremonies think to appeale God, they observe the circumstance; neglect the substance, they stick in the bark of religion, gnabble on the shel, offer the skin, keep back the flesh, serve God with shewes; & shall be served accordingly.

Verse 5. According to the Word] Or, as Tremellius hath it better, Cum K E R B O quo pepigeram vobiscum, with the W O R D, in and for whom I covenanted with you, &c. So my Spirit remaineth among you. And so it is a gracious promise that the whole Trinity will be with them. The particle eib seemeth put for gnim: and the article

He is emphatical, shewing that by Word is meant the second person, often called the Word both in the Old Testament, 2 Sam. 7. 21. with 1 Chron. 17. 19. and in the New. Luke 1. 2. John 1. 1. 1 John 5. 7. The Caldee seemeth to favour this interpretation, for he rendreth it, My Word shall be your help. Hierome, Albertus, Nyssen, and Haymo dissent not. Haggai, and other Prophets and Patriarches of old did well understand the mystery of the Sacred Trinity. See my note on Gen. 1. 1. Elisha speaks of the Almighty his makers Job. 35. 10. Solomon the same Eccles. 12. 1. Cant. 1. 11. which Jarchi interpreteth of the Trinity. Isay hath his Trisagion, or, Holy, Holy, Holy, chap. 6. 3. and chap. 42. 5. Thus saith God the Lord, He that created the heavens, and they that stretched them out. So Dent. 6. 4. When Moses becometh to rehearse the law, and to explain it, the first thing he teacheth them is the Trinity in Unity and Unity in Trinity. Hear O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is One. Three words answering the three persons: and the middle word, Our God deciphering fitly the second; who assumed our nature as is well observed by Galatinus: Others observe that the last letters in the Original both in the word Hear, and in the word One are bigger then ordinary; as calling for utmost heed and attention. The old Rabbines were no strangers to this tremendous mystery (as appeareth by R. Solomons note on Cant. 1. 11. We will make &c.) though their posterity desperately deny it. The Greek Church was not so found in this fundamental point: therefore their chief City Constantinople was taken from them by the Turks (as Eftius observeth) on Whitsunday or (as others) on Trinity Sunday; which day (saith our Chronicler) the Black Prince was used every year to celebrate with the greatest honour that might be, in due veneration of so divine a mystery. Now, Christ is here and elsewhere called The Word either because hee is so often promised in the Word. Or else, because by him Gods will was manifested and revealed to men, and that either mediately in the Prophets, whence Peter Martyr thinketh that phrase came. Then came the Word of the Lord, that is, Christ, Or immediately, himselfe, Heb. 1. 2. and 2. 3.

Speed. 723.

That I covenanted with you] Or, in whom I covenanted and whence Christ is called the Angel of the Covenant, Mal. 3. 1. Christ then was a Saviour to those of the Old Testament also, the Lamb slain from the foundation of the World. Christ undertook to pay his peoples debt in the fullness of time: and hereby they were saved. A man may let a prisoner loose now, upon a promise to pay the debt a year after. See Heb. 9. 15. and take notice of the unity of the faith in both Testaments: they of old saw Christ afarre off in the promises, they saluted him, and were resaluted by him, Heb. 11.

Rev. 13. 8.

ἀσπασάμενοι.

When ye came out of Egypt] Ye, that is, your ancestours. Things done by the parents may be said to be done by the children; because of the near conjunction that is between them. Hence Levi is said to pay tithies in Abraham, and Adams sinne is imputed to us all.

Heb. 7.

So my spirit remaineth amongst you] Not the substance, but the gifts of the Spirit; not the tree, but the fruits. Those whom God receiveth into the covenant of grace, he endues them with the spirit of grace. See Rom. 8. 9. 11. How else should they be able to perform their part of the Covenant, sith we cannot so much as suspire, unless he doe first inspire, breath out a sigh for sinne, till he breath it in to us by his Spirit? Hereby then we may know whether or no we are in Covenant with God (the Devill will be sure to sweep all that are not) sc. if his spirit remain in us Jer. 31. 35. working illumination, 1 Cor. 2. 14. 15. Mortification, Rom. 8. 13. Motion, Rom. 8. 14. Gifts, 1 Cor. 12. 4, 7, 8. &c. Fruits Gal. 5. 22. 23. strength, Esay 11. 2. Courages, as here.

Aug.

Fear ye not] Cur timet hominem homo, in sinu Dei positus? why should such fear man who have God in Christ by his Spirit standing with them and for them? The righteous may be bold as a lyon: he hath the peace of God within him, and the power of God without him and so goes ever under a double guard, what need he fear? It is said of Achilles that he was Stryge armatus, and therefore could not be wounded. But he that is in covenant with God is, Deo, Christo, Spiritu Sancto armatus, and may therefore be fearlesse of any creature.

Verse 6. For thus saith the Lord of hosts] i. e. the three persons in Trinity, as appeareth by the note on the former verse. Howbeit the Author to the Hebrews

peareth

chap. 12. 25. 26. applyeth the words to Christ: whence observe, that Christ is Lord of hosts, and God Almighty: even the same second person that is called had-dabbar the Word in the former verse, is very God. Compare John 1. 3. with Col. 1. 14. 16. and John 1. 9. with John 8. 12. and John 1. 11. with Acts 3. 13. 14. &c. See those coherencies of sentences, John 9. 3. 4. and 11. 4. and 12. 39. 40. besides the Apostles argument Heb. 1. 4. That one Gospel written by St. John, who was therefore called the Divine by an excellency (as afterwards Nazianzen also was) because he doth professedly assert and vindicate the Divinity of Christ (ever strongly impugned by the Devill and his agents, those odious Apostates and hereticks ancient and moderne: And no wonder, for it is the Rock, Mat. 16. 18.) setting him forth, 1. as coessential to the Father his onely begotten sonne, John 1. 14. One with the Father in essence and power, John 10. 30. 38. and 14. 23. 2. As having the incommunicable names and attributes of God John 8. 58. and 20. 28. Eternity John 1. 1. and 17. 5. Infiniteness, John 3. 13. Omniscience, John 2. 24. and 21. 27. 3. As doing the works of God, such as are Creation, John 1. 3. Conservation, John 5. 17. 3. miracles &c. 4. As taking to himselfe divine Worship, John 9. 38. and 20. 28. and 14. 1. This truth men must hold fast; as their lives, and be rooted in it: getting strong reasons for what they beleve. The second ground wanted depth of earth; The seed was good, and the earth was good, but there was not enough of it; therefore the heat of the sun scorcht it up. Christ is here called the Lord of Hosts; and the Lord of glory, Isay 6. 1. with John 12. 41. Jam. 2. 1.

Yet once it is a little while &c.] Adhuc unum pusillum. This little little while, this inch of time, was the better part of five hundred years, viz. till Christ came in the flesh, Heb. 12. 26. the Jew-Doctours say no lesse. A long time to us is but a little while to God. A thousand years is but as one day to the Ancients of dayes. His Prophets also, being lifted up in spirit to the consideration of eternity, count and call all times (as indeed they are in comparison) moments, and points of time, Punctum est quod vivimus, & puncto minus, could the Poet say; What is that to the Infinite? said a certain Noble-man of this Land to one, discoursing of an incident matter very considerable, but was taken off with this quick Interrogation. So say we to our selves, when under any affliction, we begin to think long of Gods coming to deliver us. What is this to Eternity of extreinity, which yet we have deserved? Tantillum, tantillum, adhuc pusillum. Yet a very little while, and hee that shall come, will come, and will not tarry: as in the Interim, the just must live by faith, Heb. 10. 37. Gods help seems long, because we are short. We are short-breathed, short-sighted, apt to antedate the promises, in regard of the accomplishment. We also oft find it more easie to bear evil, then to wait till the promised good be enjoyed. Those beleev'g Hebrews found by experience, that the spoiling of their goods exercised their patience: but staying Gods leysure for the good things he had promised them, required more then ordinary patience, or tarrance, Heb. 10. 36. Take we heed of prescribing to the Almighty, of limiting the Holy One of Israel, of setting him a time, with those Bethutians.

and I will shake the heavens.] Not the earth onely, as at the giving of the Law, (to purchase reverence to the Law-giver) but the heavens also: viz. by the powerfull preaching of the Gospel, whereby Satan was seen falling from heaven, Luke 10. 18. that is, from mens hearts; and the Saints set together in heavenly places, or priviledges in Christ Iesus, Ephes. 2. 6. For he that hath the Son, hath life, hee hath heaven aforehand. 1. In pretio. 2. In promisso. 3. In primis. Here then the Prophet encourageth these builders: telling them that under this second Temple, how mean soever it seemed, he would first send Christ, (called the Desire of all Nations, vers. 7. and Peace, vers. 9. with Ephes. 2. 14.) to grace it with his presence. Secondly, he would cause the Gospel to be preached in a pompous and powerfull manner. I will shake, &c. Shake them, to settle them, not to ruine them, but to refine them, shake their hearts with sense of sin, and fear of wrath, that they may truly seek Christ. For the Law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Iesus Christ, Joh. 1. 17. And the end of this universall shake, was to shew saith Chrysostome, that the old law was to be changed into the New, Moses into Messias, the Prophets into Evangelists, Judaisme, and Gentilisme into Christianisme. When Christ was born, we know how Herod was Galatin. lib. 4. cap. 9, 10.

D. Han Pear. m.

1 Joh. 5. 12.

Hom. 14. in Math.

troubled, and all Jerusalem with him, Matt. 2. 3. What a quire of Angels was heard in the air at Bethlehem, and what wondering there was at those things which were told them by the shepherds, Luke 2. 18. Eusebius tells of three Suns seen in heaven not long before his birth. Orosius tells of many more prodigies. The Psalmist foretelling our Saviours coming in the flesh, breaks out into this joyfull exclamation; Let the heavens rejoyce, and let the earth be glad: let the sea roar and the fulnesse thereof. Let the field be joyfull, and all that is therein: then shall all the trees of the wood rejoyce before the Lord, for he cometh, for he cometh to judge the earth: he shall judge the world with righteousness, and the people with truth, Psal. 96. 11, 12, 13. and Psal. 98. 7, 8, 9. This I know is by some (but not so properly) understood of Christs second coming to judgement. And both Augustin, and Rupertus construe this text also the same way. But the whole stream of Interpreters, old and new, carry it against them: and some of them tell us of sundry strange, and stupendious commotions, that fell out even according to the letter, in heaven, earth, and sea, about the time of Christs birth, death, resurrection, and soon after his Ascension, when he rode about the world upon his white horse, the Apostles and their successours; with a crown on his head, as King of his Church, and a bowe in his hand, the doctrine of the Gospel, whereby the people fall under him, and he went forth conquering and to conquer, Rev. 6. 2.

Lib. 18. de C.
D. cap. 48.

Psal. 45. 4.

Verf. 7. And I will shake all Nations | First, by the civil warres between the Trinumviri, not long before Christs Incarnation. Secondly, by the generall tax, Luke 2. 3. when all went to be taxed every one into his own city. Thirdly, by the preaching, and miracles of Christ and his Apostles, whereby the Nations were shaken out of their sinfull condition, and brought to the obedience of faith by effectually conversion. Thus à Lapide, I will shake all Nations with wonder at so great a mystery, with joy and with newnesse of life, saith Ja. The Gospel (saith Forbes on Revel. 14.) hath three degrees of operation in the hearts of men. First, it falleth to mens ears, as the sound of many waters, a confused sound, which commonly bringeth neither terrour nor joy: but yet a wondering and acknowledgement of a strange force, and more then humane power, Mar. 1. 22, 23. Luke 4. 32. Joh. 7. 46. This may be in the reprobate, Act. 13. 41. The second effect is the voice of thunder, which brings not onely wonder, but fear. This may also be in a reprobate, as Felix. The third effect, proper to the Elect, is the sound of harping; while the Gospel, not onely ravisheth with admiration, and shaketh the conscience with terrour, but also filleth it with sweet peace and joy. Hitherto He. Certain it is, that the Gospel maketh a stirre where it cometh, and brings an earthquake to mens souls, as it did to the Gaolers, Act. 16. and Peters converts, Act. 2. And this partly through the frowardnesse of our affections, and partly through the malice of Satan, fearing the ruine of his kingdome. For, as for the Gospel, this effect followes it, by accident. See Matth. 10. 34, 35. with the Note there. See also Luke 12. 49. It is by accident to the Sun, that it maketh the dunghill stink. It is by accident to the Sea, that it maketh the passenger sick: the ill humours in his stomach disease him. So here: And the Desire of all Nations shall come | that is, Christ, for so the Apostle expoundeth it, Heb. 12. 25. And the Church saith of him, Totus ipse desideria, Cant. 5. 16. he is all-over desireable. And again, Esay 26. 9. Wish my soul have I desired thee in the night, yea with my spirit within mee will I seek thee early. And unto Shiloh shall the gathering of the people bee, saith Jacob, Gen. 49. 10. as unto the Standard-bearer, Cant. 5. 10. the carcase, Mat. 24. 28. as the doves scour to their columbaries, Esay 60. 8. When I am lifted up, saith He, I will draw all men after me, Joh. 12. 32. that is, all mine Elect: these will follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth, as the hop and Heliotrope do the Sun. And because the Nations had not heard of Christ, till he came in the flesh: and this comming of the desire of all Nations seems to follow presently upon the preaching of the Gospel, therefore Junius renders it Desiderati, the Desireable ones of all Nations, and interprets it of the Elect, (the Septuagint also say the same) who should come to the second Temple in a spirituall sense, worshipping the same God that these good Jews did, and should come with strength of affection, (as the Hebrew importeth) should make hard shift to come, Esay 66. 20. They shall bring your brethren as an offering to the Lord, upon horses, in chariots, and in litters, that

*Valete mea desideria. Cic.
lib.* 14. epist. 2.
*ad uxor. G.
filiam.*

ὁ ἐκλεκτός
τῶν ἐθνῶν.

is,

is, though sick, weakly and unfit for travel, yet rather in litters then not at all. Neither shall they come empty-handed, but with all their desirable things (so some render this text) colligent omnes suos thesauros, saith Calvin, they shall come with strong affections, with liberall contributions, as Act. 4. 34. and as Tyrus who, when once converted, leaves hoarding and heaping up wealth (as formerly) and finds another manner of employment for it, namely to uphold Gods worship, and to feed and cloath his Saints Isa. 23. 18.

and I will fill this house with glory] This reedified Temple shall be honoured with Christ's bodily presence: and the spirituall Temple, which is the Church, shall be honoured by my presence in spirit, the abundance of my graces, the light of my word, and power of my spirit, who shall rest upon my people as a spirit of glory, when the world loadeth them with greatest ignominy. 1 Pet. 4. 14. rest upon them, by a blessed Shechinah.

Diodore.

Verse 8. The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the Lord of Hosts] Where-as the Jews might object, that it was not likely the second Temple should be more glorious then the first, sith they wanted that wealth wherewith Solomon abounded: God answereth in like sort, as once he did Moses alledging the slownesse of his speech, Who hath made mans mouth &c? so here, whose is the silver and the gold? Am not I the true Proprietary, and chief Lord of all? cannot I furnish you out of my great purse the earth and the fulnesse thereof Psal. 24. 1? what is silver and gold, but white and red earth, the guts and garbage of the earth as one phraseth it? things that I have no need of Psal. 50. 13? They lye furthest from heaven: the best of them are in Ophyr (perhaps the same with Peru) furthest from the church. Adam had them in the first Paradise Gen. 2. 11, 12. in the second, you shall not need them Iob. 26. 2, 3. &c. In defect of other, I my self will be your gold, and you shall have plenty of silver Iob 22. 25. Christ girt about the paps (that seate of love) with a golden girdle shall walk in the midst of his seven golden candlesticks, with a golden censer in his hand perfuming and presenting the prayers of his people upon the golden Altar, Rev. 8. 3. and measuring that city of pearle, his church, with a golden reed Rev. 21. 15. Ribera and some others think that God, as of old he had stirred up Cyrus and Darius (both of them Heathens) to contribute to the building of the Temple, so afterwards he stirred up Herod a wealthy king, not long before Christ came, to bestow abundance of cost upon the same Temple; and that this was here fore-prophefied. But I should rather incline to Calvin, who doubteth not but that the devill stirred up Herod to do as he did; that the Jews doting upon the splendour of that brave structure (the disciples did no lesse Mat. 24. 1, 2.) might cease looking for Christ, or trusting in him. And who knows (saith He) whether Herod himself might not have such a fetch in his head. Howsoever the devil was in it, doubtlesse, to take off their minds from the expectation of Christs coming, which was now at hand, by those externall pompes: and to withdraw the spirits of the godly from the furniture and gayety of the spirituall Temple; We know how the disciples (who leavened with the leaven of the Pharisees dreamt of an earthly kingdome) were taken with the beauty and bravery of Herods Temple, shewing the same to our Saviour, and fondly conceiting that by that goodly sight he might be moved to moderate the severity of that former sentence of his, Behold your house is left unto you desolate Mat. 23. 38. with 24. 1. But his thoughts were not as their thoughts. The bramble reckoned it a great matter to raigne over the trees: So did not the Vine and Olive. The Papiests hold that God is delighted with golden and silver vessels in the administration of the Eucharist, and offended with the contrary. But the Primitive Christians celebrated the sacrament of the Lords supper in vessels first of wood, and afterwards of glasse. That saying also of Ambrose is well known, Aurum sacramenta non querunt, nec auro placent, qua auro non emuntur. It was grown to a proverbe soon after Constantines time, Once we had golden Ministers and wooden vessels, now we have wooden Ministers, and golden vessels. Religion brought forth wealth: and the mother devoured the daughter.

Exo. 4. 10. 11.

Terra est marsupium Domini.

Rev. 1. 12. 13.

Verse 9. The glory of this later house shall be greater then of the former] Because Christ shall appeare and preach in it (as ver. 7.) who is the brightnesse of his Fathers glory ac consequenter urbis & orbis; any relation to whom heigheneth and ennobleth

Gen. 42. 4.

Jam. 1.

Ioh. 14.

Sculter. Annal.

Melch. Adam
in vit. Eugenbäg.Philipp. Pave-us in vita Dau. Parei.

ennobleth both places and persons. Bethlehem, though it be the least (Micah. 3. 6.) is yet not the least among the princes of Judah (Mat. 2. 6.) because Christ was born there. The tribe of Nephtali is first reckoned of those by Rachels side: because at Capernaum, in this tribe, Christ inhabited Rev. 7. 6. in which respect also this town is said to be lifted up to heaven Mat. 11. 2, 3. Benjamin is called the belov'd of the Lord, Gods darling (as their father Benjamin was old Jacobs) because God dwelt between his shoulders, sc. in his Temple built upon those two mountaines, Moriath and Zion Dent. 33. 12. The glory of that first Temple was, that the Majesty of God appeared in it, covering it self in a cloud. The glory of this later house was greater, because therein the same divine Majesty appeared, not covered with a cloud, but really incarnated. For, the Word was made flesh, and dwelt amongst us, and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth, Ioh. 1. 14. In this flesh of ours, and under this second Temple, Christ not only uttered oracles, did miracles, and finished the great work of our redemption, but also laid the foundation of the Christian Church. For the Law (that perfect Law of liberty the Gospell) came out of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem, to all the ends of the earth, Esay 2. 3. Psal. 110. 1. From hence it was that the Lord of glory, whom the blind Jewes had crucified, sent out his Apostles, those messengers of the churches, and the glory of Christ as they are called 2 Cor. 8. 23. to gather together unto him those desirable ones his elect (verse 7. See the Note there) whom he calleth the glory Esa. 46. 13. the house of his glory Esay 60. 7. a crown of glory Esay 62. 3. the throne of glory Ier. 4. 21. the ornament of God Ezek 7. 20. the beauty of his ornament ib. and that set in majesty ib. a royall diadem in the hand of Jehovah Esay 62. 3. and in this place will I give peace] Even the Prince of peace, and with him all things also Rom. 8. 32. pacem Pectoris & Temporis, Peace of countrey and of conscience: this later especially seemeth here to be meant. For the former (viz. outward Peace) was not long enjoyed by these Jewes; and their second Temple was often spoyled by the enemies, and at length burnt and overturned. But the Peace of God that passeth all understanding, is that Legacy which the world can neither give nor take from Gods people. And of this inward Peace the Septuagint (according to the Roman edition) taketh the Text, and so doth Ambrose. Hac est pax super pacem, saith He. Christ as he was brought from heaven, with that song of Peace Luk 2. 14. One earth peace, good will toward men, (which is the same with that salutation of St. Paul, who learned it belike, of those Angels, Grace be to you, and Peace) so he returned up againe with that farewell of peace Ioh. 14. 27. and left to the world the doctrine of peace, the gospell of peace Eph. 2. 17. whose Authour is the God of peace 1 Cor. 14. 33. whose Ministers are ministers of peace Rom. 10. 15. whose followers are the children of peace Luk 10. 6. whose unity is in the bond of peace Eph. 4. 3. whose duty is the study of peace Rom. 12. 18. and whose end is, to enter into peace, to rest in their beds, their soules resting in heaven, their bodies in the grave till the joyfull resurrection, even every one walking in his uprightness Esay 57. 2. Psal. 37. 33.

Verse 10. In the four and twentieth day of the ninth month in the second year of Davids] This diligence of the Prophets in noting and noticing the precise time of Gods hand upon them, should teach us to do the like. See the Note on chap. 1. ver. 1. The churches in Switzerland kept that day yearly as an holiday whereon the Reformation began amongst them. Eugenhagius kept a feast every yeer on that day of the month wherein he and some other Divines had finished the Dutch Bible, and called it The feast of the Translation of the Bible. The University of Heidelberg kept an Evangelicall Iubilee three whole dayes together Anno Dom. 1617. in the Calends of November, in the remembrance of the renowned Reformation of religion, begun by Luther a just hundred yeers before. Hereby Gods name shall be sanctified, our faith strengthened, and our good affection both evidenced and excited. By the time here described, it appeareth, that they had now been three moneths building, and the Prophet meane-while had given them great encouragement thereunto. But forasmuch as he found that they stuck in the bark, as they say, rested in the work done, thought they should therefore win upon God because because they built him a Temple, the Prophet gives them to understand, that there is more required of them than a Temple. viz. that therein they worship the Lord purely and holily, in spirit and in truth: that their divine worships be right both quoad fontem & quoad finem, for principle and end of intention; for else, they impure all that they touch, and are no whit better, but a great deal the worse for all their performances. Thus the Prophet teacheth them in the two following oracles propounded by way of demand to the Priests. How apt are men to lose themselves in a wilderness of duties? To dig for pearls in their own dunghills? to think to oblige God to themselves by their good works? to spin a thread of their own to climb up to heaven by? to rest in their own righteousness? to save themselves by riding on horses, Hof. 14. 3? The Prophets design is here to beat them off from such fond conceits: telling them that the person must be accepted ere the service can be regarded, as Abels. To the pure all things are pure: but unto them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure, but even their mind and conscience is defiled, saith the Apostle. Calvin upon this Text saith no more: and yet Cor. a Lapide is very angry with him for saying so much. There is in Peter Lombard this golden sentence cited out of Augustine: The whole life of unbelievers is sinne: neither is any thing good without the choicest good. This sentence Ambrose Rybera a Popish Postiller, censur-eth for harsh and cruell: But doth not God here say the same thing? Certain it is that good actions from bad men displease: as a man may speak good words, but we cannot hear, because of his stinking breath. The sacrifice of the wicked is abomination to the Lord, Prov. 15. 8. Charity is nothing, unlesse it flow out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfained, 1 Tim. 1. 5.

Tit. 1. 15.

Aug. de vera innocent. c. 56.

Cruclis est illa sententia.

Verse 11. Ask now the Priest concerning the Law For who should know the law better than the Priests? And who so fit to resolve cases of conscience as they? It was their office, Levit. 10. 10, 11. Dent. 33. 10. Mal. 2. 7. See the Note there. It was an evil time with Gods people, when he was put to complain, who is blind but my servant? or deaf as my messenger, that I sent, Isay 42. 19? When the Prophet was a fool, the spiritual man was mad for the multitude of their iniquity, and the great hatred, Hof. 9. 7. Varro upbraided the Roman Priests of old with their grosse ignorance of many things in point of their own rites and religions: and Cicero brake a jest upon C. Popilius an ignorant Lawyer at Rome. For when Popilius, being called for a witnesse to some controversy, answered Nihil se scire that hee knew nothing, Cicero answered by way of jeer, Putas fortasse te de iure interrogari you mean (perhaps) that you know nothing in the law, which yet you professe to have skill in. What a shame was it for the Pharisees who took upon them to be guides of the blind, teachers of babes &c. Rom. 2. 19. 20. to be found, blind leaders of the blind, Mat. 23. 15? So is it for Divines being asked concerning the Law, or will of God in such and such cases, not to be able to answer discretely, and intelligently as he did Mark 12. 34. as an egregie cordatus homo? But so bungler-like, and so farr from the purpose, that it may well be seene that desiring to be teachers of the Law, they understand neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm. 1 Tim. 1. 7. How like the motion of a puppet, the language of a Parrot is the discourse of such unlearned or uninterested Casuists? Every Minister of Gods making can truly say, The Lord God hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know to time a word to him that is weary: he wakeneth morning by morning, he wakeneth mine ear to hear as the learned, Esay 50. 4. See 1 Cor. 12. 8. Tit. 1. 9. Eph. 3. 4, 7. 1 Cor. 2. 13.

Viu. in Aug. de civ. Dei. l. 4. c. 1.

vspeχōs Ennius

Verse 12. If one bear holy flesh in the skirt &c. problems and parables are notable helpsto the bolting out of the truth, and conviction of the gainsayers. For problems, see Mat. 21. 25. Mat 22. 42. &c. For parables, see Judg. 9. that of Jotham, of Nathan, 2 Sam. 12. of the woman of Tekohah, 2 Sam. 14. of our Saviour, concerning the two brethren sent into the Vineyard, the wedding of the Kings son, the sower &c. See the Note on verse 10.

Mat. 21.
Mat. 22.
Mat. 13.

and the Priests answered and said no] Roundly and readily: without hacking and hewing, without doubling and dissembling; as those perverse priests, those self-condemned Hierophants, Mat. 21. 27. that against their consciences answered Iesus and said, We cannot tell. The wit of gracelesse persons will better serve them to falter and fumble, deny, or devise a thousand shifts to evade and elude the truth;

truth;

truth, then their malice will suffer them to yeeld to it, or professe it. This is to detain the truth in unrighteousnesse, Rom. 1. 18. as Plato, who had the knowledge of One God, yet he dared not to communicate it to the vulgar: and as some of the chief champions of Popery, who held justification by faith alone, but refused to say so, lest their Dagon should down, their Diana be despised. Let every spiritual man (but especially Ministers) be ready as to every good work, so to this of comparing spiritual things with spirituall, that he may judge or discern of all things, 1 Cor. 2. 13. 15. according to the analogy of faith, Rom. 12. 6. the tenour of the Scriptures, his sure Cynosura: and laying up all in his heart, Luke 2. 18. he may have a treasure there of new and old, a word of wisdom and a word of knowledge too, 1 Cor. 12. 8. both as a Teacher, and as a Pastour, to bring forth for common benefit.

Verse 13. If one that is unclean by a dead body] with a ceremonial uncleanness. The Hebrew hath it thus, If one that is unclean in soul, that is, in his whole person, as every wicked man is totus totus pollutus wholly covered with corruption, a lothsome leper from head to foot, wholly set upon sin as Exod. 32. 22. lying down in wickednesse or in that wicked one, 1 John 5. 19. sick of such a disease as the Physicians call corruptionem totius substantia, nay dead in sins and trespasses Eph. 2. 1. and can therefore doe no better then dead work at best, Heb. 9. 14. such as the living God will not be served with, ibid. See the note on Mal. 3. 16. doct. 4. Use 1. He is unclean, unclean, and impureth all that hee toucheth, according to that which followeth.

*Splendida pec-
ca u.
Am. 6. 13.*

Verse 14. So is this people, and so is this Nation before me] Though pure in their own eyes Prov. 30. 12. and to the world-ward unrebukeable, as Paul the Pharisees Phil. 3. and those self-justifiers, Luke 16. 14, 15. Ye are those that justifie your selves (and have the worlds good word for you) but God knoweth your hearts: for that which is highly esteemed amongst men, is abomination in the sight of God. Sordet in conspectu iudicis quod fulget in conspectu operantis. Wicked mens services are but glistening finnes, they rejoyce in a thing of naught, as Amos hath it, like as Leah rejoyced in that whereof She had cause to repent, and said God hath given me my hire, when she had more cause to say, God I fear will give me my hire, my payment, because I have given my maiden to my husband, Gen. 30. 18. But she was in the common error of measuring and judging of things by the successe: as if God were not many times angry with men, though they outwardly prosper: or as if there were not here one event to the clean and to the unclean Eccles. 9. 2. Untill the day that God shall separate the sheep from the goates, whom for the glory of his name, and the good of his people he suffers for present to goe one among another to make his own to stick the faster together, and to their principles, Shepherds say, that it is wholesome for a flock of sheep to have some goats to feed amongst them: their bad scent being good Physick for the sheep, to keep them from the shakings. Onely let Gods sheep take heed that they contract no corruption by conversing with goats: which is soon done, for sinne is catching, and ill company is contagious. Nemo erat sibi ipsi: sed dementiam spargit in proximos, saith Seneca, No man erres out of the right way alone, but drawes others along, And multos sollicitat societas nefanda, saith Chrysostom, evil company solliciteth many to sinne, virtue is oft overcome by vice, saith Nazianzen, as a little wormwood sooner imbittereth a great deal of hony, then twice so much hony can sweeten a small deal of wormwood: Or as one spoonfull of vinegar will soon tart a great deal of sweet milk: but a great deal of milk will not so soon allay one spoonfull of vinegar. Remove but one stone, and the whole river will rush downward: but you can hardly stop the stream again with a strong damme. Touch pitch and you shall presently be defiled, but touch sope and you shall not presently be made clean, without much rubbing and rinsing. Mexentius the tyrant Corpora corporibus iungebat mortuis vivis tyed living men to dead carcasses: but the dead did not revive by the living, the living rather putrified by reason of the dead. He that bore consecrated flesh in the skirt of his garment, and with his skirt touched bread, or pottage, or wine, or oyle, or any meat, he made it not thereby holy. But if an unclean person touched any of these, he made it unclean. The Donatists abused this Text, to prove that Baptisme was defiled, and vacated, if administrated by an unregenerate Minister: But Augustine again against Fulgentium the Donatist vindicateth the Text from their false glosses, and asserteth from it the contrary truth. May not clean corn bee sowed with foul hands, and grow nevertheless? May not a trumpet be well sounded by an impure breath? And is not the water in Baptisme, that cleanseth the childe, cast afterwards into the draught? saith Gregory.

Orat. 1. Apolog

Virgil.

Vin.

*Aqua baptismalis baptizatos ad regnum
coelestis mittit, et ipsa postea
in cloacam
descendit.
Greg. in Evang.
hom. 17.*

So is this people, and so is that nation before me, and so is every work of their hands, and that which they offer; &c. ] Note the order of the Induction. First themselves were unclean, both people and nation; there was a generall defection and defilement ranne thorough all sorts and sexes, as the woof runs thorow the warp: so that they were all together but one continued web of wickedness, as it were, spun out and made up by the hands of the devil, and the flesh, an evil spinner, and a worse weaver: both root and fruit were naught, as Esay 5. 4. both head, heart, and foot was out of order, Esay 1. 3, 6. and they are barely and boldly told of it by the Prophets. Secondly, the works of their hands were unclean: for not onely the praying, but the plowing of the wicked is sinne, Prov. 21. 4. all their naturall and civil actions also are abominable. Whether they plow, or play, or eat, or sleep; corruption is like copres, which will turn wine or milk into ink; or leaven, which turns a very Paschever into pollution; or as the Sanies of a plague sore, which will render the richest robe infectious. Thirdly, that which they offer there, their sacrifices, and all their religious performances were likewise unclean: not in respect of God, who commanded them: nor of the matter, for they offered clean beasts; but of the manner of offering (which makes or marres the action) and of the men, who were unregenerate, and rested in the work done, and drew neer to God with their lips, thinking to put God off with an externall worship onely; Ludentes cum Deo tanquam pueri cum suis puppis, as Calvin hath it, that is, playing with God, as children do with their babies. The Poets declaimed against this foppery, as Persius: and Another, Non bene caelestes impia dextra colis.

Calv. in loc.

Verse 15. And now I pray you consider ] Heb. Lay it upon your heart, as chap. 1. 5. See the Note there. The often repetition of this precept, sets forth: 1. The necessity of the duty pressed. 2. Their singular stupidity, that were no more affected with such manifest marks of Gods wrath upon them: no, though hee had even snatched the meat out of their mouthes, and kept them hunger-starved, which is the way of taming the most untameable creatures.

from this day and upward ] To the end that when I shall have blessed you with greater plenty, as vers. 19, ye may recognize your sinnes, the cause of your calamities, and remembring (as Jacob did his baculinam paupertatem, Gen. 32. 10.) your former penury, you may thankfully cry out with that Noble Iphicrates; From how hungry so how plentiful an estate am I raised? Let a profane Demetrius attribute such a change as this to blinde Fortune saying, Εν μὲν ἰσχυρὰ οὐ καὶ ὑπερὰ δύναμιν. But let all Saints sing with holy Hannah; They that were full have hired themselves out for bread: and they that were hungry ceased. The Lord maketh poor, and maketh rich; he bringeth low, and lifteth up, &c. 1 Sam. 2. 5, 7.

*Εὐχαριστοῦμεν
τῷ Θεῷ.*

from before a stone was laid upon a stone ] i. e. before there was any hand set to the work of rebuilding the Temple, which was interrupted for many years, after the return from Babylon. See Ezr. 3. 8. and 5. 2.

Verse 16. Since those dayes were ] Or, as some read it, Antequam essent in eo opere. Before they were about that work, minding Gods house more then their own.

When one came to an heap of twenty measures ] that is, where you expected twenty measures (and experienced good-husbands can partly guesse at harvest, how their corn will yeeld, when threshed out) there were but ten. Gods hand was upon your increase, not in the field onely, but also in the floor; so that you were defeated, and your hopes frustrated: and not in the barn onely, but at the wine-presse too, God hath cut you short. This was that which was long before threatened, but little regarded, Dent. 28. 20. Carnall men read the threats of Gods Law, as they do the old stories of forraigne warres, or as they behold the wounds and blood in a picture, or piece of Arras, which never makes them smart or fear.

This

This hasteneth their judgement, and shews them ripe for wrath, even then when they think themselves farre enough out of the reach of Gods rod.

Vers. 17. I smote you with blasting, and with mildew, and with hail ] Pugnis pluvi, colaphis grandinavi, I have followed you close with one judgement upon another: and all to bring you back into mine own bosome: that as ye had runne from me by your sinnes, so ye might return to me by repentance: but behold, I have lost my labour, and ye have lost the fruit of your sufferings, which indeed is a very great losse, were ye but soundly sensible of it. These Jewes were sensible of their calamities and disasters abroad and at home, but they did not wisely inquire into the cause thereof; as David did into the cause of the famine that fell out in his dayes, 2 Sam. 21. 1. God had not hitherto given them an heart to perceive, and eyes to see, and ears to hear, as it is Deut. 29. 4. And as Esay 9. 13. The people turneth not unto him that smiteth them, neither do they seek the Lord of hosts. But after their hardnesse and impenitent heart, treasured up wrath, &c. Rom. 2. 5. They could not but see themselves grievously crossed, and cursed in all the labours of their hands. Neither were they so blind as not to see God in that they suffered. They had learned that out of Psal. 78. 47, 48. Psal. 29. 3, &c. Truly indeed thought that God minds not mildew, or hail, &c. Nec si uredo aut grando quippiam nocuit, id Iovi animadvertendum fuit: neque enim in regnis reges omnia minima curant, &c. As kings take not notice of smaller businesses in their kingdoms, saith He, so neither doth God of these ordinary occurrences. But the Jewes (for the generality) had learned better things. And the Apostle tells those Heathens too, Acts 14. that God had not left himself without witness amongst them, in that he did good and gave rain from heaven, and fruitfull seasons, &c. Cicero himself likewise, another time, could say, Curiosus est & plenus negotii Deus, God taketh care of all, and is full of businesse. And oh that this truth were as fruitfully improved, as it is generally acknowledged! Oh that men would turn at Gods reproof; his reall reproofs, his vocall rods, Mic. 6. 9. and not put him to his old complaint; Why should ye be smitten any more? ye revolt more and more. This we may wish, but God alone can effect. For till he please to thrust his holy hand into mens bosomes, and pull off the fore-skin of their hearts; Afflictions (those hammers of his) do but beat cold iron. See Ier. 2. 30, 31. and 6. 29, 30. Lev. 26. 41. Plectimur à Deo, nec flectimur tamen: corripimur sed non corrigimur. We are put to pain, but to no profit, Ier. 12. 13. as Ahaz, that stiffe stigmatick, 2 Chron. 28. 23. and Ahaziah, who sent a third Captain to surprize the Prophet, after two before consumed with fire from heaven: as if he would despitefully spit in the face of God, and wrestle a fall with the Almighty.

Vers. 18. Consider now from this day and upward ] And see how punctually the time of benediction answereth to the time of your conversion: so that you no sooner begin to build, but I begin to blesse. It is said of the men of Issachar, that they were in great account with David, because they had understanding of the times, 1 Chron. 12. 32. It is certainly a point of spirituall prudence to consider the times, and to compare things past with present and future. Time is the wisest of all things, said Thales; the best counsellour said Plutarch. Truth is the daughter of Time, saith Another Philosopher. See the Note on verse 15.

Vers. 19. Is the seed yet in the barne? ] Hierom rendreth it, In germine, In the sprouting, or spirting, as they call it, and so farre enough from the harvest; and yet further, if yet in the barn, and not put into the ground. Nevertheffe, for your diligence in building Gods house, I assure you in the word of truth, that you shall have a very great increase, a plentiful harvest.

From this day will I blesse you ] And it is the blessing of God that maketh rich, as is to be seen in the examples of the Patriarchs, Abraham, Isaac, Iacob. Others, whose godlinesse was their gain, whose piety was profitable to all things, as having the promises of both lives, 1 Tim. 4. 8. Now all that are of faith, are blessed with faithfull Abraham, Gal. 3. 9. are heirs of the world with him, Rom. 4. 13. and so have right to all things in Christ, the heir of all things, 1 Cor. 3. 22. Heb. 1. 2. though these things on earth be detained from them for present, by those men of Gods hand, Psal. 17. 14. as Canaan

was

*Perdidistis
fructum cala-
mitatis, &c.
Aug.*

*Lib. 3. de nat.
deor.*

Esay 1. 5.

Salvian.

2 King. 1.

Laert. lib. 1

In Pericles

was from Israel by the cursed Amorites, till their sinnes were full; yet they shall shortly have power over the Nations, and (which is better) Christ will give them the morning-starre, that is himself, and with himself a Cornucopia of spirituall blessings, Ephes. 1. 3. The Lord that made heaven and earth will blesse them out of Zion, that is, with better blessings then heaven or earth afforded. We read not here of any other blessings but increase of corn, wine, oil, &c. because this people was wholly almost affixed to earthly things. The Prophet could not speak wisdom among those that were perfect. But better things were implied and assured to the godly, as appeareth by the ensuing Oracle.

Verse 20. And again, the word of the Lord ] Again the same day. Twice-a-day-preaching is no new practise then. This Prophet did it: so did our Saviour, Mar. 13. 1. So did Chrysostome, as appeareth by his Note on 1 Thes. 5. 17. So did Luther: which because one Nicholas White commended in him, he was accused of heresie, in the reign of Hen. 8. It is not so long since it was held here practicall Puritanisme. The late Arch-bishop being sued unto by a Noble-man to preferre a Chaplain of his, (whom he commended for an able Divine, and a twice-a-day-preacher) turned away in a great heat, saying, The more fool he.

Verse 21. Speak to Zerubbabel governour of Judah ] Governours are sure to meet with many difficulties, and discouragements (high-seats are never but uneasy) and had need therefore of singular consolation, that they may hold on their course, like the Sun in the firmament, and shew themselves to be of an undaunted resolution. We may well say to Governours, as that Propheticall Simeon spake to the pillars which he whipped before the earth-quake: Stand fast, for yee shall be shaken.

I will shake the heavens and the earth &c. by abrogating and abolishing both Jewish Ceremonies, and Heathenish superstitions, Heb. 12. 27. As also by Nationall commotions, and translations of Monarchies: The Greeks shall break the power of the Persians, the Romans of the Greeks, the Goths and other barbarous nations of the Romans. But especially, by casting the devil out of the heaven of mens hearts, Luke 10. 18. those strong-holds wherein he had entrenched himself, 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5. that the ransomed of the Lord may receive a kingdome, which cannot be moved, Heb. 12. 28. and partake of those new heavens, and new earth wherein dwelleth righteousnesse, 2 Pet. 3. 13. even that world to come, as these dayes of the Gospel are called, Heb. 2. 5. See the Note above on vers. 6. 7.

Verse 22. And I will overthrow the throne of kingdomes ] sc. by pouring contempt upon Princes, and causing them to wander in the wilderness, where there is no way, Psal. 107. 40. (as he dealt with Darius the last Persian Monarch) by putting down the mighty from their seat, and exalting them of low degree, Luke 1. 52. (as hee dealt with Bajazet the great Turk, and Tamerlan the Scythian shepherd) by changing the times and the seasons, removing kings, and setting up others in their stead, Dan. 2. 21. All this God will do, and all that follows in the Text, viz. destroy the strength of kingdoms, overthrow the chariots and their riders, &c. rather then his Church shall be unhelpt, or his kingdome of grace hindered. Our help is in the Name of the Lord who made heaven and earth, and will rather unmake all again, then we shall be unrelieved. Yet have I set my king upon mine holy hill of Zion, Psal. 2. 6. Yet, for all the sorrow, for all the malicious machinations, and attempts of his enemies to the contrary: who are therefore admonished to be wise for themselves, and to kisse the sonne, for he must raigne, and all his foes must bee his foot-stool. There is a Councill in heaven will dash the mould of all contrary counsels upon earth. The stone cut out of the mountains without hands (which is Christ the Conquerour) will break in pieces the iron, the brasse, the clay, the silver, and the gold. And in the dayes of those kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdome which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdomes, and it shall stand for ever, Dan. 2. 44, 45. So Dan. 7. after that the Prophet had described the greatnesse and glory of all the four Monarchies, at length he comes to speak of a kingdome which is the greatest and mightiest under the whole heaven, and that is the kingdome of the Saints of the most High, whose kingdome is an everlasting kingdome: and all Rulers shall serve and obey him.

Verse 23. I will take thee, O Zerubbabel ] That is, O Christ, of whom Zerubbabel was both a father and a figure, Luke 3. 27. Zach. 4. 10. I will take thee, that is, I will advance and exalt thee. See this expounded, and applied by that great Apostle, Philip. 2. 5. to the 12.

and will make thee as a signet ] that is, I will highly esteem thee, inviolably keep thee, and entirely love thee, Cant. 8. 6. Ier. 22. 24. and all my people in thee, and for thee, Esay 49. 16.

for I have chosen thee ] as Esay 42. 1. Quoniam in te mihi complacui, saith the Chaldee. For in thee I am well pleased, as Mat. 3. 17. See the Note there.

Saith the Lord of hosts ] This is three severall times set down in this one verse, for our greater assurance, and confirmation of our faith. I shall close up all with that observation of Divines, that all the Prophets (except Jonah and Nahum) expressly end in some prophecy concerning Christ. He being their mark at which all of them chiefly aimed. Indeed he is both mark and matter, of both old and new Testament. And therefore if we will profit in teaching, hearing, reading, we must have the eye of our minde turned toward Christ, as the faces of the Cherubims were toward the Mercy-seat. Do this, if ever you will do well.

A Com

A C O M M E N T
O R,
E X P O S I T I O N
Upon the Propheſie of Z A C H A R I A H.

C H A P. I.

Verſe 1.

N the eighth moneth, in the ſecond year of Darius ]
Two moneths after Haggai began to prophetic. See the Note on Hagg. 1. 1. Theſe two Prophets did jointly together reprove the Jews, for their ſloth in reediſying the Temple, and incite them to ſet forward the work, Ezra 5. 1. contributing their utmoſt help thereunto, verſ. 2. They were alſo a ſingular help the one to the other, in the execution of their office. For two are better then one; and why, ſee Eccleſ. 4. 9. with the Note. For which cauſe alſo Chriſt ſent out firſt the twelve, and then the ſeventy, by two and two. Mar. 6. 7. Luk. 10. 1. So Paul and Barnabas were ſent abroad; the two faithfull witneſſes, Revel. 11. 3. Σὺν τε δ' ἑρμηνεύς, as the Poet ſpeaks of Ulyſſes, and Diomedes ſent to fetch in the Palladium. One good man may be an Angel to another, (as Bradford was to his fellow-Martyr Dr. Taylor) nay, a God to another, as Moſes was to Aaron. And for others; in the mouth of two or three witneſſes a truth is better beleev'd by them: and a twiſted cord not eaſily broken. Haggai layes down the mind of God to the people more plainly in direct and down-right termes: Zachary flies an higher pitch, abounding with types and viſions; and is therefore worthily reckoned among the abſtruſeſt and profoundeſt Pen-men of holy Scripture. For it muſt be underſtood (and let it here be prefaced) that albeit all Scripture is given by inſpiration of God, and is profitable to inſtruct, 2 Tim. 3. 16. pure, precious, and profitable, every leaf, line, and letter of it, Pſal. 12. 6. Prov. 30. 5. Yet, between ſcripture and ſcripture there is no ſmall difference; ſome pieces of Gods Book for their antiquity, and ſome other for their obſcurity do juſtly challenge our greater attention and induſtry. Of the former ſort famous for their antiquity, are the five Books of Moſes; whom Theodoret ſirly calleth the

As de Mon,
Exod. 4. 16

Præteris ob-
ſcurus eſt pro-
fundus, varius,
prolixus, &
enigmaticus,
Cor. a Lapid.

Τὸν τὴν Θεο-λογίας ἀνα-
ρῶν.

Hieron.

the great Ocean of divinity, the fountaine of the following scriptures. Of the second sort, noted for their difficulty, and that will not be acquainted with us but upon further suit, some are hard through their falnesse of matter in fewnesse of words, as the Poeticall bookes, wherein (no doubt) the verse also hath caused some cloud: And others againe, by the sublimity of the subject they handle: such as are the bookes of Ezechiel, and Daniel, and this of Zachary, who is totus fere symbolicus, and is much followed by St. Iohn in his Revelation. Hence Hierome in his prologue to this Prophet saith, Ab obscuris ad obscuriora transimus, & cum Mose ingredimur ad nubem & caliginem. Abyssus abyssum invocat &c. We passe from dark prophecies to that which is much more dark: and with Moses we are entering into the cloud and thick darknesse. Here one deep calleth upon another; and being in a Labyrinth, we hope to get out by Christs golden clue: concerning whose Passion, Resurrection and glory he speaketh more like an Evangelist then a Prophet, and may therefore be rightly stiled, The Evangelicall Prophet.

came the word of the Lord unto Zachariah the son of Barachiah] Therefore the same that our Saviour speaketh of Mat. 23. 35. Luk 11. 51. though I once thought otherwise, after Hierome, Luther, Calvin, Beza, Glassius, Grotius &c. But 1. the name of his Father Berechiah. 2. the manner of Christs account (reckoning from Abel the first Martyr to this, penultimus Prophetarum last save one of the Prophets, and last of all that was slaine by the Jewes, after the reedifying of the Temple, whither being assaulted, he ran for sanctuary) easily perswades me to alter mine opinion. As for those that hold that our Saviour there speaketh of Zachary the Father of Iohn Baptist Luk 1. slaine by the Jewes, because he preached Virginis partum & Christi ortum, Christ born of a Virgin, Baronius, Tolet, and others, as they affirme it without reason, so they may be dismissed without refutation. Hoc, quia de scripturis non habet auctoritatem, eadem facilitate contemnitur, quâ probatur, saith Hierome.

the son of Iddo the Prophet] Whether the word Prophet be to be referred to Zachariah, or to Iddo, is uncertaine. That there was a Prophet Iddo we read, and Zachary might well be of his line, after many descents. He is here mentioned (as also Ezr. 5. 1.) ut nepoti suo Zacharia nomen & decus conciliet, for an honour to his ab-nephew Zachary; according to that of Solomon, The glory of children are their fathers, to wit if they be godly and religious. What an honour was it to Jacob, that he could sweare by the feare of his father Isaac? to David, that he could say, Truly, Lord, I am thy servant, I am thy servant, the son of thine handmaid? to Timothy, that he had such a mother as Lois, such a grandmother as Eunice? to the children of the Elect Lady, to the posterity of Latimer, Bradford, Ridley, and other of those men of God, who suffered for the truth? If the degenerate Jewes to boasted of Abraham their father, how much more might Zachary (no degenerate plant, no bastardly brood as they were Mat. 12. 39.) boast and beare himself bold on his father Berechiah (the blessing of God) and his grandfather Iddo (Gods Witnesse, Confessour, or Ornament) sith he trod in their holy steps, and was adorned with their gifts and virtues? The Papists brag much of Peter, and other Apostles their founders and predeceffours: But this is but an empty title, to talk of personall succession (which yet cannot be proved) unlesse they could also shew us their gifts and graces, as all the world may see they cannot. We read of a painter, who being blamed by a Cardinall, for colouring the visages of Peter and Paul too red, tartly replied, that he painted them so, as blushing at the lives of their successeurs.

Verse 2. The Lord hath been sore displeased with your fathers] Heb. He hath boyled against your fathers with foaming anger, with height of heate. There are degrees of anger, see Mat. 5. 22. and Deut. 29. 28. The Lord rooted them out of their land in Anger, and in Wrath, and in great Indignation. Surgit hic oratio: and the last of those three words is the same here used in the text: noting an higher degree then the two former, even such a fervour and fiercenesse of Gods wrath, as maketh him ready to kill and cut off (see 2 King. 6. 6. and note the affinity of that word with this) like as he had much adoe to forbear killing of Moses, when he met him in the Inne; and as Nebuchadnezzar was not only angry, but very furious, and commanded to destroy all the wise men of Babylon Dan. 2. 12.

Now

Exod. 4.

Now if the wrath of a king be as many messengers of death Prov. 16. 14. what shall we think of the fuming and frothing wrath of God, which burnes unto the lowest hell, and sets on fire the foundations of the mountains, Deut. 32. 22. After which followeth, in the next verse, I will heape mischiefs upon them, I will spend mine arrowes upon them &c. He had done so upon the Ancestours of these refractory Jewes, who had been sapius puncti & repuncti, minime tamen ad respiciendam compuncti, oft punished, but could never be reclaimed; so incorrigibly flagitious; so shamelesly, so prodigiously wicked were they, till there was no remedy. This their vile stubbornnesse made him sore displeased with them: and put thunder-bolts into his hands to destroy them; For though Fury be not in God Isay 27. 5. to speak properly, he is free from any such passions as we are subject to, yet if briars and thornes set against him in battle, if a rabble of rebels conspire to cast him out of his throne, saying We will not have this man to rule over us &c. I would go through them, I would burn them together, saith he, in the same breath. Abused mercy turneth into fury. Nothing so cold as lead, & yet nothing so scalding, if molten. Nothing more blunt then iron: & yet nothing so keen, if sharpened. The ayre is soft & tender: yet out of it are ingendered thunder and lightnings. The sea is calme, and smooth: but if tossed with tempests, it is rough above measure. The Lord, as he is Father of mercies, so he is God of recompenses: and it is a fearefull thing to fall into his punishing hands. If his wrath be kindled, yea but a little, woe be to all those upon whom it lights: how much more when he is sore displeased with a people or person as here? For who knoweth the power of thine anger, saith Moses? even according to thy feare, so is thy wrath: that is, let a man feare thee never so much, he is sure to feel thee much more, if once he fall into thy fingers. And this is here urged by the Prophet as a motive to true repentance: sith by their fathers example, they might see there was no way to escape the dint of the divine displeasure, but to submit to Gods Justice and to implore his mercy: men must either turn or burn, For even our God is a consuming fire Heb. 12. 29.

Deut. 32. 23.

Heb. 10.
Psal. 2.

Psal. 90. 11.

Verse 3. Therefore say thou unto them] These Jewes, saith Cyrill, had neither seen their fathers wickednesse, nor heeded their calamities. mittitur ergo ad eos Zacharias quasi pædagogus, Zachary therefore is sent unto them as a schoolmaster or Monitour: that by considering what had been, they might prevent what otherwise would be: and redeem their own sorrowes.

thus saith the Lord of hosts] A far greater Lord and Potentate then that great King of Persia, who was now their soveraigne. True it is that they had been commanded by a former King to desist from building the city Ezr. 4. 12. 21. But there was no one word in that letter to forbid the building of the Temple. There was also now another King set up, and of another family. They are therefore by this Prophet and by Haggai called upon again and again to turn to the Lord, and to return afresh to their work Ezra 5. 1. Wherein, because they were sure to meet with many enemies, therefore here and elsewhere (eighteen severall times in that eight chapter) there is frequent mention made of the Lord of Hosts, for their better encouragement. See the Note on Mal. 3. 17.

turn ye unto me, saith the Lord of Hosts] This is the great Doctrine of the Old Testament: as Repent ye, is of the New. And this He purposely prefixeth, as a preface and preparative to the other Prophecies both of Mercies and Judgements, whereof the whole is fitly made up. Sowr and sweet make the best sauce. Promises and Menaces mixt, make the most fruitfull discourse: and serve to keep the heart in the best temper. Hence Davids ditty was composed of discords, Psal. 101. 1. I will sing of mercy and judgment, and so be both merry and wise. But, to the words of the Text;

turn ye unto me &c.] By sin men run away from God (whereby it appeareth that sin is the greatest evil, because it sets us farthest off from the greatest good) and by repentance they return unto him. Deut. 30. 2, 8, 9, 10. Mal. 3. 7. Jer. 4. 1. Hos. 14. 1. Act. 26. 18. Hence Act. 3. 19. Repent and be converted. Contrition is repentance for sin 2 Cor. 12. 21. Rev. 9. 20. Conversion is repentance from sin Act. 8. 22. Heb. 6. 1. Hereunto is required first a serious search of our wayes (for it is a Metaphor taken from a traveller) Let us search and try our wayes and turn againe to the Lord Lam. 3. 39. I considered my wayes, and then

then (seeing my self farr wide) I turned my feet to thy Testimonies. Psal. 119. 59. Satius est recurrere, quam male currere, said that Emperour in his symbol, It is better to stop or step back, then run on, when out of the way: for here he that hasteth with his feet sinneth Prov. 19. 2. the faster he runs, the farther he is out. But as the deceived traveller (when once he finds his error) in his judgement he disliketh it, in his will he turneth from it, in his affections he grieveth at it, and is angry with his false guides, with his utmost endeavour he not only turns againe to the right way, but makes the more hast that he be not benighted: So is it here, David not only turned his feet to Gods testimonies, from which he had swarved, but he thenceforth made hast and delayed not to keep his commandements Psal. 119. 59, 60. For, this true conversion we are speaking of, this repentance never to be repented of, is an upright, earnest and constant endeavour of an entire change of the whole man from all that is evill to all which is good. This is the doctrine of the Gospell, Tit. 2. 11. and this is all the fruit I say 27. 9. To turn from one sin to another, is but to be tossed from one hand of the devill to the other: it is but with Benhadad to recover of one disease, and dye of another: it is but to take paines to go to hell. See this in Saul, Iohn, Herod, Agrippa, and others, who gave but the half turn: turned not from East to West, but from East to North onely: their change was not essentiall but only graduall: it is not a through change for subject and object, but partiall and temporall, as being but morall, or formall, or merely mentall. It proceedes from conviction of judgement onely, and not for averfion of will: from horreur of punishment, not from hatred of sin; which they leave (haply) but loath not: leave it, I say, for the inconveniences that follow it, for the fire that is in it, not for the filthinesse that is in it. Now all these seeming Converts, because they cast not away all their transgressions (All is a little word, but of large extent) are therefore to be reckoned among those fooles of the people that pass on and are punished, those enemies of God that instead of turning againe (turning short againe upon themselves with the prodigall, and returning to the Lord with Ephraim) go on still in their trespasses till their hairy scalp be wounded, till evident and inevitable judgements be incurred, till iniquity prove to be their utter ruine Ezek. 18. 30. Wherefore now Turn ye unto me, saith the Lord of Hosts, Add not to all your other sins that of Impenitency, for which there remaines no more sacrifice (as Herod added to all his former abominations the beheading of the Baptist) but Turn you, Turn you, why will ye dye O house of Israel. And for this, consider these ensuing particulars. 1. Who you are that are required to return: weake and worthlesse creatures, the slime of your fathers loynes, dust and ashes, altogether unable to avert or avoid Gods judgements: beaten rebels you are: and have therefore no help left, but to fall down before God and implore his mercy. Turn and live, except ye repent ye shall all perish. 2. Next, see who it is to whom ye are required to return: Not to some tyrant, or implacable enemy that having gotten us into his hands, will deale cruelly with us, (as the Duke of Alva rosted some to death, starved others, and that even after quarter) but to the Lord your God, who is gracions and mercifull, slow to anger, and of great kindnesse, and quickly repenteth him of the evill Ierl. 2. 13. He will surely both assist such as have but a mind to return (why else doth he bid us turn, which he knowes we cannot do without him? and why doth he bid us pray to him to Turn us? when we bid our children ask us for this or that, it is because we meane to give it them.) He will also accept us with all sweetnesse, as he did Ephraim, Ier. 31. 19, 20. and the Prodigall Luk 15. The father met him ver. 20. so he will doe us I say 65. 24. The Prodigall came, the Father ran Tantum velis, & Deus tibi praecurrit) he fell on his neck, as Jacob did on his deare Iosephs, he kissed him, when one would have thought he should have kicked him, or killed him rather for his former riotousnesse. He calleth for the best robe, and for the gold-ring, and for the fatted calf. Filius timet convivium, Pater adornat convivium, Let us eat and be merry saith He, For this my son was dead (given up for dead, free among the dead, free of that company) and is alive againe: He was lost and is found. Of himself he left his father and ran rior: and yet he is called the lost son, in the best sence. Hunger drove the wolf out of the wood: and yet

Prov. 22. 3.

Psal. 68. 21.

Hist. of Ne-
therl.

Basil.

Ambros.

Psal. 88. 3.

yet he is accepted, as if not necessitated. 3. Thirdly take notice from what you are required to turn. Turn ye, turn ye, from your evil wayes: for why will ye dye, ye house of Israel? Ezek. 33. 11. It is your sin only that you are to part with, and why should ye be so fond of it? if you look upon it, either in the Author of it, the devill, Job. 8. 44. Or in the Nature of it, as it is an Offence against God ( your rightfull Lord, your bountifull Benefactor ) and a breach of his Law which is holy, and just, and good; Or in the horrid effects of it ( as upon other creatures for mans sake, to especially ) upon man himself, whom Sin hath excluded from the possession of the lower paradise, and the possibility of the higher, into an eternity of all extremities, after many a little hell here afore-hand. Or (lastly) in the ranfome of it, Christs blood and bitter sufferings, that soule of sufferings which his soule then suffered when God made our sins to meet upon him Esay 53. 6. Oh think on these things sadly, seriously, fixedly and copiously, and you will soon see cause enough to turn to him from whom these children of Israel had deeply revolted, and were therefore grievously plagued, they and their fathers, that they might return to him that smote them. Which because they did not, but stood stouting it out with God ( which was their manner from their youth ) therefore were the Syrians before, and the Philistines behind to devour Israel with open mouth: and for all this his anger was not turned away, but his hand was stretched out still Esay 9. 12, 13. Besides the hinderance and hurt they did to others by standing out: For if ye turn again to the Lord, your brethren shall find compassion, said Hezekiah to his people, moving them to repent 2 Chr. 30. 9. And should not we lend them this friendly help.

Isay 31. 6.

Rom. 2. 4.

Joel 2.

If. 55. 7.

Mat. 3. 3.

Psal. 130. 4.

Iam. 4. 4.

Luk. 15.

1 Sam. 7.

2 Cor. 5. 14.

Tit. 2. 14.

Rom. 12. 1.

and I will turn to you, [saith the Lord of Hosts] And should not such a favour from such a Lord melt them and make them malleable? Should not the goodnesse of God lead them to repentance? Should they not rent their hearts because God is gracious? return unto him because he will multiply pardon? repent because his kingdome is now at hand? feare him the rather, because with him there is mercy? draw nigh to him, who thus drawes nigh to them? make hast home with the prodigall, where there is bread enough? Surely nothing worketh so much as kindnesse upon those that are ingenuous. Those Israelites at Mizpeh drew water, and powred it forth before the Lord, upon the return of the Ark. There is no mention of their lamenting after the Lord, while he was gone; but when he was returned and settled in Kiriath-jearim 1 Sam. 7. 6. David argues from mercy to duty Psal. 116. 8, 9. Ezra from deliverance to obedience chap. 9. 13, 14. The love of Christ constraineth us saith Paul, his grace that bringeth salvation teacheth us to deny ungodlinesse, and to live up to our principles. I beseech you by the mercies of God, saith the same Apostle, as not having any more prevailing, more heart-attaching, attracting argument in the world to presse them with; I have loved thee with an everlasting love, therefore with mercy have I drawn thee Ier. 31. 3. And againe I drew them with the cords of a man, with bands of love, Hos. 11. 4. that is, with reasons and motives of mercy befitting the nature of a man, with rationall motives: to neglect mercy is to sin against humanity: not to convert by kindnesse, is to receive the grace of God in vaine: nay, it is to heape up wrath against the day of wrath. A son feeling his fathers love, creepes nearer under his wing. A Saul, sensible of Davids curtesy in sparing him, when he might have spilt his blood, was strangely mollified and melted into teares. Shall God offer to turn to us, and we refuse to turn to him? Shall he beseech us to be reconciled, and we go on in our animosities and hostilities? Doth he offer to powre out his spirit even upon scorners, and to make known his words unto them, and all this, that they may turn at his reproof Prov. 1. 23? And shall they yet turn their backs upon such blessed and bleeding embracements? Had God given us but one Prophet, and forty dayes time only to turn unto him (as he dealt by Niniveh that great city) surely we should have repented long agoe in sackcloth and asher. But how justly (alasse) may he complaine of us, as he did once of Jezebel Rev. 2. 21. I gave them space to repent, but they repented not. I have striven with them by my spirit, and wooed them by my word. I have heaped upon them mercies without measure: and all to bring them back into mine own bosom. I have also smitten them with blasting and mildew, with judgements publike and personall:

nall : and yet they have not turned unto me saith the Lord Am. 4. 9. Ah sinfull nation &c. If any ask, What can we do toward the turning of our selves to God ? I answer :

Beza.

First you must be sensible of your own utter inability to do any thing at all toward it Ier. 10. 23. Ioh. 15. 5. Philip. 2. 12. Non minus difficile est nobis velle credere, quam cadaveri volare. It is no lesse hard for us to be willing to beleewe, then for a dead carcase to fly upwards.

Secondly, know that yet it is possible, feisable, by the use of these meanes that God hath appointed : who also hath promised to make it both possible and easie to us. He bad Moses fetch his people out of Egypt : but himself effected it. He bad the Israelites go and blow down the walls of Jericho : they obeyed him, and it was done : So here.

Thirdly as our liberty in externall acts is still some, ( as to come to the publike ordinances, to set our selves under the droppings of a powerfull ministry, and there to lie, as he did, at the pool of Bethesda, waiting the good houre ) so must our indeavours be answerable. The Bereans brought their bodyes to the Assembly, took the heads of St. Pauls sermon, compared them with the scriptures Act. 17. 11, 12. and yet they were unconverted.

Fourthly, make much of the least beginnings of Grace, even those they call Repressing : since they prepare the heart for conversion. See Luk. 11. 32.

Luke 12. 1.

Fifthly, Pray, Turnus O God and we shall be turned, Draw us and we shall run after thee. And here remember to be earnest. Ask, seek, knock, as the importunate neighbour that came to borrow two loaves, or as the widdow that came for justice, and would not away without it. He that heareth the young ravens that cry onely by implication, will he be wanting to his weake but willing servants ?

μαγαθη ουδε
Heb. 12. 25.

Lastly wait for the first act of conversion, the infusion of the sap of Grace, which is wholly from God ; our will prevents it not, but followes it : and whensoever the spirit imbreatheth you, turn about, like the mill ; when God hath tuned and doth touch you, do you move and make melody : resigning up your selves wholly to him, and putting your selves out, God into possession. Thus if you turn to him, he will turn to you. The Lord is with you, whiles ye be with him. If ye seek him he will be found of you : but if ye forsake him, he will forsake you. 2 Chron. 15. 2. See that ye refuse not him that speaketh in this text with so much affection and earnestnesse : see that ye slight him not, that ye shift him not off ( as the word signifieth ) for if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that thus speaketh from heaven, sc. by his blood, Word, Sacraments, Mercyes, motions of his spirit, crosses &c. When Physick, that should remove the disease, doth cooperate with it, then death comes with the more paine and speed. The stronger the conviction of sin is, the deeper will be the wrath against it, if it be not by repentance avoyded. No surfet more dangerous then that of bread : no judgment more terrible then that which growes out of mercy offered, and despised.

Vers. 4. Be ye not as your fathers ] Man is a creature apt to imitate, to be led more by his eyes then by his eares : and children think they may lawfully Be as their fathers. St. Peters converts had received their vaine conversation from their fathers, as it were ex traditione, or by tradition 1 Per. 1. 18. And St. Steven tells his perverse hearers that they were as good at resisting the Holy Ghost as their fathers had been before them Act. 7. 51. They used to boast much of their Ancestours Ioh. 8. 33. and to bind much upon their example and authority Ier. 44. 17. Mar. 5. 21. They thought they were not much to be blamed, because they did but as their fathers had done before them. The Prophet therefore dehorts or rather deterrs them from that folly : setting forth both the crime and doome of their forefathers, whom they so much admired, and so stiffly imitated, and this he oft repeateth that they might once consider it, and be wrought upon by those domestick examples.

Es. 58. 1.

have cryed ] Loudly and lustily ; according to that, Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet : sic clamet ut stentora vincat. A minister should be a Simon Zelotes, a son of thunder : as Basil was said to thunder in his preaching, lighten in his his life; as Hierome for his vehemency was called Fulmen Ecclesiasticum, the Churches light-bolt: as Harding, before his shamefull Apostasy, wished he could cry out against Popery, as loud as the belles of Oseney: and as Farellus (that notable French Preacher) whose voice when the envious Monks sought to drown by ringing the bells as he was preaching at Metis, he lifted up his voyce ad ravim usque: and would not suffer himselfe to be outroared. The Saints-bell (as they called it) Prius useth for an hieroglyphick of a preacher, who must not speak the word onely, but found it out into all the earth, Rom. 10. 18. not preach it onely, but cry it, as the Apostles word signifieth, 2 Tim. 4. 2. clangite, clamate, Jer. 4. 5. Boâtes, vociferate, Mat. 3. 3. Ministers have to doe with deafe men, dead men, living carcasses, walking sepulchers of themselves. Now therefore as our Saviour lifted up his voice when he said, Lazarus come forth: so must they stand over men and cry aloud, awake thou that sleepest, and stand up from the dead, that Christ may give thee light, Eph. 5. 14.

Boâtes, Boantis, Vociferantis.

turne you now from your evil wayes &c.] This was the constant cry of the Prophets as here, and Apostles as Acts 26. 18. to open mens eyes (naturally closed up that they cannot see the evill of their wayes, Ier. 2. 35. Rev. 3. 15.) to turn them from darknesse to light, and from the power of Satan to God.

and from your evil doings] Heb. Designes, gests, or exercises enterprized advisedly, and prosecuted studiously, of natural disposition and inclination as Prov. 20. 11. and 1 Sam. 25. 3. This St. Iohn usually calleth committing of sinne. 1 Epist. 3. 4, 8, 9. Iohn 8. 34. this is to adde rebellion to sinne, Iob 34. 37. impudence to impotence, browes of brasse to iron finewes, Isa. 48. 4. This is wickednesse with a witness, which if men could but see in its native colours, and cursed consequents, they would soon be perswaded to turn from it. As the eye cannot but be offended with a lothsome object: so neither can the understanding. Take rats-bane, it looketh not evil: but when a man feelles it boyle, burn, torture him, &c. he hates it extremely. So he should doe sinne: he will doe else at length, when it is too late. For prevention: take the counsell of a Martyr, get thee Gods law, as a glasse to look in -- So shal you see your faces foul-arrayed, and so shamefull, mangy, pocky, and scabbed, that you cannot but be fory at the contemplation thereof, and seek out for cure: Especially if you look to the tag tied to Gods law, the malediction: which is such, as cannot but make us to cast our currish tiales between our legs, if we beleave it. But O faithlesse hard hearts! O Iezabels guests, rocked and laid asleep in her bed! O wicked wretches &c.

Bradford's serm. of Repent. p. 20, 26, 27.

but they did not hear] Though the Prophets cryed, and spake loud enough to bee heard and heeded. An heavie eare is a singular judgement, Isa. 6. 10. An hearing eare, a precious mercy, Prov. 20. 12. God must bee intreated to boare our eare Psal. 40. 6. and to make the boare so big that the word may enter; to say as Isa. 42. 18. Hear ye deaf, and looke ye blind, that ye may see.

Verse 5. Your fathers where are they? ] Is not the grave their house? have they not made their beds in the dark? are not they gone down to the Congregation house of all living Iob 30. 23? Every man should die the same day he is born; as being born a child of death: the wages of sinne is death, and this wages should bee paid him down presently. But Christ begs their lives for a season 1 Tim. 4. 10. he is the Saviour of all men, not of eternal preservation, but of temporal reservation. But what a sad thing is it for men to dye in their finnes as these in the Text, and their Nephews did Iohn 8. 21, 24. How may such men, on their death-beds, say to their fins, as Charles the fifth did of his honours, victories, riches, Abite hinc, abite longè, Go, Mornicus. go, get you out of my sight: or as Cornelius Agrippa the conjurer did to his familiar, that used to accompany him in the shape of a dog, Abi à me perdita bestia, quæ me perdidisti, Be gone thou wretched beast that hast wrought my ruine: Petrus Sutorius speaks of one that preaching a funeral sermon on a religious man (as he calles him) and giving him large commendations, heard at the same time a voice in the Church, mortuus sum, judicatus sum, damnatus sum, I am dead, judged, and damned. The Devill preached Sauls funeral, 2 Sam. 28. 19. though David made his Epitaph, 2 Sam. 1.

Mornicus.

Iob. Manl. loc. com. 136. P. Sut. de vit. Carthusian.

21

And do the Prophets live for ever? ] Those false Prophets (so Hierome senseth it) that cryed peace, peace to your fathers, and made all fair weather before them, when the

*Hæret lateri
lethalis arundo*

the fierce wrath of God was even ready to burst out upon them, as an overflowing scourge. But they doe better that understand it of Gods true Prophets, who are dead indeed (for wise men dye as well as fooles Psal. 49. 10. Good men dye as well as bad, Ezech. 21. 4. yea good men oft, before the bad, Esay 57. 1.) but their words dyed not with them: the truth of their prophecies not onely lived for ever (for ever O Lord thy word is stablished in heaven Psal. 119. 89.) but struck in the hearts and flesh of their perverse hearers, like the envenomed arrowes of the Almighty throughout all eternity. Wicked men may, as the wounded Hart, frisk and skip up and down when the deadly arrow sticks in their ribbes, but not so easily shake it off.

*Cor & anima Dei Greg. in
3. Reg.*

Verse 6. Did they not take hold of your fathers] Overtake and catch them (as Hunters their prey, or as one enemy doth another in flight 1 King. 18. 27. 2 King. 25. 5.) to drag them down to the bottome of hell. A godly man, as he hath peace with God, with himselfe, and with the creatures: so he hath also with the Ordinances, and may say as Hezekiah, Good is the Word of the Lord which thou hast spoken. Are not my words alwaies good faith God, to them that walk uprightly, Mic. 2. 7? Excellently Augustine, Adversarius est nobis, quamdiu sumus & ipsi nobis: quamdiu tu tibi inimicus es, inimicum habebis sermonem Dei. Gods word is adversary to none but such as are adversaries to themselves: Neither doth it condemn any, but such as shall be assuredly condemned by the Lord; for what is the Word, but the heart and soul of God, as Gregory saith. And what saith the Essential Word of God, who came out of the bosome of his father and knew all his counsell? He that rejecteth me and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken; the some shall judge him in the last day, Iohn 12. 48? Oh consider this ye that forget God, that slight his word as if it were but wind, that bely the Lord and say, It is not he neither shall the evill (foretold) come upon us, neither shall we see sword nor famine. And the Prophets shall become wind, and the word is not in them, thus shall it bee done unto them, Wherefore thus saith the Lord God of hosts, because ye speak this word (and is there not such language of many mens hearts now-a-days?) Behold I will make my words (not wind, but) fire and this people wood, and it shall devour them, Ier. 5. 12, 13, 14. The Word of God in the mouths of his Ministers may well be likened to Moses his rod: which whiles he held it in his hand, it flourished, and brought forth almonds: but being cast upon the ground it became a serpent. Semblably, Gods words and statutes, if laid to heart, they yeeld fruit and comfort: but if slighted or snuffed at (as Mal. 1. 13.) serpent-like they will sting the soul, and become a savour of death &c. This contempt will also call for a sword, to revenge the quarrel of the Covenant: as it did upon these mens fathers for their instance, and admonition. It is reckoned by Daniel as a great aggravation of Belshazzars sinne Dan. 5. 22. that hee was not sensible of his father Nebuchadnezzars pride and fall. And thou his sonne Belshazzar, hast not humbled thine heart, though thou knewest all this. The sinne of these Jewes in the Text was the greater, because their Fathers and Elders (either out of sound conversion, or at least out of clear conviction of conscience) had confessed and remonstrated the truth and justice of God in threatening and executing his judgements upon themselves, saying as Lam. 1. 18. The Lord is righteous, for we have rebelled against his commandements: and as chap. 2. 17. The Lord hath done that which he had devised, he hath fulfilled his word, he hath thrown down and hath not pitied &c. Hear them in their own words here like as the Lord of hosts (whose power is irresistible) thought (devised, determined with himselfe, and accordingly denounced by his Prophets) to doe unto us (who did not the words which he commanded us, Ier. 11. 8.) according to our wayes (which were alwaies grievous, Psal. 10. 5.) and according to our doings (that were not good, Ezek. 36. 31.) so hath he dealt with us: for he loves to retaliate and to render to every transgression and disobedience, a just recompence of reward, Heb. 2. 2.

Zaman

Verse 7. Upon the four and twentieth day of the eleventh month] The third month after the former prophecy, when the Jewes probably had practised the doctrine of Repentance, so earnestly pressed upon them: and had humbled themselves under the mighty hand of God, who was now ready to lift them up by this and the seven following most comfortable Visions touching the restauration and reformation of the Church and State. The Devill and his impes love to bring men into the briars, and there there to leave them, as familiars forsake their witches, when they have brought them once into fetters: as the Priests left Judas the traytour to look to himself, Mat. 27. 4. and as the Papiests cast off Cranmer, after that, by subscribing their Articles, he had cast himself into such a wretched condition, that there was neither hope of a better, nor place for a worse; ut jam nec honestè mori nec vivere inhonestè liceret. But such is not Gods manner of dealing with those that tremble at his word, and humble at his feet. Deiçit ut releuet, premit ut solatia præstet, He comforteth those that are cast down, 2 Cor. 7. 6. commandeth others to comfort the feeble-minded, 1 Thes. 5. 14. and noteth those that do not with a black-coal, Job 6. 14. See the workings of his bowels, the rowlings of his compassions kindled into repentance toward his penitentiaries, Jer. 31. 20. Hos. 11. 8. Esay 40. 1, 2. See how he comforts them with cordials according to the time wherein he had afflicted them, Psal. 90. 15. and in the very thing wherein he had abased them; as he once dealt with their Head, Philip. 2. 7, 8.

Melch. Ad. in vita.

Nigro carboni notat.

Verse 8. I saw by night ] The usuall time for such revelations. It may note (moreover) the obscurity of the Prophecy: whence also the mention of myrtle-trees (low and shady) and that in a bottom, as Calvin conceiveth: and all this, that he might give a taste of good hope to the Jews by little and little.

and behold a man riding upon a red horse ] Not Alexander the Great, riding upon his horse Bucephalus, and translating the Empire from the Persians to the Grecians, as Arius Montanus conceited it: But the Man Christ Jesus, 1 Tim. 2. 5. the Captain of the Lords Host, Job. 4. 14. and of our salvation, Heb. 2. 10.

riding upon a red horse ] In the same sense (saith One) that this colour is given to his garments, Esay 63. 1, 2, 3. and to the Angels horse, Rev. 6. 4. The wild Bull (saith Another) of all things, cannot abide any red colour. Therefore the hunter for the nonce, standing before a tree, puts on a red garment; whom when the Bull seeth, he runneth at him as hard as he can drive. But the hunter stepping aside, the bulls horns stick fast in the tree: as when David slipped aside, Sauls spear stuck fast in the wall. Such an hunter is Christ: He lifted up upon the tree of his crosse; had his garment dipt and died in his own blood, as one that cometh with red garments from Bozra. Therefore the Devil and his Angels (like wild bulls of Bashan) ran at him with all their force, (in that three-hours darknesse especially) but he delivering himself, as a mighty Conquerour, their horns stick fast; as it were in his crosse: as Abrahams ramme, by his horns stuck fast in the brier, &c.

and he stood among the myrtle-trees that were in the bottom ] Myrrhe-trees some render it. Here Christ, that horseman and head of his Church, keepeth himself, as touched with the feeling of our infirmities, Heb. 4. 15. as suffering and sorrowing with his people, who are fitly compared to myrtles, that grow in a shady grove, in vallies and bottoms, and by waters sides. Blessed are ye that sowe beside all waters, Esay 32. 20. Myrtles also are odoriferous, and precious, Esay 41. 19. and 55. 13. so are the Saints, Esay 43. 4. Colos. 4. 6. they cast a good scent where-ever they go, by the grace of God that is in them: as Alexander the Great is said to do, by the excellent temperament of his body. Lastly, Levit. 23. 40. with Neb. 8. 15. the Jews at their joyfull feast of Tabernacles, used myrtle-branches among others, to testify their thankfulness for a settlement in the promised land, after so long wandering in the wilderness. The Gentiles also in their solemn feasts, enterludes, and --- cingebant tempora myrto, wore garlands made of Myrtle. Let us keep the feast: Let us keep holy-day, saith the Apostle, 1 Cor. 5. 8. who himself did over-abound exceedingly with joy, had an exuberancy of it, at that constant feast of a good conscience. Diogenes could say, that a good man keeps holy-day, all the year about: Christ crowneth the Kalendar of his peoples lives with continuall festivals here: how much more in heaven? Pliny tells us, that ex myrro facta est ovantium corona, subinde & triumphantium; of Myrtle was made, among the Romans, the crown or garland, of those that did shout for victory, or ride in triumph.

-- & amantes littora myrtos. Virg. Georg.

Virg. Georg.

ἐορταζουσιν.

2 Cor 7. 4.

Plin. lib. 15. cap. 29.

and behind him were there red horses ] i. e. horse-men: Nam nimis crassum est illud commentum, fuisse locustos equos, saith Calvin here. These horse-men are Angels, as verse 10. deputed to severall offices, and executions, for judgement, for mercy, *mercy, or both; shadowed by the divers colours of their horses.

Calvin. Verse 9. Then said I, O my Lord what are these? ] Thus the Prophets enquired and searched diligently (as saith Saint Peter, 1. Epist. 1. 11.) for the truth of things, as hunters seek for game, and as men seek for gold, in the very mines of the earth: who not content with the first oar that offereth it self to their view, dig deeper, and deeper, till they are owners of the whole treasure. See Prov. 2. 4. and rest not, till ye see that blissefull sight, Ephes. 1. 18, 19.

ἐπερωτάς. and the Angel that talked with me, ] Or, in me, as the Vulgar rendreth it. This was some created Angel, who might reveal things to the Prophet by working on the phantasie, and spirit, by way of information and instruction, as Dan. 9. 21, Luk. 1. 11. Apoc. 1. 1.

I will shew thee what these be ] How ready are the holy Angels to serve the Saints, Heb. 1. 14. rejoycing more in their names of office then of honour, of employment, then preferment, to be called Angels (that is, Messengers, or Inter-nuntio's) then Principalities, Thrones, Dominions, Ephes. 1. 20. accounting it, better to do good, then to be great, to dispense Gods benefits, then to enjoy them. Hence they are with, and about the Saints, as their companions, guides, protectours, monitours, and rulers of their actions, as here.

Verse 10. And the man that stood among the myrtle-trees ] The man Christ Jesus, that is ever with his Church, and in the midst of his people, that feedeth among the lillies, and walketh in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks. He being asked by the foresaid Angel, answered him (in Zacharies hearing) for he is Palmoni hammedabber, that excellent Speaker, as Daniel calleth him, and therefore asketh him of the vision, Dan. 8. 13.

ἰσχυράλοι. These are they whom the Lord hath sent ] As his Epoitai, or Overseers and Intelligencers. Not that God needeth them, as Princes need the counsell and aid of their subjects. The holy Angels receive more from God, then they performe, or bring to him. But he maketh use of their service about us. 1. For the honour of his Majesty, and comfort of our infirmity. 2. To make out his love unto us, by employing such noble creatures for our good. 3. To make and maintain love and correspondency between us and Angels, till we come to walk arm in arm with Angels, as Zach. 3. 7. and to be like unto them, yea their equals, Luke 20. 36. if not more, Ephes. 1. 23.

Verse 11. We have walked to and fro thorow the earth ] Itavimus, we have coursed up and down with incredible swiftnesse. Hence they are called the charrets of God, Psal. 68. 17. (Heb. Gods-charret, to note out their joynt-service, as of one) as here, his horsemen, ready prest to do his pleasure.

Joh. 16. 33.
Joh. 16. 20.
Esth. 3. 15.
Esay 21. 10.
1 Cor. 3. 9.
Jer. 48.
Job 10. 10. &

and behold all the earth sitteth still, and is at rest ] excepting the Church alone, which like Noah's Ark, is ever tossed up and down, till it rest at last on the everlasting mountain: then she shall have her happy Halcyons: then she shall see her enemies afar off, as Lazarus did Dives, or as the Israelites at the red-sea did their persecutours, dead upon the shore. Mean-while, she must not expect to be calm, and quiet for any continuance. In the world ye shall have trouble, And ye shall weep and lament: but the world shall rejoyce: they shall revel, and laugh themselves fat. The king and Haman sat down to drink: but the city Shushan was perplexed. The Church is called Gods threshing-floor, because threshed with continuall crosses: and Gods husbandry, because he will be sure to plow his own ground, and to make long furrows upon their backs, whatsoever become of the waste; and to weed his own garden, though the rest of the world be let alone, and grow wild. Moab is not poured from vessell to vessell, but setteth upon the lees: when the Israel of God is poured out as milk, and crudled like cheese, as Job speaketh in another case.

Verse 12. Then the Angel of the Lord ] That Advocate with the Father, Jesus the Just One, 1 John 2. 2. who appeareth for his afflicted people, and feelingly pleads for them, as being afflicted in all their afflictions, even the Angel of his presence that saveth them, Esay 63. 9. It much moved him, to hear that Gods enemies were in better case then his people: and this put him upon the following passionate expostulation.

• O Lord of Hosts, How long wilt thou not have mercy on Jerusalem, &c. ] Usquequo quo Domine. Calvin had these words much in his mouth: thereby breathing out his holy desires in the behalf of the afflicted Churches, with whose sufferings hee was more affected then with any thing that befell himself. It is said of Melancthon, that the miseries of the Church made him almost neglect the death of his dearest children: and put him upon many prayers and tears; which, like musick upon the water, made a most melodious noise in the ears of God. When Luther in a certain Epistle checked him, and chod him for his exceeding great care of the Churches welfare, calling him pertinacissimam curarum hirundinem, &c. he meekly replied, Si nihil curarem, nihil orarem; If I should not care so, I should not pray so. God seemeth sometimes to have lost his mercy, (as here, How long wilt thou be unmercifull to Jerusalem) and then we must find it for him. He seems to have forgot his people: we must remind him, He seems to sleep, delay: we must waken, quicken him, with How long Lord? Thou shalt arise, and have mercy upon Zion: for the time to favour her, yea the set time is come, saith Daniel, who is (probably) held to be the Pen-man of that excellent Psal. 102. (Confer Dan. 9. 2.) and he speaks it with as much confidence, as if he had been in Gods blessed bosom the while. This also he spake, not now by a spirit of prophecy, or special revelation; but by way of argumentation, or necessary demonstration: For thy servants take pleasure in her stones, and favour the dust thereof; They pity her, and melt over her, therefore thou Lord much more: sith all their tenderesse is but a spark of thy flame, a drop of thine Ocean.

Melch. Adam.
in vita.

Idem in vita
Melanch.

Psal. 102.
13, 14

against which thou hast had indignation, these threescore and ten yeers ] There is much ado among Interpreters about Jeremies 70 and Zacharies 70, whether one and the same: or different one, from another. That of Scaliger is most unlikely, who reckoneth these yeers of the captivity, from the first year of Xerxes with his father Darius, unto the fourth year of Darius Nothus. How much better our countreyman Lydiat (whom yet Scaliger so much scorned, saying, Quis est ille ex ultima Britannia Canis, qui Iosf. Scaligerum audeat allatrare?) who concludes it to be 70 yeers from the last destruction of Jerusalem by the Chaldees, to this second year of Darius Hyssaspes, wherein Zachariah prophecied? That of A Lapide upon this Text, I cannot passe by, Moraliter idipsum dicamus, idipsum oremus & obsecremus pro Anglia, &c. Let us say the same, pray the same for England, Scotland, &c. that the Angel here doth for Jerusalem; How long Lord wilt thou not have mercy upon England, where Heresie hath prevailed now these hundred yeers and upwards? The English fugitives beyond-seas, write upon their Colledge and Church-doors, in great golden letters, Jesu, Jesu, converte Angliam: Fiat, Fiat. Jesu convert England: Amen, Amen. Why, yet this is somewhat better then that of Pererius the Jesuite, upon Genes. 15. 16. If any man marvell saith He, why England continueth to flourish, notwithstanding the over-flow of heresie, and cruel persecution of Catholikes, (just execution of Catholikes, he should have said) wee answer, because their iniquity is not yet full, (God grant it, Ier. 28. 6.) Sed veniet tandem iniquitatis complementum. But the time is not far off: and forbearance is no quittance, &c.

Lib. 6. de
Emend. Temp.

Lyd. Emend.
Temp. Anno M.
3485.

Verf. 13. And the Lord answered the Angel ] How should God do otherwise then answer his welbeloved Son, with good and comfortable words, sith he is all in all with the Father, and can do any thing with him? Father, saith he, I know thou hearest me alwayes. Did God hear Abraham for Ismael, nay for Sodom? Did David hear Isaiah, interceding for Absolom? Did Herod hearken to Blastus making request for those of Tyre and Sidon, with whom he was highly displeased? And shall not God give ear to his Son, praying for his people, that are as dear to him as the apple of his eye? Good and comfortable words he doth surely answer him: such as were once those, Iosf. 12. 27, 28. when Christ had thus prayed; Now is my soul troubled, and what shall I say? Father save me from this hour: but for this cause came I to this hour. Father, glorifie thy Name. Then came there a voice from heaven (Bath-chol the Rabbins call it) saying, I have both glorified it, and will glorifie it again. So, when he shall say in his daily intercession (for he ever liveth to make request for us, at the right hand of the Majesty on high) It irketh me, that the whole earth is at rest, and my Church at so much unrest: Return, O Lord, how long? and let it repent thee concerning thy servants. Save now I beseech thee,

Joh. 12.

Acts 12. 20.

Psal. 90. 13.

Psal. 118. 25. thee O Lord: O Lord I beseech thee send now prosperity. How can God do less then answer as Isa. 33. 10. Now will I arise, now will I be exalted, now will I lift up myself: Or as in the words next following here (which indeed are all along good words and comfortable words) I am jealous for Jerusalem &c. The Lord shall yet comfort Zion, and shall yet chuse Jerusalem; Yet for all the sorrow
 Ier. 30. 17. he shall do it, and for all that Others called her an outcast saying, This is Zion, whom no man seeketh after: and she her self concludeth her dolefull ditty with, Thou hast utterly rejected us: thou art very wroth against us. Lam. 4. 22.

Verse 14. So the Angell that communed with me] See the Note on ver. 10.

cry thou saying] g. d. Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God, Speake ye comfortably to Jerusalem, speake ye to her heart and cry unto her saying, that her appointed time is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned, and so the quarrell is ended: for she hath received of the Lords hands double for her sins. Nothing so much as I have deserved saith she Ezra 9. 13. twice so much as she hath deserved, saith He. O sweet contradiction! O beautifull contention! The same Hebrew word signifieth to repent and to comfort 1 Sam. 15. 35. Esay 40. 1. Gods care is to comfort those that are cast down. His command to his Prophet is to cry comfort to the penitent with an extraordinary earnestnesse, from the God of all consolation.

I am jealous for Jerusalem and for Zion with a great jealousie] Love is strong as death, zeal, or jealousie (for the same word signifieth both) is hard as hell. Cant. 8. 6. Non amat qui non zelat saith Augustine. He loves not that zeales not. And Basil venturing himself very farr for his friend, and by some blamed for it, answered, Ego aliter amare non didici, I cannot love a man, but I must do mine utmost for him. When one desired to know what manner of man Basil was, it is said there was presented in a dreame to him a pillar of fire with this motto, Talis est Basilius, Lo, such an one is Basil. It is certaine that our God is a consuming fire, who would set the briars and the thorns saith He, that is the churches enemies, against me in battell? I would go through them, I would burn them together. And yet he saith in the same place, Fury is not in me: What will he do then when jealousie is in him as here? Jealousie is the rage of a man, and hath these three properties.

Est. 27. 4.

Prov. 6. 34.

Gen. 4. 6.

Esth. 7. 8.

Psal. 40. 15.

First it is exceeding watchfull, and quick-sighted: hardly shall the Paramour escape the husbands eye, a wanton glance is soon noted and noticed. God is no lesse sensible and observant of the least indignity done to his deare spouse, his Hephzibah, be it but in a frown or a frump. Why is thy countenance cast down, saith God to that dog-bolt Cain? Why dost lowre upon my righteous Abel? What will he force the Queen also before me in the house? If Dauids enemies mow and make mouths at him, if they cry Aha, Aha, so would we have it, God will reckon with them for it. If Edom say jeeringly to the Prophet, Watchman, what of the night? watchman, what of the night? If Ammon clap but his hands at Gods Israel, if he stamp with the feet, and rejoyce in heart only, when it goes ill with the church, God will stretch out his hand upon him, and cut him off out of his countrey, and he shall know that he is Jehovah, Ezek. 25. 67. yea that the Lord God of Israel is a jealous God. He will be jealous for his land, and pittie his people Isa. 2. 18.

Num. 12. 14.

Secondly jealousie is violent: it is cruel as the grave, the coales thereof are coales of fire Cant. 8. 6. The same word is elsewhere put for fiery thunderbolts, Psal. 78. 48. also for a carbuncle or burning feaver Dent. 32. 24. Jealousie puts a man into a feaver-fit of outrage: arms him with fiery darts, yea with light-bolts: makes him cast firebrands, be ready to take any revenge: Think the same of God in a way of justice. He will spit in the face of a Miriam, that shall but mutter against his Moses: what then will he do, (or rather what will he not do) against Jezebel, Athaliah, Herodias &c?

Thirdly jealousie is irreconcilable, implacable, Prov. 6. 34, 35. He will not spare in the day of vengeance. He will not regard any ransom, neither will he rest content though thou give many gifts, what would not Balaac have given to have had his will upon Israel? What large offers made Haman? he would pay ten thousand talents of silver to those that had the charge of the businesse to destroy the Jewes.

Jewes. Abashuerus yielded: but so did not God. We are sold (said Esther) Esth. 3. 9.
I and my people to be destroyed, to be slain and to perish: But God never consented Esth. 7. 4. to the bargain. He had warr with Amalec for ever, and laid his hand upon his own throne, as swearing to root him out Exod. 17. 16. And this proud Agagite Haman shall feel the force of his curse in his very bowels. Let the labouring Church but cry out, Help O King, heare O husband, give eare O shepheard of Israel, the enemy is come into thy land O Immanuel, and the stretching out of his wings filleth Ila. 8. 8.
the whole breadth of it. Where is thy zeale (or jealousie) and thy strengths, the Ila. 63. 15:
sounding of thy bowels, and of thy mercies towards me? are they restrained? Doubt- lesse thou art our Father, our Redeemer, or neer kinsman, nay, our husband. Thy church is unto thee A sister, a spouse: And canst thou hide thine eyes from thine own flesh? from her that is joyned to the Lord, and is one spirit? shall Abraham venture for the rescue of his kinsman, David of his two wives, and wilt thou do nothing for the dearly beloved of thy soule? shall she be given up into the hand of her enemies? shall the sword reach unto the soule. Let Christ but heare such words from the mouth of his Spouse: and he will soon gird his sword upon his thigh, he will act Phineas his part and execute judgement: he will smite his enemies in the hinder parts (whip them, as men use to do boyes) and so put them to a perpetuall reproach; shame them for ever, as a company of punyes or Zanies.

Verse 15. And I am very sore displeased with the Heathen that are at ease Heb.
I am in such a heate as causeth fuming and foaming, I am boiling-hot, and even ready to burst out upon them, to destroy them: for the word here used hath great affinity with another word that signifieth to cut down, and to destroy a King.
6. 6. and importeth an higher degree of displeasure, a greater height of heate, then either Anger or wrath, as may be seen in that signall gradation Dent. 29.
28. The Lord rooted them out of their land in Anger and in Wrath, and in great Indignation. The last of these three is this word in the Text, Fervore maximo serveo, I am as hot as may be against those Heathens that are at ease, at hearts-ease, that come not in trouble like other men, neither are they plagued as better men, Psal. 73. 5. and are therefore secure and insolent above measure Iob. 21. 23. haughty and haunty, so that the Church cannot rest for them: they thrust with the shoulder, and push with the horn (as afterwards verse 18. 19. with Dan. 8. 4.) yea they push the diseased Ezek. 34. 21. (which is a singular cruelty.)

they help forward the affliction they fall like dogs upon the wounded Deere.
This David complains of as an unsufferable grievance Psal. 69. 26. For they persecute him whom thou hast smitten: and they talk to the grief of those whom thou hast wounded. God smiteth his in mercy and in measure, in the branches only, and not at the root, neque ad exitium sed ad exercitium. Displeased he may be with his own, and make bloody wails upon their backs, if need be: but then he looks that others should pity them, and not lay on more load and seek to bring them to utmost extremity. God puts his people sometimes into the hands of his enemies, for correction sake. Now they commonly being enraged with haughty, revengfull, and malicious desires, exceed their commission, and so derive the mischief upon themselves (See Prov. 24. 17, 18,) they cannot doe but they must overdoe (as Nebuchadnezzar the rod in Gods hand Isai. 10.) and thereby utterly undoe themselves for ever. For their cruelty comes up to heaven 2 Chron. 28. 9. and God soon heareth the cry of his oppressed (for he is gracious) and avengeth himself on their pittilese enemies: standing over them and laying as Ila. 47. 6. I was wroth with my people, I have polluted mine inheritance, and given them into thine hand: thou didst shew them no mercy: upon the ancient hast thou heavily laid the yoke. And againe: Because these Philistines have dealt by revenge, and have taken vengeance with a deceitfull heart, to destroy it for the old hatred: There- Ezek. 25. 15, fore I will execute great vengeance upon them with furious rebukes, and they shall 17. and 26. 2. know that I am the Lord when I shall lay my vengeance upon them. Joab never pleased David better, then when he made intercession for banished Absalom: for the soule of king David longed to go forth unto Absalom, whom yet he had very just cause to be greatly displeased with. God in a heat as it were, against Israel, offereth Moses a great fortune Exod. 32. 10. but would have taken it very ill, that Moses should have taken him at his word.

Caïden.

He is but a little angry with his people] and soon repenteth him of the evill: But woe be to those that help forward the indignation, that deale by Gods afflicted as the Herd of Deer do; which, when any of the herd is shot, the rest push him out of their company. It is said of Q. Elisabeth, that she hated no lesse then did Mitridates, such as maliciously persecuted vertue forsaken of fortune. Think the same of God. He weareth his rod to the Rumps, and then throwes it into the fire. He sets his horse-leeches to his people (when he findes them sick of a plethora of pride, when fulnesse hath bred forgetfulnessse, faturity security) and suffereth them to suck till they burst: and then treads them under his feet, and puts them away as drosse Psal 119. 118, 119.

Psal 42. 7.

Verse 16. Therefore thus saith the Lord] Thus, one deep callith another: the lower deep of our misery, the higher deep of Gods mercy. As Crasus his dumb son burst out into Kill not king Crasus: so, when enemies are ready to devour the Church, Gods bowels work: he can hold no longer but cries, save my child, Handle the yong man gently for my sake; See Ier. 31. 20. Isa. 57. 16. I will not contend for ever; neither will I be alwayes wroth: for the spirit should faile before me &c. when the child swoons in the whipping, God let falls the rod, and falls a kissing it, to fetch life into it againe. A Physitian, in some cases purgeth his patient till nothing be left almoit, but skin and bone: or bloodderth him ad deliquium anime, till he faint and sink, but yet his care is still to maintain nature: To this heavenly Father and Physitian is carefull to keep up the spirits of his suffering Saints, by comforts and cordials, as here:

Aug. Confes.
lib. 5. c. 8.

I am returned to Jerusalem with mercies. Miserationibus visceralibus with multitudes of tender mercies that flow from the inwards, from the bowels, from the bosom and bottom of the heart: and that of a Parent, nay of a mother toward her child in an extremity as 1 King. 3. 26. And here observes how fully and sweetly the Angels prayer (verse 12.) is answered even ad eardinem desiderij. God not only grants him according to his own heart, but fulfills all his counsell, as it is Psal. 20. 4. Lets it be to him even as he will, nay gives him an enlarged answer, preffeth upon him (as Naaman did upon Gehazi's two talents when he desired but one.) How long wilt thou not be mercifull to Jerusalem saith He?

behold I am returned to Jerusalem with many mercies saith God.] I went away and hid me from it in my anger Hos. 5. 15. but am come again with many comforts, to relieve it. As all light is from the Sun, and all waters from the sea: so is all comfort from God. In thy light shall we see light: but Thou didst hide thy face and I was troubled Psal. 30. 7. as when the Sun is eclipsed, all creatures here flag and hang the head, there is a drooping in the whole frame of nature: and as when the extracting force of the Sun leaves the vapours that are drawn up, they fall down again to the earth; So fares it with the Church: If God withdraw, she lyes all amort, yea, she lieth open to all sorts of evils and enemies: for her shadow is departed from her. But he cannot be long absent, such is his love: he will repent for his people when he seeth their power is gone Dani. 32. 36. when there is a dignus vindice nodus, an extremity fit for divine power to interpose: when misery weighs down, & nothing but mercy turns the scale, then (at furthest) in the very turning and critical point. He will return to Jerusalem with mercies. He will return to her, not as the winter sun, that casts a goodly countenance when it shines, but gives little comfort and heat: but with a Cornu-copia of all manner of blessings will he come.

my house shall be built in it saith the Lord of Hosts: and a line shall be stretched forth upon Jerusalem] that is both Church and State shall flourish. God will both do good in his good pleasure unto Sion: he will also build the walls of Jerusalem Psal. 51. 18. but mark that he saith in his good pleasure, as here in tender mercies; to teach us, that all the good we enjoy is merely of mercy, it is all of free grace: for otherwise, there should not be so much as any face of Church or common-wealth, as we see in the Jewes at this day; a miserable disiected people, because Lo-rubamah, such as have not obtained mercy. Their Ancestours acknowledged with all thankfulnessse for so undeserved a favour, that Except the Lord of Hosts had left unto them a very small remnant, they should have been as Sodom, and like unto Gomorrhah. Had not the Angels laid hold upon Lots hand, and the good Hos. 1.Isay 1. 9.

Lord

Lord been mercifull unto him Gen. 19. 16. he also had perished amongst those sinners against their own soules. Jehoshua was a brand plucked out of the fire Zech. 3. 2. "And when One said to Mr. Bradford the Martyr God hath done much for you since I first knew you, and hath wrought wonderously in you to his glory; he thus answered, Truth it is, for He hath dealt favourably with me, in that he hath not punished me according to my sins, but hath suffered me to live that I might seek repentance. Thou hast punished us lesse then our iniquities deserve, saith Ezra. And it is of the Lords mercies that we are not consumed, saith the Church, because his compassions faile not Lam. 3. 22.

Ar. & Mon.
1473.
Ezra 9. 13.

Verse 17. Cry yet saying, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts my cities. Here are foure Ters in this one verse, and all very gracious ones: to break their hard hearts, and to raise their faith in his promised mercies. For it is as if God should say, Though I was sore displeased with your Fathers, and ye are risen up in their roomes a very race of rebels, so that I have had indignation against you full seventy yeers, ver. 12. yet I do you to know, and by my Prophet I proclaim with great earnestness and evidence of truth, that I do yet own you my cities (so that ye are not discovered) and will yet prosper you (so that it shall no more be said This is Zion Ier. 30. 17. whom no man careth for: for you shall have plentiful increase of men, cattle and all manner fruits of the earth as chap. 2. 4.) yea you shall have a fulnesse of all things, not only repletive but diffusive, not only of abundance, but of redundance too; your cup shall overflow into the lesser vessels of others.

my cities through prosperity shall yet be spread abroad. Diffunduntur, diffluent, and effluent. You shall have not for necessity only, but for lawfull delight and honest affluence.

and the Lord shall yet comfort Zion [sc. with spirituall comforts, taking her into his wine-cellar Cant. 2. yea into the wilderness, and there speaking to her heart Hos. 2. 13.

and shall yet chuse Ierusalem That is, settle her in the sound assurance of her Election and Adoption, whereof thote outward blessings are both fruites and pledges. Hence David doubts not to conclude his spirituall good estate, and hopes of eternall happinesse from his externall enjoyments Psal. 23. 5, 6. Thou preparest a table before me, thou anointest mine head, my cup runneth over. Hence he infers, Surely goodnesse and mercy shall follow me all the dayes of my life: and I shall dwell in the house of the Lord for ever. In all that is here said, we may see that scripture fully made good Ier. 51. 5. Israel hath not been forsaken, nor Judah of his God, of the Lord of Hosts: though their land was filled with sin against the Holy one of Israel. And herein God dealt with his people according to his prerogative, and not according to his ordinary course. When the cursed Canaanites had filled their land from corner to corner with their uncleannesses, they were devoted to destruction. When the Edomites grew insolent and ripe for ruine, they were called the border of wickednesse, and the people against whom the Lord had indignation for ever. Mal. 1. 4. See the Note there.

Ezra 9. 11.

Verse 18. Then I lift up mine eyes and saw That is, I gave good heed to this second vision also: which was added purposely for confirmation of the former promises; which should be certainly accomplished to the Church, notwithstanding her many and mighty enemies. Horns they are called for their might and mischiefousnes; by a metaphor, a feris cornu peris from fierce beasts, whose strength and wrath lies in their horns; or else from warriors, who wore iron horns upon their helmets.

and behold four horns Not the foure Monarchies (for the Grecians and Romanes were not yet: and this is spoken here for the present comfort of the afflicted Church) but the enemies of Israel from all the four parts of the world (see Psal. 107. 2, 3.) for they were surrounded; On the North were the Syrians, Assyrians, and Babylonians. (Ab Aqu lone nihil boni, Ier. 4. 6. and 6. 1.) On the East, the Ammonites and Moabites. On the South, the Edomites and Egyptians. On the West, the Philistines, as may be gathered out of Jeremy and Ezekiel. Geneva is at this day a small people, invironed with enemies, French, Spanish, Savoy, Pope; and barred out from all aid of neighbours, cities, and churches: yet, by the mighty arm of God, strangely and strongly upheld and defended.

Melch. Ad. in
vit. Bez. 227.

Loc. com. de perfec. vera Ecclesia.

This Mr. Beza represented in a most elegant emblem of a city depainted as hanged by a twined threed; sustained and maintained by the mighty hand of God alone. Would any man take the Churches picture? saith Luther: then let him paint a silly poor maid, sitting in a wood or wilderness, compassed about with hungry wolves, lions, bores, and beares, and with all manner of cruel and hurtfull beasts, and in the midst of a great many furious men assaulting her every moment and minute, for this is her condition in the world.

Verse 19 And I said unto the Angel that talked with me, What be these? ] Though the vision be dark and mysterious, yet the Prophet despaireth not of a right understanding, neither doth he waywardly reject it with a Quod non vult intelligi, vult neglegi. But, wanting wisdom he asketh it of God, as St. James also adviseth us to do chap. 1. 5. and as David practised: Teach me good judgment and knowledge saith He, give me understanding and I shall observe thy law. Thus Daniel prayed, and had an Angel sent to informe him, not once but often in friendly and familiar maner Dan. 9. 21. and 10. 11. and 11. 2. 3. So had Ioseph, Cornelius, Paul, &c. And although Angels are not so ready now, or appear not, at least, so visibly to tell us the mind of God: yet He will not be wanting to his willing servants: but in the use of meanes they shall be all taught of God: as David was by repaying to the Sanctuary Psal. 73. 13. and as the Eunuch was by Philip Act. 8.

Lud de Dieu
in Mat. 22-44.

these are the hornes which have scattered] Heb. tossed them up in the ayre, as furious beasts do with their hornes, and sorely bruised them. Num not modo dispersionem significat qua fit per modum ventilationis, sed etiam qua fit per modum afflictionis & contritionis. See Hos. 10. 14. and 13. 16.

Verse 20. And the Lord shewed me foure carpenters] He that before was called an Angel, is here called Jebovah, this shewes him to be Christ, who is God blessed for ever. In respect of his eternall essence he is called the Lord: in respect of his office or Mediatourship, an Angel.

2 Pet. 2. 9.

foure carpenters] Or smiths: so many hornes, so many Artificers to batter and break them. God wants not wayes and meanes to help his at a dead lift: he knowes how to deliver saith Peter, and herein usually he goeth a way by himself. Many times he setteth the enemies together by the eares among themselves: whilst that I will escape, saith David Psal. 141. 10. Thus by Nebuchadnezzar, as by a mall or beetle, he brake the rest of those horrible hornes: as at this day the Pope by the Turk, and Spaniard by the French, and that the Church may have her Halcyons. N. marvell I slept so soundly seeing Antipater was by and watched, said Philip of Macedon. We may better say of Antipater, our gracious Father and guardian, the keeper of his Israel.

Verse 21. What come these to do? ] he asketh not what they were? for by their tooles or weapons he perceived they were Carpenters or smith. (as some think) with iron instruments to breake these iron hornes: confer 1 King. 22. 11. He inquireth therefore of their employment only. Futillous and foolish questions should be avoided, Tit. 3. 9.

so that no man did lift up his head] Turn head, or looke cheerfully as Luke 21. 28.

but these are come to fray them] deterre, saith the Vulgar: better deterre, to fright them, now that they had pusht Israel to the Lord.

so cast out &c.] Thus Omne sub regno graviore regnum est. See Eccles. 5. 7. with the Note there.

CHAP. II.

Verse 1. I lift up mine eyes againe and looked] i. e. I looked wishly, not sluggishly, as betwixt sleeping and waking as chap. 4. I saw further by the spirit then common sense could have carried me. I beheld Jerusalem in her future glory, I looked intently, I took aime, not by the things which are seen, but by the things which are not seen 2 Cor. 4. 18. Heb. 11. 27. Gal. 4. 26.

and

and behold a man.] The Man Christ Jesus, as his Mother is called a Virgin Isa. 7. 14. the Virgin, that famous Virgin that conceived and bare a Son, that gat a man from the Lord Gen. 4. 1. This Man (called before and after an Angel, as appearing in humane shape) is here seen and set forth as an Architect or Master-builder, going to take the plot of his Church (see Rev. 21. 15. and observe by the way, how in that book the holy Ghost borrows the allegories and elegancies of the Old Testament, to set out the story of the New, in succeeding ages.)

Verse 2. Whither goest thou?] This was great boldnesse; But the Prophet understood himself well enough; and Christ approves and assents to it in a gracious answer here, and especially verse 4. Great is the confidence of a good confidence toward God. See Esay 63. 16, 17. Hab. 1. 12. We may come boldly to the throne of grace, Heb. 4. 16. to measure Jerusalem.] This had been promised before, Chap. 1. 16. But for their further confirmation, who saw a little likelihood of such a reedifying and reepling, it is repeated. Thus the Lord, tendering our infirmity, seals to us again and again in the holy Sacrament, what he had said and sworn to us in his word.

Verse 3. And behold the Angel.] Zacharies Angel, as One calleth him. Went forth] to take direction from Christ, and to give the prophet further information. See the Note on Chap. 1. 9. and another Angel went out to meet him.] So ready is Christ to answer prayers, and to satisfie his weak but willing people, that draw near unto him with a true heart. Heb. 10. 22. If any such ask and misse, it is because they ask amisse. Jam. 4. 3.

*Verse 4. Run, speak to this young man.] Not go, but Run: yea, fly swiftly with wearinesse of flight, as Dan: 9. 21. Christ thinks it long ere his praying people hear from him. Onely he will be enquired of by them Ezek. 36: 37. Zachary seemes to have been a young Prophet, and Christ remembered the kindnesse of his youth, and became a wonderful counsellor to him: He gave to this young man (or green-headed stripling) knowledge and discretion. Prov. 1. 4. Epiphanius saith he was an old man: and that he is called a young man because a client and disciple of the Angel that communed with him. Where Angels are called men, it was no disparagement to Zachary to call himself a lad, or servant considering his distance. Thus Abrahams servant, though old, is called his boy Gen. 24. 52. by a Catachresis. That's a good Note that One gives here, That the Angel tells the prophet; but the prophet must tell the people: God using not the Ministry of Angels but men (earthen vessels) to bear his Name to his people Acts 8. 26. and 9. 6. and 16. 9.*

Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls.] Or: shall dwell in towns without walls, viz. in the suburbs or villages, there being not room enough within the walls to receive them. This seemed an incredible thing to this poor remnant now returned from Babylon. But it is the property and duty of beleivers to trust God upon his bare word: and that against sense in things invisable, and against reason, in things improbable.

for the multitude of men and cattel therein.] That is, saith Augustine, of spiritual and carnal persons in the Church Catholike.

Verse 5. For I, saith the Lord, will be unto her a wall of fire.] The Church (Christ's garden) may seem to lie open to all incursions and disadvantages: but as it hath a wall within it Cant 4. So it hath a wall without it, yea round about it, better and stronger then that about Babylon, or Susa in Persia; the stones whereof were joyned together with gold, as Cassiodorus testifieth. The Lacedemonians were forbidden to wall in their city of Sparta: as being sufficiently fortified by the valour of the inhabitants. The Hollanders will not wall the Hague, though it have 2000 households in it: as desirous to have it counted rather the principal village of Europe, then a lesser city. China is said to be surrounded with a strong wall of stone: and England, with walls of wood, sc. A puissant Navy. But what's all this (either for defence, or offence) to a wall of fire? who dare venture to scale such a wall? It is not valour but madnesse to fight with a flame. Fire is terrible to the fiercest creatures, as Lions, Leopards &c. Shepherds and travellers were used to guard themselves by making great fires round about their night-lodgings, to keep of wild beasts.

Some

1 Pet. 3. 23.

Mr. Pemble.

Ignem qui &c.
cominus arceat & eminus terreat. Theodor.
Lib. 7. Var.
Epist.

Instit. Lib. 2.
Cap. 13.

Heb. 1.7.
Gen. 32.1.

These are the watchmen over
the walls of the new Ieru-salem, and of the mountains
about the same.
Isai. 62.

1 Sam. 4.20.

Deut. 4.5, 6, 7

Antiq. Lib. 11
Cap. 4.

Heb. 12.25.
and 2.3.

Plotin : apud.
Ang de C.D
lib. 9. Cap. 16

Iustin: lib. 1:
Herod. lib. 3.

Some think the prophet alludeth to that custome : others , to the Angel guarding of Paradise with a flaming sword, that is, saith Lactantius, with a wall of fire. The Church may sit and sing, we have a strong city : salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks : Esay 26.1. He maketh his Angels spirits, his ministers a flame of fire. These met and ministred unto Jacob at Mahanaim making a lane for him, as the word importeth. These fiery charets and horsemen appeared, for Elisha by whole legions 2 Kin. 6.17. and do still pitch their camp round about the godly Psal. 34.8. Who therefore cannot but be safe, as being guarded by the peace of God within them, and by the power of God without them, through faith unto salvation. and will be the glory in the midst of her.] God is the Churches both bulwark and beauty : her muniment and ornament. His presence, his worship, his Grace, his protection is that tower in the midst of her Esay. 5. that golden head of the picture, that tower of the flock and strong hold of the daughter of Gods people Mic. 4.8. Hence the Ark is called the glory Rom. 9.4.5. and all comforts without it but Iacob's. Hence Judea is called the glorious land : and Heathens are brought in saying, Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people. For what nation is there so great that hath God so nigh unto them as the Lord our God is, in all things that we call upon him for ? And what nation is there so great that hath statutes and judgments so righteous as all this law &c. Surely as Samsons strength and glory lay in his hair, so doth the strength and glory of our land, consist in the true religion, and Gods sincere service : which if it should be shaved and deprived of, though every shower were a shower of gold (saith a Divine) every stone in the land a pearl, every begger an honourable Senatour, every fool as wise as Solomon, every weakling as strong as Samson ; yet our wealth, honour, strength, wisdom, and glory are gone, and we shall sing a doleful Miserere with Phineas his wife Ichabod. The glory of England is gone ; for Religion is gone.

Verse 6. Ho, ho, come forth, and flee from the land of the North.] A proclamation to those in Babylon to make hast home, and come away for shame : now they had so fair a way made, and such free liberty given them to return. A man would wonder they should be so backward to a business of this nature. But they that were born in hell, know no other heaven, as the proverb is. There they had lived a long season in peace and safety in a rich and fat though a forreine Countrey. There they were at quiet, enjoyed their religion and customs, got wealth, had favourites at Court : and what should they trouble themselves to remove into a Countrey where they were sure to meet with many bitter enemies, the Samaritans and others ? And who can tell whether this Proclamation of King Darius be nor a designe to try their affection to their countrey, and so to fall upon such as did offer to return thither ? Thus by casting of perils, distrusting of promises, and listening to that Improbable Siren Desidia, they staid half of them, at least behinde : whatever Iosephus hath falsely storied of 4628000. that returned : the contrary whereto see Ezr. 2.64.

for I have spread you abroad into the four windes]. And do now offer to recollect and reduce you to your own countrey. See that ye shift not off Me that speak from heaven. See that ye neglect not so great salvation. How oft is the Lord even fain to smooke us, and so force us out of our clayie cottages, toward our heavenly home ; And what ashamè is it to us that a Heathen should say Fugendum est ad clarissimam patriam : ibi pater, ibi omnia. We should even flee apace to our own countrey that is above : sith there is our Father, there is All that heart can wish or need require.

Verse 7. Deliver thy self, O Zion that dwellest with the daughter of Babylon] q. d. Is Babylon a fit place for thee to abide in ? what comfort canst thou take in such lewd company ? Save thy self from this untoward generation Aet. 2.40. Flee out of the midst of Babylon, and deliver every man his soul : be not cut off in her iniquity : for this is the time of the Lords vengeance : he will render unto her a recompense. Jer. 51.6.7. Shortly after this exhortation to the sons of Zion, Babylon revolted from the Persians, and was taken and sackt by Darius in the fourth yeer of his reign (that is two yeers after this Prophecy was uttered) by the help of his friend Zopyrus. Two thing should prevail with the people of God to shun the society of the the ungodly. 1. Infection of sin, which is more contagious and catching then the plague. Though Lbr learned not the evil manners of Sodom, yet his daughters did.

2. Infection of punishment Zac. 9. 3. Hamath lay so nigh Damascus in places that she shared the worse for her neighbourhood. See for both these, Rev. 18. 4. and say, if at any time forced to be in bad company, O that I had wings of a dove: for then would I flee away, and be at rest. Or, if this Ob will not set thee at liberty, take up that Wo, to expresse thy misery, Wo is me that I sojourn in Meshech, &c. Plal. 55. 6.

Vers. 8. For thus saith the Lord of hosts I Sanchez referreth these words to those aforegoing, q. d. Deliver thy self; &c. for so the Lord commandeth. But herein he stands alone; the current of Interpreters carrying it against him. This preface seems prefixed for procuring more authority to the ensuing promise, which to the poor Jews might seem incredible. If Jehovah speaketh it, and he that hath all power in his hand to effect what he speaketh, why should any one doubt, or despair?

After this glory ] i. e. these glimmerings of glory, these out-goings of grace begun amongst you, and by degrees to be finished.

has he sent me unto the Nations which spoiled you ] Or, against the Nations for it is a sending in judgement: and perhaps against either the Caldeans destroyed by the Persians (see the Note on verse 7.) Or, the Persians, afterwards destroyed by the Grecians, and by Alexander the Great. See Esay 33. 1. Now, where as some object, that Christ is here said to be sent of his Father: and this seems to import an inferiority: It is answered: First, that two equals by mutuall consent may send one another. Mission doth not alwayes import inequality. Secondly, One may be inferior to another, either by nature; and so Christ is not: or by condition; as he is the Mediatour, and as he did voluntarily abase himself; and so he is, Phil. 2. 7.

For he that toucheth you, toucheth the apple of his eye ] The little man that is in the eye, (as papilla of papa) Or, the black of the eye. God, who at first drew light out of darknesse, doth by an admirable work, draw the light of the body out of the black apple of the eye. Philosophers call it, the Chryselline humour. It is the tenderest piece of the tenderest part: to expresse the inexpressible tenderness of Gods love, saith Salvian. The eye is kept most diligently, and strongly guarded by nature with tunicles. A man can better bear a thulch on the back; then a touch on the eye. Siquis digitum meum movet, siquis pungat brachium & crura, siquis etiam duriter vulneret, &c. saith Calvin here. If one bite my finger, prick my leg or arm, yea slash and wound me, I can better bear it, then if he thrust his finger in mine eyes. Amida sonne of Mulassas King of Tunis, cruelly put out his fathers eyes, by holding hot burning basons before them. Robert de Behasme, Earl of Shrewsbury, Anno 1111. playing with his own childe, for a pastime, put his thumbe in the boyes eyes, and thrust out the balls thereof. We use to say, Oculus & fama non patiuntur jocos. The eye and the good name will endure no jests. Let persecutours take heed how they meddle with Gods eyes. He is wise in heart, and mighty in strength: who hath hardened himself against God and professed? Job 4. 4. Some read the text thus. He that toucheth you, toucheth the apple of his own eye, that is, he very grievously hurteth himself; as proceeding and pulling down upon his own head, the sharp wrath and vengeance of God. But the former is the better.

Ishon, of Iph.
It is here called Bab, the daughter of the eye: because it is as dear to a man as an onely daughter.

Turk. hist.
Speed. 473.

Vers. 9. For behold, I will shake mine hand upon them ] Kings, they say, have long hands; and can easily reach those that are farre distant. This is much more true of the King immortal: who can quickly crumble, to crackle the mightiest Monarchs: he cuts off the spirit of Princes, Psal. 76. 12. he slips them off, (so the Hebrew there imports) as one would slip off a floure between ones fingers: or as one should slip off a bunch of grapes. If the Lord do no more but arise, his enemies shall be scattered, Psal. 68. 1. If he do but shew himself in the field (as Xerxes used to pitch his Tent on high, and stand looking on his Army when in fight) the Philistines will be heard to cry out; God is come into the camp: we will see; who shall deliver us out of the hands of these mighty Gods, &c. 1 Sam. 4. 8. But if he once shake his hand; (that mighty hand, as Saint Paul calleth it) that spanneth

Ezek. 8. 11.

Esay 33. 14.
Jer. 4. 13.

spanneth the heavens, and shaketh the foundations of the earth ) how much more if he smite with the hand, and stamp with the foot, (as the Prophet in another case; and as Pompey vainly vaunted, that with a stamp on the ground of Italy, he could raise an Army) the sinners against Zion are soon afraid; fearfulness surprizeth the hypocrites. Wo unto us, say they, for we are spoiled. The very shaking of his hand at them, shall make their hearts ake, shake and fall asunder in their bowels, as drops of water.

and they shall be a spoil to their servants ] i. e. To the Jews, whom they lately spoiled and enslaved. This was fulfilled in Esthers dayes: and afterwards in the time of the Maccabees. Besides, what is yet expected to be done by the nation of the Jews; when, at their glorious conversion, Christ shall dwell among them, vers. 10. and the multitude of Nations shall joyn themselves to Christ, vers. 11. the Jewes inhabiting in their own land, vers. 12. to the silencing, amusing, and amazing of all flesh; vers. 13. whilst the enemies of the Church by them subdued, Zach. 10. 11. and possessed, Esay 14. 2. Obad. 17, 19. shall willingly, or perforce come under Christs obedience. The conversion of the Gentiles (saith a learned Authour) is many times intimated by the Israelites mastering of them, spoiling them, possessing them for servants, and for hand-maids, as Esay 14. 2. Am. 9. 11. Obad. 19. and here, which is not meant so much of a temporall subduing, as of a spirituall joyning with them in seeking of the Lord; yet so as the chief sovereignty and stroke of keeping men within the lists of their subjection and obedience unto Christ, shall remain among the Jews. And so Saint James teacheth us to expound those phrases, Act. 15. 17. where that which Amos saith, that they (the Israelites) may possess the remnant of Edom, James rendreth, that the residue of men may seek after the Lord. The enemy, whom indeed, the Jews shall spoil, root out, and destroy, after they have groaned long under his hard yoke, and bondage, is Gog and Magog, that is to say, the Turk, Ezech. 38. and 39 with whom they shall have a marvellous conflict; as it may seem in their own countrey, Ezech. 39. 2, 4. Dan. 11. 44, 45. and over whom they shall obtain a noble victory (God from heaven miraculously fighting for them, Ezech. 38. 18, 19, &c. Zach. 14. 3, 4, 5.) at, or near Jerusalem, Joel 3. 2. Ezech. 39. 16. This enemy is not alwayes represented by one and the same name: but sometimes he is called Moab, Edom, Rabbah, Ashur, Javan: haply because those that inhabit the seat of these people shall joyne hands with the Turk, and fall in the same destruction. Sometimes he is called Leviathan, from his quality; sometimes Gog and Magog, from his countrey; sometimes the king of the North, from his territory. But by all these names, one and the same enemy is understood: which marvellously cleareth the place in Ezekiel, chap. 38. 17. where the Lord by his Prophet speaketh to Gog in this wise; Art thou he of whom I have spoken in ancient time by my servants the Prophets of Israel, which prophesied in these dayes and years. He cannot mean Himself, nor Daniel, which was but his contemporary, much lesse Zachary that came after: but he meaneth, the ancient Prophets long before, who spake of the same person, though not by the same name.

and ye shall know that the Lord of Hosts hath sent me ] You shall subscribe to the truth of these promises, which now you can very hardly be brought to beleieve: when God shall have fulfilled with his hand that which he had spoken with his mouth, as Solomons phrase is, 1 King. 8. 15.

Verse 10. Sing and rejoyce, O daughter of Zion, for lo, I come ] After a long absence (as it may seem) and great expectation, I come, not to lodge for a night, but to dwell and make mine abode in the midst of thee; partly in my new-built temple, but principally in the Temple of my body, Joh. 2. 21. For the Word was made flesh and dwelt amongst us, Joh. 1. 14. Lo here's habitus Dei cum carne, God dwelling with men, which the Magicians held impossible, Dan. 2. 11. And for this the Church here, though at a great under, is commanded to sing and shout, notwithstanding her present pressures. This might seem to her an unreasonable discourse; which, saith Siracides, is as musick in mourning. But when is physick more seasonable, then in time of sickness? And when had the Saints more need of chearing up, then when they are pressed down with heaviest crosses? And what greater comfort to a good soul then Christ Jesus our joy? Christus tecum habet in malis

The calling
of the Jews
by Sir H.
Finch.

Esay 27. 1.
Ezek. 38. 2.
Dan. 11. 40.

Eccles. 22. 6.

his comforts are such as the world can neither give, nor take away: such as no good thing can match; no evil thing overmatch.

Verse 11. And many nations shall be joyned to the Lord in that day &c. ] See the Note on ver. 9. And further observe: that albeit the thorough coming in of the Gentiles, for all Nations with one consent to receive Christ, be put off till the Jews famous conversion: yet that nothing hindereth, but that this and such like places that speak of the same may well serve to warrant the first inceptions of their calling. And so doth St. James cite them Act. 15. 16, 17. out of Amos 9. 11, 12. and Paul Rom. 9. 25, 26. out of Hos. 1. 10.

and I will dwell in the midst of thee ] See the Note on ver. 10.

and thou shalt know &c. ] See the Note on ver. 9.

Verse 12. And the Lord shall inherit Judah his portion ] Or his enclosure, his severall, divided from the rest of the world by a wonderfull separation, as the Hebrew word signifieth Exod. 33. 16. And though there were some interruption in shewing favour for a time: yet was there no intercession, and utter breach of covenant: nor is to this time, as the Apostle sheweth Rom. 11. 28, 29. About the time when the Turkish tyranny shall have lasted 350. yeeres (saith my former Authour out of Dan. 7. 25. and 12. 7, 11. Rev. 9. 15.) the Jews shall reappeare toward their own countrey Esay 11. 15, 16. and 51. 10, 11. Ier. 3. 18. Hos. 1. 11. where they shall have a great conflict with the Turk Ezech. 38. and be in great distress for a time Dan. 12. 1. but at length prevail, to the utter ruine of the Grand Signior himself, and the overthrow of his Army; perhaps not far from the sea of Gennezaret, otherwise called the lake of Tiberias Ezech. 39. 11. After which they shall dwell in their own countrey Ier. 3. 18. and 23. 8. Ezech. 37. 21, 22. Am. 9. 14, 15. They shall inhabit all the parts of the land as before Obad 15. 19, 20. Ier. 31. 38, 39, 40. Esay 27. 12. and 65. 10. The land shall be more fertile then ever it was Ezech. 35. Hos. 2. 21, 22. Joel 3. 18. Am. 9. 13. Zach. 14. 10. The countrey more populous then before Esay 49. 19. 20, 21. Ezech. 34. 31. and 36. 37, 38. There shall be no separation of the ten tribes from the other two: but all make one entire kingdome Ezech. 37. 22, 24. Hos. 1. 11. and a most flourishing Commonwealth Dan. 7. 27. together with a Church most glorious, both for outward beauty Zech. 14. 6, 7. Esay 60. 20. and 62. 1, 2, 3. and inward purity in doctrine Ezech. 37. 23. Zach. 13. 2, 3. in discipline, all prophane purged out Joel. 3. 17. Zach. 14. 8. abundance of spiritual graces Esay 25. 6. &c. safety Zach. 10. 12. and 14. 11. prosperity Esa. 25. 8. and 51. 13. and stability Esay 26. 1. and 33. 16. Ier. 30. 20. &c. perpetuity Esay 60. 21. Joel. 3. 20.

Verse 13. Be silent, O all flesh, before the Lord ] Heb. Hu, St. Peace and be still, as our Saviour once said to the raging Sea Mar. 4. 39. whereupon the wind ceased (which before had blowed and blustered till it was weary againe, as the Greek word there importeth) and there was a great calme, all was suddenly hush, and silent. The enemies of the Church are no lesse brutish and boisterous then the fierce winds and waves Psal. 107. 25, 26, 27. But God who sets a bound to the mighty waters which they may not passe Psal. 104. 9. he also refraineth the remainder of mans wrath Psal. 76. 10. If he do but (as the Roman Tribune was wont to do) interpose his Veto. If he do but say (st.) Be silent O all flesh, σταλας plot not, prate not, practise not against my people, who dare quatch in his presence, or gaine and his commands? Who art thou O man that charest against God? saith Paul. Who is this that darkeneth counsell by words without wisdom? saith God to Iob: how now? Let all flesh be silent: Let God be justified, and every mouth stopped. Talk no more so exceeding proudly, let not arrogancy come out of your mouth: for the Lord is a God of knowledge, and by him actions are weighed. He will keep the feet of his Saints, and the wicked (whether they will or no) shall be silent in darknesse: for by strength shall no man prevail. The adversaries of the Lord shall be broken to peeces: out of heaven shall he thunder upon them (saith holy Hannah.) And then they shall be glad to be quiet, and to save themselves as they can: like as the wormes, when it thunders, wriggle into the corners of the earth; and as Caligula (that bold miscreant that dared his Jove to a duel) when it thundered, covered his eyes with his cap, running under the bed, or any bench-hole.

ἐκπαύσων.

ἀγεία
κυματά

ὅτι
ὡς ἔλεγε

Rom. 9. 20.
Iob 38. 2.

1 Sam. 2. 3, 9, 10.

Susten.

O all

O all flesh] fraile and foolish, weak and worthlesse men, who may not compare their wisdom, or oppose their strength to Gods: before whom they can no more stand, then a glaiss-bottle can before a Cannon-shot. They should therefore do well to meddle with their match; and not contend with him that is Mightier then they. The Church is called Jehovah Shammah, or the Lord is there Ezek. 48. 35. and although she be but a Virgin, yet she hath a thrice-puissant Champion, even the Holy One of Israel.

who is now also already raised up] Or aroused awaked as a man out of sleep Psal. 44. 23. or as a giant that shouteth by reason of wine Psal. 78. 65.

out of his holy habitation] That is, out of Heaven Deut. 26. 15. where he hath bathed his sword Isa. 34. 5. and bent his bow and made it ready Psal. 1. 12. Or out of his Temple, which was likewise Gods habitation 1 Sam. 2. 20. and thence God would help his people, as they once said to David at Mahanaim 2 Sam. 18. 3. Therefore now it is better that thou help us, or cause us to be helped, out of the city: Remarkable is that of the Psalmist, In Salem is Gods Tabernacle, and his dwelling place in Zion. There brake he the arrowes of the bow, the shield, and the sword and the battell. Selah. There? where? In the Tabernacle, in the Assemblies of Gods Saints. By all flesh, here may also be meant the unbelieving Jews, who are enjoined silence and submission, they are stiled here, as the Levites stiled the people saying, Hold your peace: dispute not, doubt nor, distrust not Gods promises, seem they never so improbable, or impossible to be effected: harken not to the murmurings of your own misgiving hearts, but silence your reason, exalt your faith &c.

Psal. 76. 2, 3.

Neh. 3. 11.

CHAP. III.

Verse 1. ANd he shewed me Jehoshuah the High-Priest] In a vision doubtlesse; and that for this end, that both the Prophet, and by him the people also, might be advertised, that they wrestled not against flesh and blood, men like themselves, but against spirituall wickednesses, or wicked spirits, who did act them and agitate them against the Church; ride them and spur them to do mischief: as he did that bloody Farnesius one of the Popes Champions, who coming with an army into Germany, swore that he would ride his horse up to the spurrs in the blood of Protestants. It was the devill that stirred up the spirit of Tatnai, Shetber-Boznai, Sanballat &c. to hinder the good work now in hand: like as he did Eckius, Cajetan, Cochlaus, Catharinus and many other great scholars (besides the two kings of England and Hungary) to write against the Reformation begun by Luther, and Charles the fifth with all the strength of the Empire to withstand and hinder it. But all in vaine. Here he bends his accusation chiefly against the chief Priest: but thorough his sides, he strikes at the welfare of the whole Church. Ministers are the maine object of his malice; a speciall spire he beares to such: singling them out and sitting them to the bran, as he dealt by Peter: stirring up unreasonablen and wicked men against them, as he dealt by Paul when he fought with beasts at Ephesus, with breathing divels where ever he came, being in deaths often. When the viper hung upon his hand Act. 28. the devill doubtlesse thought to have dispatcht him: but he was deceived. So he is ever, when he attempts as an Accuser of the Brethren: he is sure to be non-sured, and his plea to be cast out of the court by our Advocate with the Father Jesus Christ the righteous, who appears for us (as he did here for Jehoshuah) to put away sin. Heb. 9. 24, 26. and to take away the iniquities of their most holy things.

Scito persecutorem tuum ab ascensore demone perur-geri. Bern.

standing before the Angel of the Lord] i. e. before Christ, his best friend, and doing his office as an High-Priest. Such is Satans malice and impudency (saith an Interpreter here) to hurt and hinder us most in our best employments: and to accuse the Saints even to their best Friend Christ Jesus. He knowes well, that as Sampsons strength lay in his hair, so doth a Christians strength lie in his holy per-formonces, perfumed and presented by Christ. Hence his restlesse in seeking to

to set a difference, and to breed bate. Hence also, as the foules seized upon Abrahams sacrifice, and as the Pythonisse interrupted Paul and his company when they were praying and well-doing Act. 16. 16, 17. so deales he still by Gods best servants: and that sometimes so, that if after duty, they should put that question to their own heart, as God did to Satan, Unde venis? whence comest thou? it would return Satans answer, From compassing the earth.

and Satan] That Adversary Heb. devil, as St. Peter calleth him: the Accuser of the brethren Rev. 12. 9. that trots betwixt heaven and earth as a teaser, and makes a trade of it. Once this name Satan is applyed to an holy Angel going forth as an adversary to wicked Balaam, Satans spelman as One calleth him.

[standing at his right hand] why there? Because, say some, the Accusation was as true as vehement: and so Satan had the upper hand. For Iosbua was clothed with filthy garments verse 3. and there was cause enough why his own cloaths should abhor him, as Iob hath it chap. 9. 31. what his particular sin objected to him by Satan, was, is hard to say. Some will have it to be one thing, some another. It is plain by Ezra 10. 18. that some of his sons and allies had taken strange wives which he might have hindered; but that himself had taken a harlot to wife, as Iustin Martyr affirmeth, is no way likely. I should sooner beleieve with Theodorēt and Sanchez, that the sins here alledged by Satan against Iosbua and laid to his charge were, not so much his own personall sins, as the sins of the whole people: quodammodo enim totus populus est in sacerdote, & in sacerdote peccat: for the whole people is, after a sort, in the Priest &c.

Dialog. cons.
Tryphon.

to resist him] Heb. To Satan yet against him, to do his kind, by frustrating his prayers and intercessions for the people, by laying his and their sins in his dish, and by laying claime to them for his. Carried on still by like bellish hatred of God and his people, he sins that sin against the holy Ghost, every moment: As Pliny speaks of the scorpion, that there is not one minute wherein it doth not put forth the sting. Our comfort is, that 1. We have an Advocate with the Father &c. and he is the propitiation for our sins, the Patron as well as Judge of his Saints. 2. that as Satan stands at our right hand to molest us in holy duties, so do the holy Angels stand there to withstand him Luke 1. 11. whence it was that the Curtains of the Tabernacle were wrought full of Cherubims within and without. 3. That if we resist the devill, stedfast in the faith, and strong in the Lord, he will fly from us, Iam. 4. 7. For this old serpent, having his head already bruised and crushed by Christ, cannot so easily thrust in his mortall sting, unless we dally with him; and so lay open our selves unto him. He shall in vaine strike fire, if we deny tinder. He may knock at the dore, but if we answer him not at the window he cannot get in.

Verse 2. And the Lord said unto Satan] The Lord Christ that dyed, yea rather that is risen againe, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us. Who then shall condemne us? who shall lay ought to our charge? who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Satan may attempt it, but can never effect it. We know that whosoever is born of God sinneth not, so, unto death: but he that is begotten of God keepeth himself. (sc. in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Iesus Christ unto eternal life Iud. 21.) and that Wicked one or that Troubler of the Saints, toucheth him nor, viz. with a deadly touch, so as to poyson him and undoe him. Christus nobiscum, state. The Prince of Persia cannot stand before Michael the King of Saints.

Rom. 8. 33.
34. 35.

1 Ioh. 5. 18.

Dan. 10.
13. 21.

the Lord rebuke thee; O Satan, even the Lord] Christ argueth not the case with Satan, but cuts him off short with a vehement check and reproof; turns him over to his father to give him his due. In honestam enim est (saith Chrysostom) honestam matronam cum meretrice litigare. It is not fit for a matrone to scold with a strumpet. Admit the accusation were true, yet it was maliciously and unreasonably urged. Doeg spoke nothing but truth against David and Abimelech; yet he heareth, What shall be given unto thee? or, what shall be done unto thee, thou false tongue? Sharp arrows of the mighty, that pierce deep, wound deadly; with coales of juniper, that shall burn fierie in respect of thy self, and sweet, in regard of others. for men are wondrous well pleased when such all members are punished.

Psal 120. 3, 4.

even the Lord that hath chosen Jerusalem] He chose her for his loves: and now loves her for his choise. He loveth her and washeth her with his blood, that he may present her to himself holy and without blemish. Eph. 5. 26, 27. The Persian maids were first purified and perfumed, before Absuerus made his choise Esth. 2. Not so here: A fountain of free grace is opened for sin and for uncleanness to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem Zach. 13. 1. And Uranople, or the new Jerusalem hath its foundation garnished with all manner of precious stones, Ren. 21. Now the foundation of God standeth sure, so that the gates of hell cannot prevail against it. Satan must know that God hath chosen Jerusalem, and will not cast away his people which he foreknew.

Rom. 11. 2.

Psal. 68. 12.

Act. & Mon.
fol. 1392.

Jude 21.
Ean. 3. 30.

is not this a brand pluckt out of the fire] Titio ex igne ereptus? newly snatcht out of the Babylonish furnace: where they have long lain among the pots, where they have been not only sullied, but scorched and half-burnt: should they then be cruelly cast again into the flames, which they have strangely scaped like as the barbarous Persecutors ran Polycarp through the bowels with a sword, when the beasts would not devour him, nor the fire burn him. Or as the bloody Papists in Queen Maries dayes, cast the woman of Garneseys babe again into the fire, that sprang and sprawled out of his mothers womb, as she was in burning. This was clean contrary to that Apostolical precept, Of some have compassion, pulling them out of the fire. And far short of Nebuchadnezzars practises, who taking the three worthies out of the burning fiery furnace promoted them to great honour and offices.

Esay 64. 6.

1 Cor. 4. 5.

Sacco soluto
apparet argentum Ambr.

Verse 3. Now Joahuah was clothed with filthy garments] The tottered rags of the old Adam, the nasty filthynesse and superfluity of naughtynesse that yet remained in him (though in part regenerate) and intermingled with his best works. Sin is the Devils excrement: it defiles the soul worse then any jakes can do the body (as the Hebrew word here signifieth, and as our Saviour shews Mar. 7. 20. or then the Saries of a plague-fore doth a garment. Hence that of the Church, We are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags. And that of Job, If I wash myself with snow water, and make my hands never so clean, yet shalt thou plunge me in the ditch, and mine own clothes shall make me to be abhorred. Job. 9. 30. 31. This is the same in effect with that of Paul, *I know nothing by myself, yet am I not hereby justified: but he that judgeth me is the Lord: who when he comes to turn up the bottom of the bag, as the steward did Beniamins, he will manifest the hidden things of darknesse, finde out our thefts that we dreamt not of, open all fardles on that great fair-day, the day of judgement. As in the meanwhile, should Lord but break open that filthy sink of sin that is in the very best of us, we should not onely be lothsome to God Zach. 11. 8. and to good men Prov. 29. 27. but even to our own selves also, as Job was Chap. 42. 6. Judas was not able to abide his own stench Mat. 27. 4, 5. Yea and some holy men (as Mr. Lever, for one) when they have desired to see their utmost uncleanness, their corruptions in the most ugly colours, God hath heard them. But yet his hand therewith was so heavy upon them, that they went alwayes mourning to their graves: and thought it fitter to leave it to Gods wisdom to give them a sight of their sins, and to mingle the the potion of sorrow, then to be their own choosers. See that excellent text Job 15. 14, 15, 16. And then stand aloof with the Leper and say, *I am unclean, I am unclean: yet, Lord, if thou wilt thou canst make me clean.

and stood before the Angel] His filthy garments notwithstanding: Though we cannot say our hearts are pure, and our performances perfect: yer if we wallow not in sin, allow it not, if with the daughters of Zion, we look upon our former neatnesse as nastynesse, and finenesse as filthynesse, if we be in any measure purged from the love and liking of sin by the spirit of judgement, and by the spirit of burning Isai. 4. 4. Christ will neither abhor our presence, nor reject our services. Aaron was to bear the iniquity of the holy offerings Exod. 28. 38. Christ is this Aaron &c. And though there be an inequality of expressions in duty propitius in us: yet there is a constancy of intercession by Christ propter nos, for us.

Verse 4. And he answered and spake to those that stood before him] Et ait illis: Est autem hoc humanitus dictum saith lumen and this is spoken after the manner of men: for properly men are washed, justified and sanctified ified by the Merit and Spirit of Christ alone. 1 Cor. 6. 11. But the Lord Christ speaketh thus to the created Angels his Ministers; to shew that He who onely hath power to forgive sins, doth yet therein employ the holy ministry for an instrument. See 2 Cor. 9. 18. and Job 33. 33, 24.

take away the filthy garments] Those symbols of his sinfulness, (see the Note on verse 3. so his sins were pardoned in heaven. But because it is small comfort to a condemned person to have a pardon granted him, unless he know it, and be assured of it: therefore it followeth.

and unto him he said behold] By what thou hast seen in the Angels stripping of thee.

I have caused thine iniquities to passe from thee] Transuli peccatum as he once said to David, I have taken away thy sin, I have transferred it upon my self: speaking to my Father for thee, as once Paul did to Philemon for his son Onesimus, if he hath wronged thee, or oweth thee ought, put that on mine account, I will repay it. This is the greatest happiness that can befall a man in this world Psal. 32. 1, 2, and could not but be a singular comfort to these poor Jews, priest and people amidst their manifold afflictions. A man that hath got his pardon is not troubled though he lose his glove, or hankercheife, nor though it should prove a rainy day. Being justified by faith we glory in tribulation Rom. 5. 1. 3. Feri domino, eri: nam a peccatis absolutus sum, saith Luther: Strike Lord, strike, while thou wilt: my sins are pardoned. I thank thee, O Lord (saith Another in his great extremity) for all my pain: and I beseech thee, if thou think good, to adde to it an hundred-fold. But behold a further honour; as mercies seldom come single.

Philem. 18, 19.

and I will cloath thee with change of raiment] i. e. I will change thy rags into robes, thy stained clouts into clean cloathing. Thou shalt be arraigned with the righteousness of the saints Rev. 19. 8. that twofold righteousness, imputed and imparted: that of justification, and this other of sanctification: that as an undercoat, this as an upper: that clean and pure, this white and bright: both must be had from Christ, who is made unto us of God not onely wisdom, but righteousness, sanctification, and redemption 1 Cor. 1. 30. 2 Cor. 5. 19. Surely as our apparel is not bred of us, neither grows out of our bodies: so neither doth this change of raiment in the Text. But the blessed Lamb of God cloatheth us with his own fleece, which is long enough and large enough to cover all our defects and deformities, and to set us forth to the admiration of Angels. As he taketh upon him our sins, so he putteth upon us his righteousness. This is a blessed exchange indeed, a sure pledge of our peace with him, and with God by him. We read in our own Chronicles, that Edmund surnamed Ironside (in whom England was lost) and Knute the first Danish King, after many encounters and equal fights, at length imbraced a present agreement: which was made by parting England between them two, and confirmed by oath and Sacrament, putting on each others apparel and Arms, as a ceremony to expresse the Atonement of their minds, as if they had made transaction of their persons each to other; Knute became Edmund, and Edmund, Knute. Even such an exchange I may say of apparel is betwixt Christ and the pardoned sinner &c. Christ puts upon his Church his own comeliness, decks his spouse with his own jewels, as Isaac did Rebecca: cloath her with needle-work, and makes her more glorious within then Esther ever was in all her beauty and bravery: rejoiceth over her, as the bridegroom over his bride, yea is ravished in his love to her, with one of her eyes lifted up to him in prayer or meditation, with one chain of her neck, that chain of his own graces in her Cant. 4.

Danels hist.
lib. 1.

Verse 5. And I said, let them set a fair mitre upon his head] Who said this? The Prophet, grounding his speech on the last gracious words of the Angel, taketh the boldness to enterpose this his request for the bestowing of the priestly ornaments upon Joshua, and accordingly it is done. This the prophet knew would be a comfort to the whole people, and a confirmation to Joshuas faith, for the pardon of his sins: like as it was to Peter and the rest of the Apostles, that Christ after his resurrection restored them to their office, after they had all shamefully forsaken him.

Mat. 28. 19.
Joh. 20. 21.

let them set a fair mitre upon his head] Not a diadem, as the old Translation hath it (that's for a kings head) much lesse a triple crown with the word Mystery (Babylon lons motto Rev. 17. 5.) engraven in it, as Brocard and many other eye-witnesses affirm of the Popes crown but a Mitre or tiar. It hath its name from compassing about, because it invironed the High-priests head. It had a holy crown withit Exod. 29. 6. signifying the Deity and dignity of Christ. It had also upon the fore-front of it a plate of pure gold with this calature, Holiness to the Lord. Hence it was not lawful for the High-priest, (say the Jews) to put off his mitre to whomsoever he met, were he never so great a man: lest the name and glory of God (whose person he sustained) should seem to submit to any living: With this Mysterial mitre upon his head, with other priestly Ornaments and vestments it was, that Alexander the great met the High-priest Jaddus (Nephew and successour to Iehoshuah in the text) as he was marching against Jerusalem with hostile intent: and adoring that God whose name was seen written on the golden plate of his Mitre, he entered the city peaceably, offered sacrifice in the Temple, as the Priests directed him, and having seen there the prophesie of Daniel concerning himself, he granted the Jews many immunities and priviledges, and so departed. Parmenio, one of his favorites, asked him the reason of his friendly dealing with the Jews, who by denying him help and tribute had highly displeased him: He answered, that while he was yet in Macedonia, and but thinking of the conquest of Asia, a certain man appeared unto him in the habit of that High-priest encouraging him to set upon the work, and assuring him of good success therein.

and the Angel of the Lord] that is Christ, the Master of these Ceremonies, the effect of this Levitical office.

Verse 6. And the Angel of the Lord protested] Either with an oath or some deep asseveration, or both; as 1 Sam. 25. 26. As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth &c. The former is an oath, the latter an asseveration or obtestation only, conjoynd with that oath. Among the Heathens Ex animi seu sententia was instead of an oath: And rather then swear or say more, in a matter of no great moment, Cincius the Pythagorean would undergoe a mulct of three talents. Others render it Testified, or called witnesse upon his words, the Angels and the prophet there present, for the more assurance. Thus, though Christs word be sufficient (for he is Amen, the faithful and true witnesse) yet for his servants better settlement, he hath bound his promises to them with an oath, and taken heaven and earth to witnesse; which is dignatio stupenda, a wonderful Condescension.

Verse 7. If thou wilt walk in my wayes, and keep my charge] That is, if thou wilt walk in all the Commandements (moral) and ordinances (Levitical) blamelesse as holy, Zachary did, and so approve thy self righteous before God, by taking heed to thy self first, and then to all thy flock, which is thy charge, the Holy Ghosts depositum, and the purchase of Christs own blood. Godlinesse is the high-way to happinesse: the good old way that hath been ever beaten by all those saints, that now finde rest to their souls. The very first steps in this way are Repentance from dead works, and Faith toward God in Christ Jesus. By these, men return to God from whom they have departed: are brought neare to him, and set in the way of his steps Psal. 85. 13. We are his workmanship (saith the Apostle) created in Christ Iesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them. Eph. 2. 10. not without good advice, and due direction. Eph. 5. 15. Walk circumspectly, walk by rule and by line, Gal. 6. 16. Lift not up one foot till you finde sure footing for the other, as those Psal. 35. 6. Christians, (and especially Ministers) are funambulones, saith Tertullian: if they tread but one step awry, they are gone, and may draw many with them.

then thou shalt judge mine house, and shalt also keep my courts] i. e. Thou shalt rule in my Temple, and wait at mine altar. The Pope and his Prelates catch at the former, but let go the later: where Christ saith Feed my sheep, Bellarmine saith, the meaning is, Rule like a king; Baronius, Take to thy self the supreme government of the Church. But a preaching Bishop is a just wonder among them, a Vir portenti, as those priests in the next verse are called.

and I will give thee places to walk among these that stand by] i. e. Among the Seraphims (as the Chaldee here interprets it,) thou shalt walk arm in arm (as it were) with Angels Mat. 22. 30. Heb. 12. 22. He seems to allude to the walks and Galleries that were about the Temple. Heaven is the reward of walking in the way that

Dan. 8. 7, 20, 21. & 11. 13.

Ezech. lib.
11. Cap. ult.

R. v. 3. 14.

Luk. 1 6.
Act 20. 28.

that is called Holy: the end of mens faith, the salvation of their souls. Christ tells us that in his Fathers house are many mansions for us, Job 14. 2. (such as have farre better gardens; and Galleries then Mahomet fondly promifeth his sword-men in his fools-paradise) And it is a part of his joy, that we shall one day bee where he is, attended with innumerable Angels, John 17. 24. who will be glad of our company. How much better-cause have we then that Heathen to cry out, O praeclarum diem, cum ad illud animorum concilium cœtumque profiscar: & cum ex hac turba & colluvione discedam, &c. O what a brave and bright day will that be, when wee shall go to that Congregation-house of blessed spirits: and walk no longer in the way of this world, which is (like the land of Chabul) dirty and dangerous, like the vale of Siddim, slimy, and slippery, full of lime-pits, and pitfalls, snares and stumbling-blocks, laid by Satan to maime, or mischieve us! O happy they that walk humbly with God, who keepeth the feet of his Saints, and hath charged his Angels to bear them up in their hands, lest they dash their feet against a stone! This whiles they are here: and when they go hence, to convey them thorow the air (whereof the devil is the prince) as thorow the enemies countrey, into the heavenly habitations: and there to entertain and welcome them with sweetest varieties, felicities, eternities, fitter to be beleevd then possible to be expressed.

Cic. de senectute.

1 Sam 2.

Psal. 90. 12.

Verse 8. Hear now, O Ioshua the high Priest ] Hear a sermon of Christ, the Fountain of all this mercy bestowed upon thee, and yet further promised unto thee. Hear for thy self, hear for thy whole Society. Thou and thy fellows, thy fellow-friends, the rest of the priests, thy fellows in service, though inferiour in Office (for there was a subordination of priests, both before the Temple, Num 3. and 1 Chron. 23. 4, 5. and under the Temple, 2 Chron. 35. 8, 9.) Types also of Christ, and partakers of the benefit, 1 Tim. 6. 2.

for they are men wondered at ] Erant omnibus probrofi, saith Calvin, They departed from evil, and thereby made themselves a prey, Esay 59. 15. they were for signes and for wonders in Israel, Esay 8. 18. hissed and hooted at, Psal. 71. 7. as those that affected to be singular, and seraphicall, They think it strange, saith Saint Peter to his holy converts, that you run not with them to the same excesse of riot: speaking evill of you, as if you were no better then mad-men, Esay 59. 15. robb'd of your right minds, as the word signifieth. It is a French proverb, He that would have his neighbours dog hang'd, gives out that he is mad. The primitive persecutors used to put Christians into bears and dogs skins, or ugly creatures, and then bait them: so gracelesse persons put the saints of God into ugly conceits, look upon them as strange creatures, and then speak and act against them. In our wretched dayes (as the Turks count all fools to be saints, so) people account all saints to be fools; and the more zealous among them moniters and miscreants. As for Athanasius, and Marcellus who have impiously blasphemed against God, and have lived as wicked miscreants, and are thereupon cast out of the Church, and condemned, we cannot receive them to the honour of Episcopacy, said those fourscore Bishops in the mock-Synod of Sardis. And Bede testifieth of the ancient Britains immediatly before their destruction by the Saxons, that they were come to that height of wickednesse, as to cast reproach upon the professors of religion, as upon the worst of men. Doth not Saint Paul say as much, 1 Cor. 4. 9. We are made a theatre, or are set upon the stage for a laughing-stock unto the world, and to Angels, and to men, &c?

1 Pet. 4. 4.

Holy State.

For behold, I will bring forth my servant the BRANCH. ] The same that grew out of the root of Jesse, when that goodly family was sunk so low, as from David the King, to Joseph the Carpenter. See Esay 4. 2. and 11. 1. and 45. 8; and 53. 1. Ier. 33. 15. where the Chaldees for Branch rendreth it Messiah, as here also he doth: And some have observed that themagh, a Branch, is by transposition of letters, the same with Maschiach, Messias: Samich and isade, being neer akin; and of the same sound almost. A servant Christ is called by reason of his Mediatorship, taking upon him the form of a servant; yea, of a faulty servant that was to be beaten: yea, that being cruelly beaten was brought forth to the people with an Ecce homo, Behold the man. Behold, saith God here, I will bring forth Joh. 19. 5.

my servant the Branch: bring him forth, out of the bosom of his Father, out of the womb of his Mother, out of the types of the Law, &c.

Verse 9. For behold the stone, &c. ] Another title given to Christ, who is the foundation and chief corner-stone of his Church; and another Behold, prefixed as a starry Note, or as a hand pointing to a remarkable matter. All the Prophets pointed to Christ, who is therefore called, the Branch, the Stone, &c. that in these creatures (every where obvious) as in so many optick glasses, wee may see him, and be put in continuall remembrance of him; It being as necessary to remember Christ, as to breathe, saith a Father. See Psal. 118. 22. Esay 28. 16. 1 Pet. 2. 6, 7, 8.

ποινμω.
Ephes. 2. 10

that I have laid, and that I will engrave ] The Church is Gods building, and we are his workmanship, his artificiall manufacture, created in Christ Jesus unto good works: there being not so much of the glory of God in all his works of creation and providence, as in one gracious action that a Christian performeth. As for the glorious work of our redemption by Christ, it was a plot of Gods own contriving, a fabrick of Gods own erecting: it was the Lords own doing, and it is justly marvellous in our eyes.

Exod. 3. 7

Upon one stone shall be seven eyes ] That is, Christ shall draw all eyes and hearts to him: as the stones of the Temple did the Disciples eyes, Mat. 24. 2. and Mar. 13. 1. Master, say they to Christ, see what manner of stones, and what buildings are here. Thus some fence it. I should rather by these seven eyes understand the Spirit in his severall operations upon Christ, as Esay 11. 2. for he received not the Spirit by measure, as others; but had as much of it as a creature could possibly have. See the Note on Rev. 1. 4. where the holy Ghost, for his manifold good gifts and perfect givings, is called The seven Spirits; like as he is also stiled the seven golden pipes, Zech. 4. 2, 3. There are that by these seven eyes upon one stone, understand the Providence and Wisdome of Christ in the Government of his Church. Hee is indeed, as One saith ὁλόφαλλον, All-Eye, Sic spectat universos quasi singulos: sic singulos quasi solos; like a well-drawn picture hee eyeth all. Christ as he is a living, so he is also a looking stone: he looketh at the miseries and matters of his Church, and saith as once, I have seen, I have seen the afflictions of my people in Egypt, &c.

Lib. 4.

Heb. 11. 10

Col. 2. 9

John 1. 14

Ezek. 28. 7

Behold, I will engrave the graving thereof ] Ha cœlatura dona & stigmata Christi representant, saith A Lapide. These gravings represent the gifts and wounds of Christ, in allusion to the polished corners of the Temple. Cælum dictum est quod cælatum, id est signatum sideribus, saith Varro. Heaven hath its name in Latine from its being enameled and bespangled with glistering starres, as with curious workmanship, or costly furniture. Of the third heaven, the habitation of Saints and Angels, God is said to be by a specialty the builder and maker, or (as the Greek hath it) the cunning Artificer, and publike Architect. A great deal of skill and workmanship he laid out upon it: but nothing so much as upon the Humane nature of Christ, wherein, as in a Temple, dwelt all the fulnesse of the God-head bodily, that is, personally, by vertue of the Hypostaticall Union. For the Word was made flesh, and dwelt amongst us, and we beheld his glory (the glory as of the only begotten of the Father) full of grace and truth, full, full to the very brimme, full with a double fulnesse. Vasis & Fontis, of the Vessell, and of the Fountain. Hence, He was fairer (much fairer, double fairer (as the Originall importeth) then the sonnes of men, sc. with the beauty of wisdome and holinesse: grace was poured into his lips, God had anointed him with the oil of gladnesse above his fellows, Psal. 45. 2, 7. The Priests in the Law were consecrated first with oil, compounded and confectioned of diverse precious spices: so was Christ with gifts and graces of the Spirit, Act. 10. 38. and 4. 27, Esay 61. 1. not by measure, as we are, Ephes. 4. 7. but without measure, as much as a finite nature was capable of: particularly, he was furnished and polished with wisdome, as a Prophet, against our ignorance; with holinesse, as a Priest, against our guilt; and with power, as a King, against our corruptions: These and all other endowments, he had well heapt, pressed down, and running over, poured into his bosome. Next, as the Priests under the Law were also consecrated with blood, so was the Lord Christ with his own blood, blood, when his Father engraved him with graving; or, as the Hebrew hath it here, opened him with opening in his bloody passion, baptized him in his own blood, stewed him in his own broth, as it were; when in a cold winters-night hee sweat great clods of blood; which thorow clothes and all fell to the very ground. When after this they digged his hands and his feet, Psal. 22. 16. and made his heart melt in the midst of his bowels, verse 14. Wounded he was in the head, to cure our vile imaginations: In the hands, to expiate our evil actions: in the heart, and feet, for our base affections, and unworthy walkings. Tormented he was for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon him, tantum pulcherrima corporis calatura, and by his stripes or bloody wails, we were healed. Adam signifieth Man, red-earth, or Bloody. Christ was Man in his Incarnation, and bloody all over in his passion. Esay 53. 3. "therefore look on (saith Master Bradford Martyr) as the very pledge of Gods "dear love towards thee: see the very bowels of it as in an Anatomie. See, Gods "hands are nailed, they cannot strike thee; his feet also, he cannot runne from "thee: his arms are wide open to embrace thee: his head hangs down to kisse "thee: his very heart is open, so that therein look, nay even spie, and thou shalt see nothing therein but love, love, love to thee, &c.

Cernis ut in toto corpore sculptus amor.

and I will remove the iniquity of that land in one day] I will remove, i. e. remit and pardon, the iniquity, both guilt and punishment. Of that land, i. e. Of the Church, that pleasant land, more dear to God then all the earth besides. In one day, i. e. together and at once, suddenly and in an instant. See Esay 66. 8.

Verse 10. In that day, saith the Lord of hosts, shall ye call, &c.] i. e. Yee shall have peace, Regionis & Religionis. of countrey and of conscience. Christus auferet iniquitatem, afferet pacem. Christ, as he saveth his people from their sinnes; so from the hands of them that hate them. When this Prince of peace was born, in the dayes of Augustus, Universa gentium erat aut pax, aut pactio: there was a generall either peace, or truce among all Nations. And this man shall be the peace, when the Assyrian shall come into the land—thus shall he deliver us from the Assyrian, &c. Mic. 5. 5, 6. But behold a better thing: This Shiloh, this Tranquillator, Pacificator, by removing iniquity, createth peace of conscience: like as after Jonah was cast over-board, the sea became calme. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, Esay 9. 7. Where Christ ruleth there is peace, peace, Esay 26. 3. that is, perfect, sheer, pure peace, with God, our selves, and others: and the more Christs government increaseth in the soul, the more is peace renewed, continued, multiplied. Great peace have all they that love thy Law, and nothing shall offend them, saith David. And thou hast been a strength to the poor, a refuge from the storm, a shadow from the heat, &c. (Esay 25. 4.) better then that of the broad-leaved Vine; and fig-tree, very cooling and comfortable in those hot countreys. See this in righteous Noah: who being justified by faith, had peace with God, and therefore was medijs tranquillus in undis. How securely doth he ride out that uproar of heaven, earth, and waters! He hears the pouring down of rain above his head, the shrieking of men, the bel- lowing of beasts on both sides him, the raging and threats of the waves under him. He saw the miserable shifts of distressed unbelievers, & in the mean time sits quietly in his dry cabbin, not feeling, nor fearing evil. How happy a thing is pardon of sinne, and peace with God! what a quiet safety, what an heavenly calme doth it lodge in the soul! what earnest pantings, and strong affections to the salvation of others. Ye shall call, &c.

CHAP. IIIL

Verse 1. A And the Angell that talked with me] See the Note on chap. 1. ver. 9. came again] After some absence, as it may seem: and a new vision or revelation received from God to be imparted to the Prophet.

and waked me as a man that is wakened &c.] It fared with the Prophet (notwithstanding the former visions) as with a drowsie person: who though awakened and set to work, is ready to fall asleep at it. So Peter, James, and Iohn, (those pillars as they are called Gal. 2.) fell asleep at their very prayers Mat. 26. 40. such dull metal are the best men made of: and so weak is the flesh, be the spirit never so willing; so ill-disposed is our most noble and immortal part the soule, to supernall and supernaturall employments. Meditation and prayer are the creatures of the holy Ghost Iude 20. and that we may not run out into extravagancies, or put up yawning petitions, we must watch and pray Mat. 26. 41. yea watch while we are praying, meditating &c. against corruption within (the sin that doth so easily beset us Heb. 12. 1.) and temptations without, whether from the world (the things whereof are so neer us and so naturall to us) or from the devill who is ever busiest with the best (as flies are with sweet-meats) and with the best part of their best performances, as in the end of their prayers, when the heart should close up it self with most comfort.

Verse 2. What seest thou?] The sight was already in sight; but the Prophet had not seen it, or noted it, if the Angel had not stir'd him up to it. If the Lord give us not sight as well as light, if he inlighten not both Organ and Object too; if he shine not into our hearts to give us the light of the knowledge of himself in the face of Jesus Christ; seeing we shall see, but not perceive; with Hagar, we shall not be able to discern the fountain that is just before us.

I have looked] Carefully viewed the sight. It is expected ut acti agamus: that having a talent of grace we trade with it, that our will, which at first conversion was meerly passive should be afterward active: that we which once were darkness, but now are light in the Lord, should walk as children of light Eph. 5. 9.

behold a candlestick] that is the Church, as Rev. 1. 20.

all of Gold] pure gold as the Candlestick in the Tabernacle Exod. 25. 31. which is therefore called the pure Candlestick Lev. 24. 4. Exod. 31. 8. noting out the Churches purity in doctrine and manners. Chrysostome that golden Preacher testifieth of some Saints in his time, that they were puriores celo, purer then the visible heaven. Her Nazarites were purer then the driven snow, whiter then milk, ruddier then rubies, their polishing was of Saphire &c. Lam. 4. 7.

with a bowle] Heb. gullah an oyle-glass, or oyle-cruze; a hollow round vessel quod pariter Latine recte gulam appellas saith a Lapide; which you may not unfirly call a gullet or throat: for as the throat receiveth the food and transmitteth it to the stomach: so did this vessel receive the oyle to be transmitted to the lamps. It figured Christ in whom it pleased the Father that all fulnesse should dwell Col. 1. 19. for the Churches use Ioh. 1. 16. and 3. 34.

and his seven lamps thereon] signifying the manifold graces and diversity of gifts in the Church by the same spirit of Christ 1 Cor. 12. 4, 6. For of his fulnesse we all receive grace for grace Ioh. 1. 16.

and seven pipes to the seven lamps] Heb. seven and seven, that is, seven I say seven, by the figure Anadiplosis saith Sanctimus. This is a better glosse then that of those that say the Hebrew text is corrupted; as having two sevens for one. These seven pipes you must imagine to be in the bottome of the bowle, to distribute the oyle to each lamp; the grace of Jesus Christ to each Christian, that he may shine as a lamp or luminary in the world, holding forth the word of life, as the hand dorch the torch, or the watch-tower the light, and so the haven to weather-beaten Mariners.

Verse 3. And two Olive-trees by it] The two chief branches whereof through the two golden pipes empty the golden oyle out of themselves ver. 12. that is, the spirit spirit of grace infuseth all precious graces (much more precious then gold that perisheth, though it be tried in the fire) into the Church. Hence grace is called the fruits of the Spirit; Gal. 5. 22. yea Spirit. 25. Danaus his Note here is, though from these two olive trees there was continuall oyle powred into that burning candlestick that it should never dry up or be put out; yet are not these olives said to be pressed by any man, which notwithstanding amongst us, must needs after an ordinary manner be done, that the oyle may flow or run from them. Neither is this oyle said to flow, nor with toyle and labour to be carried from one part or place into another, that there may be alwayes oyle for the candlestick: but there stand these olive trees growing, and dropping down oyle into the Bowle, and this of themselves, without the help or service of any men or oyle-mills: to shew, saith Another Interpreter, that Gods grace only is sufficient for his Church, to repaire and maintaine the same without all other meanes, against all opposition of man: and this is the Scope of this vision.

Mr. Fembles.

Verse 4. What are these, my Lord] Or, Sir; which English word comes from Cyrus, the Persian word for a Lord or great Prince, as H. Stephanus will have it: Others fetch it from κύριος authority, or κύριος a Lord, and so the word Adoni in the text is usually rendred. Others think our word Sir comes from the French Sieur, whence Monsieur my Lord: as the word Lord from the old Saxon Laford which commeth of Laef to sustaine: like as the Hebrew Adonai from Eden a foundation or pillar, that sustaineth the whole building. It is written sometimes with Camets or long A in the end, and then it is proper to God (as having the vowels of Jehovah) and is given to him 134. times in the old Testament. Sometimes it is written with Parbach or short A, and then it is applied to the creatures, as here to the Angell: Hinc Hispanorum Don, saith Druſius.

what are these] The Prophet had been before warned by the Angell to behold and heed the vision. This he had done, and yet was to seek of the sense and meaning of it: as a man may look on a trade and never see the mystery of it: or look on the hand-diall, and never understand the curious clock-work within. None can understand the mystrie of Christ, but such as have the mind of Christ 1 Cor. 2. 7, 11, 16. such as are spiritually rationall, and rationally spirituall: such as are taught of God, and conducted by his spirit into all truth Iob. 16. 13. No understanding of Gods riddles, but by plowing with his heifer, as I may say. This the Prophet here knew: and therefore applies himself to the Angell for information: so did Daniel chap. 8. 15. see chap. 9. 22.

Verse 5. Knowest thou not what these be?] Thus preparation is made to the ensuing interpretation of the vision by this dialogue; that we might give better heed to that manifold wisdom of God made known to and by the Church: wherein the very Angels themselves are great students, and daily proficients. Docent proficiendo, & docendo proficiunt. The best of men know not so much as they might have known. Are ye also ignorant of these things? (saith our Saviour to the twelve) are ye also without understanding? Mat. 15. 16. what? know you not? &c. seven several times in one chapter 1 Cor. 6. And how doth the Apostle shent and shame his Hebrewes for their dullness and doltishnesse Heb. 5. 12. It was expected, it seems, by the Angel here, that Zachary a Master in Israel should have known more then he did, of the meaning of this candlestick, by Moses his ancient candlestick. For the godly of those times did not beleeve those rites and ceremonies of the law did of themselves please God, or that they were dumb shewes and insignificant Heb. 9. But they acknowledged them to be figures: the truth and signification whereof was to be sought in Christ. The ceremoniall law was indeed their Gospell.

Eph. 3. 16.

And I said, Now my Lord] An ingenious confession of his ignorance: and this was far better then to plead for it (as many now adayes) or to pretend more skill then he had: that he might at least seem to be some body. Ignorantiam meam non ignoro, saith Origen. Though I know little else, yet this I know, that it is but little that I know. And not only in innumerable other things am ignorant, saith Austin; but even in the very Scriptures also, my chief study, multo plura nescio quam scio, I am to seek of many more things then I understand. Surely, saith Agur, I am more brutish then any man, and yet he had commerce with Ishiel and and Ucal ver. 1. and have not the understanding of a man, sc. of a man in Christ. I neither learned wisdom (though taught it) nor have the knowledge of the holy, that is of the Angels, as Dan. 4. 13, 17. and 8. 13. Zachary here saw himself far short of the holy angel that talked with him; and therefore desireth to be taught by him.

Ep. 119. c. 21.

Verse 6. This is the Word of the Lord] that is, this Hieroglyphique contains the mind of God in it. This is the interpretation of the vision, neither so concise, nor obscure, ut Oedipo sit opus (as a Lapide after Ribera here saith) that it can hardly be understood. For who seeth not by the opposition here made between humane help and divine, that in building and beautifying his Church with safety and salvation God will make bare his own holy arme; and do the work alone; or by the weakest meanes against the strongest resistance? Thus then have we (saith an Interpreter) in three words the scope of this whole vision. That as the making and maintaining of this Candlestick and his Lamps, was without the art and cunning of man by means supernaturall; so Gods spirit without and above all humane helps, should suffice for the reedification and preservation of the materiall Temple, and true Church.

Mr. Pemble.

unto Zorobabel] The Tirshata or chief magistrate Ezra 2. 63. called also (as it is thought Shebazzar, Ezra 1. 8. He was a type of Christ: to whom also God the Father here speaketh concerning his church to be gathered by the preaching of the Gospell.

not by might, nor by strength,] as Mahomet in the East, and the Spaniard in the Indies: but by the power of his spirit that great Wonder-worker, whereby the people fall under him Psal. 45. 5. and strong holds are cast down before him 2 Cor. 10. 4. as once the walles of Iericho. Thus he unwalled all the children of Seth Num. 24. 17. viz. by the foolishnesse of preaching: and thus he still rideth upon his white horses, his Ministers, conquering and to conquer. Rev. 6. 2. Britannorum inaccessa Romanis loca Christo subdita sunt. The Romans could never subdue this Nation: but Christ could. The Germans and other Western people embraced the Christian religion in the yeer 772. when the Mahomitan impiety wasted the East. Gods spirit is irresistible, compared to the wind Iob, to a mighty rushing wind Aët. 2. that beares all before it, therefore called a spirit of power 2 Tim. 1. 7. of counsel and of might Esa. 11. 2. and therefore here fitly opposed to an army, and to the arme of flesh, to all humane power and policy whatsoever, though the gates of hell come to their help:

Tertull.

not by might nor by strength &c.] These two words some take to be Synonymas; Mercer saith that the former signifieth stout and noble acts: the later importeth power and faculty of doing those acts; and is the same that δυναμις in Greek. By the Spirit of God we are to understand his power, providence, and Grace 2 Thes. 2. 8. Is. 11. 4. &c. whereby he helpeth his people with a little help Dan. 11. 34. that through weaker meanes, they may see his greater strength. Thus he helped David against Goliath, and the Israelites against the Philistines often: but especially then, when unarmed they marched with their Qings, and plow-staves, and hooks, and forks, and other instruments of their husbandry, against a mighty and well-furnished enemy, and returned laden both with arms and victory. Sometimes againe, God helpeth his without any visible help, as when he destroyed Senacherib's army by an Angel, swept away Sisera's army by the river Kison, and the Saracens and Persians by the river Euphrates, in the dayes of Theodosius, (smitten with a Panick terror, they ran headlong into the river, and were drowned, to the number of an hundred thousand) for whom also the winds fought in that famous battle against Maximus; as both winds and waves did for us against the invincible navy. The Church alone deserveth to be stiled invincible, that hath the Lord of Hosts to be her Champion, who hath armies above, and armies beneath (as the Rabbines well observe) 2. generall troopes, as his horse and foot, ready prest; Legions of Angels, Millions of other creatures. The curtains of the Tabernacle embroidered with Cherubims signified the service and protection of the Church by the Angels. Let the Pope be the Sun, and the Emperour the Moon (as the Canonists stile them) yet the Sun must not smite the Church by day, nor the Moon by night: but the stars in their courses must fight against

Anno. 394.
Alfred. Chro-
nol. p. 300.

Aug. de Civ.
Dei lib. 5.
cap. 26.

Magnus obelio & matthe
cheloth.

against Sifera, and both the Popes bull, and the Emperours thunderbolt tend exceedingly to the furtherance of the Reformation begun by Luther. Whereupon Scultetus makes this observation, Ecce tibi adimpletum Psalmicum illud Psal. 54. 3. Behold that of the Psalmist made good. He shall send from heaven and save us from the reproach of him that would swallow us up. Selah. God shall send forth his mercy and his truth. He shall: but when will he, may some say? First when his people in distress cry aloud, I came for thy word Dan. 10. 12. He will come, but he will have his peoples prayers lead him. Secondly, when his enemies blaspheme and insult, saying, Where is now their God? when Rabshakeh (a Renegado Jew, as the Rabbins report him) shall jeer at Hezekiah's prayers as an empty business, an airy Nothing, as words of the lips only; where as counsel and strength are for the war (thus some read that text Esay 36. 5.) Thirdly when the Church is at lowest, and all seems lost and desperate: when the enemy is above fear, and the Church below hope; when she is talking of her grave, like Israel at the red sea: then is Gods season to set in; it is his glory to help at a dead lift, to begin where we have given over, to relieve those that are forsaken of their hopes, to come when we can scarce finde faith upon the earth: God sees when the mercy will be in season. When his people are low enough, and the enemy high enough, then usually appears the Churches morning-star: then Christ came leaping and skipping over the mountains of Bether, all impediments that might seem to hinder, (as sins of his people, oppositions of his enemies) and make the Churches mountain to be exalted above all mountains, molehills in comparison of her.

Verse 7. Who art thou O great mountain? So the enemies seemed to themselves, set aloft, and overtopping the low and poor estate of those feeble Jews, as they called them Neh. 4. 2. But the Virgin daughter of Zion despiseth them here, and laugheth them to scorn: she shaketh her head at them, and saith, whom hast thou reproached and blasphemed &c? It is good for thee to meddle with thy match, and not to exalt thy self against the holy One of Israel, who is more glorious and excellent then those mountains of prey. The stout-hearted are spoiled, they have slept their sleep (such as Sifera did) and none of the men of might have found their hands when once they fell into the punishing hands of the living God. He will soon level these lofty mountains.

Esay 37. 22.

Psal. 64. 5.
Jer. 51. 25.
Babylon is called a destroying mountain, set upon a rock:
yet God will level, and lay
it low enough.
26.
Melch. Ad. 1

they shall become a plain. A champaigne that before seemed impossible, inaccessible. Christs enemies shall be in that place that is fittest for them, the lowest; that is, the footstool of Christ: when the Church, as it is the highest in Gods love and favour, so shall it be highest in it self. Gaudeo quod Christus Dominus est: alioqui totus desperassem, writes Miconius to Calvin upon the view of the Churchs enemies. Glad I am that Christ reigns: for else I had been utterly hopelesse. O pray, pray saith another Saint: for the Pope of Rome, and his Conventicle of Trent are hatching strange businesses. The comfort is that he that sitteth in heaven seeth them: the Lord above hath them in derision. For in the thing wherein they deal proudly, God is above them: and his will shall stand when they shall dung the earth with their dead carcasses. Sciat Celsitudo Tua &c. Let your Highnesse know (saith Luther in a letter to the Duke of Saxony) that things are otherwise ordered in heaven then they are at Ausborough: where the Emperour Charles the fit had made a decree to root out the Reformed religion out of Germany. But soon after, the Turk broke into Hungary, and the borders of Germany: so that Cesar had somewhat else to do then to persecute the Protestants. So the primitive persecutours fondly inscribed upon the publicke pillars Deleto Christianorum nomine &c. that they had blotted out the name of Christ and his religion from under heaven: but this they could never effect with all the power of the whole Empire. They found and complained that the Church might be shaken and not shivered: concursi non excussit as 2 Cor. 4. 8, 9. Facundi sunt Martyrum cineres, the very ashes of the Martyrs were fruitful, and their blood prolificall. The Church conquers even when she is conquered: as Christ overcame as well by patience as by power. The people of Rome (saith One) sæpe pralio victus, nunquam bello, they lost many battels, but were never overcome in a set war: at the long run they crushed all their enemies. Bellarmino somewhat boasteth the like of the Church of Rome, that she was never worsted in any set battel by the Protestants. But if he had lived till these

Luther

edit. 1704
edit. 1705
edit. 1706

these late yeers, he would have known it otherwise: And indeed he could not be ignorant of that famous Bellum Hussiticum as they called it in Germany, and the many fields fought and won by the Huguenots in France &c. And if at any time the Church lose the day, Victoria tamen vincet. Christ hath his stratagems as Ioshuah had at Ai: he seems sometimes to retire, that he may return with greater advantage. Certain it is, he will thresh the mountains and beat them small before his Zorobabels: he will make the hills as chaff, Esay 41.15.

and he shall bring forth the head-stone thereof with shoutings saying, Grace, Grace, unto it] i. e. He shall hold out to lay the very last stone of this new building with joy, and with general acclamations and wel-wishes. There was a promise for it long before Esay 44.28. This Zorobabel was not ignorant of: as neither of that which followeth Chap. 45.1,2. that, for the effecting of that promise, God would go before him to make the crooked place straight, to break in pieces the gates of brass and cut in sunder the bars of iron, i. e. to take away all rubs and impediments. There it the like promise in the New Testament, and it may be a singular encouragement to those that go on to build the tower of Godliness, to prepare a tabernacle in their hearts for the holy One of Israel, that he may dwell in them and walk in them &c. the gates of hell shall never prevail against them, with Christ, as another Sampson, hath flung them off their hinges, hath destroyed the Devils works, and laid the top-stone of his spiritual temple with shouting saying, Grace, grace, unto it. The meaning is, faith an interpreter, that the Angels, the faithful, and all creatures, rejoicing at Christs kingdom established in the world, shall desire God the Father to heape all manner of blessing and happiness upon it: See Psal. 118.26. Or, they shall acknowledge and preach, that the Father hath laid up in him all the treasures of his grace and gifts of his spirit. It is the observation of another Reverend man, preaching upon this text, that when we preach of humane wisdom and foresight, we should fall down and cry (as we are here taught) Grace, Grace, unto it, we are not to cry up Zerubbabel, Zerubbabel, any man or means whatever: but to exalt the free grace of God the work of which alone it is and hath been. Zerubbabel should bring forth the head-stone (as master-builders used to do the first and last stone) and the people should magnifie Gods meer free-grace: and acknowledge that he was marvellous in their eyes. Thus that learned Preacher: who also by the lighted Candlestick here, understandeth full perfecting, and finishing of the Temple, and restoring the worship of God within it unto its full perfection of beauty and brightness. By the two Olive-trees Zerubbabel with the elders and Ioshua High-priest with the other priests that sat before him, as Chap. 3.8. write Exra 6.14. confer Psal. 52.8. These are said to empty golden oyl, that is, their estates and pains for the finishing of costly work: and likewise because it was done in sincerity of heart, therefore it is called golden or pure oyl. Further, these eminent ranks and sorts of persons that should give their assistance to this work are called sons of oyl verse 15. As being fruitful and affording plenty of it: Thus Esay 5.1. a fruitful hill and fertile soyl, is in the Original (as here) called a son of oyl &c.

Verse 8. Moreover the word of the Lord came unto me, [saying,] This is a confirmation of the former comfort, and a seal of the former promise; all which was but little enough by reason of the peoples distrust and infidelity. Against which the prophet here produceth his warrant, Gods own word: q. d. This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation. This is a pillar and ground of truth. See the Note 1 Tim. 3.15.

Verse 9. The hands of Zerubbabel have laid the foundation of this house: his hands &c. Here the scope of this stately vision is plainly held forth, and without a parable. What the scripture speaketh darkly in one place, it speaks plainly in another. The Rabbins have a saying, that there is a mountain of sense hanging upon every Apex of the word of God. They have also another saying, Nulla est ob- scuritas in lege, que non habet solutionem in latere, i. e. There is not any doubt in the law, but may be resolved out of the law. Zorobabel is both founder and finisher of the Temple (those that will have it not, to be finished till about the sixth year of Darius Nothus, make him to be very long-lived: and tell us that God granteth to one a longer life then ordinary, because he hath something to be done by them.)

Mr. Tho.
Goodwin Fast-
serm. before Parl. Apr. 27.
1642:

Pemle of the Persian Monarchy.

The distrustful Jews began to despise those small beginnings of a building : and to despair of ever seeing it perfected, by reason of those mountains of opposition they met with, and thought they should never dig down or get over. The work shall be done faith God, and Zerubbabel, how unlikely soever, shall do it. Beleeve the Prophets, and ye shall prosper. It shall never be said of Zerubbabel, as of the foolish builder This man began, but could not finish: Or as an out-lander seeing Christ-church in Oxford, said of it, Egregium opus : Cardinalis iste instituit Collegium, & absolvit culinam. A pretty piece of Work ! A colledge begun, and a kitchen finished. It was God that set Zerubbabel awork : and He doth not use do things to halves. He is Alpha and Omega, the Beginner and Ender, the Author and Finisher. Heb. 12. 1. I am confident of this very thing, faith Paul, that he that hath begun a good work in you wil perform it Psal. 1. 6. And faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it 1 Thes. 5. 24. And, the Lord will perfect that which concerneth me (faith David) for-sake not the work of thine own hands, Psal. 138. 8. Look upon the wounds of thine hands, and despite not the works of thine hands, said Queen Elizabeth. Thus if men pray in the holy Ghost, keep themselves in the love of God, and look for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life, they shall be builded up in their most holy faith, whereby Christ shall dwell in their hearts, as in his holy Temple.

Luke 14. 30.
Rod. Gualthe.

Jude. 20 21,

and thou shalt know] Thou Zachary shalt know, that the Lord of Hosts hath sent me] His Angel as his Internuncio. See Luk. 1. 19. Or thou Zerubbabel shalt know, that I Zachary come not to thee of mine own minde, but on Gods message, and am therefore to be beleaved. When Ehud told Eglon he had a message from God, though he were an heathen and a fat unweildy man, he stood up to receive it Judg. 3. 20. though that message was a messenger of death, a ponyard in his bowels. Should not we harken to the Father of spirits and live ? should the Consolations of God be small with us ? Job. 15. 11. Should we instead of wrestling with God by prayer, (so putting his promises in suit) wrangle with him, by cavelling objections ? Ipsē dixit among Pythagoras his schollers went currant : if their master said it, 'twas enough : And shall we that are taught of God not give the like credit to our Master in heaven ? Shall we not yeeld him the obedience of faith ?

Heb. 12.

Verse 10. For who hath despised the day of small things ? ] Nay, who had not ? The generality of the Jews were clearly guilty Ezra 8. 13. and are therefore here justly reproved. As Naaman once looked on Gods Jordan with Syrian eyes, and so slighted the motion of washing therein : so these distrustful Jews despised the small beginnings of this great work; and the little likelihood of ever bringing it to any good upshot. Is it not in your eyes as nothing faith Haggee, Chap. 2. 3 ? They seemed onely to grieve at it : but God construeth it for a downright contempt : for he judgeth otherwise of our carnall affections then we our selves, and will have us to know that his thoughts are not our thoughts, neither are his wayes our wayes Esay 55. 8. Out of meanest principles he many times raiseth matters of greatest moment : that his own immediate hand may the more appear. The kingdom of heaven was at first but as a grain of mustard-seed Mat. 13. 32. The stone cut out of the mountain without hands, as if it had dropt out, or been blown down thence, became a mountain and filled the whole earth Dan. 1. 34. 35. The cloud that rose as little as a mans hand, soon after mistled the whole heaven. God put little thoughts into the heart of Ahasuerus concerning Mordecai, but for great purposes. Who would ever have thought, that out of Abraham now as good as dead should have come the Messiah ? or that out of the dry root of Jesse should come the Branch spoken of in the former Chapter ? who would have imagined that going forth onely with his bow Rov. 6. 2. and arrows Psal. 45. 5. the foolishness of preaching, he could conquer in three hundred yeers the whole Roman Empire ? that by Hus a goose, and Luther a swan, such strange things should have been done in Bohemia and Germany ? that by a scruple cast into Hen. the 8. his minde about his marriage with Katharine of Spain by the French Embassador (who came to consult with him of a marriage between the Lady Mary and the Duke of Orleans second son to the King of France) whether Mary were legitimate &c? the Pope should be cast off here, and reformation wrought by so weak and simple means, yea by casual and crosse means ? this faith one, is that miracle which we are in these times to look for.

Spec. Erop.

these late yeers, he would have known it otherwise: And indeed he could not be ignorant of that famous Bellum Hussiticum as they called it in Germany, and the many fields fought and won by the Huguenots in France &c. And if at any time the Church lose the day, Victa tamen vincet. Christ hath his stratagems as Joshuah had at Ai: he seems sometimes to retire, that he may return with greater advantage. Certain it is, he will thresh the mountains and beat them small before his Zorobabels: he will make the hills as chaff, Ezay 41.15.

and he shall bring forth the head-stone thereof with shoutings saying, Grace, Grace, unto it i. e. He shall hold out to lay the very last stone of this new building with joy, and with general acclamations and wel-wishes. There was a promise for it long before Ezay 44.28. This Zorobabel was not ignorant of: as neither of that which followeth Chap. 45.1,2. that, for the effecting of that promise, God would go before him to make the crooked place straight, to break in pieces the gates of brass and cut in sunder the bars of iron, i. e. to take away all rubs and impediments. There it the like promise in the New Testament, and it may be a singular encouragement to those that go on to build the tower of Godliness, to prepare a tabernacle in their hearts for the holy One of Israel, that he may dwell in them and walk in them &c. the gates of hell shall never prevail against them, sixth Christ, as another Sampson, hath sung them off their hinges, hath destroyed the Devils works, and laid the top-stone of his spiritual temple with shouting saying, Grace, grace, unto it. The meaning is, saith an interpreter, that the Angels, the faithful, and all creatures, rejoycing at Christs kingdom established in the world, shall desire God the Father to heape all manner of blessing and happinesse upon it: See Psal. 118.26. Or, they shall acknowledge and preach, that the Father hath laid up in him all the treasures of his grace and gifts of his spirit. It is the observation of another Reverend man, preaching upon this text, that when we preach of humane wisdom and foresight, we should fall down and cry (as we are here taught) Grace, Grace, unto it, we are not to cry up Zorubabel, Zorubabel, any man or means whatever: but to exalt the free grace of God the work of which alone it is and hath been. Zorubabel should bring forth the head-stone (as master-builders used to do the first and last stone) and the people should magnifie Gods meer free-grace: and acknowledge that he was marvellous in their eyes. Thus that learned Preacher: who also by the lighted Candlestick here, understandeth full perfecting, and finishing of the Temple, and restoring the worship of God within it unto its full perfection of beauty and brightness. By the two Olive-trees, Zorubabel with the elders and Johua High-priest with the other priests that sat before him, as Chap. 3.8. write Ezra 6.14. confer Psal. 52.8. These are said to empty golden oyl, that is, their estates and pains for the finishing of costly work: and likewise because it was done in sincerity of heart, therefore it is called golden or pure oyl. Further, these eminent ranks and sorts of persons that should give their assistance to this work are called sons of oyl verse 15. As being fruitful and affording plenty of it. Thus Ezay 5.1. a fruitful hill and fertile soyl, is in the Original (as here) called a son of oyl &c.

Verse 8. Moreover the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, ] This is a confirmation of the former comfort, and a seal of the former promise; all which was but little enough by reason of the peoples distrust and infidelity. Against which the prophet here produceth his warrant, Gods own word: q. d. This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation. This is a pillar and ground of truth. See the Note qd 1 Tim. 3.15.

Verse 9. The hands of Zorubabel have laid the foundation of this house: his hands &c. Here the scope of this stately vision is plainly held forth, and without a parable. What the scripture speaketh darkly in one place, it speaks plainly in another. The Rabbins have a saying, that there is a mountain of sense hanging upon every Apex of the word of God. They have also another saying, Nulla est oblectio in lege, quia non habet solutionem in latere, i. e. There is not any doubt in the law, but may be resolved out of the law. Zorubabel is both founder and finisher of the Temple (those that will have it not to be finished till about the sixth yeer of Darius Nothus, make him to be very long-lived: and tell us that God granteth to one a longer life then ordinary, because he hath something to be done by them.)

Diodat.

Mr. Tho.
Goodwin Fast.
serm. before Parl. Apr. 27.
1642:

Pemle of the Persian Mo-
narchy.

The distrustful Jews began to despise those small beginnings of a building : and to despair of ever seeing it perfected, by reason of those mountains of opposition they met with, and thought they should never dig down or get over. The work shall be done saith God, and Zerubbabel, how unlikely soever, shall do it. Beleeve the Prophets, and ye shall prosper. It shall never be said of Zorobabel, as of the foolish builder This man began, but could not finish: Or as an out-lander seeing Christ-church in Oxford, said of it, Egregium opus : Cardinalis iste instituit Collegium, & abstulit culinam. A pretty piece of Work ! A colledge begun, and a kitchen finished. It was God that set Zerubbabel awork : and He doth not use to do things to halves. He is Alpha and Omega, the Beginner and Ender, the Author and Finisher. Heb. 12. 1. I am confident of this very thing, saith Paul, that he that hath begun a good work in you wil perform it Psal. 1. 6. And faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it 1 Thes. 5. 24. And, the Lord will perfect that which concerneth me (saith David) forsake not the work of thine own hands, Psal. 138. 8. Look upon the wounds of thine hands, and despite not the works of thine hands, said Queen Elizabeth. Thus if men pray in the holy Ghost, keep themselves in the love of God, and look for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life, they shall be builded up in their most holy faith, whereby Christ shall dwell in their hearts, as in his holy Temple.

Luke 14. 30.
Rod. Gualthe.

Jude. 20 25,

and thou shalt know] Thou Zachary shalt know, that the Lord of Hosts hath sent me] His Angel as his Intrenuncio. See Luk. 1. 19. Or thou Zerubbabel shalt know, that I Zachary come not to thee of mine own minde, but on Gods message, and am therefore to be beleaved. When Ehud told Eglon he had a message from God, though he were an heathen and a fat unweildy man, he stood up to receive it Judg. 3. 20. though that message was a messenger of death, a ponyard in his bowels. Should not we hearken to the Father of spirits and live ? should the Consolations of God be small with us ? Job. 15. 11. Should we instead of wrestling with God by prayer, (so putting his promises in suit) wrangle with him, by cavelling objections ? Ipsē dixit among Pythagoras his schollers went currant : if their master said it, 'twas enough : And shall we that are taught of God not give the like credit to our Master in heaven ? shall we not yeeld him the obedience of faith ?

Heb. 12.

Verse 10. For who hath despised the day of small things ? Nay, who had not ? The generality of the Jews were clearly guilty Ezra 8. 13. and are therefore here justly reproved. As Naaman once looked on Gods Jordan with Syrian eyes, and so slighted the motion of washing therein : so these distrustful Jews despised the small beginnings of this great work ; and the little likelihood of ever bringing it to any good upshot. Is it not in your eyes as nothing saith Haggee, Chap. 2. 3 ? They seemed onely to grieve at it : but God construeth it for a downright contempt : for he judgeth otherwise of our carnall affections then we our selves, and will have us to know that his thoughts are not our thoughts, neither are his wayes our wayes Ejāy 55. 8. Out of meanest principles he many times raiseth matters of greatest moment : that his own immediate hand may the more appear. The kingdom of heaven was at first but as a grain of mustard-seed Mat. 13. 32. The stone cut out of the mountain without hands, as if it had dropt out, or been blown down thence, became a mountain and filled the whole earth Dan. 1. 34, 35. The cloud that rose as little as a mans hand, soon after mustered the whole heaven. God put little thoughts into the heart of Abashueroh concerning Mordecai, but for great purposes. Who would ever have thought, that out of Abraham now as good as dead should have come the Messiah ? or that out of the dry root of Jesse should come the Branch spoken of in the former Chapter ? who would have imagined that going forth onely with his bow Rcv. 6. 2. and arrows Psal. 45. 5. the foolishnesse of preaching, he could conquer in three hundred yeers the whole Roman Empire ? that by Hus a goose, and Luther a swan, such strange things should have been done in Bohemia and Germany ? that by a scruple cast into Hen. the 8. his minde about his marriage with Katharine of Spain by the French Ambassador, (who came to consult with him of a marriage between the Lady Mary and the Duke of Orleans second son to the King of France) whether Mary were legitimate &c. the Pope should be cast off here, and reformation wrought by so weak and simple means, yea by casual and crosse means ? this saith one, is that miracle which we are in these times to look for.

Spec. Erop.

For they shall rejoyce] Or, But they shall rejoyce, or, Nay, they shall rejoyce, nay they shall see, viz. that which they despaired of ever seeing, and were therefore much cast down about the perfection of the work, and its glorious accomplishment. And this shall be surely effected by Gods powerful and watchful providence, called here those seven eyes of the Lord which run to and fro thorow the whole earth] called elsewhere the seven spirits of God Rev. 5.6. and 1.4. and Gods spirit here Verse 6. so guiding and managing all affaires and occurrences, that all the rayes and beames of providence issuing from those eyes might be seen to meet in the accomplishment of this, as their ultimate ayme, and scope. See the Note on Chap. 3.9.

Verse 11. Then answered I, and said unto him] No mean measure of understanding would content the prophet: but he is still enquiring and inroaching upon the Angel, so doth Moses upon God, Exod. 33. He had not been long out of the Mount, but he is asking God to shew him his glory: which when he had seen, yet he resteth not satisfied, but must have more. and yet more; So David, though deep-learned, is ever and anon at it, teach me thy statutes. Spiritual learning is infused by degrees: our hearts are as narrow-mouth'd vessels, and God delights oft to hear of us. Whither I go thou canst not come now: but thou shalt afterwards. Then shall ye know, if ye follow on to know: provided that ye beg and dig Prov. 2.3, 4, 5, and beat, as the fowl doth the shell to get out the fish: and be discontentedly contented, till ye come to see as ye are seen, a spe ad speciem &c. What are these two olives &c. And.

Joh. 13.
Hos. 6.3.

Verse 12. What be these two olive-branches, &c.] See the Notes on verse 3. and verse 7.

Verse 13. Knowest thou not what, &c.] See the Note on ver. 5.

Verse 14. These are the two anointed ones] Heb. sonnes of oyl. See the Note on verse 7.

that stand by the Lord of the whole earth] because by the candlestick and utensils of the Temple and Type of the Church, which is at Christs right hand, Psal. 45. as he at his Fathers right hand, Rom. 8. He is with all his to the end of the world: and it is a part of his joy that we shall be one day where he is. This Lord of the whole earth, soveraigne over all: but takes delight onely in such as (Esther like) he purifies and perfumes for royall use: and these he loveth so affectionately as never any Lord did his subjects, Zech. 3.17. He loves the gates of Zion more then all the dwellings of Jacob, Psal. 87. 2.

CHAP. V.

Verse 1. Then I turned me, and lifted up mine eyes] i. e. I prepared me to the receiving of a new vision: nothing so comfortable as the former, but no lesse necessary; that the people, by sense of sinne, and fear of wrath, might be taken off their wicked practises, redeem their own sorrows, and be accounted worthy to escape all those things that should (otherwise) come to passe, as verse 11. and to stand before the Son of man, at that dreadfull day. This seemeth to bee the mind of the Holy Ghost, in these two visions here recorded: which while some Interpreters attend not, in toto vaticinio neque calum, neque terram attingunt, saith Calvin; they are utterly out.

Luke 21. 36.

and behold a flying roll] Or, volume, as Psal. 40. 10. or scroll of paper, or parchment, usually rolled up, like the web upon the pin, nisi convolutum nostrum Mappa Geographica, as our Mappes are rolled up, saith A Lapid: and as in the publike Library at Oxford the Book or Roll of Esther (an Hebrew Manuscript) is at this day to bee seen: but here flying] Not onely because spread wide open, as Rabshakeh's letter, 2 King. 19. 14. and as that Book of the Prophet Esaias, Luke 4. 17. but also as fleeting along swiftly, like a bird ready to seiz on her prey. Nemo scelus gerit in Pectore, qui non idem Nemem in tergo. The Hea- then

D. Frid. Orat.
4. Amem.
Antibar. lib. 3.
Volans velocis-
simum alionis
incursum significat. Chrysost.

thens named Nemesis (their Goddesse of Revenge to take punishment of offendours) Adversaria, because no man can possibly escape her. They tell us also that their Jupiter writeth down all the finnes of all men in a book, or scroll, made of a goats-pelt, which they call Shetzer: the very word whereby Aquila and Theodotion (two Greek Translatours) do render the Hebrew of this Text. (See Dan, 7. 18. Rev. 20. 12.) Symmachus turnes it Κεφάλαις, a Chapter, or Abstract of a larger Book, full of finnes, and Woes: and yet it is of an unheard of hugeness, verse 2. and of very sad contents, like that book of Ezechiel, chap. 2. 9, 10. lamentation, and mourning, and woe; or the first leaf of Bishop Babingtons book (which he turned over every morning) all black: to ir'mind him of hell, and Gods judgements due unto him for his finnes.

Verse 2. What seest thou ] q. d. Mark it well, and let thine eye affect thine heart; let these things be oculis commissis fidelibus.

I see a flying book ] See the Note on verse 1. Some read it, A double book, (according to the Chaldaick signification of the word) as containing double, that is, manifold menaces and punishments of sinne. But the Chaldee Paraphrast, Sep-tuagint, and others, render it flying; as halting, and hovering over the heads of wicked persons.

the length thereof is twenty cubits, &c. ] Ten yards long, and five broad. Neither let men say, that words are but wind, as they did Jer. 5. 13. For, 1. Even wind, when gotten into the bowels of the earth, may cause an earth-quake; as when into the bowels of the body, an heart-quake. 2. God threateneth those scoffers verse 14. that he will make that word which they tearmed wind, to become fire, and themselves fuel to feed it. And as fire flyeth upon fuell fully dried, Nab. 1. 10. and consumeth it in an instant: so Gods flying roll will lick up the evil-doers, no otherwise then the fire from heaven after it had consumed the sacrifice, the wood, the stones, and the dust, licked up also the water that was in the trench, 1 King. 18. 38. The threatnings of Gods Law (the same with this Roll) are (as Erasmus saith of Ezek. 3. 18.) fulmina non verba, lightbolts rather then words: or if words, yet they are (as One saith) Verba non legenda sed vivenda, Words not to be read onely, but lived: at least, not to be read as men do the old stories of forraigne warres; wherein they are nothing concerned (but as threatening themselves in every threat, cursing themselves in every curse, &c.) nor as they read the predictions of an Almanack for wind and weather: which they think may come to passe, and it may be not: but be confident of this very thing, that God who hath denounced it will surely do it, and that he will execute the judgement written in this roll, Psal. 149. 9. yea every sicknesse and every plague which is not written in the book of this Law, them will the Lord cause to descend upon the disobedient, untill they be destroyed, Deut. 28. 61.

Verse 3. This is the curse ] Or oath, with execration and cursing. Cursing men are cursed men, and God hath sworn that swearers shall not enter into his rest.

that goeth forth ] yea flyeth, verse 2. more swift then an eagle, an arrow, a flash of lightening. Or, if not, yet

Num. 5. 21.
אָנָה in Agg. Grace,
juramentum et execrationem
significat.
Mercet.

Pena venit gravior, quo magis sera venit.

over the face of the whole earth ] Tribulation and anguish upon every soul of man that doth evil: but of the Jew first, (Ingentia beneficia flagitia, supplicia) who is therefore the worse, because he ought to have been better; and then, of the Gentile also. Theodoret, Lyra, and Vatablus think that Iudæa is hinted in the measure of the book (twenty cubites long, and ten broad) as being twice so long (and somewhat more) as it is broad: witnesse Hierom in his Epistle to Dardanus. But let the whole earth here be taken in its utmost latitude, sith the Gentiles that sinne without the Law, are yet liable to the punishments of the Law. And some of them by the light of Nature saw the evil of swearing: but all generally of stealing; but especially of perjury and sacriledge, here principally meant. Confer Mal. 3. 8. Neb. 13. 10.

for every one that stealeth shall be cut off ] By stealing understand all sins against the second Table: as by swearing, all against the first: and so the sense is the same with that of the Apostle, Every transgression and disobedience receiveth a just recompence of reward Heb. 2. 2. And curst is every one, that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law, to do them, Gal. 3. 10. Howbeit because these two sins were more frequently and more impudently committed in those dayes, therefore are they (by a specialty) instanced. The Jewes comming poor out of Babylon, held it no great sin to steal for supply of their necessities: and then to forswear themselves for the better hiding of their theft, Give me not poverty, said holy Agur, lest being poore I steale; and (as one sin drawes on another) I take the name of my God in vaine Prov. 30. 9. See the Note there. Hunger is an evill counsellour, necessity an hard weapon, a fore temptation: when it comes to this, Either I must steale or starve. But then to this must be opposed that of the law, Thou shalt in no case steale. Thou must rather dye then do wickedly. Aut faciendum aut patendum, Either obey the law, or suffer the curse.

as on this side according to it] i. e. According to the curse, described in the rowle, the thief shall be cut off as well as the swearer: they shall speed alike. The tares shall be bound up in bundles, thieves with thieves, and swearers with swearers, and burnt in the fire Mat. 13. 30, 40. According to the prediction shall be the execution. Whether on this side, that is in Judea (to some sense it) or on that side, in other parts of the world, such persons appeare, they shall have their payment.

and every one that sweareth] Not only falsely as verse 4. but lightly, vainely, causelessly, in jest and not in judgement: whether by God, or by creatures and qualities; Judeis & Phariseis vulgare vitium, saith Pareus on Lam. 5. 12. a common fault among the Jewes and Pharisees Mat. 5. 34, 35. and 23. 16. 18. See the Notes there. Among the Christians in Chrysostomes time, as appeares by his many sermons against it at Antioch. And in these dayes, if ever, because of oaths the land mourneth, God hath a controversie Hof. 4. 1, 2. We have lived to see iniquity in the fulnesse of oaths and blasphemies unpareleled darted with hellish mouths against God and our saviour so ordinarily and openly, that some of them are become very interjections of speech to the vulgar, and other some meer phrases of gallantry to the braver. I knew a great swearer (saith a great Divine) who comming to his death-bed Satan so filled his heart with a maddened and enraged greedinesse after that most gainelesse, and pleasurelesse sin: that though himself swore as fast and as furiously as he could, yet (as though he had bin already among the bannings and blasphemies of hell) he desperately desired the standers by to help him with oaths, and to swear for him.

Verse 4. I will bring it forth] sc. out of my treasuries or store-houses of plagues and punishments Deut. 32. 34. Or, That which thou hast seen in vision, I will put in action: I will produce it into the open light, into the theatre of the world: their faults shall be written in their foreheads, their sins shall go before to judgement, my visible vengeance shall overtake them.

and it shall enter into the house of the thief] which he calleth his castle: and where he thinks himself most secure, as out of the reach of Gods rod: as if he could mot up himself against Gods fire. But what saith Bildad? His confidence shall be rooted out of his tabernacle, and it shall bring him to the king of terrors. It shall dwell in his tabernacle, because it is none of his: brimstone shall be scattered upon his habitation, Job 18. 14, 15. so, that if the fire of Gods wrath do but touch it, all's on a light flame. He will unkennel these foxes: and drag Cacus out of his denn, to his deserved punishment. Dioclesian the Persecutour (one of those Latroes publici, as Cato called them) giving over his Empire, after that he had sufficiently feathered his nest; decreed to lead the rest of his life quietly. But he escaped not so: for after that, his house was wholly consumed with lightning and a flame of fire that fell from heaven, he hiding himself, for fear of the lightning, died within a while after.

and into the house of him that sweareth falsely by my name] Hence Ribera gathereth that by the whole earth in the former verse is meant Judea only: because none but Jewes swore by the name of the true God, who is indeed the proper object

Bolton.

A. Gell.

Eufub. de vit.
Const. lib. 5.

just of an oath Esay 65. 16. Ier. 12. 6. Howbeit in lawfull contracts with an Infidel or Idolater, oaths by false gods may be admitted, and are binding. As for perjury, it is a provoking sin; as containing three great evils. 1. The uttering or upholding of a lie. 2. The calling upon God to testify and justify a lie. 3. The praying for a curse upon a mans self: and beseeching God to be a swift witness against him, Mal. 3. as he was indeed against Zedekiah, Narcissus in the ecclesiastical history, Earle Godwin in Polydor Virgil, Rodolphus Duke of Suevia, Ladislaus king of Hungary, Dr. London (Act. and Mon. fol. 1114.) Richard Long a souldier at Callice in K. Henry the 8. dayes: who deposing falsely against Will: Smith Curat of Callice, shortly after, upon a displeasure of his wife, desperately drowned himself. And within the memory of man Feb. 11. An. Dom. 1574. Anne Averies forswore, her self at a shop in woodstreet London; praying God she might sink where she stood if she had not paid for the wares she took. Hereupon she fell down presently speechlesse, and with horrible stench died.

*Act. and Mon.
fol. 1117.*

and it shall remaine in the midst of his house] And be a troublefome inmate with him, such as he cannot rid his hands of though never so faine: there it shall roost and rest, in despite of him. If it distast not his dough or empty his basket, yet will it fill his store with strife, or mix the wrath of God with his sweet morsels: his meate shall be sauced, his drink spiced, as Iob 20. 23. It is a moth in his wardrobe, murraine among his cattle, mildew in his field, rot amongst his sheep, and oft-times maketh the fruit of his loines his greatest heart-break.

with the timber thereof and the stones thereof] As in case of treason or other horrible crimes, the very houses of the offenders; were pulled down and made a jakes, Dan. 2. 5. and 3. 29. The Popish Councell of Tholose gathered together against those Ancient Protestants the Albigenses, made a decree, that the very house wherein an heretick was found, should be pulled down. The Mannour-house of Milcot in Warwick-shire, built by Lodovike Greenvile deeply guilty of these two grand evils mentioned in the text, and lately burnt to the ground, is commonly lockt upon as a speaking monument of Gods just judgement against Sacriledge and Perjury: whether men personally commit these sins or love them in others Zach. 1. 17. Rev. 22. 15.

*Illam domum
in qua fuerit inventus hereticus diruen-
dam decernimus.*

Verse 5. Lift up now thine eyes and see] No doubt, saith Calvin here, but the Prophet was frighted at the sight of the flying rowle, full of curses. My flesh trembleth for feare of thee, saith David, and I am afraid of thy judgements. And Habakkuk, when he considered the cursed condition of the Churches enemies, my belly trembled, said he, when I heard it: my lips quivered at the voice, rottenesse entred into my bones chap. 3. 6. Daniel was more afflicted and troubled for Nebuchadnezzars calamity, then himself was, chap. 4. 19. Here therefore the Angell encourageth the Prophet, and biddeth him look up and see a further vision; and not through dulnesse or dejectednesse, to let passe without due observation the notable works and witnessies of Gods providence and power. Curious Artisans when they set forth some speciall peece to publik view, they take it ill when notice is not taken of it: So here. See the Note on ver. 1.

Pla. 119. 120.

Verse 6. And I said, What is it? ] i. e. what meaneth it? for the vision is very hard and mysterious: lest (saith One) the plaine denunciation of the second overthrow of temple and state might discourage them too much, to go forward in the present restauration of both. Hugh Broughton on Dan. 2. 4. observeth, that while the visions are generall, and cause the Jewes no danger, so far Daniel writeth in the Syriack tongue, generall over the East. But when the oppressours be named, and the Jewes plainly described the people whom God defendeth, then the eighth chapter and all after, he writes in Hebrew (a tongue lesse known and studied) and hath a commandement to keep close the plaine exposition chap. 12. 4. There is a great deale of wisdom required of those, that are intrusted with the dispensation of divine truths. Our Saviour spake as the people could heare, and not as he could have spoken. See Heb. 5. 11, 12.

this is an Ephah that goeth forth] The Ephah was the greatest and most common measure among the Jewes: and is therefore generally put for any measure whatsoever Deut. 25. 14. By false measures (one kind of theft) they had sinned (whence the Chaldee here, Isti sunt populi qui accipiebant, & dabant mensurâ falsâ, These are the people that bought and sold by false measures) by the same therefore, their punishment is set forth and signified; A peece of their punishment it was that they were bounded and limited: that wickednesse was confined and kept within her Ephah. The Vulgar translates it Amphora a pitcher: which when it is once filled with the bitter waters of wickednesse, will soon sink to the bottom. Sinners as they are stinted, so when they have filled up their measure, they are sure to be punished: when they are ripe in the field, God will come with his sickle; when their grapes of Sodom are full ready, he will cast them into the winepresse of his wrath Rev. 15. 16. Gen. 15. 16. Mat. 23. 32.

this is their resemblance thorough all the earth] Heb. their eye, their aspect, their colour. This, that is, this Ephah, is their resemblance: sc. that when they have filled up their sins, they shall have their fill of punishment. Or This, meaning some apparition representing Gods providence shewed by the Angel to the Prophet; is their eye, that is, the eye of the three persons in Trinity, Gods universall providence, which presideeth over his judgements. Or thus; This Ephah or measure of their punishment, proportionate to their sin, in killing Christ especially Mat. 23. 32. shall be their eye thorough all the earth, i. e. shall be conspicuous and apparent to all sorts: so that all men shall hate them, and hoot at them for a company of Kill-Christs, shall look upon them as a people of Gods curse &c. Thus the Chaldee here, Behold they are made manifest before all the inhabitants of the earth: for all men shall be witnesses of their horrible both sinns and plagues.

Zech 3.9. and
4.10. and 9.1.

Verse 7. And behold there was lift up a talent of lead] A lump of lead, the weightiest metall: noting the immoveable and immutable decree of God for the punishment of the wicked. Say to the wicked, tell him so from me, it shall go ill with him: Iniquity shall be his ruine. This lump of lead is first lifted up, and then let down upon the Ephah as an adequate covering: and betokeneth the grievousnesse and long continuance of the Jewes punishment and banishment for their parricide, or rather decide, in crucifying the Lord of glory. A day of grace they had, but they knew it not; therefore is wrath come upon them to the utmost, or, untill the end, or finally, so as it shall never be removed: so some interpret it.

Esay 3. 11.

Isa. 7. 16.
1 Thes. 2. 16.

and this is a woman that sitteth in the midst of the Ephah] In medio modi: and so she went forth or moved forward with an open face, and upper parts appearing, as not ashamed: the shew of her countenance witnessed against her, she declared her sin as Sodom Esay 3. 9. and as Lots daughters who favoured too much of Sodom, when, glorying in their shame, they called their incestuous brats Molab, that is the begotten of my father, and Benammi which sounds to the same sense. This woman is also said to sit, as resolved of her courte. Confer Psal. 1. 1. and 50. 20. the Jewes are still a stubborn and refractory people. Antiquum obli-ment: O that the salvation of Israel were come out of Zion &c. Psal. 14. 7. Deus nos dignabitur clarissimâ visione cum reducet Zion, saith Jachiades one of their Rabbines. I add, Fiat, Fiat.

Verse 8. And he said, this is Wickednesse] viz. this woman, a figure of the whole sinfull nation of the Jewes: as were Abolab, and Abolibab Ezech. 23. and Babylon the great, the mother of fornications and abominations Rev. 17. 5. to whom I may add that grand-daughter of hers Katherine de Medices Queen-mother: who by her wickednesse wonderfully troubled all France for thirty yeers together.

and he cast it into the midst of the Ephah] The Angel, as an executioner of divine justice, throws her down who before sat perking and priding her self; and claps her up close prisoner as it were in the Ephah.

casting the weight of lead into the mouth thereof] that is of the Ephah, or of the woman, according to that Psal. 107. 42. the righteous shall see it and rejoyce, and all iniquity shall stop her mouth. Montanus one of the Talmud addeth, that this woman is compeld to take this lead into her mouth: that molten lead was powred down her throat, for a punishment of her frauds and thefts ver. 3. But the wicked shall not be so excused: for upon them God shall raine snares, fire, brimstone, and a burning tempest: this shall be the portion of their cup,

Psal.

Psalm 11. 6. and this is far worse than molten lead, or burning bell-mettle. Compare with this text Ier. 51. 64. and Rev. 18. 21. with 20. 1. An Angel a strong Angel, for better assurance of Romes irreparable ruine, taketh a stone, a great stone. which he throweth, and with force thrusteth into the bottom of the sea whence it cannot be boyed up, whence nothing ordinarily is recovered, much lesse a millstone thrust from such a hand with such a force. What do ye imagine against the Lord? saith Nabum: he will make an utter end: affliction shall not rise up the second time chap. 1. 9. that is, the wicked shall be totally and finally consumed at once: neither will God make another doing of it. I have overthrowne some of you, as God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah: Am. 4. 11. wickednesse is here crushed together as it were in a narrow vessell, covered with lead, and carried into a strange country.

Verse 9. Behold there came out two women Winged women, and carried through the ayre with a pleasant wind, to note their ready and speedy obedience, prompt and present. Women they are said to be, to keep proportion with the present vision; lest the meeting and mixing together of men and women in the same matter might minister occasion to some impure surmising. But that they were men and not women, that are here meant, is agreed upon by all. These were Ezra and Nehemiah, (saith Willet on Levit. 11. after Junius and Piscator on the text) those great Reformers of the Jewish Church. But this stands not with the last verse. I rather subscribe to those that expound the text of the Romanes, who with great celerity and violence destroyed the Jewes state: and so, that which they feared befell them Iob. 11. 48. The Romanes, said they, shall come to take away both our place and our nation: and within a few yeers it proved accordingly: as if God had taken them at their word, as he did those murmuring miscreants Num. 14. 28. As truly as I live, saith the Lord, as ye have spoken in mine eares, so will I do unto you. Hereunto the Chaldee Paraphrast consenteth, when by these two women thus described he understandeth, populos levites & expeditores, such Agents and Instruments, as God would imploy in the speedy execution of his wrath upon the Jewish Nation: such as were Titus, Vespasian, and Elis Adrian. Diodore maketh these two women a figure of Gods two properties, namely Mercy towards his Elect, and Justice towards his Enemies, wherewith he transports upon these last the judgements by which he had punished his own people: which is done with admirable celerity. Thus He. Danaus makes those two women to be the Anger and Justice of God, which do alwayes follow and wait upon one another, and take vengeance on mens wickednesse. Judicium sit penes electorem.

See my True
treasure chap.
7. sect. 2.

and the wind was in their wings] A masculine Affix referred to a Feminine Noun: to intimate that these women were indeed types of men, saith Mr. Pemble. The Romanes were men every inch of them, as the proverb is: and therefore of cowards they were wont to say that they had nothing Roman in them: and of Brutus, that he was the last of the Romans.

and they lift up the Ephah between the Earth and the heaven] This betokeneth a deportation and dissection of the Jewish Nation: being tossed as a tennis-ball into all nations, and scattered into the foure winds, as Ier. 48. 32. Rupertus hence concludeth them rejected of both earth and heaven. Out of the earth they are as it were banished, by a common consent of Nations: and heaven admitteth them not, as those that please not God, and are contrary to all men 1 Thess. 2. 15. And as their guide Judas, when they took Jesus, was hang'd betwixt heaven and earth, being calo terraque perosus; so fares it with that wretched people, and will do till God shall call them a people which were not a people, and her beloved, which was not beloved Rom. 9. 25.

Verse 10. Whither do these beare the Ephah? ] that is, saith Ribera, Quamdiu duratura est populi hujus impietas? How long shall this peoples wickednesse last? like as Isa. 6. 10, 11. when the Prophet had heard, make the heart of this people fat, and shut their eyes &c. he cries out, How long Lord? the answer whereunto is the same in effect with this of the Angel: untill the cities be wasted without inhabitant, and the houses without man, and the land be utterly desolate; And the Lord have removed men far away, and there be a great forsaking in the midst of the land.

Verse 11.

Verse 11. To build it an house in the land of Shinar ] That is, of Babylon, Gen. 10. 10. and 11. 2. where diverse of the Jews still remained in wilfull exile, as loth to leave their houses and gardens, which they had builded and planted there, Jer. 29. 5. preferring captivity before liberty. See 1 Chron. 4. 22, 23. Hence, upon their finall dispersion by the Romans, diverse of them resorted thither for entertainment. There Peter, the Apostle of the circumcision, had collected an elected Church, 1 Epist. 5. 13. and thence he writeth his Epistle to the sojourning Jews scattered thorow those Eastern parts chap. 1. 10. from whence also those kings of the East, Rev. 16. 12. the converted Jews (as some expound it) are expected. And who can tell whether this land of Shinar be not the same with that land of Sinim, Esay 49. 12. Confer Esay 11. 16. Zach. 10. 11. Or, by the land of Shinar here, may be meant exilium totius orbis, their generall rejection by all nations; the whole world being to them a Shinar, that is, a land of excussion, and it shall be established, &c. ] This denoteth the diuturnity, or perpetuity of their punishment.

CHAP. VI.

Verse 1. AND I turned, and lift up mine eyes ] i. e. I passed on to another vision: and I lifted up the eyes of my mind, higher to heaven, saith Hierom, to receive a further revelation from God. And whereas he saith, I turned, he declareth, that God from on every side giveth his Church clear testimonies of his care of her, so that she will give heed unto them, and lift up her eyes.

there came four chariots out ] i. e. four squadrons of Angels, Gods Warriours, and Ministers of his manifold decrees, which are here set forth by the name of brazen mountains. See chap. 1. 8. with the Note. Chariots the Angels are called in many places: but especially Psal. 68. 17. The chariots of God (in the Hebrew it is chariot, in the singular, to note the joynt service of all the Angels) are twenty thousand, even thousands of Angels. (of chearfull ones, so the Septuagint, of such as serve the Lord readily, and freely, with joy and tranquillity, and to do quiet his spirit, as it is said here verse 8: give him full satisfaction) The Lord is among them as in Sinai, in the holy place: that is, the Angels by their swiftnesse and warlike prowesse make Sion (the Church) as dreadfull to all her enemies (did not one of them so to Sennacherib?) as those Angels made Sinai, at the delivery of the Law, which was given in fire, Deut. 33. 2. The word rendred Angels, in the above-cited Psal. 68. 17. (and so the Chaldee plainly expresseth it) is by some (who derive it of Shaan, to sharpen) referred to chariots: to note a kinde of chariots, armed with sharp hooks, used in warres, as many humane Writers record. And so it maketh something to the confirmation of this Interpretation, concerning Angels, rather then the four Monarchies. But the Angel himself is our best Interpreter, verse 5. where, being asked by Zachary, what these chariots were? he answereth, These are the four spirits of the heavens, which go forth from standing before the Lord of all the earth, a plain Periphrasis of the Angels, chap. 1. 10. See the Note there.

from between two mountains ] tantum è carceribus, as designed by Gods all disposing providence, and power, and ready prest at his appointment and pleasure to run their race, do their office, execute Gods judgements, which are both unsearchable, and inevitable: and this the Poets hammer'd at in their ineluctabile Fatum, as they called it. Gods decrees lie hid under mountains of brasse, as it were, till they come to execution: they run as a river under ground, till they break out and shew themselves. When he hath once signified his will, then we understand it; which before lay hid from us: that is, when these chariots come out from between the mountains of brasse, when the event declareth what was the immutable decree of God. Hence the Psalmist, Thy righteousness is like the great mountains; thy judgements are a great deep: this for the decree. And for the execution, Thou preservest man and beast, (Psal. 36. 6.) but by such means, and in such manner as to thee seemeth best. It is our part to say Amen to his Amen, and to put our Fiat and

2 King. 2. 11
2 King. 6. 17
So Hab. 3. 8

ἐν θυμῷ σου.

Deut. 33. 26
God rideth
upon the heavens for Isra-
els help, i. e.
upon the Angels. Heb.

Statius.
Macrob.
Vegetius.

and Placet to his. The will of the Lord be done, said those primitive Christians, Act. 21. 14. Here am I, send me, Esay 6. 8.

Verse 2. In the first chariot were red horses, &c. ] These severall colours seem to set forth the diverse ministrations of the Angels, deputed to severall employments. The black colour betokeneth sorrowfull occurrences and revolutions. The white, joyfull. The red, bloody. The grissled, sundry and mixt matters, partly joyfull, and partly sorrowfull. But I easily subscribe to Him that said, We must be content to be ignorant of the full meaning of this vision. Tanta est profunditas Christianarum literarum, saith Austin, so great is the depth of divine learning that there is no fathoming of it. Prophecy is pictured like a Matrone, with her eyes covered, for the difficulty. For which cause Paulinus Nolanus would never be drawn to write Commentaries: and Psellus in Theodoret asketh pardon for expounding the Canticles of Solomon.

Verse 4. What are these my Lord? ] Difficulty doth but whet desire in Heroick spirits: the harder the vision, the more earnest was the Prophets inquisition. he was restlesse, till better resolved; and therefore applieth himself again to his Angel-Tutour, rather then Tutelar, whom, for honour sake, he calleth My Lord. See the Note on chap. 4. 5. and take notice of the truth of Saint Peters Assertion concerning the Prophetick scrutiny (1 Pet. 1. 11.) with greatest sagacity and fidelity.

Verse 5. These are the four spirits of the heavens ] Angels are spirits, Heb. 1. 7, 14. and spirits of heaven, Mat. 24. 36. Gal. 1. 8. resembling their Creatour, as children do their Father, both in their substance which is incorporeall, and in their excellent properties, Life, and Immortality, Blessednesse, and Glory: a part whereof is their just Lordship and command over inferiour creatures. For like as ministering spirits they stand before the Lord of the whole earth, who sends them out at his pleasure, to serve his providence: so, they have, (as his Agents and Instruments, no small stroke, in the ordering and managing of naturall and civill affairs, as may be seen in the first of Ezekiel. The wheels, that is, the events of things, have eyes, that is, something that might shew the reason of their turnings, if we could see it. And they are stirred but as the living creatures, that is the Angels stirred them: And both the wheels and living creatures were acted and guided by Gods spirit as the principall and supream Cause of all, the Lord of the whole earth, as he is here called.

Hence they are called sons of God,
Job 1. 6. and 38. 7

that stand before, &c. ] As waiting his commands, and ready to runne on his errand, Mat. 18. 10. Dan. 7. 10. Jacob at Bethel saw them. 1. ascending, sc. to contemplate and praise God, and to minister to him. 2. descending, sc. to execute Gods will upon men, for mercy, or for judgement, Psal. 103. 20. For which purpose, Ezekiel tells us that they have four faces, to look every way, when as Gods watch-men they stand sentinell in heavens turret. And that the sole of their feet is like the sole of Calves feet, round, and ready to go either forward or backward with greatest facility: that as they see every way, so they are apt to go every way for the dispensing of Gods benefits, and executing of his chastisements toward the Elect, and vengeance on the reprobates. All this they do justly, diligently and purely, with faith in receiving Gods commands, Rev. 15. 6. clothed in pure white linen, and having their breasts girded with golden girdles. Let us labour to obey God, as Angels do: else we may be Angels for gifts, and yet go to hell.

2 Sam. 24. 17
2 King. 19. 35
Gen. 19. 11
Acts 12. 23
Rev. 16. 16

Verse 6. The black horses which are therein, &c. These Angels are appointed to severall Countries. The black horses to Babylon, (which lay North from Judæa) to inflict vengeance. The white horses are sent with them, to deliver the Church out of Babylon: and to bring their brethren for an offering unto the Lord, upon horses, and in chariots, and in litters, and upon mules; and upon swift beasts to Gods holy Mountain Jerusalem, Esay 66. 20.

And the grissled go forth toward the South country ] To shew that the punishments of Egypt, and Arabia (which lay South-ward from Judæa) should be somewhat mixed, and mitigated: they should be in better case then Babylon: yet not so good, as that the Jews should dream of a happy estate in those countries: but rather repair to Judæa, and there keep them; sith those that are out of Gods precincts, cincts, are out of his protection, Psal. 91. 9, 10, 11, 12.

Verse 7. And the bay went forth, &c. ] Junius reads it, And the strong, or confirmed ones: that is, the Angels, armed with power, and authority from God for the execution of his will, Esay 10. 34. Lebanon shall fall by a mighty One, that is, by an Angel. 2 Thess. 1. 7. they are called the Angels of Gods power: and elsewhere principalities, and powers.

and sought to go, that they might walk to and fro thorow the earth ] Not onely toward the South, as verse 6. This doth not teach, that the Angels are more carefull of this world then God is, of whom they desired it. But first, that they can do nothing without commission from Him. Secondly, that they are ever ready to offer their service and to yeeld obedience, upon the least intimation of the Divine pleasure.

Verse 8. Then cried he upon me ] That I might the better observe it: sith he spake it with so great vehemency.

Have pacified my spirit ] i. e. perfecerunt voluntatem meam, as the Chaldees here hath it, they have done my work thoroughly, to my great content. When the Churches enemies are slaughtered, God inviteth the birds and beasts to a feast, as it were for joy: and taketh as much delight in their just punishment, as any man can do in a cup of generous wine: whence it is called the wine of Gods wrath, Rev. 14. 10. See Dent. 28. 63.

Verse 9. And the word of the Lord came unto me saying, ] This second part of the Chapter, is not a vision, but a Sermon, or an historically prediction of what was really to be done. For as Gods Spirit was quieted, and as it were comforted by the Angels faithfull execution of their offices: so He seeks by this Prophecy, to quiet and comfort the spirits of his people the Jews, that were returned out of Babylon. For these finding themselves beset with enemies, and exigencies, might possibly despair of ever seeing the accomplishment of those promises and prophecies of the kingdome restored to the house of David, and of the great glory of the second Temple above the first. To keep up their hearts therefore, is this declaration made them of the kingdome and priesthood of Christ, under the typicall coronation of Jehoshuah the High-priest.

Numi. 16. 2.

Verse 10. Take of them of the captivity ] i. e. Of the returned captives, even of Heldai, of Tobijah, and of Jedaiah ] Men famous in the Congregation, men of renown. That these four mentioned here (taking in Josiah, who is also called Hen, verse 14.) were Embassadors from the godly Jews in Babylon, and brought their gifts, as Junius thinketh, I cannot affirm. But that they were the same with Daniel, Shadrach, Mesbach, and Abednego, as the Jews and Hierom tell us, I do not beleieve. Josiah seemeth to be the Hoste to the other three: as Gaius was to St. Paul, and other good people. Though some think rather, he was either treasurer for the Temple, or else a gold-smith, and one that could make crowns. Calvin conjectures from the fourteenth verse, (where it is said, that the crowns shall be to these men for a memoriall) that being men of authority, they were deeply guilty of infidelity and impatiency, because they saw not a present performance of the promises; they were discontented themselves, and discouraged others. Ye have need of patience, saith the Apostle to those short spirited Hebrews chap. 10. 36. who found it more easie to suffer evil, then to wait for the promised good.

and come thou the same day ] Either the same day these men came from Babylon: Or, the self-same day that the Lord spake to the Prophet, is hee commanded to go, not to put it off a day longer: for the people needed a speedy and hasty comfort. No sooner had God prepared the people, but the thing was done suddenly, as 2 Chron. 29. 36. No sooner were they ripe, but he was ready. He is a God of judgement, a wise God, that knowes when to deal forth his favours: As till then he waits to be gracious, Esay 30. 18. His fingers itch to be doing good in his good pleasure to Sion: as the mothers breasts ake, when now it is time the child had suck. He exalteth the lowly, he filleth the hungry with good things. When once David is poor and needy, God will make no tarriance, Psal. 40. 17. when his soul is even as a weaned child, then he shall have the kingdom, Psal. 131. 2.

Verse 11. Make crowns ] Two, saith Piscator: one of gold, for the Kingly dignity, another of silver for the Priesthood. Three, saith A Lapide, who makes it it a type as of Christs threefold office, so of the Popes triple crown: which later relateth rather to Prides picture drawn by the old Romanes, with three crowns on her head; On the first whereof was inscribed Transcendo: on the second Non obedio: on the third Perturbo. Danans thinks it likely by the 14. verse, that here were foure crowns made according to the number of the foure persons here mentioned, that brought in the gold and silver. Ribera will have it to be all but one crown made of both metalls, and called crowns for the greatnesse of it; as Wisdomes for singular wisdom, Pro. 1. Behemoth Beasts, for an huge beast Iob 40. The Verb singular tibieh ver. 14. seemes most to favour this conceit of his. But in Hebrew the singular is oft put for the plurall.

Verse 12. And spake unto him saying, Thus speaketh the Lord of Hosts saying] that is, Confidently and Constantly affirme and averr it: that notwithstanding all unlikely hood, and unbelieve on the peoples part, Almighty God will surely bring it to passe: This heape of words importeth so much: for do ye think the scripture speaketh in vaine? saith St. James, not without some holy indignation, chap. 4. 5.

behold the man whose name is the Branch] The man Christ Jesus, who was made of the seed of David according to the flesh: and as a Branch grew out of his roots Esay 11. 1. See the Note above on chap. 3. 4. Jehoshuah, that he might not be exalted above measure with the abundance of this new honour, or think of himself more highly then he ought to think, is given to understand, that he is crowned for no other cause then this, that the Jewes might understand, that there should One arise, that should be both a King and a Priest also for ever after the order of Melchisedeck: and his name should be the Branch, Not only because when he was a child, he grew in age and in wisdom, and in grace with God and men, (which is Vatablus his reason) but because he is the root, fountain, and foundation of all the faithfull, who do grow up and increase in him, with the increase of God: Hence it followeth.

Rom. 1. 3.

2 Cor. 12. 7.
Rom. 12. 3.

he shall grow up out of his place, and shall build the Temple of God] that is, the Church, which at all times hath been gathered together by Christ, through the preaching of the Gospel.

and he shall grow up out of his place] Or He (the Branch) shall branch up de sub se, from under himself: he shall be born of himself, as it were, of poor parentage; for this Branch grew out of the root of Iesse, when that goodly family was sunk so low, as from David the king to Ioseph the carpenter. He that writeth the life of King Edward 6. saith of his Tutours Dr. Cox, and Mr. Iohn Cheek, that they were men of meane birth; but so well esteemed for vertue and learning, that they might well be said to be born of themselves.

Sr. Iohn Heywood.

and he shall build the Temple of the Lord] i. e. the spirituall temple, that Temple the Church, the glory whereof was far greater then the glory of the former Hag. 2. 9. See the Note there. And this he should do in the quality of a king, and with royall magnificence. Ye also as lively stones elect and precious are built up a spirituall house, an holy Priesthood &c. 1. Pet. 2. 5.

Verse 13. Even he shall build the Temple of the Lord] The same againe for greater assurance: as Pharaoh's dream was doubled. Or, Even he shall build it, that is, he shall both begin and finish it (It is the same word againe, but in the future tense) Christ is called the Authour and Finisher of our faith Heb. 12. 2.

and he shall beare the glory] Jesus shall, not thou Jehoshuah (in Greek, Jesus) though now thou beare the crown. All thy glory is but figurative of his. Thus saith the Lord, Remove the diadem (or mitre) take off the crown: this shall not be the same &c. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, and it shall be no more, untill he come whose right it is, and I will give it him, that is Christ the king and priest of his Church. Particularly for his Kingly office, he shall sit and rule upon his throne, as a Sovereigne Lord of all: And for his Priestly office he shall be a Priest upon his throne likewise] for the Church also hath her throne and jurisdiction, though distinct and severed from the civil.

and the counsell of peace shall be between them both] i. e. there shall be no clashing between these two offices in Christ; as there was sometimes between the Kings and the Priests of former ages, but they should, as it were, take sweet counsell

counsell

counsell together for the good of the Church : Christ having purchased all peace to his people by his Priesthood, and maintaining and defending it, by his Kingdome.

Verse 14. And the crownes shall be to Helem--for a memoriall Or monument of their incredulity, saith Calvin, and for their full conviction. See the Note above on verse 10. Or their liberality, say others, and peradventure with some inscription or remembrance of their names ( here recorded ) for honour sake. But best of all those that say these duties were for a memoriall in the Temple of the Messiah that was shortly to be expected, and was presently promised. The poor Jewes at this day are said to have a crown hanging in their synagogues, against the coming of their long-lookt-for Messiah. And that he comes not all this while, they say it is for their sins which are many and bony, or, mighy, (многочисленны). But now seeing he stayes so long, he shall be, say they, a forerunner of the end of the world, and shall gather by his power all nations into one fold, according to that which here followeth.

Verse 15. And they that are farr off ] This was fulfilled in the conversion of the Gentiles who together with the Christian Jewes grew up into an holy Temple in the Lord Eph. 2. 19. &c. It was also in some sense fulfilled in Cyrus, Darius, Artaxerxes, Herod, who were at great charge for the Temple-work. See Ezra 7. 15, 16. the King and his Councell, the Babylonian and Jewes make a contribution to the work.

and ye shall know ] sc. by the event, and by your own experience.

If you will diligently obey the voyce ] That is, If by faith ye receive Christ held forth in the promise : and then persist in the obedience of faith unto the end.

CHAP. VII.

Verse. 1. IN the fourth year of King Darius Two years and a month after the former sermon. The word of the Lord was precious in those dayes : Psal. 68. 11. The Lord gave the word : but it cannot be said that great was the company of those that preached it ; during the Captivity they complained that there was no more any Prophet ; neither any among them that knew how long their misery should last. Soon after their return, God stirred them up Haggie, and Zachary ; and after that Malachy : and then there was Chasibimath chazon, as the Jewes phrase it, a sealing up or end of Prophecie. Onely they had Bath-gol as they call it, a voice from heaven sometimes, as Mat. 3. 17. Ioh. 12. 28. This and the pool of Bethesda only were left them as extraordinary signes of Gods love to that people. But for a punishment of their killing the Prophets (as they did this Zachary between the Porch and the Altar) and stoning those that were sent unto them (as they did the other Zachary the son of Jehojadab) they had no more Prophets, till the Arch-prophet, and his forerunner the Baptist came. And now also by this long vacation of two years and a month, it appeareth that Preachers were rare, and that sermons they had but seldome. Neither was it otherwise here in England at the first reformation : for to many churches (for want of Preachers) Readers were sent. Whence one of the Martyrs wished that every able Minister might have ten Congregations committed to his charge, till further provision could be made.

the word of the Lord came unto Zachariah ] The Lord is said to come to Balaam, Abimelech, Laban &c. But he never concredited his word to these profane persons ; as he did to the holy Prophets, of whom it is said as here, The word of the Lord came unto them.

in the fourth day of the ninth month ] which answereth to our November ; why the precise time of the prophecies is set down, See the Note on Hag. 1. 1.

Verse 2. When they had sent ] They ? who ? Not the Princes of Persia that were now profelyted, as the vainglorious Jewes (and after them Hymo and Hugo) would have it, for the honour of their nation. Nor the Samaritans (as some in Theodoros held) as seeming to Judaize in part, to joyne Jewish ceremonies with heathenish rites. But either the Jewes yet remayning in Babylon, as Calvin conceiveth

Talm. in Sanhed. cap. 11

Spec. Eur.

Psal. 68. 11.

Mat. 23. 37.

*Cotton
Cant. 182*

celvert, blaming themselves for sloth condemning themselves for this, that they vice) Or else the whole body of the lasting, some particular that was

1 week in the fifth month [Heb. Shabua]

Enslage, the singular for the name of the whole congregation

unto the sun of God [Heb. Adama]

from Beit [at the Church] [Heb. Beit] likely. But, as the Temple [Heb. Beit] nigh finished) and the Temple [Heb. Beit]

Sherezer, and Rezemeth, and then men [Heb. Sherezer] were men of rank and fashion; as it was at they should be in rank and fashion employment. And here the Septuagint, by their corrupt translation of the word have caused a strange coyle among those that strive to defend them. It is said that they translated against their will: and therefore what can we expect from them but slippery doing? It is most sure, that the translation of theirs which we now have, is full of errors: and that they pervert diverse clear propositions concerning

Jesus Christ, and have occasioned many mistakes, being themselves many times grossly mistaken here: unless they did it wilfully. Some learned men think that the Septuagint that we have now, is not theirs. It was burnt by Septimus

(as some hold) in the library of Alexandria, or (as others say) burnt by

when he burnt Serapion

to pray before the Lord [Heb. to enter the face of the Lord] sacrifices in the most solemn sort. The Hebrew properly signifies to enter the Lord with prayers, to set upon him with utmost importunity, to give him no rest until he yeelds: to urge him (as they did the Prophet 2 Kings 2. 17) until he be ashamed to deny, till we put him to the blush, or leave a box in his face

(as the Luke 18. 5), unless we may prevail. This must be done, especially when we are to converse with Prophets about some business, cases of conscience &c.

Verse 3. And to speak unto the Priests [whose office is to preach knowledge, and present it too; to teach Jacob Gods judgements, and to put them before him Deut. 33. 10. to tell oyle Mat. 25. 9. to bring balance from Galat. 2. 10.

8. 22. to speake as the Oracles of God, 1. Pet. 4. 11. which can do one of these and can skill of Iob 33. 23] and to the Prophets [who were extraordinarily raised up sometimes by God, to assist the Priests in teaching the people, and to shame them for their backwardness to such businesses. See the Note on ver. 1.

should I weep] that is, fast, which was ever with weeping, Lev. 16. 31.

17. and affliction of the soule; which indeed is the same as a fast, and without the which, it is but as a braimetic head, or a lifeless creature. What is in humble day (saith One) without an humble heart? not only an religious melancholy, but an high provocation: like Zimri 1. 20. when all the Congregation were weeping before the door of the Tabernacle.

in the fifth month] wherein the Temple was consumed to ashes Jer. 52. 28.

In a sad remembrance whereof the Jews took up that tenth day of the fifth month for a solemne fast every year, till now.

separating my self] Heb. Nazirum, my self, that is abridging my self of meates, drinks and delights. Hence fasting day is called a day of restraint Job

2. 15. Hence it hath its name both in Hebrew and Greek. Hence also it is spoken of as a soule fault. Ezay 58. 3. Behold in the day of your fast ye find your pleasure.

The Popish fast is a meer mock fast: for they separate themselves from some kind of meates only: it is not a total abstinence. And herein they count worst of the very Turks, who upon their fasting-dies will not so much as abstain of water, or wash their meates with water all the day long, before the sun appears in the sky: and then they make all the cheer and joy they can get, like as the Attick Dames in their Thesmophoria (a feast of Ceres) prepared themselves with fasting but after that laid the reines in the neck and ran riot.

as I have done these so many years] Seventy at least. But they seem to reckon up upon so many as was leaved to be told; and that therefore God was deep in their debt. But not time now to goe over. As the Temple was almost ruined? This was the great case complained by these Questionists. Hereunto an answer is made by the Prophet in the two following chapters; and this answer is partly Reprehensory Chap. 7. partly Comfortary Chap. 8. The sum of righteousness loves not to set in a cloud.

Verse 4. Then came the word of the Lord by Huldah] This is oft prefaced for authority's sake: and to procure audience and reverence. The Lord God hath spoken, who can but be assented? See that ye despise not him that speaketh from heaven. The Angel Mat. 23. 7. useth no other argument to assure the women of the truth of what he had told them, but this, Lo I have told you.

Verse 5. Speak unto all the people of the land] Not to the Embassadors onely: as the cause is common, so let the answer be publike: for they were all too well concerted of their external services, bodily exercises, and made much adoe about a trifle, a practise of their own devising, neglecting the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith Mat. 23. 23.

and to the priests] Who themselves were to seek belike; And having been the authors and observers of these customs, were backward to abolish them, as those that rested in them without true repentance, faith and new obedience.

when ye fasted and mourned in the fifth and seventh months] i.e. For the slaughter of Gedaliah and the sad consequence thereof 2 Kings 25. 22. and Jer. 41. 1.

even those seventy years] wherein ye have lost full seven score fasts: and were not a button the better for them: because they fasted rather to get off their chains then their sin: they rested in their fasts, in the work done, neither regarding how, nor why they should fast. Now God weighes mens actions by their aymes. And with him, though a good ayme doth not make a bad action good (as we see in the case of Nazab) yet a bad ayme makes a good action bad, as in Jehu's reformation. He had a squint eye to his own ends in all (as the eagle hath an eye upon her prey when she flies highest) and so consulted ruine to his own house.

did ye at all fast unto me, even to me?] Did you propound me to your selves? Or gat I any thing by the hand? Did you serve me? and not your selves rather upon me? was it not sinful self-love, and base self-seeking that put you upon these practises? lookt you any higher therein, then onely to the satisfying of your own carnal humours? God was not in all your thoughts. This Daniel saw and acknowledged with grief and shame, Chap. 9. 13. All this is come upon us: yet made we not our prayer before the Lord our God, that we might turn from our iniquities and understand thy truth: Therefore hath the Lord watched upon the evil and brought it upon us &c. The Jews no doubt had prayed much and oft during that seventy yeers captivity: yet Daniel denies that they had prayed to any purpose: because they had failed both quoad fontem & quoad finem, they had acted from evil principles, and had been carried on by self-respects. They had not that true heart spoken of by the Apostle Heb. 10. 22. but that wicked minde mentioned by the Wise-man Prov. 21. 27. The sacrifice of the wicked is abominable: how much more when he brings it with a wicked minde: either as thinking to cozen the God of heaven, or at least to stop his judgements, and still the noise of his own conscience by his external services. Thus Ephraim bore fruit to himself, but proved an empty vine: when as the Spouse (that fruitful vine on Christs house-side) kept her fruit for her beloved: who therefore fed heartily upon it, and not upon her vine onely, but her milk too, not upon her honey onely, her finer and sweeter services, but upon her honey comb too, that had much wax in it, meaning her worser and courser performances. If the heart be upright all's well betwixt Christ and his people. O labour for that truth in the inward parts, that we may be with Appelles approved in Christ Rom. 16. that he may say of us, as once he did of Nathaneel, Behold an Israelite indeed in whom is no guile. Great vertues not sweetened with sincerity are no ornaments unto us. And Great infirmities, not sowed with hypocrisie, are no great deformities. Those God acknowledgeth not, these he imputeth not.

Hol. 10. 1.
Cant. 5. 4.

Verse

Verse 6. And when ye did eat and when ye did drink] q. d. In all your actions natural, civil, recreative, religious, you should have fought, served, and set up me, you should have done all to the glory of God, as saith the Apostle: you should have eat, drunk and slept eternall life, as it was said of a certain Scotch Divine. The way of life is above to the wise Prov. 15.24. he goes a higher way then his neighbour, who contents himself with a natural use of the creature, but he can extract a spiritual. Grace is called the divine nature, as that which Elixir-like, by contaction turns all into the same property with it self: meat makes us not acceptable to God 1 Cor. 8.8. The kingdom of God consists not in meats and drinks, Rom. 14.17. Howbeit the Israelites were commanded, as to fast, so to feast before the Lord; that is, in faith and obedience: & to do every thing from the heart, as unto him. This these Jews did not; and are therefore worthily blamed. From their feeding themselves without fear of God, is concluded their no respect to him in their fasts and holy services: sith true goodnesse is ever like it self, and carries an uniformity in all proceedings.

Verse 7. Should ye not hear the words which the Lord hath cryed] q. d. Hath he not spoken loud enough, long enough? Hath he not sufficiently declared his will concerning these external actions, and especially concerning a fast profaned through wickednesse Isai. 58.3,4. Jer. 14.12. and elsewhere. Sed surdo fabulam; All hath been but as a trumpet sounded in a dead mans ear: you are altogether uncounsellable, untractable: and all that hath been spoken hath even been spilt upon you.

Should ye not hear the words] So the Original runs, by a concise and short kinde of speaking, well besitting a sharp reproof. Should ye not hear them and heed them? which if you had done, you might have spared that labour of coming to us: and out of the former prophecies have resolved your selves.

when Jerusalem was inhabited, and in prosperity] But then their hearts were fat as grease, and the prosperity of those fools destroyed them: who, if they had hearkened to wisdom, had dwelt safely: and lived quite from the fear of evil. Surely as those that lie on down pillows cannot well hear: so such as be at ease in Sion, cannot profit by good counsel. It is by correction that God openeth the eares of men, and sealeth their instruction. Job. 33.16.

Prov. 1.32.33

when men inhabit the South of the plain] Heb. the South of the plain, that is, the bounds and borders, that part of the countrey that lieth most open to the incursions of the enemy, and hath most of all felt the desolations of war. See Jer. 17.26, and 32.44.

Verse And the word] See the Note on Verse 4.

Verse 9. Execute true judgement] According to Deut. 1.17. See the Note there. The prophet having here to do with Hypocrites, who boast much of their piety with neglect of charity and seem to be strickt in the service of God, but make overbold with men, presseth them to duties of the second table, which yet he would have exercised in the first table: for not onely the second is included in the first, but in the very first commandment of the Law the observation of the rest is commanded, as Luther well observeth.

and shew mercy] Or bountifulnesse, kindnesse, favourable dealing.

And compassions] Heb. bowels q. d. Do it out of deep pitty from the heart-root. Draw out, not your sheafe onely, but your soul to the hungry. this way the poorest may exercise his Charity: though he cannot shew mercy, yet he may love it Mic. 6.8. he may with well to it, as these poor wretches that were willing indeed but never (alasse) able to relieve the necessitous Mat. 25.35. we usually call such poor men, poor souls: but in the bowels of compassion a poor soul may be a rich Christian: and a rich man may have a poor soul.

Esay 57.

Verse 10. And oppress not the widow nor the fatherlesse] Widows and Orphans are Gods clients, taken into his special protection.

the stranger] Whose right is so sacred, saith one, that there was never ration so barbarous, that would violate the same.

nor the poor] whose misery moves compassion without an Oratour. In the low countries they may not beg, but only look pittifully. To grinde the faces of such is barbarous barous cruelty : to wrong them, or but wrangle with them, is called, man-eating, Psal. 14. 4.

and let none of you imagine evil against his brother in your heart. ] For though you never act it, yet Fecit quisque quantum voluit, saith Seneca It is said, Job. 24. 9. Balac arose and fought with Israel: And yet the story saith nothing so. Sed fieri dicitur quod tentatur aut intenditur, saith Ribera upon Amos 9. 5. Hee did not, because he durst not : yet he is said to have done it, because he had a mind to do it. A man may die of an inward bleeding : so of heart-f finnes, which are majoris reatus, as we see in devils, though outward finnes are majoris infamiae, as the Schools well observe.

Verse 11. But they refused to hearken ] Being a nation void of counsell, Deut. 32. 28. not willing to know what they should do, lest they should do what they would not. Nay ( said they once, when they had nothing else to say ) but we will have a king.

and pulled away the shoulder ] As untamed heifers do from the yoke : or untoward Porters from the burthen. The Vulgar rendreth it, Averterunt scapulam recedentem, making it a Metaphor from those that scornfully turn their backs upon their betters, when they like not their commands : as the Earl of Essex did once upon Queen Elizabeth ; whereat she waxing impatient, gave him a cuffe on the ear, bidding him be gone with a mischief. Sides and shoulders should be set to Gods work, Zeph. 3. 9.

and stopped their ears ] Heb. they made heavy their ears. See here, how they proceeded by degrees from bad to worse ( for Nemo repente fit turpissimus ) noted in the many *And*s here used. There is a concatenation of Vices as well as of Graces : and he that is one step down the ladder of hell, knoweth not where he shall stop, till he break his neck at the very bottom. Wherefore Principiis obsta. Meddle not with sin : it is modest and maidenlike at first, but who knows what it may come to ? We have heard of Virgins so modest at first, as to blush at the motions of an honest love, who being once corrupt and debauched, have grown boldly lascivious, so as to sollicite others, so as to prostitute themselves to all commers, &c. Keep thee therefore farre from an evil matter, Exod. 23. 7. have nothing to do with the unfruitfull works of darknesse, Ephes. 5. 11. Circa serpentis antrum positus non eris diu illasus. He that plays upon the hole of the asp may be suddenly stung.

Verse 12. Yea, they made their hearts as an Adamant ] that hardest of stones, harder then the flint, Ezek. 3. 9. then the nether-millstone, Job 41. 24. Pliny saith of it ; Durities ejus est inenarrabilis, & simul ignium vitrix natura & nunquam incallescens. The hardnesse of this stone is unspeakable : the fire cannot burn it, nor so much as heat it thorow : the hammer cannot break it ; and therefore the Greeks call it an Adamant from its untameableness. Hircino tamen rumpitur sanguine, saith the same Authour. Howbeit this hardest stone soaked for a while in goats-blood, may be dissolved and broken in pieces. So may the hardest heart by the blood of Christ ( the true scape-goat ) applied by faith. They shall look upon him whom they have pierced, and shall mourn : He shall look again upon them, and they shall melt much more. A stroke from guilt broke Judas his heart into despair : but a look from Christ broke Peters heart into tears. Now till the heart be thus graciously mollified, instructions glide off it, as rain falling upon a rock : Afflictions, Gods hammers do but beat upon an adamant, qui respuit scalptra & malleos, quin & ipsos dirumpit, which will sooner break them, then be broken by them. Ye stiffnecked and uncircumcised in hearts and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost : as your fathers did, so do ye, Act. 7. 51. How their fathers did, appears by this Text, and Neh. 9. 29. They had not onely sinews of iron, a naturall hereditary hardnesse, ( whereby all men are born averse from, yea adverse to the motions of the Spirit : That which is born of the flesh is flesh ) but also browes of brass, Esay 48. 4. an habituall, voluntary, adventitious, wilfull hardnesse ; refusing to be reformed, hating to be healed : such a desperate hardnesse as neither Ministry, nor misery, nor miracle, nor mercy could possibly mollifie.

by the former Prophets ] Heb. by the hand of the former Prophets, that is, by their mouth and ministry : but to as little purpose, through their singular obstinacy, as when Bede preached to an heap of stones.

Therefore

Camd. Eliz.
Anno 1598.

Isidor.

ὁ Ἰωρταὶ
ὁ Ἰωρταὶ.
Apocal. 1

Manus enim
est ὁ Ἰωρταὶ
ὁ Ἰωρταὶ. Arist.

Therefore came a great wrath from the Lord of Hosts ] Which argues that they were great sinners before the Lord, as Gen. 13. 13. for he doth not use to kill flies upon mens browes with beetles.

Verse 13. Therefore it is come to passe ] By a most just and equall retaliation. Distributive justice requireth that men should be punished according to the nature, and kind of their offences. The back-slider in heart shall be filled with his own ways: Prov. 14. 14. As he makes a match with mischief, so he shall have his belly-full of it: he hath sold himself to do wickednesse, and he shall be sure to have his payment. With the froward God will shew himself froward, Psal. 18. 26. he will be as crosse as they are, for the hearts of them. If they turn the deaf ear to to him, hee'll do as much for them another time. They shall call and cry for help till their hearts and sidesake, but all in vain: hee'll not come at them. If they pull away the shoulder, he will pull away their supporters, and they shall be overthrown in stony places, Psal. 141. 6. If they harden their hearts, he will harden his hand, and hasten their destruction. This shall they have of Gods hand, they shall lie down in sorrow. Esay 50.

Verse 14. But I scattered them with a whirl-wind ] This is the second part of their punishment. The first was no audience, or help from heaven at their greatest need, verse 13. This was the curse of Saul, 1 Sam. 28. 15. of Moab, Esay 16. 12. of Dauids enemies, Psal. 18. 41. The next now is, they were dissected and dissipated, as the dust of the mountains before a whirl-wind: cast out of their native soil, and carried they knew not whither, with a great and fearfull disperfion, and discription of the same body and nation.

thus the land was desolate after them ] This is the third degree of their grievous punishment, their land laid utterly waste and desolate: according to that, God turneth a fruitfull land into barrenesse for the wickednesse of them that dwell therein, Psal. 107. 34. Here a learned Expositour observeth a wonderfull providence, that this pleasant countrey, left thus destitute of inhabitants, and compassed about with warlike Nations, was not invaded, and replanted by forreiners for seventy yeers space: but enjoyed her Sabbaths, resting from tillage and all other employments. M. Pemble in loc.

for they laid the pleasant land desolate ] They, by their sinnes, rather then the Babylonians by their Armies, did all this spoil, as Daniel also confesseth, chap. 9. 16. and Nehemiah, chap. 1. 8. Sin is the great make-bate, hell-hag, trouble-town, that hurled confusion over the world at first: and brings desolation still to pleasant countreys. Palestine was very pleasant, not more by the nature of the soil, then Ezek. 20. 6 by Gods speciall blessing: a land that he had espied out for them, flowing with milk and honey, which was the glory of all lands: This land they had laid desolate, or for an astunishment, as some render it: or for an In qua quid? as Montanus reads it, What's here? Nothing of its old pleasantnesse.

CHAP. VIII.

Verse 1. A Gain, the word of the Lord of Hosts ] As for reprehension in the former chapter, so for consolation in this: that they might not be discouraged, or say as once they did, There is no hope: but lifting up the hands which hung down, and the feeble knees, they might go on to lay the last stone with joy. To which end also no lesse then 18. severall times in this one chapter God is stiled the Lord of Hosts: that resting upon Gods Power, and Goodnesse, (whereof they are assured by many precious promises) as upon the Jachin and Bozez, the two main pillars of a Christians faith, they might have strong consolation.

Came to me ] See the Note on chap. 7. 8.

Verse 2. I was zealous for Zion ] See the Note on chap. 1. 14. Jealous as an husband, zealous as a loving Father: for, Non amat qui non zelat, saith Augustine; and a Father being rebuked by some for his exceeding forwardnesse for his friend, answered, Ego aliter amare non didici, I know not how to love any otherwife then earnestly.

earnestly. God therefore to ascertain his people of the truth of the ensuing promises, and to cure their unbelief, lets them know that all this he will do for them of his free grace without their desert. As at first he loved them merely because he loved them Deut. 7. 7, 8. so out of the same love, he will bestow upon them all the good things here mentioned. See the like Esay 9. 6, 7. where after a sweet description of Christ, his kingdom, and Benefits, he concludes all with The zeal (that is, the tender love and free grace) of the Lord of Hosts will performe this. Feare ye not, So 2 Sam. 7. 21. For thy words sake, that is, for thy Christs sake, and according to thine own heart hast thou done all these things which thou hadst promised. According to thine own heart, that is, ex mero motu, out of pure and unexcited love, or zeal, which is the top of all the affections, and the heate of the heart.

Verse 3. I am returned unto Zion After a long absence, as it may seem by the late troubles, and that dismall dispersion chap. 7. 14. God was gone aside and returned to his place, till they should acknowledge their offence, and seek his face: in their affliction, said He, they will seek me early. Neither was he frustrated as appeareth Hos. 5. 15. with 6. 1. Come and let us return unto the Lord, say they; Do to: and then I will come againe unto you as the raine, as the later and former raine unto the earth, with a Cornucopia of peace, plenty and prosperity. Neither this only will I do as a stranger in the land, or as a way-faring man that tarrieth for a night.

Ier. 14. 8.

but I will dwell in the midst of Ierusalem My Shechinah, or settled habitation shall be in the midst of it, sc. in my Temple there situated. Maimonides saith, that the Hebrew word here used signifieth continuationem stationis, a sure and settled abode; such as was that of the God-head of Christ in his Manhood. For the Word was made flesh and dwelt amongst us, ἐσθίοντες. The word seemes to be made of this Shacan in the Text.

Ag. I. d. 2. 1. 1. 1.

and Ierusalem shall be called a city of truth A faithfull city Esay 1. 17. A Verona rightly to called: a place where the sincere service of the true God is set up and practised: in opposition to other cities (such as Athens was, wholly given to idolatry Act. 17. 16.) that went a whoring after lying vanities, and to forsook their own mercies Iob. 2. 8. and the Mountain of the Lord of Hosts, the holy mountaine This and the former clause may safely and fitly be extended to the holy Catholike Church of the new Testament also: whereof Ierusalem and the Mount Moriah, whereon the Temple stood, were Figures. The Rabbines themselves expect the good things here promised to be performed when their Messias shall come, quem tantis vultatibus exposcunt.

Iam. 1. 17.

Verse 4. There shall yet old men and old women dwell in the streets of Ierusalem Because the Ancient of dayes the just Lord is in the midst thereof Zeph. 3. 5. and he will give every good gift and perfect giving, that is, both Temporall and Spirituall. The Father of lights will be to His both a Sun and a Shield: and no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly Psal. 14. 11. God himselfe hath the promises of both lives 1 Tim. 4. 8. Christ is heire of all Heb. 1. 2. and the Saints are his coheires Rom. 8. 17. He is the everlasting father, and withall the Prince of peace: his Children and subject shall have both the upper and nether springs, both the blessing of the right hand (spirituall blessings in heavenly things in Christ Jesus) and also of the left; Riches and honour, delight and pleasure, life, and length of dayes, peace and prosperity &c. Pro. 3. 16, 17. and 8. 18. Psal. 112. 2, 3. Deut. 28.

Esay 9. 6.

Eccles. 12. 3.

and every man with his staff in his hand his third leg, as they call it: q. d. they shall live so long that they shall need a staff, a servant or a son (such as Scipio was to his old decrepit father) to leane upon; because the strong men the legs shall bow themselves, that is, bend and buckle under their burden. They shall not be cut off by the devouring sword of warr, that slaughter-man of mankind, that layes heapes upon heapes, and by chain-bullets cuts its way through a heap of men at once, without respect of old or yong.

and the streets of the city shall be full of boyes and girles Lads and lasses (as the Hebrew seemes to sound) that mind little else but play, as if, with Leviathan, they

they had been made to sport, or as those people of Tombutum in Africa, who are said to spend their whole time in singing and dancing. But this they could not do if the times were troublesome, and the souldier at his bloody play according to that of Abner 2 Sam. 2. 14. Let the yong men now arise and play before us, that is, thrust their swords in their fellowes sides ver. 16.

Verse 6. If it be marvelous in the eyes of the remnant of this people] Here the Lord graciously answereth the secret objection of these Jewes unbelieving and misgiving hearts. It is impossible, thought they, that these promises should ever have their performance: they are sure, too good to be true. This is the voice of carnall reason: it usually tells a story of impossibilities, and judgeth according to sense, looketh upon Gods Jordan (as Naaman did) with Syrian eyes. But faith can mount higher and see farther: as a lark with a little eye getting aloft, can see that, which an Oxe, with a bigger eye, but being below on the ground, cannot. It is the nature of faith to look upon all things feisable. I can do all things, saith she, thorough Christ that strengtheneth me. Is there any thing too hard for the Almighty? was not that an absurd question of these mens Ancestours, Can he prepare a table for us in the wilderness? God can do much more then he will do: but whatsoever he willeth that he doth both in heaven and earth. And if faith have but a promise to fasten upon, she can beleeve God upon his bare word, without a pawn: and that both against sense in things invisable, and against reason in things incred ble.

Should it also be marvelous in mine eyes q. d. will ye measure me by your selves, and make my thoughts to be as your thoughts, my wayes as your wayes? there is no comparison. Abraham cared not for the deadnesse of his own body or his wives, but was strong in faith, and gave God the glory of his power Rom. 4. 20. This was it indeed that God himself minded him of when he said unto him Gen. 17. 1. I am God Almighty, walk before me and be upright: q. d. Thou wilt never do the later, unlesse thou beleeve the former.

Verse 7. Behold I will save my people from the East] This was in part (no doubt) literally meant of the scattered Jewes: and fulfilled also, in those five hundred yeers space between the Captivity and Christ, though stories tell us not when and how: and shall be much more at their much-desired conversion. For this is laid down for a generall rule, that all Evangelicali promises made to the Jewes, seeing they neither at first received the Gospel, nor ever hitherto enjoyed that peace, plenty, and prosperitie which these and such like promises do purport, cannot but aime at somewhat that is yet to come. Albeit it cannot be denied but that the great and glorious things which in the height and excellency thereof are spoken particularly to them, do in their measure and degree appertaine in common to all the faithfull: and so in the New Testament are ordinarily applied.

Verse 8. And I will bring them] and then they are sure to be brought. For who hath resisted his will? he will breathe life into those dead bones, and flesh shall cover them: he will make up those two sticks into one, and David his servant shall be king over them for ever Ezek. 37.

and they shall dwell in the midst of Ierusalem] They shall, they shall. O the Rhetoricke of God! O the certainty of the promises! what a monstrous sin is unbelief?

and they shall be my people, and I will be their God] This is a short Gospel: this is the summe of the covenant of Grace. Breviſ & longa, planeque aurea est hac clausula, as Pareus some-where speaks of another Text. This is a long and yet a short clause: short in sound, long in sense, but golden all over.

in truth and righteousness] I will be their God in truth] that is, in an assured performance of promise.

and they shall be my people in righteousness] That is, in obedience to my commandements. So here is the covenant renewed in a mutuall stipulation.

Verse 9. Let your hands be strong] Having therefore these promises dearly beloved, let us take heart of grace against all occasions of distrust and feare: let us up and be doing, that the Lord may be with us; Let us feare lest such a promise being left us, yea such a bundle of promises as are contained in the New Covenant, any

2 Cor. 7. 12

Heb. 4. 1. any of you, by shrinking from the service, should seem to come short of it; or by faintly forwarding the Temple-work, should lose the things that he hath wrought, but that ye receive a full reward 2. Job. 8. strengthen ye the weak hands and confirme the feeble knees. Say to them of a fearefull heart, Be strong, feare not &c. Say the same every man to himself, Encourage your selves in the Lord your God, as David did 1. Sam. 30. 6. Beleeve the Prophets and ye shall prosper.

Esay 35. 3, 4.

2 Chr. 29. 20.

Job 15. 11.

do ye not heare in these dayes these words by the mouth of the Prophets] my self and Haggai? And should the consolation of God be small unto you? will ye not trust us whom you have already tried? and take comfort by our words now, whom you have formerly found no liars.

Ez. 3.

Iohn 2.

Zach. 7.

Verse 10. For before these dayes] sc. during those fourty and four yeers, where- in they ceased from the work, minding only their own houses and managing their own affairs, their labour was unprofitable, their state unquiet thorough forraigne forragers, and homebred Malecontents.

there was no hire for man, nor any hire for beast] Nulla emolumenta laborum, Both man and beast did their parts, but to little purpose,

Ovid.

Ludit qui sterili semina mandat humo.

They sowed much, and brought in little: they earned money, but put it into a bottomelesse bag Hag. 1. 6. (See the Note there) the gaines did not counter-vaile the paines, the wages the work.

neither was there any peace to him that went out or came in] whether a man were within dores or without, he was in danger of the enemy (See the like 2. Chron. 15. 5.) he did eat the bread of his soul in the perill of his life: being wholly at the enemies mercy, which is mere cruelty. For if a man find his enemy, will he let him go away? said Saul: I trow not, till he have his penniworth of him; as that Monster of Millaine, as the bloody Papists in the Massacre of Paris, as the mercilesse Spaniards on the harmelesse Indians; (fifty millions of whom they have murdered in forty two yeers, as Acoffa the Jesuite testifieth) as Ptolomeus, Lathurus king of Egypt on these poor Jewes, thirty thousand of whom he cruelly killed: and compelled the living to feed upon the flesh of the dead: And lastly as the Jewes themselves, of whom Tacitus takes notice, and gives them this character, that there was miseriordia in promptu apud suos, sed contra omnes alios hostile odium, that they were kind enough to their own, but cruel to all others, whom they look upon as Idolaters, and therefore think they may safely kill, as Dis in Tra. they did the Cyprians and Cyrenians in Trajan's time to the number of 240000. thousand? and as they still do Christians where they can without danger of being discovered: whom also they curse in their daily prayers with a Maledic Domine Nazaraei: and by whom they are every where so contemned and hated, that they are exiled out of the world, cast out of many countries, and where they are suffered (as in Turkey) they are at every Easter in danger of death. For Biddulph telleth us, that if they stirr out of doors between Maundy-Thursday at noon, and Easter-eve at night, the Christians among whom they dwell will stone them: because at that time they crucified our Saviour, derided and buffeted him.

for I set all men, every one against his neighbour] And I set, emisi or commisi, not permisi or dimisi, as the Vulgar hath it: I set on or sent out, not I let or suffered all men. Gods holy hand hath a speciall stroke in the Churches afflictions, whofoever be the instrument. Herein his all-disposing Providence is not only permissive, but active. I make peace and create evil, that is, warr and contention: which is called evil by a specialty, as including all evils.

Esay 45. 7.

Omega nostrorum Marsest, Mars Alpha malorum.

But is there evil in a city, and I have not done it? Am. 3. 6. He (for a punishment) sent an evil spirit of division and discord between Abimelech and the men of Shechem Iudg. 9. 23. not by instilling any evil motions into their minds: but in a way of just revenge for their treachery and cruelty to Gideons family. This God doth 1. by letting loose Satan upon them (that great kindle-coale, and make-bare

bate of the world) to raise jealousies, heart-burnings and discontents between them. 2. By giving them up to the lusts and corruptions of their own wicked hearts. 3. By giving occasions of enraging them more and more one against another. And here the wickednesse of these factions and fallings out is wholly from their lusts that warr in their members Iam. 4. 1. and not at all of God, though his providence do concurr like as the stench of the dung-hill riseth not from the Sun, though the Sun-shine upon it be the occasion of it.

every one against his neighbour] A sad case, that common misery should not breed unity amongst them: that necessity had not made them lay down their private enmities: that being vexed so by the common adversary, they should yet vex and interteare one another. Blowes enough were not dealt by the Samaritans, Ammonites, and other Malignants; but their own must add to the violence. Still Satan is thus busy, and Christians are thus malicious: that they must needs fall out by the way home, and give bloody-notes too sometimes. St. James calls upon such to resist the devil, that is, their unruly passions of rage and revenge, wherewith the devill empesthereth and embroileth their spirits; and, like your cock-masters, sets one to kill another, that at night he may feed upon both. Iam. 4. 1. 7.

Verse 11. But now I will not be unto the residue &c.] Now that the Temple is well-nigh perfected, and so the cause of my displeasure removed; the matter you see is already well amended, and shall be yet better; for there is a series, a concatenation of Gods mercies, like the links in a chaine, every former drawes on a future, if we break not the chaine by our unthankfullnesse. The right hand of the Lord shall change all this faith Hope, when it is at worst. Psal. 112. 16.

FleBILE principium melior fortuna sequetur.

As when, tis in better case, it saith, Return to thy rest, O my soule, for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee. It is well for the present, and yet it will be better hereafter. Fury is not in God: or if at any time it seem to be, yet he will not alwaies chide, neither will he keep his anger for ever. It is with God in some sort as it was with David, whose soule longed to go forth unto Absalom: for he was comforted concerning Amnon, seeing he was dead. Let the Lord but see the rainbow of repentance appearing in our hearts, and he will presently be pacified: well he may wash us, but he will never drown us. Psal. 103. 9.
2 Sam. 13. 39.

Verse 12. For the seed shall be prosperous] Or, full and perfect, as the Chaldees hath it; it shall be fruitfull and yeeld a plentiful crop, such as shall every way answer the desire of the husbandman. Instead of your late scarcity (whereof See Hag. 1. 9. with the Notes) you shall abound with plenty of all things, feeding of the fat, and drinking of the sweet, and having your heart filled with food and gladnesse, more particularly. Act. 14. 17.

the vine shall give her fruit] so that ye shall swim in wine.

and the ground shall give her increase] her full burden of the best; so that your floors shall swell, and your tables sweat with sweetest varieties.

and the heavens shall give their dew] that womb of the morning wherein the fruits are conceived.

and I will cause the remnant of this people to possesse all these things] whereas people are apt to attribute too much to meanes and second causes of plenty and prosperity; God assumes the honour of all to himself. Raine and fruitfull seasons are his gift Act. 14. 17. And Hos. 2. 22. he resolveth the genealogie of corn and wine into himself. I will heare the heaven, and the heaven shall heare the earth &c. And both here, and elsewhere he giveth us to know, that the reward of religion is abundance of outward blessings: which yet are not alwayes entailed to godlinesse (whatever Iesuites tell us of the Churches prosperity and plenty, fetching her mark from the marker) to the end that it may be admired for it self, and not for these transitory trappings. }

Verse 13. As ye were a curse among the heathen] The people of Gods wrath, and of his curse Esay 34. 5. abhorred and accursed by all nations Ier. 24. 9. lastly a proverb and a pattern for any fearfull imprecation Ezek. 14. 8. as those that had the bloody wailes of Gods visible vengeance on their backs, and (Cain-like) had his his manifest mark upon their persons and proceedings. The Turks at this day so hate the Jews for crucifying Christ, that they use to say in detestation of a thing, I would I might die a Jew then; Let me be a Jew if I cozen thee &c. Such a taunt and a curse this wretched people are still. As they curse Christ and his followers continually every day, so it comes into their bowels like water, and like oyl into their bones. Psal. 109. 18.

O house of Judah, and house of Israel i. e. Besides the two tribes of Judah and Ben amin, diverse of the ten tribes that revolted (for religion sake) unto Judah were carried captive with them, and afterwards returned out of captivity also in their company. To them therefore, as well as to the house of Judah is made the promise. Twelve thousand of these ten tribes returning are found by computation in that summa totalis set down Ezra. 3. 64. as the Jew-Doctors have concluded. There are that understand the words of the general conversion of all the Jews in the time of the Gospel; and this may very well be, for ought that I see to the contrary.

1 Sam. 6. 9.

so will I love you] Left you should say in the language of Achdod, It is a chance, I will do it saith God.

and ye shall be a blessing] Not onely a name and a praise as Zeph. 3. 20. but a form to be used in blessing of others: such as was that Ruth 4. 11, 12. And not altogether unlike is that prayer of David Psal. 119. 132. Look thou upon me and be merciful unto me, as thou usest to do unto those that love thy Name.

Gal. 5. 9.

fear not, but let your hands be strong] Be not diffident, but diligent in well doing: in due season you shall reap, if you saine not. See the Note on verse 9. Ease feare expectorates and unmans us: banish it therefore, or ye will be betrayed by it.

Jer 15. 6.
Crudelem imdicum intemperans oger facit. Minus.

Verse 14. As I thought to punish you] He had promised to make them of a curse a blessing, and here he shews them the cause of this change, namely, Gods better thoughts of them, and toward them, upon their return unto him. And because they might haply think that their Fathers had hard measure: he tels them that their punishment was the fruit of their provocations. And whereas they might expect that God should repent and relent toward them, He shewes here that He had repented so long, that He was even weary with repenting: and that he therefore was implacable, because he found them incurable. Hence he resolved as Ezek. 24. 13. and would not be altered. Lo thus far these Jews had found and felt Gods fingers: and that in his menaces he had been as good as his word.

Verse 15. So again have I thought] Sic conversus sum. This change was not in God, but in the people, to whom He is now resolved to shew mercy, and that from a gracious purpose and determination, such as altereth not.

fear ye no] Faith quelleth and killeth distrustful fear: but awful dread it breedeth, feedeth, fostereth and cherisheth.

Verse 16. These are the things that ye shall do] Heb. These are the words. God will not so do all good for his people, but that they should reciprocate and do something for him by way of thankfulness. Particularly; these are the words, or commands, that ye shall not onely know, but do. They are verba vivenda non legenda: as lessons of Musick must be practised, and a copy not read onely, but written after.

Speak the truth every man to his neighbour] Let your words be few, and ponderous, Lie not in jest, lest ye go to hell in earnest. Let Socrates be your friend, and Plato: but the truth much more. Rather die then lie for any cause.

Judicium pa-cis, id est, placidum
est vite compositionem.
Calv.

Deut. 16. 20.

execute the judgment of truth and peace] That is, upright judgment pronounced or delivered with a calm and quiet minde: not angry, nor partial, nor of any dis-tempered or troubled affection; such as hatred, fear, favour &c. All that favours of self should be strained out, and Justice, Justice, (as Moses speaketh) that is pure justice without mud, should run down as a river. That Magistrate hath too impotent a spirit, whose services like the Dial, must be set onely by the Sun or self and sinister respects. He should have, as nothing to lose, so nothing to get: he should be above all price or sale, and neither respect persons, nor receive gifts.

2 Chro. 19. 7.

Verse 17.

Verse 17. And let him that is in the city be as a wall. See Chap. 1. 10. Take notice here, that as concerning with civil imaginations, Chap. 1. 10. proves one to be carnal Chap. 2. 3. And the word is fulfilled. Chap. 7. 10. the root of bitterness. Chap. 20. 18. never to lose and never to be taken. There is something in it, that men are here to be taken to imagine and to be taken to a particle in their hearts may them superfluous. But it is the fourth and the fifth secret sins that he touches in the heart of the heart, in the heart of the heart, and never then themselves to be taken. Chap. 1. 10. See Heb. 4. 12. Eccle. 12. 14. Jer. 6. 10. Acts 2. 1. The heart of man of itself thought is a sin against that first and great commandment Chap. 2. 3. and conscience, even before it come to consent, is a sin against the last Commandment Rom. 7. 7. But evil thoughts allowed and swallowed up in a heart of every Commandment: to vain is their plea that say, Thought is free, and so they on lay the reins in the neck, and run riot in vain and the imaginations. O Jerusalem wash thy heart from wickedness, if thou meant to be saved Jer. 4. 14. How many (alas!) have we that profess large boxes of hearts, what hearts are no better then dens of darkness, dungeons of filthiness, cages of unclean birds, brothelhouses, slaughter-houses, pesthouses of manifold diseases, of all devils, Atheistical, proud, covetous, malicious and fraudulent practices, which they are continually hammering, and wherewith their wretched hearts are full and haunted and pestered? Contrariwise, a godly man is said to have right imaginations Prov. 12. 5. holy imaginations Prov. 12. 2. and that he desires the only good Prov. 11. 23. or if worse croud in (as they will) he rids them out again, and will not let them lodge there Jer. 4. 14. he boils out that filth from Eccle. 10. 1. and purifieth himself of all pollutions of flesh and spirit 2 Cor. 7. 1. he both batters them Psal. 119. 113. and forsaketh them Ezay 55. 7.

and love no false oath. As not only he that maketh a lie is thus out of heaven, but he that loves it (though made by another) takes it up and divulgeth it Rev. 22. 15. So not only he that taketh a false oath, but he that perswadeth another to it; or that abhorreth it not in what he saith (for here is a Miosis, less is spoken, and more understood) is the object of Gods just hatred.

for all these are things that I hate, saith the Lord. And as the next effect of hatred is revenge, he will not fail to punish such sinners against their own souls.

Verse 18. And the word. See the ot Note Verse 1.

Verse 19. The fast of the fourth month. wherein the city was taken 2 Kings 25. 3. and the fast of the fifth, and the fast of the seventh. See Chap. 7. 2.

and the fast of the tenth. Wherein Jerusalem was first taken up, 2 Kings 25. 1. This last mentioned was first taken up, upon a like occasion, in the Emperor of Constantinople (when the city was besieged by the Turks army) being certainly advertised of the enemies purpose for a general assault to be given, first commended the defence of himself and the city to the Almighty God by fasting and prayer: and afterwards appointed every Captain and Commander to some certain place of the wall for defence thereof.

shall be to the house of Judah joy and gladness. God promiseth to turn their fasting into feasting, all their sadness into gladness, all their sighing into singing, all their tears into triumphs: and so gives a more but sweet answer to their demand about Fasting, after a larger and most excellent preface tending to Christian practice, and making much more to their benefit and comfort, then the first mention of the main question proposed by them to the Prophet. Finally for a pericope, he leaves this with them by way of conclusion.

Therefore love the truth and peace. Jg. 6. Sith your fasts are now abolished, and the ceremonious observation thereof (the bodily exercise the ceremonial, wherein ye placed so much holiness) abolished. Therefore love the truth and peace of Religion, the duties of Piety and Charity: let go these needless exercises taken up by your selves: and though of a good intent, yet of an evil event, for you have made so much ado about them, with neglect of the one thing necessary. And now learn and therefore, for the love of the truth, that ye may be saved, I have to to speak of the love of the truth. 1. Cor. 13. 6. as yet faith de- fendeth us till death, let your lives give witness to the ut. So will God give you wisdom they are my friends, children, and will be with me. 1. Cor. 13. 8. So that there is much and truth in your hearts. Would we have peace upon any terms, peace without truth, it would be but a short interim between the Egyptian plagues, that we may have peace and rest, yea peace would have to buy truth:

Tark. bib. p. 343.

but we may not give time to buy peace, the purchase of peace is too dear a rate, that payeth the integrity of the heart. It is not possible, as much as you see, have peace with all men. But if you cannot compass it, but with loss of truth, and ship-wreck of conscience, it is go: And the way the fruit of righteousness shall be peace, God will make thine enemies to be at peace with thee. The Historian tells us, that Ninus's Temple of old had this inscription visus est regibus pax. The Temple of faith and peace: But turn first and then Peace. Keep in with God that he be not adver- sary to thee (as Jerome prayes), and then find peace with men and enjoy it, as ever thou desirest long life, and good days, cheerful feasts, as here in the text, (called good days Psalm 117. 17. no ever thou hopest to have the Calendar of thy life crow- ned with many feasts).

*Ver. Jano. It shall yet come to passe that there shall come people. The Prophet cannot shut up with the former Corollary; but further comforts the Jews with a promise of the conversion and confux of the Gentiles to the Church; yea Christ's people shall be willing in the day of his power: they are like the Isles that wait for his law. Ez. 16. 43. they are set upon't to come for an offering to the Lord upon horses, in chariots, and in litters; to make any thing rather then not come, in litters rather then not at all. The kingdom of heaven shall suffer violence, and the violent take it by force.*

Perfane est, quod de multis partibus una civitas [habeat] Not onely come upon them when they light on them, and they have a fit opportunity, but they shall go on purpose, one city to another, to gain them to Christ. Propriissimum opus videtur est generare sibi simile, saith the Philosopher. It is the most proper work of every living creature, to generate his own kinde. The Divine faith the same. Grace is communicative, charity is so churl. Birds, when they come to a full heap of corn, will chirp and callie for their fellows.

let us go [spendily]. As to many heavenly Cherubims, winged creatures, as the doves to their windows with weariness of flight, so counting him happiest, that's first there. Many amongst us fall publicly and shamefully in want of care to come time enough to Gods service. It will be long enough ere such men beg Devils office of the keeper out of his hand; for the door-keeper of Gods house was to be first in, and last out: but theirs is the contrary. Mr. Fox speaking of our godly Ancestors at "the beginning of the Reformation here. To see, saith he, their travels, earnest seekings, burning zeal, readings, watchings, sweet assemblies, relief of one neighbour to another for conference and mutual confirmation, may make us now, in these our dayes of free profession, to blush for shame.

10. prayer before the Lord To see his face in Zion, to partake of his ordinance, what gadding is there by Popish pilgrims to Hall, Loretto &c. Sic vidimus in Italia sanctos patres et apostolos vestros, sanctos virosque, ac se invicem cohortari ad visitandum & reverendum &c. saith A. L. prayer in this text. i. e. So we see whole towns and villages be knock together, and to call one upon another to visit the Lady of Loretto, and to flatter Churches with rowed presents and memories; though all the thank they have for the same from God is, who required these things at your hands? Thou, no more than the Lord of C.

and to let the Lord of Holy Chant select and bring to the Lord, to be informed of the right way and means to worship him. Praying and Hearing are instigated as principal parts of God's public worship.

42. and Men.

I wish [they] have after (said Leah to Rose going to the gate) as fast as my old legs will carry me. Cole never said to his father, What's the use of me? Coye, however. The Pharisees are fully taxed for but that they would do others with duty: but themselves would do nothing: Matt 23: 4. 1896 in the good souls in the text : every of whom was as forward for himself, as zealous for another. There are that make these to be the words of the well-affected, in answer to the former invitation. Let us go speedily, say some citizens : Agreed, say the other ; I will go also.

Verse 22. Iea many people and strong nations, &c. ] The most populous and potent people subdued by Christ, ( not by an army, nor by power, but by Gods Spirit <sup>2 Tim. 1. 7.</sup> of power, of love, and of a sound mind ) shall send a lamb to the Lord of the whole <sup>Esay 16. 1.</sup> earth, submit to the scepter and lawes of Christs kingdome, yeeld the obedience of faith, and be profelyted to the Church.

and to pray before the Lord ] Heb. to intreat his face, which they behold in his Ordinances, those visible signes of his presence. Popish pilgrims, though used hardly, and lose much of their estates, yet satisfie themselves in this, I have that I came for, viz. the sight of a dumb Idol. What then should not men do or suffer, to see God in his Ordinances ?

Verse 23. Ten men shall take hold out of all languages ] Ten, that is many, out of all languages, therefore not by compact, or fraudulent convention : for they were farre asunder, and of diverse languages, ( nam quisque alijs est barbarus, saith Calvine. ) of the nations ] for God manifested in the flesh, was preached unto the Gentiles, beleevved on in the world, &c. 1 Tim. 3. 16.

shall take hold, even take hold ] as children do on their mothers garments.

of him that is a Jew ] who shall not shake them off, as bastard Gentiles, worthily (even the very best of them) to have their heads bruised with the serpent, as the moderne Jewes say of us. Come unto me, saith Christ : Therefore my brethren, dearly beloved and longed for, my joy and crown, so stand fast in the Lord, my <sup>Phil. 4. 1.</sup> dearly beloved, saith Paul.

we will go with you ] Be of your religion : not for fear, or any other by-respect, as those Persians, Esth. 8. 17. (Josephus relates of the Jewes, that they were very carefull how they received Profelytes in Solemons time (because then their state flourished) but out of sound conviction, and good affection.

for we have heard ] And by hearing, tasted.

that God is with you ] Of a truth, as that plain Corinthian confesseth, 1 Cor. 14. 25.

1 Pet. 2. 2.

CHAP. IX.

Verse 1. THE burden ] i. e. the bitter and burdensome Prophecy. See the Note on Mal. 1. 1.

In the land of Hadrach ] Better ; on the land of Hadrach : whereby is meant, not thy land O Immanuel, or, O Messiah (as Hierom, after Rabbi Benaiah ) nor a countrey that is neer, or lying round about another countrey, as Junius and Danæus expound the Syrian word. But either a province, or a city, of some Note in Syria, not far from Damascus : Diodate maketh it to be an Idoll of the Syrians, which represented the Sunne : from which the countrey took its name, as Esay 8. 8. Jer. 48. 46. Hof. 10. 5.

Because Messiah is chad sharp to the Nations, but rach gentle to the Israelites, and Damascus ] The Metropolis of Syria, buist say some, in the place where Cain slew Abel ; and thence called Damefesch, or a bag of blood ; a great scourge to Israel, chiefly famous for Saint Pauls conversion there, and his rapture into the third heaven, during that three-dayes darknesse, Act. 9. 9. with 2 Cor. 12. 2.

shall be the rest thereof ] sc. of that bitter burden which shall here abide, and be set upon its own base, as chap. 5. 11. See a like expression, Joh. 3. 36. the wrath of God abideth upon an unbeliever, tanquam trabali clavo fixa : he can neither avert nor avoid it.

when the eyes of man, &c. ] That is, of other men the Gentiles also, who as yet are carnall and walk as men, shall be toward the Lord, lifted up in prayer, and confident expectation of mercy. See Psal. 122. 2.

Verse 2. And Hamath also shall border thereby ] i. e. shall share in the same punishment with Damascus, and fare the worse for its neighbourhood.

though it be very wise ] and think to out-wit the enemy : to be too hard for him that way, as Midian was for Israel, by his wiles rather than by his warres, Num. 25. 18. God taketh these Wisards in their own craft, ( as beasts in a toil ) and makes very fools of them, notwithstanding their many fetches ; specially when they boast of their wit, as Tyrus did, Ezek. 28. 3, 4, &c. and trust in it, Prov. 3. 5. The Phœnicians and Tyrians were wont to boast, that they first found out the use of letters, &c. Sure it is that by much trading by Sea, they were grown cunning and crafty Merchants, to cosen others : and this they coloured with the name of wisdom. Wise they were in their generation, Luke 16. 8. but so is the fox, the serpent, and the devil : who when he was but young, out-witted our first parents. And wee are still sensible of his slights, and not ignorant of his wiles, his methods, and his stratagems.

See Hues. C.
1 Cor. 2. 19.
παραγία.

Verse 3. And Tyrus did build her self a strong-hold ] Thor did build her self Masor : An Elegancy not to be Englished. ( such as are many in the old Testament, but especially in Esay ) It is as if it should be said, A strong hold ( such as Tyrus which was naturally fortified ) did build it self a strong hold, sc. by the industry and diligence of men ; so that she might seem impregnable : yet all should not do. Alexander, after seven moneths siege, took it, and destroyed it.

A Lapide.

and heaped up silver as dust ] Pulverizavit argentum quasi pulverem. Shee had money enough ( by means of her long and great trade with all the world, Ezek. 27. ) and so might hire what souldiers she pleased for her defence. The sinewes of warre were not wanting to her. She heaped up her hoards as it were to heaven : her Magazines were full fraught. The word here rendred, heapt up, signifieth to comport and gather in money, as men do corn into barnes and granaries. Exod. 8. 10. Psal. 39. 7. But riches avail not in the day of wrath. And Tyrus converted, leaves laying up, and treasuring, and falls to feeding, and cloathing Gods Saints, Esay 23. 18.

Verse 4. Behold the Lord will cast her out ] Or, impoverish her, as some render it : that's for her money. God can soon let her blood in the vena cava, called Marfupium : and make her nudam tantquam ex mari. And then for her munitions :

He will smite her power in the sea ] She was seated in a Island, upon munitions of rocks : the sea was to her instead of a three-fold wall and ditch. She was better fortified then Venice is ; which yet hath flourished above nine hundred years, and was never in the enemies hands : whence she hath for her Motto, Intacta manet. But Tyrus was taken Nebuchadnezzar, as his wages ; and afterwards by Alexander, who never held any thing impossible that he undertook, how unlikely soever it were to be effected. He found means to fill up the sea with stones, trees, and rubbish, where it divided Tyrus from the Continent : and made himself master of it.

Curt. lib 4.
Plin. lib. 5. c. 19

and she shall be devoured with fire ] though seated in the heart of the sea, Ezek. 28. 2. and had motted up her self against Gods fire. Nothing shall quench the fire that he kindleth.

Verse 5. Ashkelon shall see it and fear ] for, jam proximus ardet Ucalegon, her next neighbours house was now on fire ; and she might well fear she should be dasht at least with the tail of that over-flowing storm, that had swept away Tyrus. The sword was now in commission : it was riding circuite, Ezek. 14. 17. and God had given it a speciall charge against Ashkelon, and against the Sea-shore : there had he appointed it, Jer. 47. 6, 7. Now Ashkelon, Gaza, and Ekron, were situate all along the Sea-coast, Southward of Tyre and Sidon. All these were bitter enemies to the Church : and were therefore destroyed by Alexander the Great, that man of Gods hand.

Gaza also shall see it, and be very sorrowfull ] like a travailing woman, as Esay 26. 17, 18. where the same word is used : her heart shall ake and quake within her : she shall have fore throwes and throbs.

and Ekron : for her expectation shall be ashamed ] Her hope hath abused her, her confidence is cut off, her countenance is covered with confusion. She looked that

Tyrus

Tyrus should have been a bulwark to her: or, at least a refuge, if need were. But now she seeth her expectation shamed: The expectation of the wicked shall perish. They look out of the window with Siferab's mother, and say, Have they not sped? have they not divided the prey, &c? But what saith the Church, So let thine enemies perish, O Lord, &c. Judg. 5. 30, 31.

and the king shall perish from Gaza] Rex, idest, Regulus: for there were five Princes of the Philistines; each great city having a Prince over it. The Prince of Gaza that is here designed to destruction may very well be that Betis, whom Darius the last king of Persia had set over Gaza. He having kept out Alexander for two moneths, was at length taken by him together with the city, and put to a cruell death, as Curtius testifieth.

2. Curt. l. 4.

and Askelon shall not be inhabited] It was so wasted by warre, and dispeopled, that it became cottages for shepherds, and folds for sheep. See Zeph. 2. 4, 6. Howbeit after this it was reinhabited; for that bloody Herod that slew the Infants was borne there, being surnamed Ascalonita: and at this day it is a strong garison of the Saracens. Saladine pulled down the walls of it: but our Richard the first set them up again, as Adrichomius telleth us out of Gul. Tyrinus.

Verse 6. But a bastard shall dwell at Ashdod] Perhaps he meaneth Alexander: In descript. Ter. sanc. who was a bastard, by his mother Olympia's confession. The Greek here bath ἀλλογενής, a stranger, an alien, or one of another generation, as the Greeks under Alexander, and afterwards the Jews under the Maccabees. Whence the Chaldee turnes this Text thus; The house of Israel shall dwell in Ashdod, and shall be there as strangers which have no father. In the As we find that the Jewes were scattered up and down Palestina, and some found at Azotus, or Ashdod, chap. 8. 40.

and I will cut off the pride of the Philistines] that is, their wealth, strength, and whatsoever else they gloried in, and grew insolent, and injurious to the Church.

Verse 7. And I will take away his blood out of his mouth] That is, his bloody prey, (for saith Aben-Ezra, these Philistines did according to the salvage custome of those times, eat of the flesh, and drink of the blood of their slain enemies) and I will keep them from devouring my people any more.

and his abominations] Hoc est, prædas abominabiles, saith Calvin, his abominable spoils, his bloody robberies, and pillages.

and he that remaineth] The small remnant of Jews not yet altogether devoured by these cruell Canniballs, the Babylonians, Philistines, and other enemies.

even he shall be for our God] Though they be but an Hee, a small poor company of them: yet God will both own them, and honour them.

and he shall be as a governour in Judah] They shall all be Magnifico's, little Princes, of high rank and dignity: even as Governours in Judah; God will honour them in the hearts of all men. See chap. 12. 8.

and Ekyon as a Lebiste] i. e. either slain, or a slave and tributary. I know this Text is otherwise expounded by Innius and others: but I now like this Interpretation, as most proper.

Verse 8. And I will encamp about mine house] Though it be otherwise but ill fenced and fortified: yet I will see it safeguarded and secured from the inrodes and incursions of enemies, who are ranging up and down, and not onely robbing, but ravishing, Psalm. 10. 9. For what was Alexander but an Arch-pirate, a strong thief, as the Pirate whom he had taken told him to his teeth? And whether here be intimated by these words, because of him that passeth by, and him that returneth] something of Alexanders voyages, who passed by Judæa into Egypt, and to Ammons Oracle with his Army; and thence returned to Persia by the same way, not hurting the Jewes; or something about the many expeditions of the Seleucida, and Lageda to and fro from Egypt to Syria, and back again: among which hurly-burly the Jewes State stood fast, though sometime a little shaken; I dare not say, (saith a learned Interpreter:) It may be both those and all other the like dangers are here generally comprized.

and no oppressour shall passe thorow them any more] Chald. No Sultan: not the Turkish tyrant, Lord of Greece, as verse 13. say those that take the text of the Jews glorious state at last. Calvin thinks that by this clause, he only expounds what he had figuratively said before. Danans takes it of violence and oppression among themselves, or of wringing and vexing by their own rulers: they shall be free from violence both abroad and at home.

for now have I seen with mine eyes] i. e. I have taken good notice of it, I have seen, I have seen, as Exod. 3. 7. and mine eye hath affected mine heart. I have well observed that the enemy is grown unsufferably insolent, and am therefore come to rescue and relieve my people. The Chaldee hath it thus, I have now revealed my power to do them good: Aben-Ezra makes these to be the Prophets words of himself q. d. I have seen all this in a manifest vision. But this is frigidum imo insulsum, saith Calvin an odd conceit: unless we refer it (with Montanus) to the following words, and make this the sense, (which yet I like not so well) Behold I see in the spirit with the eyes of my mind, the Lord Christ coming and entering with state, the city and temple.

Ier. 31. 12.

Verse 9. Rejoyce greatly, O daughter of Zion] Draw all thy waters with joy out of this wellspring of salvation. Loe here is the sum of all the good news in the world; and that which should make the saints everlastingly merry, even to shouting and singing in the height of Zion, that their king commeth. This should swallow up all discontents, and make them sing Hosanna in the highest: Blessed is he that commeth in the name of the Lord.

behold thy King commeth] Not Zorobabel, or Judas Maccabeus, as some Jewes interpret it: nor yet Alexander the Great (as some others) but a greater than he, even Messiah the Prince, as Christ is stiled Dan. 9. 25. who shall cut off the charret &c. as it followeth in the next verse, yea all the 4 charrets or Monarchies, as some expound chap. 6. how much more Tyrus, Gaza, Eckron, Damascus &c. of which he spake before in this chapter.

unto thee] i. e. meereley for thy behoof and benefit, and not for his own. Other kings are much for their own profit, pleasures, pomp, &c. Christ emptied himself of all his excellencies, that we might be filled with his fulnesse.

he is just and having salvation] That he may justify thee by his righteousness: and save thee by his merit and spirit. The Vulgar rendreth it, Iust and a Saviour, so doth the Chaldee. Salvation properly denotes the negative part of mans happiness, freedom from all evils and enemies: but it is usually taken for the positive part also, viz. fruition of all good: because it is easier to tell from what, then unto what we are saved by Jehovah our righteousness.

2 Cor. 8.

Rom. 2. 7.

lowly] Or poor, afflicted, abject, See them set together Zeph. 3. 12. and Phil. 4. 12. I have learned to want and to be abased. Poverty rendreth a man contemptible, and ridiculous. Pauper ubique jacet, men go over the hedge where it is lowest: the poor are trampled upon, and vilipended as Luke 16. 30. This thy Son, he scorned to call him brother: because he was poor. Now Christ became poor to make us rich, a worm and no man (nullificamen populi, as Tertullian phraseth it) that we might be advanced to glory, and honour, and immortality. Neither was he more low and mean in his estate, then lowly and meek in mind: as farr from pride and statelinessse, as as his state was from Pomp and magnificence.

riding upon an asse] A poor silly beast used by the meaner sort of people.

Ерy. καὶ
ημερ. 1. 2.

yea upon a colt the foale of an asse] Heb. asses, because the colt whereon Christ rode ran after two asses coupled together in one yoke, whereof one was his damm Mat. 21. 5. See the Note there. These asses used to the yoke Hesiod calleth ταλαιπώρους wretched, or enduring great toyle and labour. That Christ should ride upon the foale of such a hard labouring asse, a yong wild colt, not yet ready tamed and trained to the saddle, as it shewes his humility, so also his power over the creature (Clarescente gloria inter humilem simplicitatem) and his peaceableness too, as Kimchi thinks from that in the next verse, that the Israelites under Christs government should have no need of horses and charrets. All this description of Christs person and kingdome we know was punctually fulfilled in our Saviour according to Mat. 21. Mar. 11. Luke 19. Ioh. 12. foure sufficient witnesses. The old Rabbines and with them R. Solomon (though a sworn enemy to Christians) take the text of the promised Messias his solemne entrance into Ierusalem: Of Je- sus

Galatin. lib.
8. cap. 9.

fus the crucified son of Mary they will not yeeld, because they stumble at his poverty and expect pomp: But if they had consulted their own Prophets, they would have found, that Messiah was foretold, as despicable Esay 53. 2. Poor, as here: crucified Dan. 9. 26. Num. 21. 9. among malefactours Esay 53. 9. nailed Psal. 22. 16. pierced Zech. 12. 10. mocked Psal. 69. 7. And that their very rejection of him for his meanenesse and meeknesse proveth him to be Christ Psal. 118. 22. Act. 4. 11. It is reported of Agessilaus, that comming to help the king of Egypt in his distresse, he was despised by the Egyptians, because of the plainenesse of his person, and the homelinessse of his attire: for they thought that they should see the king of Sparta such an one, as the king of Persia was, bravely habited, and pompously attended. Semblably the Jewes expect a Christ like to one of the mighty Monarches of the earth: and they are strongly possist with the fond conceit of an earthly kingdome. Hence, when they saw Mahomet arising in such power, they were straight ready to cry him up for their Messiah. The rich hath many friends, saith Solomon, but the poor is hated, or slighted, even of his own neighbour Prov. 14. 20. Christ came to his own: but his own received him not. When it was sometime disputed among the Romanes in the Councell using to deify great men, whether Christ having done many wonderfull works should be received into the number of the gods? the Historian saith, that they would not therefore receive him, because he preached poverty, and made choice of poor men to follow him, whom the world careth not for.

Verse 10. And I will cut off the charret &c. ] This is the same in effect with that of Esay chap. 9. 7. Of the increase of Christs government and peace there shall be no end, and chap. 2. 4. they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their speares into pruning-hookes: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learne warr any more. Christ was born in the raigne of Augustus Caesar, then when having vanquished Lepidus, Antonius, and the rest of his enemies both at home and abroad, he set open gates of Janus in token of an universal peace: and reigned as Lord and Monarch of the Roman world. Polydor Virgil out of Orosius tells us, that the self-same day wherein Christ was born, Augustus Caesar made proclamation that no man should thenceforth give him the title of Lord, manifesting prosignio majoris dominatus qui tum in terris ortus est, saith he, not without a manifest preface of a greater Lord then himself then born into the world: greater 1. both for the peaceableness of his government, as here; no use of weapons or warlike engines. The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but spiritual. 2 Cor. 10. 4. Christ shall bring both to Jewes and Gentiles the Gospel of peace. and the peace of the Gospel.

De invent. v. r. lib. 4. 1.

he shall speake peace unto the Heathen] peace of countrey, and peace of Conscience too: and 2. for the extent of his government, It should be as large as the world, a Catholike kingdome.

his dominion shall be from Sea to Sea] From the red Sea to the Mediterranean Sea, or the Sea of Palestina: for these two seas were the bounds of the land of Canaan Num. 23. 31. for the Jewes scarce knew any other sea but these two. And the Prophet here alludeth to the times of Solomons reigne, as appears by Psal. 72. 8. He shall have dominion also from sea to sea: and from the river unto the ends of the earth: that is, from Euphrates to the utmost bounds of the holy land, which by a common custome of speech are put for the utmost quarters of the world.

Verse 11. As for thee also] O daughter of Sion, O my Church: not, O Christ the king of the church, as the Greek and Latine fathers, and after them the Popish commentators will needs have it; the better to establish their Chimera of Limbus Patrum Christ here, by an Apostrophe (an ordinary figure) or keeping back something unspeaken through earnestnesse of affection, bespeaks his people in this sort: E iam tu, As for thee also, I will surely impart unto thee the benefits of that my kingdome, as I have already begun to do in delivering you out of that waterlesse pit, that dirty dungeon of the Babylonish thraldome.

by the blood of thy covenant] by the blood of Christ figured, by the blood that was sprinkled upon the people Exod. 24. 8. Psal. 74. 20. Heb. 13. 20. and by vertue of the Covenant confirmed thereby.

I have sent forth thy prisoners] I have enlarged thy captives.

Gen. 37. 24.
Ier. 38. 6.

out of the pit wherein is no water] but mud only, as in Iosephs pit, and Ieremies dungeon. The Saints have temporall deliverances also by vertue of the covenant: and if any of Christs subjects fall into desperate distresses and deadly dangers, yet they are prisoners of hope: and may look for deliverance by the blood of the covenant.

Psal. 9. 18.

Verse 12. Turne to the strong hold] i. e. to Christ the rock of ages Isa. 26. 4. the hope of Israel Ier. 17. 13. the expectation of all the ends of the earth. Luke 2. 25, 38. Or, to the Promise, that strong tower, whereunto the righteous run and are safe: that are Christi munissima, as Cyrril here saith, strong hold of Christ. Thou art my shield, saith David, I trust in thy word Psal. 119. 114. And againe, Remember thy word to thy servant wherein thou hast caused me to trust, Verse 49. When yong Ioash was sought for to the chambers by his murderous grandmother Athaliah, he was hid in the house of the Lord for six years. But whence was this safety? Even from the faithfull promise of God 2 Chron. 23. 3. Behold the kings son must raigne, as the Lord had said of the sons of David, that he should never want a man to raigne after him. Hence Psal. 91. 4. his faithfulness and his truth shall be thy shield and buckler. Under this shield, and within this strong-hold of the promises God had made them in the foregoing verses, these prisoners of hope, these heires of the promises, were to shroud and secure themselves amidst those dangers and distresses as encompassed them on every side. And that they might know that the needy should not alwayes be forgotten, the expectation of the poor should not perish for ever, here's a precious promise of present comfort.

even to day do I declare that I will render double unto thee] Though you be now at never so great an under, yet I do make an open promise unto you, verbum non solum disertis sed & exercitiis, I do assure you in the word of truth, that I will render unto thee thou poor soule that liest panting under the present pressure, double, that is, life and liberty, saith Theodoret: Grace and Glory, saith Lyra: Or double to what thou hopest, I will be better to thee then thy hopes, saith Hierom: Or double, that is, multiplied mercy; but especially Christ, who is called the Gift of God by an excellency Iob. 4. 10. the Benefit 1. Tim. 6. 2. that which shall abundantly countervaille all crosses and miseries Mar. 10. 30. Iob had all doubled to him. Valentinian had the Empire, Q. Elisabeth the Crown. God will be to his Hannab's, better then ten children.

Psal. 45. 5.

Verse 13. When I have bent Judah for me] God himself did the work though by the sons of Zion, as his instruments whom he used, and prospered against the sons of Greece, that is the successours of Alexander the Great, who led them out of Greece against the power of Persia, and who seizing upon Egypt and Syria, cruelt and ground the poor Jews betwixt them, as betwixt two millstones. This Prophecie was fulfilled in the Maccabees: but may have on eye to the Apostles, who were some of them of Judah, some of Ephraim; that is, of the ten tribes, as of Zebulon, Nephthali &c. these Christ used as bowes and arrowes in the hand of a mighty man, whereby the people fell under him; the sons of Greece especially, where so many famous churches were planted, as appeares by the Acts and the Revelation, See Rev. 6. 2. with the N. re.

2 Cor. 10.
1 Cor. 15.

and made thee as the sword of a mighty man] given thee both armes, and an arme to wield them. For it is God that strengtheneth and weakeneth the armes of either party in battel Ezek. 30. 24. It is he also that rendreth the weapons vaine or prosperous Isa. 54. ult. Ier. 50. 9. This Judas Maccabeus well understood: and therefore had his name from the capitall letters of this motto written in his Ensigne, Mi camoca belohim Jehovah, who is like thee O Lord among the Gods? St. Paul also that conquered so many countries, and brought in the spoiles of so many soules to God ( whence the change of his name from Saul to Paul, as some think, from Sergius Paulus the Proconsul, whom he converted to the faith Act. 13. 9. ) The weapons of our warfare, saith He, are mighty through God to the casting down of strong-holds. Not I, but the grace of God that is with me &c. And ye men of Israel, why look ye so earnestly upon us, saith Peter, as if by our own power or holiness &c. Act. 3. 12.

Verse 14. And the Lord shall be seen over them] shall be conspicuous amongst them: he shall appeare for them in the high places of the field, he shall make bare bare his arm, and bathe his sword in blood. How many do you reckon me at? said Antigonus to his souldiers, when they feared the multitudes of their enemies. May not God say so much more to his? Hath ever any waxed fierce against him and prospered? If he but arise onely, his enemies shall be scattered; and those that hate him shall flee before him.

Psal. 68. 1.

his arrow shall go forth with the lightening ] Here the former matter is illustrated by many lofty tropes and allusions, either to those ancient deliverances at the red-sea, and against the Canaanites, and Philistines, by thunders, lightening, and tempest, or else, as Calvin rather thinks to the terrible delivery of the Law, with thunderings and lightnings, and sound of trumpets, to the great amazements of the people, inasmuch as Moses himself said, I exceedingly fear and quake. He confers Habak. 3. 3, 4, 5. and further alledgeth, that Teman here rendred the South, was the same with Sinai, and lies South from Judæa. Lightening, thunder, and whirl-winds are a part of Gods Armies, which he can draw forth at his pleasure against his enemies. Such things as these fell out oft-times in the warres of the Maccabees. And how the Lord mightily assisted his Apostles, whose arrowes went forth as the lightening, swiftly, suddenly, irresistibly, and whose thunder gave a loud alarm to all Nations, I need not relate.

Verse 15. The Lord of hosts shall defend them ] Heb. shall hold his buckler over them, which none can strike thorow.

Paulum quiescunque lego, non verba mihi audire videor sed tonitruum.

and they shall devour ] sc. their enemies, that till then did eat up Gods people as they eat bread, Psal. 14. 5.

and subdue with sling-stones ] with weak means, as David did Goliath.

and they shall drink and make a noise ] Tumultuabuntur quasi temulenti, 'Tis a Catechresis signifying the very great destruction of their enemies: so that they might be even drunk with their blood, if they had any mind to it: the tongues of their dogges should be dipped therein, as Psal. 68. 23, 24.

and they shall be filled like bowls, &c. ] that held the blood of the sacrifices.

and as the corners of the altar ] which were all besprinkled with the blood of the sacrifices. A Lapide applies all this to those heavenly Conquerours, and more, that is, Triumphers, the Apostles and Martyrs.

Verse 16. And the Lord their God shall save them ] Not defend them onely as Lord of Hosts, verse 15. but as a further favour, save them as their God in Covenant with them.

as the flock of his people ] rescuing them as David did his lamb from the lion and bear, and tending them continually.

as the stones of a crown ] Costly and precious, or Monumentall-stones, with crowns on the top, and set up for Trophies.

Verse 17. For how great is his goodnesse ] He shuts up all with this sweet Epiphonema, or exclamation, admiring the singular goodnesse of God to his people in all the former particulars: and yet promising them Abundance of outward necessities, even to an honest affluence: they should have store of corn and wine; so much as should make them succulent and vigorous, full of sappe and good humours. Provided, that first they content not themselves with the naturall use of the creature, but tast how good the Lord is. And next, that they put this promise into suit by their prayers, as chap. 10. 1.

CHAP. X.

Verse 1. ASK you of the Lord rain ] Ask it and have it: Open your mouthes wide, and he will fill them. Seek yee the Lord till he come, and rain righteousness upon you: Surely as the Sunne draws up vapours from the earth and sea, not to retain them, but to return them: and as thin vapours come down again in thick showers of rain: So God calls for our prayers, for our profit: and does for us exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, Ephes. 3. 20. Ask we must, Ezek. 36. 37. Prayer is an indispensible duty. Our Saviour taught his disciples to pray. He himself was to ask of his Father, and then he should have the

Hof. 10. 12.

Heathen

Heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession, Psal. 2. 8. He could have had presently twelve legions of Angels to rescue him: but then he was to send to heaven for them by prayer, Mat. 26. 53. I came for thy words, that is, for thy prayers sake, saith the Angel to Daniel. As well as God loved him, he looked to hear from him, Dan. 10. 11, 12. for he will grace his own Ordinances, and make his people know both their distance and dependance.

Joel 1. 10, 11,
&c. 17, 19, &c.

• Rain in the time of the latter rain ] Rain is the flux of a moist cloud; which being dissolved by little and little, by the heat of the Sun, lets down rain by drops out of the middle region of the air. This, if it come right in due time and measure, it maketh much for the fattening of the earth, Psal. 65. 11. laying the heat, nourishing the herb and tree, Esay 44. 14. refreshing all creatures, grasse, fruits, &c. Lev. 26. 4. Jam. 5. 18. Esay 30. 23. So if otherwise, it proves a great punishment, Joel 1. Great expectation there was in Judæa and those Eastern parts of the former and the latter rain. That, fell in the seed-time about Autumne: this, in the Spring-tide, causing the corn to ear, and kearn before harvest. Both were to be sought of God alone. For are there any among the vanities of the Gentiles that can cause rain? or can the heaven give showres? No, no; These come by a divine decree, Job 28. 26. God prepares rain, Psal. 147. 8. he dispenseth it in number, weight, and measure, Job 28. 25. not a drop falls in vain, or in a wrong place: he also with-holds it when, and where he thinks good, Amos 4. 7. The Egyptians used in a profane mockery, to tell other Nations, that if God should forget to rain, they might all chance to starve for it. The rain they thought was of God, but not their river: which therefore God threateneth to dry up, Ezek. 29. 3, 9. Esay 19. 5, 6. as also he did (as both Seneca and Ovid testifie) in the raigne of Cleopatra. The creatures at best are but broken cisterns. Not fountains, but cisterns onely; and those broken too; there's no trusting to them: they were never true to those that trusted them.

Nat. quæst. lib.
4. cap. 2.
Art. am. l. 1.
Jer. 2. 13.

So the Lord shall make bright clouds ] Nubes cursitantes, thin clouds, that flie swiftly in the air, most commonly before and after very rainy weather. R. Salomon interprets the word here used, not lightnings, which yet are signes and fore-runners of rain, Psal. 135. 7. Ier. 10. 13. but clouds bringing rain. Clouds are nothing else but vapours thickened in the middle region of the air, by the cold invironing and driving them together: that they may be as so many heavenly bottles holding water, to be seasonably distilled. How they are upheld, and why they fall here, and now, and by drops, not by spouts (sith they are vessels as thin as the liquor contained in them) we know not, and wonder.

Ecclef. 12. 2.
Esay 45. 19.

and give them showres of rain ] Heb. rain, rain, that is, plentiful rain upon his inheritance: the clouds shall return after the rain, and as one showre is unburthened, another shall be brewed. God scorns to say to the seed of Jacob, Sick ye me in vain: or that any of his suitours should go sad away, for want of an answer. David asked him for life: and God gave him more, even length of dayes for ever and ever, Psal. 21. 4. Many came to Christ for cure of their bodies, he cured them on both sides: and was better to them then their prayers. Gebezi asked Naaman for a talent of silver: nay, take two, said he: and he pressed it upon him. So saith God to his, Ask and spare not, that your joy may be full. Ye are not straitened in me, but ye are straitened in your own bowels. Ye have not, because ye ask not: and he is worthy to want it, that may have it for asking onely.

to every one grasse ] Grasse for the cattle, and corn for the food of man, as the Chaldee expounds it.

Esay 36. 17.

Verse 2. For the idols have spoken vanity ] q. d. Therefore ask good things at Gods hands, as rain, food, and all necessary provision: because Idols and sooth-fayers cannot help you to these things. If they promise you (as they will) beleeve them not: for they lie as fast, as once Rabshakeb did for his Master: when he promised the people a land of corn and wine, a land of bread and vineyards. And they will finally serve you, as Abshaloms mule served her Master: whom she left at his greatest need, to hang betwixt heaven and earth, as rejected of both. Lo such are all creature-comforts golden delusions, lying vanities, apples of Sodom, nec vera, nec vestra, the fashion of this world, saith Paul; the phantasies of mens brain, saith Luke, Act. 25. 23. the semblances and empty shews of good, without any reality,

1 Cor. 7. 31.

or

or solid consistency, saith Solomon often. They are, saith our Prophet here, a wicked deceit, and cosinage. An arrant lie, a false dream, a vain or empty comfort that utterly deceiveth a mans confidence, and maketh him, in the fulnesse of his conceited Insufficiencie, to be in straights. These here for instance: viz. the Jews that had been carried captives as a flock without a guide, sheep without a shepherd, and yet had not (till after some while at least) abrenounced their Idols, Ier. 44. 22. Ezek. 9.

therefore they went their way as a flock] Driven by the butcher to the slaughter-house. Idolatry is a land-defolating sin: as besides these Jews (the more ingenuous of them at this day confesse, that in all their punishments there is still an ounce of the golden-calf made by them in the wildernesse) the Greek Church was undone by it. The worshipping of Images they defended with tooth and nail (as they say) and established it in the second Councell of Nice; not long before the Turk took Nice, and made it the seat of his Empire, in opposition to Constantinople, which at length he took also; and brought in Mahometisme, that foul impiety, which quickly over-spread the whole East and South, like as Popish Idolatry did the West and North. But this iniquity will be their ruine. Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen. She hath fallen culpably, she shall therefore fall penally. And why? She is become the habitation of devils, that is, of idols. See Rev. 9. 20. I Cor. 10. 20.

Verse 3. Mine anger was kindled against the shepherds] Pastores Impositores: the greedy priests, and false prophets main causes of the captivity: because through their default, there was no knowledge nor fear of God in the land, Esay 5. 13. Hof. 4. 6, 7. See Ier. 23. 1. Ezek. 34. 1.

and I punished the goats] The Grandees and Governours, temporall and Ecclesiasticall. See Ezek. 34. 17. They should have been as the hee-goats before the flock, Ier. 50. 8. worthy Guides to God. But they were goats in another sense, unruly, and nasty, and lascivious (as those two filthy fellows for instance, whom for their adultery the king of Babylon roasted in the fire, Ier. 29. 22.) and such as begat kids of their own kind, men of their own make, and went before them in wickednesse, as the goats lead the flocks.

for the Lord of hosts] Better to read it, but the Lord of hosts, &c. And this is spoken for the comfort of those that called upon God, and abhorred Idols, and Idol-shepherds, that were in speciall covenant with him, and therefore owned by him, as his flock, or peculiar charge. Now, to such he promiseth to feed them as his sheep, and to furnish them as his horse for service, his goodly warre-horse, mainly respected by his Master, as Bucephalus was by Alexander. This may in part be understood of the Maccabees victories: but principally of the Apostles, those white horses, upon which they rode thorow the world, conquering and to conquer, Rev. 6. 2. Saint Paul is fitly compared to that war-horse in Iob, chap. 39. 20. whose neck is clothed with thunder, and the glory of his nostrils is terrible. He mocketh at fear, and turneth not back from the sword. He goeth on to meet the armed man, and swalloweth the ground with fiercenesse, and rage, &c.

Verse 4. Out of him came forth the corner] Angulus, not Angelus as some Vulgar Latine translations have it: and A Lapid justly finds fault with it. A like fault Surius and Caranza (his fellow-popelings) are content to wink at, nay to defend in the Laodicene Councell, because it makes for their Angel-worship. For whereas the Councell truely saith, Οὐ δὲ ἡ χριστιανὸς Ἀγγέλους ἀνομαζέειν, Christians must not pray to Angels. They make the words to be Non oportet Christianos ad angulos congregationes facere. Christians ought not hold their meetings in corners; and they make the title say, the same thing. But is this fair dealing, thus to falsifie antiquity for their own ends, and to maintain their own errors? As for the Text.

Out of him came forth, &c.] That is, Out of Judah shall be had all things necessary, both at home (and here the Prophet proceeds from the foundation to the nails, or fastening of the house together) and abroad: both for the mastering of the enemy by the Battle-bowe, &c. and the making of him tributary: for

Out of him shall come every exaltour] sc. Of homage and tribute, as the fruit of their victory. Danans sencereth it thus. Out of Judah shall go every oppressour which did vex his people before, God driving him forth.

Verse 5.

Ruth. 2. 11.

Plutarch

Verse 5. And they shall be as mighty men] Or, as Giants, as Gabriels, they shall be strong in the Lord; and in the power of his might, they shall do worthily in Ephrath, and be famous in Bethlehem: their bow shall abide in strength, and the armes of their hands be made strong, by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob: from thence is the shepherd, the stone of Israel. Gen. 49. 24. If it could be said of Mithridates, a meer Atheist, that he never wanted any courage nor counsel; how much of Gods warriors, such as Judas Maccabeus, especially Messiah the Prince, who treads down his enemies as the mire of the streets, setting his feet in their necks and making them to be found liars unto him, that is to yeeld him at least a forced and fained subjection.

and they shall fight because the Lord is with them] This is enough to make them fight up to the knees in blood, that they have God to stand by them: not onely as a spectatour, or Agonotheta (though that's somewhat: dogs and other baser creatures will fight lustily when their masters are by, and do let them on) but as a Captain of the Lords Hosts, as Christ is called, and a Coadjutor, a Champion, a man of war Exod. 15. 3. Yea, he alone is a whole army of men, he is Van and Reire both, Isai. 52. 12. The shields of the earth belong to him, the Militia of the world is his Psal. 47. 9. he hath magneleh cheloth and matteh cheloth, as the Rabbins well observe, armies both above, and beneath, as his horse and foot to fight for his people.

and the riders on horses shall be confounded] As they were in the conquest of Canaan, where the enemies had horses and chariots, when the Israelites had neither, as Origen observeth: and as they were in all Dauids wars, and the rest of the victorious kings of Israel, who according to the Law Deut. 17. 16. made no use of horses (but said An horse is but a vain thing for battel &c. God takes no delight in the streng. h of an horse) and ever fought on foot with singular successe. So did the Maccabees, Zisca, and after him the Bohemians, the English in France at the battle of Spurres (to the battle of Terwin was called in Henry the eighth his time, from the French posting away to save their lives.)

Spied. 1000.

A Lapide

Verse 6. And I will strengthen the house of Judah] Robustos, ac quasi Gabri- eles efficiam. See Chap. 12. 8. Esay 10. 34. See verse 5. of this chapter. The Saints shall be strengthened with all might according to his glorious power, Col. 1. 11. at the Resurrection especially, when Christ shall change their vile bodies, and make them like unto his glorious body in strength, agility, beauty &c. The bodies of the Saints, saith Luther, shall have that power as to toss the greatest mountains in the world like a ball. Anselme saith such, as they shall be able to shake the whole earth at their pleasure. Our Saviour saith, that they shall be as the Angels of God Luk. 20. 36. more like spirits then bodies, while they are here, In quiet and confidence is their strength Esay 30. 15. and again in the same chapter verse 7. their strength is to sit still. They expected much strength from Egypt: but the Prophet tells them that by sitting still and waiting for the salvation of God by faith, they shall have an Egypt, and better, out of weaknesse they should be made strong, was valiant in fight, turn to flight the armies of the aliens, as the Maccabees did, and as Michael and his Angels Rev. 12. the noble Army of the Apostles, who were more then Conquerours: and Martyrs who tired their tormentours and laughed at their cruelty: the valour of the patients, the savagenesse of the persecutours strove together; till both exceeding nature and belief, bred wonder and astonishment in beholders and readers. These were those lion-like men of the tribe of Judah that took the kingdom by violence. Judah which signifieth the Confessor, had the kingdom, as Levi had the Priest-hood, both forfeited by Reuben who was weak as water. Gen. 49.

Heb. 11. 34.

and I will save the house of Joseph] that is, Ephraim, but for the ten tribes, whom God here promiseth to save, not to bring back, saith the Geneva-Note on Ver. 9. But others there are that gather from these words and these that follow, that God will not onely preserve them, but reduce and resettle them in their own cuntry, yea, and multiply them so abundantly, as that their cuntry shall not be able to hold them Verse 10. Whence cometh Ashurs and *Egypt*s subjection to Christ; that is, all the tract of the East, and of the South verse 11. and their perpetual establishment in the faith.

Verse 12.

Verse 6. And I will bring them again to place them] I will place them in their houses as Hof. 11. 11. The Sept. render it, I will cause them to dwell. The Caldee הושיבתי
וְשָׁבָה
שָׁבָה compof.
 I will gather together their captivity. Some special mercy is assured them by this special word of a mixt conjugation.

for I have mercy upon them] Heres a double cause alledged, of these so great and gracious promises: and both excluding works. First Gods mere mercy. Secondly his Election of grace, for I am the Lord their God. This latter is the cause of the former: for God chose his people for his love, and then loveth them for his choice. The effects of which love are here set down. 1. That he heareth their prayers, I will hear them. 2. That he reaccepteth and restoreth them in Christ, as if they had never offended against him. They shall be as though I had not cast them off. That was a cutting speech, and far worse then their captivity Jer. 16. 13. When God not onely threateneth to cast them out of their countrey into a strange land, but that there he would shew them no favour. Here he promiseth to pity them; and then they must needs think deliverance was at next door by.

and they shall be as though I had not cast them off] And this the sooner, and the rather, because they called them out-casts, saying, This is Zion whom no man seeketh after Jer. 30. 17. The Jewish Nation, saith Tully, shew how God regards them that have been so oft overcome, viz. by N. buchad-nezzar, Pompey &c. God therefore promiseth to provide for his own great name, by being fully reconciled to his poor people, whom the world looked upon as abjects.

for I am the Lord their God And if I should not see to their safety, it would much reflect upon me. This David well knew; and therefore prayes thus, I am thine, Lord, save me. Psal. 110.

and will hear them, Or, I will speak with them: speak to their hearts. It is no more, saith One, then if a man were in a fair dining-room with much good company, and there is some special friend whom he loveth dearly, that calleth him aside to speak in private of businesse, that neerly concerneth him: and though he go into a worse room, yet he is well enough pleased. So if God, in losse of friends, houses, countrey, comforts whatsoever, will speak with us, will answer us, the losse will be easily made up. Philip Lamgrave of Hesse being a long time prisoner under Charles 5. was demanded what upheld him all that time? He answered, that he had felt the favour of God, and the Divine consolations of the Martyrs. There be Divine comforts that are felt onely under the crosse. I will bring her into the wilderness, and there speak to her heart Hof. 2. 13. Israel was never so royally provided for, with Manna, Quails, and other cates, as when they were in the wilderness. The crosse is anointed with comfort, which makes it not onely light, but sweet: not onely not troublesome and importable, but desirable and delightful, saith Bernard. Thy presence O Lord made the very gridiron sweet to Lawrence, saith another; How easily can God make up our losses and breaches?

Verse 7. And they of Ephraim shall be as a mighty man] The same again, and in the same words, for more assurance; because the return of the ten Tribes might seem a thing more incredible, Erant enim quasi putridum cadaver saith Calvin here: they were as rotten carcases, and they had obiter onely heard of these promises; as if some grain of seed should be dropt by the high-way-side: for they were now as aliens from the Common-wealth of Israel.

and their heart shall rejoyce as through wine] Which naturally exhilarateth Psal. 104. 15. and is called by Plato one of the Mitigaters of humane misery See Prov. 31. 6. with the Note. Some nations use to drink wine freely before they enter the battel to make them undaunted. Some think here may be an allusion to such a custom. I should rather understand it of that generous wine of the spirit Eph. 5. 18. MILITANTINE

yea, their children shall see it] Therefore they were not to antedate the promises, but to wait the accomplishment which should certainly be, if not to them, yet to theirs after them, even a full restauration in due season.

Verse 8. I will hiss for them and gather them] As a shepherd hisseth or whistleth for his flock. See Judg. 5. 16. where it should not be translated the bleatings of the flocks, but the hissings or whistlings of the shepherds to their flocks, when they would get them together. God, who hath all creatures at his beck and check, can can easily bring back his banished, gather together his dispersed with a turn of a hand Zech. 13. 7. with a blast of his mouth, as here : as if any offer to oppose him herein, he can blow them to destruction Iob. 4. 9. He can frown them to death Psal. 80. 16. He can crush them between his fingers, as men do a moth Psal. 39. 11. and crumble them to crattle Psal. 146. 4. Like sheep they are laid in the grave, death shall feed on them : and the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning, and their beauty shall consume in the grave from their dwelling. Psal. 49. 14.

For I have redeemed them] I have in part, and that's a pledge of the whole ; my hands also shall finish it, as Chap. 4. 9. God doth not his work to the halves ; neither must we : but if he shall be All in All unto us, we must be altogether His, Cant. 2. 16. His is a covenant of mercy, ours of obedience : which must be therefore full and final, as Christ hath obtained for us an entire, and everlasting redemption. Heb. 9. 12.

and they shall increase as they have increased] By vertue of that promise to Abraham Gen. 13. 16. I will multiply thy seed as the dust of the earth : and Gen. 15. 5. as the stars of heaven. This promise was not presently fulfilled ; for when they came into Egypt they were but seventy souls of them. But under the Egyptian servitude, they increased abundantly Exod. 1. 7. they spawned (as the word signifies) and bred swiftly : so that they went thence 600000. strong. Exod. 12. 37. So that they soon became a mighty and populous nation Deut. 26. 5. Judea was not above 200 miles long, and 50. miles broad : not near the half of England by much ; yet what huge armies had they, when the two tribes and the other ten met in the field, one against another ? And even at this day (whatever is become of the ten tribes : whether they be in China, or America) the Jews are a very great and numerous people. It is thought that there is not any one nation under heaven so great in number as that is, if the dispersed Jews might all be gathered together into one place : And who knows what we may (some of us) yet live to see ? The late Clavis Apocalyptica promisseth great matters to fall out within these three or four yeers.

Verse 9. And I will sow them among the people] Scatter them indeed, but for an excellent purpose, that they may bring forth fruit to God : and be a blessed means of bringing in the fulnesse of the Gentiles harvest. Some kinde of the knowledge of God was diffused by the Jews wherever they came : and when at length the Gospel was preached by the Apostles, they first dealt with the Jews (who had their Synagogues in all places) as it was necessary Act. 13. 46. that as they had been the onely people of God, so now they might be the first invited guests. This invitation when they put from them, and so judged themselves unworthy of eternal life, what remained but that the halt and the blinde Gentiles should be fetcht in from the high wayes and hedges, that so Gods house might be full. So then their dispersion was a semination : and their exile opened a gate for the Gospel. Hence also it is called σπέρμα a dissemination, or scattering : as when a man soweth seed abroad. 1 Pet. 1. 1. Iam. 1. 1.

and they shall remember me in far countries] Saint Paul testifieth that the twelve tribes instantly served God day and night Act. 26. 7. a great deal better, doubtlesse, then they do at this day ; being as reverend in their Synagogues, as grammar-boys are at school when their Master is absent, saith an eye witness.

and they shall live with their children, and turn again] They or their posterity shall. Gods promises bear a long date many times, and the beleiving Hebrews are told that they had need of patience, or tolerance : that after they had done the will of God, and suffered it too, if need be, they might receive the promise. Heb. 10. 36. And they are further exhorted to run with patience the race that is set before them : wherein he that beleeveth maketh not hast, but can wait and wait for what he wisheth, till God please : being desirous rather that God may be glorified then himself gratified, if both may stand together.

Verse 10. I will bring them again also out of the land of Egypt] whither they fled for fear of the Babylonians Ier. 44. and where it seems they became a mighty people, if that be true which Iosephus writeth, viz. that Ptolome Philadelph sent back

Spec. Europ.

1770/1771

Heb. 12. 1.

Antiq. l. 11.
Chap. 2.

on hundred and twenty thousand of them into Judea, and by that royall beneficence obtained the seventy Seniors to be sent by Eleazar the High-priest, for the translating of the Hebrew Bible into Greek. His successor Ptolemaeus Lathyrus was nothing so courteous: for he slew 30000. of them with unheard-of cruelty: and made the living devour the dead.

Gualther: pra-
lat. in Com. in Mare.

and gather them out of Assyria] whither the ten tribes were carried captive, and scattered all abroad through the one hundred twenty and seven provinces, as Haman suggested to the king Esth. 3. 8.

and I will bring them into the land of Gilead and Lebanon] that is, into Judea (the bounds whereof were Lebanus and Gilead) a figure of the Church, that land of delights. See Cant. 4. 1, 8. Gods Hephzibah Isa. 62. 4: O praclarum illam diculam? when shall it once be? The comfort is, God can make a nation conceive and bring forth, both in one day Esay 66. 8. O pray, pray, pray, as Psal. 14. 7. and as the poor Jews pray at this day, Let thy kingdome come speedily, and even in our dayes.

Bimberal
bejamen.

Transiens per mare angustias.

Verse 11. And he shall passe thorough the sea &c.] who shall? The people for want of room, saith Junius: they shall enlarge their quarters into Egypt, Assyria and other nations subduing them to Christ. God shall (say others, and I think better) he shall fright the sea, and miraculously deliver his people, as once he did at the red sea, which threatened to swallow them, but God made it to preserve them. He will remove all rubs and Remora's, all obstacles and impediments: Neither Egypt, nor Assyria shall be able to hinder what God will have done. See Isa. 11. 15. The misunderstanding of this and the like texts to this, might haply occasion that unhappinesse that befell the Jews in Creet Anno 434. The devill under the name of Moses (whom he personated) perwaded those poor creatures, that he was sent from God, to bring them home againe to their own country. This they soon beleevd (as they are wondrous apt to work themselves into the foolcs paradise of a sublime dotage) and leaving all their good to others, followed this seducer (who had spent a whole yeer in travelling over the countrey for the purpose) together with their wives and children to the top of a steep rock that hung over the sea. Thither when they were come, this mock-Moses commanded them to wrap their heads in their upper garments, and so to throw themselves from the rock toward the sea, assuring them of a safe passage. They readily obeyed him: and in that sort perished a great many of them. And more had followed, but that (as God would have it) some Christian fishermen, being there at that instant, took up some of them as they were floating upon the waves, and ready to perish: who afterwards returning to the rest of the Jews, told them how they had been cheated, and how narrowly they had escaped: whereupon they being all enraged (as they had reason) fought for this Seducer to put him to death. But when he could not possibly be found any where, they soon concluded that it was the very devill that old man-slayer: and diverse of them, moved by this calamity, became Christians. The Jews generally beleevd that their Messias when he commeth shall do such miracles as Moses wrought at the red sea. They tell us also that in the time of the Maccabees, diverse Jews that had fled into Greece passed through the narrow sea of Propontis, that runs betwixt Chalcedon and Constantinople, to go back into their own country.

Funcc. Chron.

Hieron.
Remig.
Hugo.

and all the deepes of the rivers shall dry up] As once Jordan did before Iosuah and the people: and as Rev. 16. 12. Euphrates shall do before those kings of the East, which some make to be the Eastern Jews: and the drying up of Euphrates, to be the downfall of the Turkish Empire. Event will be the best interpreter, when all's done.

Verse 12. And I will strengthen them in the Lord] that is, in Christ the head of the Churches: for by his own strength shall no man prevaile, saith holy Hannah 1 Sam. 2. 9. and without me ye can do nothing, saith Christ the true vine, from whom we have both the bud of good desires, the blossom of good resolutions, and the fruit of good actions. Only we must fetch our strength by faith from Christ: and pray as Esay 51. 9. Awake, awake, put on strength, O arm of the Lord.

Ioh. 15. 5.

and they shall walk in his name] i. e. in his strength and to his glory. See that sweet promise Isa. 40. 29, 30, 31. See also the Note above on verse 6.

CHAP. XI.

Verse 1. O Penly doors O Lebanon This chapter is no lesse comminatory, then the two former had been Consolatory. The tartnesse of the threatening maketh men best taste the sweetnesse of the Promise. Sowre and sweet make the best sawce: Promises and threatnings mingled, serve to keep the heart in the best temper. Hypocrites catch at the Promises, as children do at sweet-meats: and stuff themselves therewith a pillow as it were, that they may sin more securely. Here therefore they are given to understand, that God will to be mercifull to the penitent, as that he will by no meanes cleare the guilty. That's the last letter in Gods name Exod. 34. 7. and must never be forgotten. It is fit the wicked should be forewarned of their danger; and the godly forearmed. This chapter hangs over Jerusalem as that blazing-starr in the form of a bloody sword is said to have done for a whole yeeres-space, a little before that last destruction of it, that is here foretold five hundred yeeres before it fell out.

openly doors O Lebanon] i. e. lay open thou thy self to utter ruine; for it is determined, and cannot be avoided. Lebanon was the confine of the countrey on that side, whereby the Romans made their first irruption, as by an inlet. Doors or gates are attributed to this Forrest; because against Lebanus is set Antilibanus, another mountain; which is joyned unto it as it were with a certain wall: so that these were and are narrow passages and gates kept sometimes of the kings of Persia by a speciall officer, Neb. 2. 8. and fortified by nature: yet not so strongly, but that the Romanes brake in this way, and much waited the Forrest, to employ the trees for the besieging of Jerusalem; as Esay 14. 8. The Chaldee Paraphrast by Lebanon here understandeth the Temple, which was built of the Cedars of Lebanon: and Ezech. 17. 3. Lebanon is put for Jerusalem: which also had in it that house of the Forrest of Lebanon, built by Solomon 1 King. 7. 2. wherein he had both his throne of judgement ver. 7. and his armoury chap. 10. 17. So that by Lebanon may be very well meant the whole countrey of Judea: but especially the city and Temple, the iron gates whereof opened themselves of their own accord, that had not been open in seven yeeres before: and could scarce be shut by twenty men, saith Iosephus. This fell out not long before the city was taken by Titus, whereupon Rabbi Jonathan the son of Zachai cryed out, En vatcinium Zacharia, B. hold the Prophesie of Zachary fulfilled: for he foretold this, that this temple should be burnt, and that the gates thereof should first be opened.

that the fire may devour thy Cedars] Warr is as a fire, that feedeth upon the people Isa. 9. 19. or like as an hungry man snatcheth &c. ver. 20. there is in warr no measure or satiety of blood. The Greek word for warr signifieth much blood. The Hebrew word, devouring and eating of men, as they eat bread. The Latine Bellum, à belluis, it destroyes the Lord as well as the losell, the cedar as well as the shrub. Tamberlaines coach-horses were conquered kings. Adonibezacks dogs, seventy kings gathering crumbs under his table. Let fire come out of the bramble, and devour the Cedars of Lebanon Iudg. 9. 15. that is, Let fire come out from Abimelech, and devour the men of Shechem ver. 20.

Verse 2 Howle firree that is, ye of lower rank: or ye meaner cityes, those daughters of Jerusalem, that felt the Romans force: howle, take up a loud out-cry, a doleful ditty after the manner of those that are carried captive by the enemy. Psal. 137. 3. For there they, that carried us away capt ve, required of us a song: and they that wasted us, qui contumelabant nos, that threw us on heaps (so Tremellius rendereth it, conter Isa. 25. 2.) or those that made us howle contumelatores nostri, (so Schindler) required of us mirth.

because all the mighty are spoiled] the magnifico's, the men of power as they are called Psal. 76. 5. stout hearted and every way able for strength, courage and riches; which oft take away the life of the owners, and expole them to spoile; as every man desireth to lop the tree that hath thick and large boughs and branches.

howle

Howle is here called the forest of the vintage, or the defended forest ver. 2.

Lib. 7. de bell. Jud. cap. 12.

R. David. Lyra Galatin. 1. 4. c. 8.

Howle is here called the forest of the vintage, or the defended forest ver. 2.

Rom. 1. 13.

howle O ye oakes of Basban] Ogs countrey, who only remained of the remnant of Gyants Deut. 3. 11. The Jews fable that he escaped in the flood, by riding astride on the Ark. By the oaks of his countrey understand, the strong and eminent. The Chaldees rendreth it Sarrapa provinciarum, ye provincially Governours.

for the Forrest of the vintage] Or the defended Forrest, viz. of Lebanon i. e. Jerusalem that seemed impregnable, but at length came down ruit alto a culmine, as a cedar that is felled by a Mighty One Esay 10. 34. Death hewed its way thorough a wood or Forrest of men in a minute of time from the mouth of a murdering peece, or some such warlike engine. When the sword is once sharpened, it makes a fore slaughter: it contemneth the rod Ezek. 21. 10. q. d. what does this filly rod do here? these lesser and lighter judgements? let me come, I'll make work amongst them: down with these oakes, down with this defended Forrest &c.

Verse 3. There is a voice of the howling of the shepherds] Potentes potentior requiebuntur. The loftinesse of man shall be bowed down: and the haughtinesse of men shall be made low: and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day. The shepherds were grown foolish ver. 15. Idol-shepherds 17. they cared for no other instruments but forcipes & mulctram the sheares and the milk-pail: they were become greedy dogs, which could never have enough (they were sick of the bulimy or appetitus caninus) yea they were as so many yong lions ramping and ravening, as it is here, and Ezek. 19. 2, 3. Both Princes and Priests were turned tyrants: and instead of feeding the people in the integrity of their hearts, and guiding them with the skillfulness of their hands, prey'd upon them and plucked the skin from off them, and their flesh from off their bones Mic. 3. 2.

Esay 2. 17.

Esay 56. 11.

Psal. 78. 72.

for the pride of Iordan is spoiled] the swelling of Iordan dried up by the Romans, as Hierome interprets it: Or the proud and stately palaces and possessions that the great Ones had gotten upon the banks of Iordan for fruitfulness and pleasure, as a Lapide: Or the numerous and proud nation of the Jews likened to the yearly overflowing of Iordan, whereof see Iosh. 3. 15. Ier. 49. 19. as Diodate.

Verse 4. Thus saith the Lord my God, Feed the flock of slaughter] so lately pulled out of the jaws of those lions ver. 3. with Am. 3. 12. and yet destined to destruction by the Romans, those Raptores Orbis (their former preservation being but a reservation to future mischief) for their desperate obstinacy and inconvertibleness.

feed them] saith God to the Prophets: for their ordinary shepherds have cast off all care of their good. Tell them what evill will betide them, unless they repent: forewarn them to flee from the wrath to come: to take course that they may escape all these things that shall come to passe. O the goodness of God to a nation so shamelessly, so lawlessly wicked! Besides himself, the Shepherd of Israel that led Ioseph like a flock Psal. 80. 1. and neglected no good office of seeking and feeding them, of handling and healing them, of washing them and watching over them &c. how carefull was he ever to raise them up seven shepherds and eight principal men, till at length he sent the man Christ Iesus who is the chief of ten thousand, the chief Shepherd as St. Peter calls him 1 Epist. 5. 4. that One and only Shepherd, as Solomon Eccles. 12. 11. that great Shepherd of the sheep, as Paul Heb. 13. 20. who came to look up the lost sheep of the house of Israel, whom (to move compassion and affection) he here calleth the flock of slaughter, untill the time prefixed for their totall dispersion, by reason of their ingratitude.

Mat. 3.

Luke 21. 36.

Mic. 5. 5.

Verse 5. Whose Possessours slay them] slaying their skin from off them, eating their flesh, breaking their bones &c. Mic. 3. 3. feeding themselves, and not the flock of God Ezek. 34. 2, as if they had been Lords over Gods heritage 1 Pet. 5. 3. Owners and Possessours as here, vel precio vel premio: and as the Pope and his Curia Romana qua non vult ovem sine lana, as the old Proverb was.

and hold themselves not guilty] Non peccant. They fault not themselves: they are not found guilty by others. Such an illimited power over Gods people they have.

have usurped, as if they might use them at their pleasure, and never be once questioned, or punished for the same; but scape scotfree. This was the extremity of tyranny; such as the cruell Spaniards exercise over the poor Indians: they suppose they shew the wretches great favour, when they do not, for their pleasure, whip them with cords; and day by day drop their naked bodies with burning bacon; which is one of the least cruelties they inflict upon them.

World encompassed by S. F.
Drake 53.

and they that sell them] Sell them for slaves (whom they ought to redeem rather with their own blood) and grow rich by them: being greedy of filthy lucre, not without foule blasphemy against God, whom they entitle to their riches sacrilegiously and most theevishly gotten; whilst they say,

Psal. 22. 3.

blessed be the Lord, for I am rich] Deo gratias, Blessed be God is a very good saying, and was much in Austins mouth. But as the fountain of goodnesse will not be laden at with unwashen hands: so fair words from a foul mouth, are infinitely displeasing to him that inhabiteth the praises of Israel. Hypocrites are not unfully compared to Monks, that have the gravest countenances of all creatures; but are uncessantly doing mischief: or to the Harpies, that are said to have Virgins faces, Vultures talions. Mel in ore, verba lactis: Fel in corde, fraus in factis. Pharisees, under pretence of long prayers, devoured widows houses Mat. 23. 14. whilst their lips seemed to pray or praise God, they were but chewing and champing some sweet morsel snatcht from the flock, but sawced with the wrath of God Job 20. 15. See how our Saviour sets them out in their colours Mat. 23. 15, 16, 23. &c. Such fair professours, but foul sinners were their predecessours, Esay 66. 5. who when they had done evil as they could, thought to salve all by saying, Let the Lord be glorified. And such also are their Successours, The Pope and his followers. Verba tua Dei plane sunt, facta vero diaboli (said one once to Pope Innocent the third preaching peace but sowing discord) you speak like a God, but do like a devil: wherefore you shall receive the greater damnation. When one of our persecuting Bishops read the sentence of excommunication against a certain Martyr: and began as the usual form was, In the name of God, Amen, the Martyr cryed out, you begin in a wrong name. And it grew to a common proverb, In nomine Dei incipit omne malum. All mischief begins on that maner. Gentilis that impious Anti-Trinitarian gave out, that he suffered for the glory of the most High God. Becket the Arch-traitour pretended to submit to his Sovereign, but with this false reserve, Salvo honore Dei. The Swenckfeldians entituled themselves the confessours of the glory of Christ. And Conradus Vorstius his late monster hath De Deo in the front: and Atheisme and blasphemy in the text.

Ab. and Mon.

and their own shepheards pity them not] Which yet they ought to have done, had they had never so much right and reason to destroy them. A shepherd hath his name from friendly feeding: in Greek from earnest desire and love to the sheep. David when he was hunted from Samuel the Prophet, he fleeth to Abimelech the Priest: as one that knew Justice and Compassion should dwell in those breasts, that are consecrated to God and his people. But these shepheards through want of Gods holy fear Iob. 6. 14. had brawny breasts, horny heart-strings, their hearts first turned into earth and mud, did afterwards freeze into steel and adamant: cursed children they were, having their hearts exercised with covetousnesse and cruelty.

2 Pet. 2. 24.

Verse 6. For I will no more pity the inhabitants of the land] Or surely I will no more &c. A feareful sentence, written in blood, and breathing out nothing but utter destruction, David knew what he did, when he chose rather to fall into the hand of the Lord, then of men. For his mercies are many, and it soon repents him concerning his servants: but the tender mercies of the wicked are cruel. Those shepheards in the former verse were grievous wolves: what wonder therefore that they spared not the flock? But yet whilst God pittied them there was hope in Israel concerning this thing, as He said Ezr. 10. 2. whereas now that Gods soul is disjoynted from them, and his bowels shut up, desolation must needs be at every door by Ier. 6. 8. Be not thou a terror unto me, O Lord, said that Prophet, and then I care not, though all the world frown upon me, and set against me. But woe be to Lo-rnamah, the people of Gods wrath, and of his curse. I have noted before out of Ier. 16. 13. that Gods I will shew you no favour, was worse then I will cast you out of this land.

Prov. 12. 10.

Ab. 20. 29.

Ier. 17. 17.

I WIL

I will deliver the men] Heb. I will make them to be found, pulling them out of their starting-holes, and lurking places. Evil shall hunt the violent man to destroy him. Psal. 140. 11.

every one into his neighbours hand] As into the hang-mans hand. This was fulfilled, especially during the siege by the seditious within the walls of Jerusalem, one man proving a wolf, nay a devil to another.

Joseph. d. bel. Jud. l. 6. cap. 2. and 4. and into the hand of his king] The Roman Emperour, who disclaimed indeed the name of a king to avoid the hatred of the people, and yet exercised the full power of kings both at home and abroad. These Jews first subdued by the Romans and reduced into a province, did afterwards rebel (though they had once in opposition to Christ cried out, we have no king but Cesar) and were therefore, after five moneths siege utterly ruined: For what with extremity of famine, and what with the fury of the sword, there perished in Jerusalem, and in the province adjoining, as Eusebius affirms about 600000. able men to bear armes. Or as Josephus holds, who was an eye-witnesse, and present in the war, there died 1100000. besides others taken captive, to the number of 970000.

Joseph. anti. supra

and I will smite the land] So that it hath lain, as it were bed-ridden ever since.

Verse 7. And will I feed the flock of slaughter, even you, O poor of the flock] Or, as Munanus readeth it, for you, for your sakes, O poor of the flock. i. e. O ye that are poor in spirit, pure in heart, my little little flock, as our Saviours expression is in Luke. Even for your sakes will I yet for a time spare the reprobate goates, feeding them by my Prophets, and provoking them to repentance. The word and Sacraments, and all Gods common temporal favours are, in respect of external participation, communicated to Reprobates by way of Concomitancy onely: because they are intermixed with the Elect. Thus tares mingled among wheat, partake of the fat of the land, and moisture of the manure, which was not intended for them.

and I took unto me two staves] viz. That I might therewith do the office of a shepherd: and yet in more then an ordinary manner. For shepherds commonly carry but one staffe, or crook: or, at most, but a staffe on their shoulders, and a rod in their hands, as David shews in his Pastoral Psal. 23. 3. But here are two staves taken: to shew, saith Mr. Calvin, that God would surpasse all the care and pains of men, in governing that people.

the one I called Beauty, and the other I called Bonds] What these two should mean, much adoe is made among Interpreters. Some are for the two Covenants: Others for the two Testaments: Others for the order of Christs preaching, sweet and mild at first, terrible and full of threatnings at last, as appeareth in Ma. 24. 24, 25. But what a wilde conceit was that of Anthony Arch-Bishop of Florence, who understood the words of Dominick and his Order; construing them thus: I, that is God took unto me two staves viz. Beauty, that is, the Order of Preachers, and Bonds, that is, the Order of Minorites, who are girt with a cord? The Hist. Proph. 3 tit 23. founder sort of Expositours make it to be a figure, of the two wayes which Christ useth at all times in feeding of his Church; the one by love, guiding them by his word and Spirit: the other by severity, punishing them by the cruel hand of their enemies. See Esay 10. 5. Thus Vualius, Drudne &c. And that this is the true sense, saith A Lapide, it appeareth: First, because this oracle of the Prophet is of the time to come, and not of the time past. Secondly the event, (that best interpreter of prophecies) maketh for it. For first Gods government of the common-wealth of Israel was beautiful, and gentle in the time of the Maccabees, and of Christ: and then terrible and destrutory, in the time of the Romans, of Nero, Vespasian, Adrian &c. Thirdly because that a little after the Prophet saith, that he brake both the staves, that is, he utterly rejected the Jews, and brought his wrath upon them to the utmost, which cannot be meant of any other time then that of Christ, and of Titus. Especially since (in the fourth place) the Prophet declareth Verse 13. that the staff of Beauty was broken at the death of Christ, for their unworthy selling and slaughtering of him, as if he had been some slave or base person, and I fed the flock] q. d. I did my part by them. Thy destruction therefore is of thy self, O Israel. England is a mighty Animal (saith a Politician) which can never die, except it kill it self. The same might be much more said of the Jewish Common-wealth, which Iosephus truly and trimly calleth a Theocratia, or a God-government for the form and first constitution of it: and Moses in this respect, magnifieth that nation above all other Deut. 4.6,7.

B b b 3 of

Vers 8. Three shepheards also 1 cut off in one moneth] That is, in a short time, I took away and displaced even by the heathen Princes, many proud princes, and Priests: such as were Menelaus, Jason the Aristobuli, Hircani, Annas, Caiaphas, and others: Or, I removed those three sorts of shepheards of the old Law, viz. Princes Prophets and Priests. Thus Theodore and Varabius. Diodate understands the text of the three chief Empires that had tyrannized over the people, ver. 6,3, and 12,10. Namely the Caldean, Persian, and Grecian Empire, which were destroyed by the Son of God, Dan. 2.45. But they do best in mine opinion, that by these three shepheards understand those three sects among the Jews at Christs coming in the flesh; viz. Pharisees, Sadduces, and Essenes: whereof, though the Pharisees were the best, and most exact for the outward observation of the Law, yet are they in the Gospel for their putid hypocrisy, first sharply taxed by our Saviour (after the Baptist) and then plainly rejected, and even sent to hell by a chain-shot of eight links of woes Mat. 23.

and my soul loathed them] Or, was taken off from them, or was straitned for them; because I saw that they received my grace in vain, and considered not of my care for their good. Theodotion and Symmachus render it Anima mea exanimata est, I am dispirited as it were, and even disheartened to do any more for them.

and their soul also abhorred me] And so they became God-haters as Rom. 1. 30. and therefore hateful to God Tit. 3. 3. hateful as hell (so the word imports) yea more, and worse, for hell is but an effect of Gods justice: but wickednesse is a breach of his Law. The Prophet here seemeth to allude to those murmurers in the wilderness, that disdainfully cryed out, Our soul loatheth this light bread Num. 21. 5. Let Gods servants take heed how they hang loose toward him: and lest, by disuse and discontinuance of a duty, there grow upon them an alienation of affection, a secret disrelishing and nauseating at that which we oughtmost deeply to affect, and duely to perform. Surely as loathing of meat and difficulty of breathing are two symptomes of a sick body: so are carelesnesse of hearing, and irksomnesse of praying two sure signes of a sick soul.

Vers 9. Then said I, I will not feed you] Now the wrath of the Lord arose against his people, so that there was no remedy, as 2 Chron. 36.16. Now his decree brought forth Zeph. 2. 2. Now he growes implacable, inexorable, peremptory. Wherein neverthelesse the Lord might very well break forth into that speech of the Heathen Emperour, when he was to passe sentence upon a malefactor, Non nisi coactus, I would not do this, if I could do otherwise. Christ could not tell Ierusalem without tears, that her day of grace was expired, that her destruction was determined. As a woman brings not forth without pain: as a bee stings not, till provoked: so neither doth God proceed against a sinfull people or person, till there be an absolute necessity; lest his truth and justice should be questioned and slighted. See Ezek. 12. 22, 23, 24, 25. Fury is not in God, till our sins put thunderbolts into his hands: and then, who knoweth the power of his anger? who can abide with everlasting burnings? If he but cast a man off as here, and relinquish the care of him, he is utterly undone. Saul found it so, and complaines dolefully (but without pittie) that God had forsaken him, and the Philistines were upon him: all miseries and mischief came rushing into him, as by a fluce. Let us so carry matters, that God may not abandon us: that he may not refuse to feed us, and take the charge of us as a shepheard. He yet offereth us this mercy, as Alexandre did those he warred against, while the lamp burned.

that that dieth, let it die] viz. of the murraine, or pestilence, For man being in honour, if God but blow upon him, abideth not, but is like the beasts that perish, pecoribus morticinis, saith Tremellius the beasts that die of the murrain. Varabius thinks pestilence, sword and famine, are here threatened under the names of death, of cutting off, and of devouring one another. All which befell the refractory Jews in the last siege: the history whereof will make any mans heart bleed

Deogenes
syngon.

Dr Hall

2-j-11-107
22-5-107
1-8-107
F. 12

Psal. 90. 11.
Ez. 33. 14.

1 Sam. 28. 15.

bleed within him, that hath but the least spark of grace, or good nature. It went hard with them, when the rest, that the pestilence and sword had left, fell to eating the flesh one of another; when the mother killed and boyled the dead body of her harmlesse suckling, and eating the one half, reserved the other for another time. Behold O Lord, and consider to whom thou hast done this? saith the Prophet: Shall the women eat their fruit and children of a span long? Oh the misery, or rather mock of mans life! And oh, the venomous nature of sinne, that moves God (who is not μωλυδωπον, a man-hater, but delights in mercy) to deal so severely with his poor creature.

Lam. 2. 20

Verse 10. And I took my staffe even Beauty, and cut it asunder ] In token that he had cast off his office of shepherd, he breaks his staffe the ensigne and instrument of his office: and this in token that he had broke his covenant which hee had made with all the people | i. e. with all the tribes of Israel, which were as so many severall peoples, over whom God had reigned (but now rejected) and in whom He delighted more then in all the nations of the world besides. The Saints are called All things, Colos. 1. 20. because they are of more worth then a world of wicked men, Heb. 11. 38. And the Jews have a saying, that those seventy souls that went with Jacob into Egypt, were as much as all the seventy Nations in the world. What great account God once made of them above others, see Esay 43. 3, 4. Dent. 33. 29. But now behold they are discarded, and discovenanted: I have broken my covenant, and (ver. 11.) it was broken in that day ] that is, in the day that they put themselves out of my precincts, I put them out of my protection. That peace that I had granted to my people, that they should bee no more molested by any strange Nation (which was verified from the time of the Maccabees till a little before the coming of Christ) shall now be forfeited. The glory is departed, the Beauty broken in pieces, the golden head of the picture, Religion defaced, and good order banished: all things out of order both in Church and state, for so they were when Christ came to his own, and his own received him not: he found them in Dothan, that is, in Desfection, as Ioseph found his brethren) therefore he now disowns and disavowes them as much as once he did when they had made a golden calf. Thy people which thou broughtest out of the land of Egypt have corrupted themselves, saith God to Moses; upon whom he now fathereth them, as if he had never been in covenant with them. Danans upon this Text concludeth, that the Jews are now strangers from the covenant of God: and that this is hereby confirmed, for that they are without Baptisme, the seal of the covenant.

Excd. 32 7

Verse 11. And it was broken in that day ] When they filled up the measure of their fathers finnes, and added this to all their other evils, that they crucified the Lord of glory: the Mediatour of the new Covenant, Heb. 12. 24. Now they were, by an irrevocable decree, to bear their iniquities, and to know Gods breach of promise, as once was threatened to their faithlesse fathers, Num. 14. 24.

and so the poor of the flock ] i. e. the lowly and meek, the Apostles and other of wisdomes children, these all justified her, and glorified God when they saw his severity against their refractory countrey-men, and themselves sweetly secured and provided for at Pella. See the Note on verse 7.

Mat. 11. 19

Euseb. Hist. lib. 3. cap. 5.

that waited upon me ] Heb. that observed me, by obeying my precepts. Pagnine rendreth it, Qui custodiunt me, sc. as their most precious treasure, wherein they hold themselves very happy, and wealthy, though otherwise poor and indigent.

Knew that it was the word of the Lord ] Were sensible of Gods heavy displeasure upon the land; which others passed by as a common occurrence, or a chance of war. The Elect made benefit of that generall visitation: and acknowledged that the warres moved by the Romans were the effects of Gods providence, according to the ancient prophecies. This the rich and noble (whose hearts were fat as grease, Psal. 119. 70. Qui animas etiam incarnaverunt, who were desperately hard and brutish) took no notice of.

Verse 12. If ye think good, give me my price ] Pay me for my pains, lay mee down my shepherds wages. Is not the labourer worthy of his hire? Shall I be forced to say of you as my servant David of Nabal, that unthankfull churl; Surely in vain have I kept all that this fellow had in the wilderness, so that nothing was missed of.

1 Sam. 25. 21

Εἰ πλεονεί-χον πλεον
ἐστίδεν.

of all that pertained unto him, and he hath requited me evil for good. If God will be Davids shepherd, David will dwell in Gods house to all perpetuity, Psal. 23. 1, 6. If the Lord deal bountifully with him, he will sit down and bethink himself what to render unto the Lord for all his benefits, Psal. 116. 7, 12. A Christian counts all that he can do for God, by way of retribution, but a little of that much he could bestow him: and thinks nothing more unbecoming himself, then to receive the grace of God in vain. His two mites of thankfulness and obedience, he daily presents: and then cries out as the poor Grecian did to the Emperour, If I had a better present, thou shouldst be sure of it. But Ingratitude is a grave, which receives all the bodies (the benefits) that are put into it; but will render none up again, without a miracle. Hence that passionate expostulation, Deut. 32. 6. Do ye thus requite the Lord, O ye foolish people and unwise? Sic etiam stomachosè loquitur Deus hoc loco, saith Calvin upon this text: i. e. So likewise doth the Lord here in high displeasure and with great animosity, or stomach bespeak his people, Give me my wages howsoever: or, if not, forbear till I fetch it, till I recover it: you shall be sure to pay then, not the debt onely, but the charges likewise: I will be paid both for my pains and patience too. In the mean space I need you not, nor care for your wages; for I am no hireling, &c.

So they weighed for my price, thirty pieces of silver that is, thirty shekels, or shillings. The price of a slain servants life, Exod. 31. 22. This they weighed, as the manner of paying money then was, Gen. 23. 16. Jer. 32. 9. But they heaved their hands very high, it seems, when they valued the Lord Christ at so vile a rate. See Mat. 26. 15. with the Note.

Verse 13. Cast it unto the potter ] q. d. Do they deal with me as with some sort of swineherd? Do they award me lesse then Carters wages? throw't away; let the potter take it: and let us see how many tiles he can afford us for it, to repair the roof of the Temple. Their undervaluing and vilipending of me in this sort, is not onely injurious, but contumelious: it is to turn my glory into shame; to spit in my face: or to use me as homely as Rachel did her fathers gods, which she laid among the litter, and sat upon.

A goodly price that I was valued at of them ] So he calleth it by an Irony, or a holy jeer. Poor Joseph was sold for lesse; for twenty pieces of silver, Gen. 37. 28. They sold the just one for silver, and the poor for a pair of shoes, Amos 2. 6. The Hebrews tell us, that of those twenty shekels, every of the ten brethren had two to buy shoes for his feet. The Jews that bought Christ for thirty pieces of silver (this goodly price) of the traytour that sold him, were themselves afterwards (by a just hand of God upon them) bought and sold thirty of them for a penny by the Romans, ad illudendum, saith mine Authour, for a scorn to their Nation. God loves to retaliate; and to set the scales even; mens cruelty in the one, and their reward in the other. If we be at any time under-rated by the world, (as we are sure to be; for the world knows us not, 1 Joh. 3. 2.) what so great matter is it, sith Christ himself was no more set by? We must be content to passe to heaven (as he did) as concealed men. It must suffice us, that our precious faith shall be found to praise, honour, and glory at that great fair-day: when all fardles shall be opened, and our best wares exposed to publike view.

Pink R:
Eliex. cap 38.

Hegeſipp. de excid. Hierosol.
p. 680.

1 Pet. 1. 7

Mat. 27. 10

and cast them to the potter ] I gave them for the potters field, as the Lord appointed me, saith the Evangelist, expounding the Prophet, and applying the words to Christ, who is hereby also proved to be God. So true is that observation of Divines, that the old Testament is both explained and fulfilled in the New, by an happy harmony.

in the house of the Lord ] That thereby he might the more sharply prick the Priests: whose care it ought to have been, that God should be better prized by the people, and his service better observed.

Verse 14. Then I cut asunder mine other staffe, even Bands ] Or, Binders: the the bond of unity, say some: by sending a spirit of perversities among them, such as that was which made way for the ruine of Egypt, Esay 19. 14, 16, 17. But see for the fence hereof what is noted on verse 7. of this chapter. God seems to say, that he will now no more govern this people in mildnesse and clemency: nor yet exercise his shepherdly severity in saving corrections and visitations, as formerly he

CHAPTER IV. The Trials of Zach

hee had done, but that hee had
that
and some of them were house of David, and some Rehoboth, besides the twelve thousand at the
And in Jerusalem dwelt the children of Judah,
and of the children of Benjamin, and Manasse, brotherly conjunction, and consanguinity, as well as the der it, or a nationall covenant. Thus God the Father made null: so that Ephraim shall be against Benjamin, as and both against Judah. Not many yeeres before Christ, coming two brethren Herod and Archelaus fell out, and the people priesthood; and called in Pompey, who subdued that country, and a province. And not many yeeres after Christs passing, Titus our utterly broke the brotherhood betweene Judah and Israel them, that like those priests in Ezer, they have forgotten not one another by their tribe, or family, nor yet the names of them that were in Spain, and are now banished out of the they hold to be of the tribe of Judah: and the other sort of the tribe of Benjamin: who in honour of the more with them the better, to learn the Spanish tongue, that [illegible]

Verse 16. For lo, I will raise up a shepherd in the land. Evil the times are these.

Red-bellied Magpie, or northern Gallus, Black-bellied Magpie, or southern Gallus,
and Magpie

Disability

B. Z. Lurie

100

100

KUM

in Rulers in State, and Church, see Jer. 6. 3. Nehem. 5. 18. Esay 44. 28. are set up by God for a punishment of a sinful people. See the Note on verse 13. The evil shepherd here meant, was Antichrist Epaphras, saith Theodores: Herod the Infamicide, saith Memorius: Titus and the Romans, saith a Capro: All the perverſe Priests and Princes that ruled over the Jews, after the time of this Prophecy, saith A. Lapidus: as Jason, Menelaus, 2. Alcibiades. 4. & 5. Herod, Pilate, Annas and Caiaphas, the Scribes, and Pharisees: But especially Antichrist, (according to Job 5. 43.) whose fore-runners all the former were. Of one Pope, it is said by those of his own side, that he crept upon the government of the Church as a Fox, reigned as a Wolf, and as a Dog: and is true enough of all the rest, and to them the following words do most fitly agree.

who shall not visit those that he cut off] Or, look for the thing that is lost. Illos qui erraverunt, non quæret, saith the Chaldee: the word signifieth, such as are hid in thickets, hang'd among thorns and briers, and there like to perish without help.

whether shall seek the young one] the tender lambs of Christ, which Peter was double-charged to feed. Stolidam non requirit, saith the Tigurine Translation. Lambs are silly things, very apt to straggle; and least able of any creature to find their way home again.

nor heal that that is broken] David, by leaping over the pale (as it were) of Gods precepts, brake his bones, Psal. 51. 8. and felt the fall the longest day of his life: So may any of Christs flock. The good shepherd therefore in pera gestat augmentum, hath his medicines ready in scrip, to apply as need requireth. Not so the Idol-shepherd, who will rather break the sound, then bind up the broken.

nor feed that that standeth still] Or, that is well underlaid, and is full of vigour: Vasabius rendreth it, Eam qua resitat, non portabit. He will not carry that which can go no further. Hitherto the negligence of these evil-shepherds. Followeth next their cruelty, and that is more then bestiall. For the ravening beasts lightly leave some foot or bone undevoured, Am. 3. 12. But these do not onely eat the flesh of the flock, and suck the fat, but barbarously tear the claws also in pieces, exercise utmost inhumanity; as it is here graphically and gallantly described.

Verse 17. Who is the idol shepherd] The Vulgar hath, O pastor & idolum, O thou shepherd and idol: thou that hast the shew onely, and semblance of a shepherd; the name, but not the thing, thou that art the ape of a shepherd, non verus sed vana, non vivus sed pillus & fictus pastor, that art cleped a shepherd, as an idol is a god: but shouldst be called rather a dumb-dog, a greedy-dog; a shepherd that cannot understand, Esay 56. 10. 11. a foolish shepherd, as verse 15. an indurbit; one that hath nothing in him of any true worth; but art vain and vile, and of no value, as this word is rendred, Job 13. 4. and 11. 17. Va, va, va, ribi. Christ (the great shepherd of the sheep) will surely pull off thy visour, wash off thy varnish with rivers of brimstone, brand thee for an hireling, that leaveth the flock] to shift, as it can, among theeves and wolves, Job. 10. 13. See the Note there.

The sword shall be upon his arm, and upon his right eye] i. e. The curse of God shall light upon his power, and policy, both which shall be blasted.

his arm shall be clean dried up] as a keck, or stick.

and his right eye shall be utterly darkned] Or, shrivelled up, wrinkled and dusk: as in old tybens. The idle and evil servant had his talent taken from him, and worthily. The barren fig-tree was cut down from cumbring. God will recover his gifts from those that misuse, or but disuse them. Away they go, as strength went from Sampson, wisdom from Solomon: they cry unto God under our abuse, who thereupon gives them the wings of an Eagle, and layes aside their owne, as so many broken vessels; causing them to be even forgotten as dead men out of mind, Psal. 31. 21. This is now especially fulfilled among the Jews, who for a long season have been without God, without a teaching Priest, and without Law, 2. Cor. 13. 3.

לִּיכֵן Per agnominationem alludit ad
מַרְדֵּכַי ver. 15

Many Pastors
cry as He,
Pan caries oues
omnino ma-gistros. Virg.

Mat. 25. 28
Luke 19
Hof. 2. 9

CHAP. XII.

Verse 1. THE burden of the word of the Lord ] That is, a declaration of his mind and counsell for Israels comfort, and his enemies confusion. To the Israel of God it is onus sine onere, such a burden as the wings are to the bird, a burdenlesse burden. To the enemies, a burdensome stone, verse 3. heavier then the sand of the sea, Iob 6. 3.

For Israel ] Not, against Israel, though Calvin so taketh it: and by Israel understandeth the ten tribes, and those other captives that, loth to leave those houses they had built, and those gardens they had planted in Babylon, Ier. 29. 5. neglected to return to Jerusalem for fear of the Samaritans and other ill neighbours, whose ruine is therefore here foretold by three excellent similitudes, after a stately preamble, drawn 1. From the power of God, whereby he stretcheth forth the heavens, that huge expanse, as a curtain, or as a molten looking-glasse. 2. From the wisdom of God, in laying the foundation of the earth, and hanging it, by Geometry, as we say, in the midst of heaven, like Archimedes his pigeon, equally poized with its own weight. Job 37. 18
Job 26. 7

Terra pile similis, nullo fulcimine nixa, Aere subjecto tam grave pender onus.

Ovid. Fast. 1. 6

3. From the goodnesse of God, who formeth the spirit of man within him ] who hath made us these souls, Esay 57. 16. which he doth daily create and infuse into mens bodies; yea and that alone, without any help of their parents: hence hee is called the Father of spirits, Heb. 12. 9. and the spirit of a dying man is said to return to God that gave it, Eccles. 12. 7. This last text convinced Augustine (who held sometime, with Origen, that the soul as well as the body was begotten by the parents) farre more then the peremptory rashnesse of Vincentius Vittor: who censured boldly the Fathers unresolvnednesse, (when hee doubted concerning the originall of a rationall soul) and vaunted that he would prove by demonstration, that souls are created de novo, by God. Aristotle (Natures chief Secretary) was much puzzled about this point of the soul: which indeed cannot fully bee conceived of, nor defined by man. Onely this we can say, that the soul as it comes from God, so it is like him; viz. One immateriall, immortall, understanding Spirit: distinguished into three Powers, which all make up one Spirit.

Chemnitius.

Verse 2. Behold, I will make Jerusalem a cup of trembling ] Or, slumber, or poyson. A Metaphor taken from a cup of generous wine, but empoysoned; so that those that drink of it, do presently tremble, grow giddy, sleepy, sick as heart can hold. Poyson in wine works more furiously. Thou hast made us to drink the wine of giddinesse, saith the Church, Psal. 60. 3. In the hand of the Lord is a cup, and the wine is red, it is full mixed, &c. The Prophet here seems to allude to Ier. 25. 15. Esay 29. 8. Ier. 51. 7. Ovid saith of the river Gallus, that whoso drinketh of it runneth mad immediatly. Hierom telleth of a Lake neer Naples, whereinto if a dog be thrown he presently dieth. The like is reported by Josephus of the Lake Asphaltites. Jerusalem shall be a murdering morfell to those that swallow it. His meat in his bowels is turned, it is the gall of aspes within him. Hee hath swallowed down her spoil, and he shall vomit it up again: God shall rake it out of his belly: He shall have as little joy of his tid-bits, of his sweet draughts, as Jonathan had of his honey: whereof he had no sooner tasted, but his head was forfeited. Pliny speaketh of a kind of honey that poysoneth: because it is sucked out of poysonous flowers. Our Chronicler telleth us, that at Alvelana three miles from Lisbon, many of our English souldiers under the Earl of Essex perished, by eating of honey, purposely left in the houses, and spiced with poyson. The enemies mies of the Church make a dangerous adventure, they are even ambitious of destruction: they run to meet their bane, as did those Philistines at Mizpeh, 1 Sam. 7. And had they but so much wit as Pilats wife in a dream, they would take heed of having any thing to do with those just men, of eating up Gods people as they eat bread, Psal. 14. 4. of bowling in the bowles of the Sanctuary with Baltasar, who fell thereupon into a trembling, so that his loyns were loosed, and his knees knockt one against another.

Job 20. 14, 15

Speed. 1210.

Dan. 5. 6

When they shall be in the siege | And so about to do their last and worst against the Church. The people of Rome was sepe praelio victus, nunquam bello, saith Florus: they lost many battles, but were never overcome in a set warre: at the last, at the long-runne, as they say, they crushed all their enemies: so doth the Church. See Psal. 129. thorowout: and the story of the Maccabees.

Cades Justif. of the Church.

Verse 3. I will make Jerusalem a burdensome stone | Such a stone as that where- with the woman brake Abimelech his brainpan, at the tower of Thebez, Judg. 9. 53. He had slain all his brethren upon one stone, verse 5. he receives therefore his death-wound by a stone: and that by the hand of a woman, which was his greatest grief. The like death befell Pyrrhus, king of Epirotes, slain at the siege of Argos, with a tyle thrown by a woman from the wall. So was Earl Simon Mountfort, that bloody persecutour of the Albigenses in France. A woman discharged an engine at him, from the walls of Tholouse, and by a stone parted his head from his shoulders. The virgin daughter of Zion shall do as much as all this comes to for her besiegers: though all the people of the earth be gathered together against her. For why? she hath a strong champion; that, in maintaining her quarrell, will dash them to pieces, and grind them to powder, Luke 20. 18. They are no more able to stand before him, then a glasse-bottle before a cannon-shot. Hence her confidence, her laughing and shaking her head by way of derision at her stoutest enemies, Esay 37. 22. She knows that all that burden themselves with her shall be cut in pieces. Hamans wife could tell so much. If Mordecai (said she) be of the seed of the

Esh. 6. 13

Jews, before whom thou hast begun to fall, thou shalt not prevail against him, but shalt surely fall before him. A Jew may fall before a Persian, and get up and prevail. But if a Persian, or whosoever of the Gentiles begin to fall before a Jew, he can neither stay, nor rise. There is an invisible hand of omnipotency that strikes in for his own: and confounds their opposites. That little stone cut out without hands, (Christs humane nature is called a tabernacle not made with hands, nor of this building, Heb. 9. 11. that is, not by an ordinary course of generation) limiteth the four mighty Monarchies, and crumbleth them to crattle, Dan. 2. 34. Hierom upon this text (and after him other Interpreters, both Ancient and Modern) tell us that the Holy Ghost here alludeth to a certain exercise, or game, used much among the Jews, namely to take up a great round stone for the triall of a mans strength; lifting it up from the ground, sometimes to the knees, sometimes to their navels, sometimes to their breasts, and sometimes as high as their heads, or above their heads. At which sport many times they did grievously hurt themselves, or at least scarify and make cuts in their flesh. See Levit. 21. 5. where the same word is used. The Churches enemies shall strive, and try who shall do her most hurt: but the stoutest of them all shall be fooled and foiled in the end. The irreparable ruine of Rome is graphically described and even set forth to the eye (Rev. 18. 21.) by a notable gradation. An Angel, a mighty Angel taketh a stone, a great stone, which he not onely casteth, but thrusteth into the bottom of the sea, whence it cannot be boyed up. This Angel might well be Luther, (with his Book de captivitate Babylonica: confer Jer. 51. 63.) whom God strangely preserved from the rage of Rome and Hell: like as he did from that deadly danger by the fall of a stone, whereof Mr. Fox writeth thus. "Upon a time, saith He, when Luther was sitting in a certain place upon a stool studying; a great stone there was in the Vault over his head "where he sate: which being staid miraculously so long as he was sitting, as soon "as hee was up, immediately fell upon the place where he sat, able to have "crushed him in pieces, if it had light upon him. But no malice of man or devil could antedate his end a minute, whilest his Master had work for him to do: as the two witnesses could not bee killed till their businesse was dispatched, Rev. 11. 7.

Acts &amp; Mon.

Verse

Verse 4. I will smite every horse with astonishment | Great is the strength of the horse and the rage of his rider: Jehu marched furiously; Bajazet the great Turk, of his fierce and furious riding, was surnamed Gilderun or Lightening; But God can make the Egyptians to appear men, and not Gods, and their horses flesh, and not spirit: When the Lord shall but stretch out his hand (and that's no hard matter of motion) both he that helpeth shall fall, and he that is holpen shall fall down, and they shall all faile together Esay 31. 3. See Psal. 76: 5, 6. An horse is a vain thing for safety, though a warlike creature full of terrour; but safety or victory is of the Lord Pro. 21: 31. In nothing be terrified, saith the Apostle Philip. 1. 28. The Greek word is a metaphor from horses when they tremble and are sore affrighted: as it fell out in the Philistines army, when the Angels made a bustle among the mulberry-trees 2 Sam. 5. 24. in the Syrians army, when the Angels likewise made an hurry-noise in the ayre, of charrets, of horses, and of a great host 2 King. 7. 6. in the army of Sennacherib, when at Gods sole rebuke both the charret and horse were cast into a dead sleep Psal. 76. 6. Lastly in the German wars against Zisca and the Hussites in Bohemia: where God smote every horse with astonishment, and his rider with madnesse; such a panick terrour seized upon the enemies of the truth, though they came in with three potent armies at once, that they fled before ever they looked the enemy in the face. How this Prophecie was literally fulfilled to the Maccabees, see 2 Mac. 10. 30. Turk. Hist. Psal. 33. 17. Ferei Medul. hist. Profan. pag. 785.

and I will open mine eyes upon the house of Judah | who before seemed to wink, or to be asleep. Now will I awake, saith the Lord, Now will I arise, now will I lift up my self, for the relief and rescue of my poor people: and that because they called them outcasts, saying, This is Zion whom no man looketh after Ier. 30. 17. Verse 5. And the Governours of Judah | The Dukes of Chieftaines: meaning the Maccabees, who were not any kingly crown, but were only Governours, Rulers, Commanders in chief, such as went before others: like as in the Alphabet Aleph is the first letter: So, Ilsa. 33. 10. אֶלֶף

Omega nostrorum Mors est, Mars Alpha malorum.

Saith the Poet wittily.

shall say in their hearts ] i. e. shall say heartily, from the root of the heart, and not from the roof of the mouth only. Profession of the truth and prayer (for so some make this verse to be) are not a labour of the lips, but a travel of the heart. The voice which is made in the mouth is nothing so sweet, as that which comes from the depth of the breast. As in instrument-musick, the deeper and hollower the belly of the Lute or Violl is, the pleasanter is the sound; the fleetier, the more grating and harsh in our eares.

the inhabitants of Ierusalem shall be my strength | Though now there be few found in it: yet it shall be much repeopled and fortified: so that, under God, it shall be a fortress to the whole countrey; and the Governours shall so take it to be, Or thus, there is strength to me and to the inhabitants of Ierusalem in the Lord of Hosts their God. ] Every governour shall say so for his own particular. (And this seemes to me to be the better reading) The Maccabees did so as appeared by their poy (whereof before) their prayers, and their singular successe, as appears by their history, and by Josephus. Deo confisi, nunquam confusi, They that trust in God shall never be confounded. Our fathers trusted in thee, and they were delivered. O trust ye in the Lord for ever: for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength. Look not down on the rushing and roaring streames, lest ye grow giddy: but look up to the heavens from whence comes your help, and fasten by faith on Gods power and promises. Faith unfeined breeds hope unfaileable, such as never mis-carrieth. O trust in him at all times ye people &c. Psal. 62. for with God is wisdom and strength Iob 12. 13. Plutarch saith of the Scythians that they have neither wine nor musick: but they have Gods. Say that the Saints have neither power, nor pollicy as their enemies, yet they have all in God who is more than all.

Verse 6. In that day will I make the governours &c. ] This is the third similitude;

litude, whereof the scripture is full: according to that, I will open my mouth in parables &c. These are of excellent use to adorn and explain: and yet they are evermore inferiour to the matter in hand. They are borrowed from things well known, and easy to be conceived: as here from an barth of fire among wood; Now we can all tell how great a matter (or wood) a little fire kindleth Iam. 3. 5. As when Nero, for his pleasures sake set Rome on fire, among other stately buildings that were quickly burnt down, the Circus or race-yard was one: being about half a mile in length, of an ovall form with rowes of seats one above another, capable of at least an hundred and fifty thousand spectatours, without uncivil shouderings. As the fire burneth a wood: and as the flame setteth the mountains on fire: So persecute them with thy tempest: and make them afraid with thy storme, saith the Church Psal. 83. 14, 15. Thus they pray'd, and thus it is here promised: and was accordingly performed in those first warrs of the Maccabees: as appeareth in the first book of their story, and in Iosephus. Diodate and others understand this text of the Apostles and Evangelists, who should fill the world with wars and dissentions by preaching the Gospell Luke 12. 49. whereby the enemies should be ruined, and the church reestablished Obad. 18. thorough the spirit of judgement and of burning Esay 4. 4. To which purpose Chrysostome saith, that Peter was a man made of fire walking amongst stubble. Basil was compared to a pillar of fire. Iohn Baptist is by our saviour said to be a burning and a shining lamp. And Eliab (in whose spirit the Baptist came) was a man of that transcendent zeale, that to heighten the expression thereof, some have legended of him, that when he drew his mothers breasts, he was seen to suck in fire.

and Ierusalem shall be inhabited again in her own place] sc. where she was built at first, and not in another neare place, as Tyrus was; and Rome is at this day, quite off her old seven hills: so that a man may look for Rome in Rome. And Ierusalem that now is hath mount Calvary in the very middest of it (which was anciently without the city) and not one hundred families of Jews are therein to be found. That they shall one day cast out therehence Gog and Magog, inhabit it in the old place, and have excellent strength and valour ministred by God to them, all equally for their common defence, none lifting up themselves above another, but all alike ascribing the glory unto God, is concluded by some (and those not inconsiderable) Divines out of this and the following verses.

Verse 7. The Lord also shall save the tents of Judah first] Or as at first, sc. when they came out of Egypt, and had no strong holds to take to for their defence. Lord, (saith Moses,) thou hast been our dwelling-place in all generations Psal. 90. 1. He was so of old, and ever will be: the faith whereof made the fathers well content to dwell in tents Heb. 11. 13. and those holy Rechabites Ier. 35. 7, 8. till Nebuchadnezzar came up into the land ver. 11. But here God promiseth to deliver those Jews that dwelt in the open fields, without the city; and then afterwards to deliver Ierusalem it self from the rage of the Antiochi; and so he did (1 Maccab.) in a wonderfull manner: they were helped indeed with a little help Dan. 11. 34. to take away boasting; as it followeth.

that the glory of the house of David &c.] that is, the glorious house of David, and the glorious inhabitants of Ierusalem, by an Hypallage. Non est gloriosior populus sub cælo, quam Judaicus. There is not a more vainglorious people under heaven then the Jews are saith Alsted. They were so of old Ioh. 8. 33. Mat. 3. 9. Spaniards are said to be impudent braggers: and extremely proud in the lowest ebb of fortune; so are the Jews. But God will teach them better things, and make him that glorieth glory in the Lord 1 Cor. 1. 31.

Verse 8. In that day shall the Lord defend &c.] Prosequitur eandem sententiam saith Calvin. He proceeds in the former argument, to assure the feeble Jews (as Samballat that proud haughty scorner called them Neb. 4. 2.) of safety and protection. God will blesse the righteous: with favour will he compasse them as with a shield. Now there is no comming at the body but thorough the shield, if well handled; no comming at the Saints, but through Gods own sides, as I may say. He beareth his people as on Eagles wings Exod. 19. 4. Dent. 32. 11. Now the Eagle carries her yong upon her wings (and not between her talons as other birds do) so that they cannot be shot, but thorough the body of the old one.

Antiq. lib. 12.

Hieron.
Remig.
Albert.
A Lapide.

Breerew.
Enquir.

Alst. Chron.

Prov. 21. 24.

Psal. 5. vii.

one. Oh the dignity and safety of a Saint! Well might Moses sing, Happy art thou O Israel: who is like unto thee, O people! saved by the Lord, the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thine excellency: and thine enemies shall be found liars unto thee, and thou shalt tread upon their high places. Let all that would be safe indeed, as in a tower of brass, or town of warr, labour to be found written among the living in Jerusalem Isa. 4. 3. to be of the Church of the first-born which are enrolled in heaven Heb. 12. 23. like as in Jerusalem were records kept of the names of all the citizens Psal. 48. 3. Get under Gods wing, and nothing can annoy thee. As if he be angry, where shall a man shelter? Brass and iron can fence him against a bullet or a sword: but if he be to be cast into a furnace of fire, it would help to torment him: if into a pit of water, to sink him. Now our God is a consuming fire Heb. 12. 29. and his breath a stream of brimstone Isa. 30. 33. To run from him to other refuge, is but for a man to run his head into a barrel of gunpowder, for a shelter against the force of a fire kindled over him.

Deut. 33. 29.

and he that is feeble among them] So that he cannot stand but stagger (as the word importeth) as did Miles Cobelite a Christian souldier sore wounded, so that he reeled like a drunken man and fell down diverse times, for want of strength. This man drawing nigh to Amurath the third king of Turks, as he was viewing the dead bodies after a bloody fight, making as if he would have craved his life of him, suddenly stabbed him in the bottome of his belly with a short dagger which he had under his souldiers coat; of which wound that great king and conquerour presently died.

Turk Hist. fol. 200.

shall be as David] who was a mighty man of valour (as Hushai told Abisalom and bid him beware 2 Sam. 17. 8.) and had such a band of worthies about him, as were not to be matched 2 Sam. 23. 8. These had a house by themselves to dwell and exercise feats of armes: as Lyra gathereth out of Neh. 3. 16. where mention is made of the house of the mighty. The Maccabees (slighted as objects) did greater exploits and got greater victories then David had done: and the condition of this poor people was to be shortly after (sc. under the preaching of Christs gospel) far better and happier then ever it had been under the rich and flourishing kingdom of David: for then they should be able to say, Gods grace is sufficient for me: his strength is made perfect in my weaknesse. I will glory in mine infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me: for when I am weak, then I am strong. I can do all things, suffer all things thorough Christ that strengtheneth me. The weak shall say I am strong Joel 3. 10. And indeed how can they be otherwise, that have a mighty strong God Esay 9. 6. a strong word, the Lords own arme, the power of God to salvation Rom. 1. 16. Act. 20. 32. a strong spirit 2 Tim. 1. 7. strong consolations Heb. 6. 18. strong armour both offensive and defensive Eph. 6. 18. and the name of the Lord as a strong tower whereunto the righteous run and are safe, and where waiting upon the Lord they renew their strength, they mount up with wings as Eagles, or rather as Angels.

Prov. 18. 10.

Isa. 40. 31.

for the house of David shall be as God as the Angell of the Lord before them] i. e. As Christ the Angell of Gods presence, and that went before the people in the wilderness. Such were those of the blood-royall, and that succeeded David in the government: but especially such were the Apostles, Christs Mighties, who should be endued with so many graces in majesty, Authority, Strength, and truth, that men should receive them (Cornelius like) as so many Angels of God, yea even as Christ Jesus Gal. 4. 14.

Verse 9. I will seek to destroy] I will make inquisition and diligent scrutiny: I will draw them out of their lurking-places to execution: as Saul went to seek David upon the rocks of the wild-goats; those high, steep and craggy rocks, which could not but be very tedious both to himself, and to his souldiers to march in: But he was set upon't, and would leave no place unsearched. See his charge to the Ziphites to take knowledge of all the lurking-holes where he hid himself, and to bring him word that he might seek him thorough all the thousands of Judah 1 Sam. 23. 23. The Lord need not do so, to find out his enemies; for in him they live, move and subsist Col. 1. 17. they are ever under his view, and within his reach. He sitteth upon the circle of the earth Is. 40. 22. and can easily shake them out of it, as by a canvasse. Yea, he sits in the height of heaven, and wherein they deale

1 Sam. 24. 2.

proudly

proudly, he is above them Exod. 18. 11. disclosing their cabinet-counsels, as he did Benhadads; and blasting their designs.

to destroy all nations God stands not upon multitudes; he takes not the tenth man, but destroys all nations, be they never so many of them that come against Jerusalem, that oppose or affront his people, either with their virulent tongues or violent hands. When a rabble of rebels shall set themselves against the Lord, and against his Christ, his mysticall Christ the Church, he will utterly destroy them; the word signifieth he will destroy them ut nihil reliquum maneat, that there shall be no remainder of them. Woe therefore to the Churches enemies; for their destruction ever goes with the saints salvation Philip. 1. 28, 29. Esay 8. 9. Pro. 11. 8. Gods jealousy Zach. 1. 14. and justice 2 Thess. 1. 6. will effect it surely, severely, suddenly.

Verse 10. And I will pour upon the house of David] Pour as by whole pailfuls; God is no penny-father; no small gifts fall from so great a hand; he gives liberally Iam. 1. 15. and is rich to all that call upon his name Rom. 10. 12. abundant in kindnesse Exod. 34. 6. plenteous in mercy Psal. 103. 8. the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ hath over-abounded, hath overflowed all the banks 1 Tim. 1. 14. indeed it hath neither bank nor bottom. Oh pray for that blisse-full sight Eph. 1. 18. and 3. 18, 19. that Spirit of wisdom and revelation.

of grace and of supplications] Or deprecations of that utter destruction that shall befall other nations. God will save his people, but so as by prayer Psal. 32. 6. 2 Chron. 7. 14. Zach. 13. 9. he will grace his own ordinance, draw many suitours, and derive many prayles to himself. See Ezek. 36. 37. Psal. 50. 15. and 116. 2. Some render it a spirit of grace and of lamentations, sc. before the Lord, when they felt the nailes, wherewith they had pierced Christ, pricking their own hearts Act. 2. 37. punctually pricking and piercing them.

and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced] Dacarn, whom they have diggered or digged, as Psal. 22. 16. him they shall look upon and lament, ᾄδονταί, κλύονταί, their eye shall affect their heart; for the eye is the instrument both of sight and of sorrow; and what the eye never sees the heart never rues. The Sun looketh upon the earth, draweth up vapours thence, and distilleth them down again: so doth the Sun of the understanding; which till it be convinced, the heart cannot be compuncted. Sight of sin must precede sorrow for sin. The The prodigall came to himself, ere he repented of his loose practises, men must besink themselves, or bring back to their hearts (as the Hebrew hath it 1 King. 8. 47.) ere they will say, We have sinned and dealt perversely, we have committed wickednesse. See Ier. 8. 6. Psal. 38. 18. An infant in the womb cries not because he sees not; but as soon as it comes into the light, he sets up his note. Get therefore your eyes anointed with eye-salve, with this spirit of grace and supplications; so shall you soon see (saith Mr. Bradford martyr) your face foull arrayed, and so shamedull, laucy, mangy, pocky, and scabbed, that you cannot but be sorry at the contemplation thereof. It is the spirit that convinceth the world of sin; neither can the waters till his wind bloweth Psal. 147. 18. A sigh is not breathed out for sin, till the spirit imbreath the same into us.

and they shall mourn for him] Or, for it, viz. for their crucifying the Lord of glory in their forefathers, and having a great hand in it themselves; sith their and our sins were thorns and nails that pierced him, the lance that let out his heart-blood &c. We bound him with cords; we beat him with rods; buffeted him with fists, reviled him with our mouths, nodded at him with our heads, &c. We were the chief actors and principal causes, that set awork Judas, Pilat &c. Oh stand a while with the devout women, and see him bleeding, groaning, dying, by the wounds that we gave him; and mourn affectionately over him, as here. they shall mourn] with such outward pomp and rites as are used at funeralls; as wringing the hands, beating the breasts, shaking the head, and the like externall gestures and expressions of heavinesse.

and shall be in bitternesse] by inwardnesse of extream grief; as when Dauids heart was leavened with it Psal. 73. 21. it was sowed with goodly sorrow, and sowed in the teares of true repentance. So Peter went forth and wept bitterly Mat. 26. 15. waters of Marah flowed from Mary Magdalens eyes, which were

as Mercer.

ἡ ἀρετὴ τοῦ
καρποῦ.κατενόη-σαν τὸ καρδίαν.Rev. 1. 7.
Lam. 3.

were as a fountain for Christs feet: here sorrow was deep and down-right, producing repentance never to be repented of. The sorrow we conceive for an unkindnesse offered to Christ must not be slight and sudden, but sad and soaking: like that of the Israelites met at Mizpeh, when they drew water before the Lord 1 Sam. 7. 6. whereunto the Prophet Jeremy seemeth to allude, when he seriously wisheth that his head were waters &c. Jer. 9. 1. and David with his rivers of teares Psa. 119. 136. His heart was soft and soluble: now softnesse of heart discovers sin; as the blots run abroad, and seem biggest in wet paper: and as when the Cockatrice egge is crushed, it breakes forth into a viper Isa. 59. 5. Now to make and keep the heart soft and tender, the consideration of Christs dolorous passion must needs be of singular use and efficacy: as the sight of Cesars bloody robes brought forth, greatly affected the people of Rome, and edged them to revenge. The hardest heart soundly soaked in the blood of Christ (the true scape-goat) cannot but relent and repent for such a horrid villany.

as one mourneth for his onely son--for his first born] se. with a funerall-sorrow: such as was that of the Sunamite, and of the widdow of Naim, of Rachel, who refused to be comforted &c. There is an Ocean of love in a fathers heart: as we see in Jacob toward Joseph, in David towards Abisalom, in the father of the Prodigall &c. Christ was Gods onely son in respect of his divine nature: he was also the first-born amongst many brethren. And yet God so loved the world &c. So? how? So as I cannot tell how: for this is a Sic without a Sicent: Even so should our sorrow be, for having a wicked hand in his dolorous death. The Prophet here seemes to be at a stand as it were, whence to borrow comparifons to shadow it out by. Great is the grief of children for their deceased parents, as of Joseph for Jacob Gen. 50. 1. he fell upon his fathers face, as willing to have wept him alive again if possible. So our Edward the first returning from the wars in Palestina, rested himself in Sicily: where the death of his son and heir comming first to his care, and afterwards of the king his father, he much more sorrowed his fathers departure, then his sons: whereat King Charles of Sicily greatly marvelled, and demanding the reason, had of him this answer: The losse of sons is but light, because they are multiplied every day: but the death of parents is irremediable, because they can never be had againe. Thus He, Howbeit, love rather descendeth then ascendeth, and Abraham could better part with his father Terah, then with his son, his onely son Isaac whom he loved Gen. 22. 2. Before he had him, Lord God, said Abraham, what wilt thou give me so long as I see childlesse. His mouth was so out of tast with the sense of his want, that he could relish no comfort. But now to be bereft of him, and that in such a manner, as he might conceive by that probatory precept Gen. 22. 2. this must needs go to the very heart of him, for though he had put on grace, yet he had not put off nature. Both Jacob and Jacobs father (as Iunius understandeth that passage Gen. 37. 35.) wept favourly for Ioseph, and would go down into the grave unto their son mourning. True it is, that the losse of some wife may be greater then the losse of some son, (Abraham came from his own tent to Sarab's tent to mourn for her Gen. 22. 2. and she was the first that we read of in scripture mourned for) but the Prophet here speaketh of the mourning of husband and wife together: and they can lose no greater outward blessing, then their first-born, if an onely-one especially.

Speed. 646.

Gen. 15. 2.

Verse 11. In that day shall there be a great mourning in [Jerusalem] Magnificabitur luctus (so the Hebrew hath it) their mourning shall be heightened, their heaviness heightened, they shall rise in their repentance above all that is ordinary. The Casuists and Schoolmen affirme sorrow for sin to be the greatest of all sorrowes. 1. In conatu: the whole soule seemes to send springs into it, out of every faculty. 2. In extensione: It is a spring which in this life more or lesse is continually dropping: neither would God have the wounds of godly sorrow to be so closed up at all, as not to bleed afresh upon every good occasion. 3. In appreciatione: the true penitentiary doth ever judge that a good God offended, a Saviour crucified, should be the prime cause of greatest grief. 4. In intensione: for intensification of displeasure in the will; there being no other things with which, or for which the will is more displeased with its self, then for sinning against God. There is more cause of grief, say they, for sinning, then for the death of Christ: because Adrian.

Scotus.
Soto.

M. Cotton.

because therein was aliquid placens, but sin is simpliciter displicens. But is it not godly mourning, may some say, unlesse it be so great? I answer, that other mourning may make more noise, like a dashing shoure of rain, or a land-flood that by a small shallow channel comes down from an hill. When a man mourns for his onely son, or the like, this comes from God as a judgement; it comes down hill as it were, hath nature to work with it, and nothing to hinder it: but this mourning and melting over Christ, is as a stream that goeth up hill, and through many reeds and flagges, as a Reverend man expresseth it.

... nunc humi
de repente serpere fideratos
esse diceres.

as the mourning of Hadadrimmon in the valley of Megiddon] Where good Josiah was slain, and where the people saw (to their unspeakable grief, and heart-break) family, Church and Common-wealth pluckt up by the roots, in the losse of that one man, who was the very breath of all their nostrils, as Jeremiah sadly acknowledgeth in his Lamentations, composed on that very occasion, and when he died, all their prosperity here died with him; and themselves were no better then living Ghosts, walking sepulchers of themselves: a being they had, but not a life: those that before seemed to touch heaven with their finger, fell down to the earth, as if they had been planet-struck, as Budaeus speaketh of the French courtiers at the death of Lewes the twelfth. When Augustus died, orbis ruinam immineramus, saith Patrculus, we thought all had been lost, and that the world would have fallen about our ears. When our Edward the sixth (that second Josiah) was taken away, Cardan sung this sorrowful Epicedion;

*Flete nefas magnum, sed toto flebitis orbe
Mortales; vestrum corrigit omnis honos,*

Verse 12, 13, 14, And the land shall mourn] Not the generality of the Jews (unlesse it be at their last general conversion, that resurrection from the dead, as it is called Rom. 11. 15.) but the elect according to grace, who are here called the land, because more esteemed by God then all the other Jews besides: for he reckoneth of men by their righteoufnesse, as he did of Lot at Sodom.

ἡ γὰρ δὲ
ἀπορ. 2 Cor. 7

every family apart] To shew the soundnesse of their sorrow, the sincerity by the secrecy: for Ille dolet verè qui sine teste dolet. He grieves with a witnesse, that grieves without a witnesse. There is a worldly sorrow that hardeneth the heart: and indisposeth it for repentance; as did that of Nabal. There is also an hellish sorrow, a desperate grief for sin, pœnitentia Iscariotica, as was that of Judas. There is no birth without travel: but some children die in the birth: are killed with the pains of the labour. Lastly, there is a sorrow according to God, whereby we weep kindly after God, inquiring the way to Zion, with our faces set thitherward, and renewing our covenant Jer. 50. 4, 5. Against thee, thee onely, have I sinned, saith David Psal. 51. 4. Lo, there lay this pinch of his grief, that he had offended so good a God. It was the Myrrhe and its scent, that Christ had dropped on the bars of the door, that waked the drousy Spouse, and made her bowels fret Cant. 5. This made her first weep in secret, and then seek out after him, whom her soul loved. She first went to enquire of the Lord, as Rebecca did Gen. 25. 22. and then she hears from him those sweet words Cant. 2. 14. Oh my dove! that art in the clefts of the rocks, that hast wrought thy self a burrough a receptacle of rest in the Rock of ages, in the secret places of the stars, whither thou art retired as for security so for secrecy, to mourn as a dove, and to pray for pardon. Shew me thy face, which now appeareth most orientally beautiful, because most instampt with sorrow for sin: Let me hear thy voice, which never sounds so melodiously, as when thy heart is broken most penitentially: for sweet is thy voice, and thy countenance comly.

Eph. 4. 16.

and their wives apart] Sarah had her peculiar tent Ge. 24. 65. wherein she dwelt Ge. 18. 6. & died Ge. 23. 2. Rebecca likewise had her retiring-room, whither she went to enquire of the Lord Ge. 25. 22. Rachel & Leah had their several tents, apart from Jacobs Ge. 31. 33. Miriam and her women do apart by themselves praise God for deliverance Exo. 15. 20. I and my maidens will fast likewise, saith Esther. In a time of solemn humiliation, let the bride-groom go forth of his chamber, and the bride out of her closet, Joel 2. 16. See 1 Cor. 7. 5. Amongst both Jews, Greeks, and Romans, the women were separated from the men, in publike acts and assemblies; in times of common calamity calamity especially, as may be gathered out of Plutarch, Athenians, Virgil, Livy. Strata passim Matres criminibus Templis verrentes, veniam irarum celestium exposcant, saith He; The men by themselves, and the women by themselves, sought to appease the angry Gods. Here they are severed, to shew that they wept not for company, sed sponte & proprio affectu, as Calvin hath it, but of their own accord, and out of pure affection; they freely lamented not so much for Christs dolorous death, as for that themselves had a chief hand in it, and were the principal causes of it. The best kinde of humiliation is to love and weep, as that woman did Luk. 7. who made her eyes a fountain to wash Christs feet in; and had his side opened for a fountain to wash her soul in, as it is Chap. 13. 1. all the families that remain] Out of every family of this people, God will have some converts. A thing so incredible, that to perswade it, the Prophet may here seem to some prophane person to use more words then needeth.

---ad templum
non aqua Pal-ladiis ibant Iliades---

A remnant according to the election of grace.
Rom. 11. 5.

CHAP. XIII.

Verse 1. IN that day there shall be a fountain opened] Nunc fructum penitentia adiungit, saith Calvin here. This is the fruit of their repentance. No sooner mourn they over Christ, but they are received to mercy. I said, I will confesse my transgressions unto the Lord: and (or ever I can do it) thou forgavest the iniquity of my sin; that is, both the sting and stain of it, the guilt and the filth, the crime and the curse. Repent and your sins shall be blotted out, saith Peter to those nefarious Kill-Christis Act. 3. 9. God will crosse the black lines of your sins, with the red lines of his sons blood, 1 Ioh. 1. 6. A fountain shall be opened: not a cistern, but a spring: a pool better then that of Siloam which is by interpretation Sent John 9. 7. and so a type of Christ, who loved us, and washed us from our sins with his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God, and his father: to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever, Amen. To seal up this matchlesse mercy to us, he sent first by the hand of his forerunner, and baptized those that repented for the remission of sins, Mat. 3. 2. Act. 2. 38. And afterwards he set wide open this blessed fountain, this laver of regeneration, and renewing of the holy Ghost Tit. 3. 5. Saying by his Ministers to every beleever, as once to Paul, Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins calling on the name of the Lord. Act. 22. 16. whereunto salvation is promised Rom. 10. 13. Joel 2. 22. Baptisme also is said to save us 1 Pet. 3. 21. sc. sacramentally, for it sealeth up salvation to the beleever Mar. 16. 16. and is of perpetual and permanent use to him, for that purpose, his whole life thorowout; ut scaturigo semper ebulliens, as a fountain bubbling up to eternal life. Here then the Sacrament of Baptisme is prophecied of and promised. And hence, haply the Baptisme of John is said to have been from heaven Mat. 21. 25. All the Levitical purifications pointed to this Kings-Bath of Christs meritorious blood, this ever-flowing & overflowing fountain: for the grace of our Lord Jesus hath abounded to flowing over (as S. Pauls expression is) with faith and love which is in Christ Jesus. Neither can it ever be dried up, as was the river Cherith, the brooks of Tema &c. but is an inexhausted fountain, a fresh-running spring, for all that have but a minde to make toward it. Tam recens mihi nunc Christus est, ac si hac horâ fudisset sanguinem, saith Luther; Christ is still as fresh and soveraign to me, as if this very hour he had shed his blood. He was the Lamb slain from the beginning of the world; and shall be so to the end thereof. Cruci haurimus, sanguinem sugimus, & intra ipsa Redemptoris nostri vulnera figimus linguam, saith Cyprian of the Lords Supper; i. e. We cleave to the crosse at this holy ordinance: we suck Christs blood, we thrust our tongues into the very wounds of our Redeemer, and are hereby purged from all pollutions of flesh and spirit.

Psal. 32. 5.

See p 177

Rev. 1. 5. 6.

καπενας
ναος.

to the house of David, and to the inhabitants of Ierusalem] i. e. To all sorts and sexes of penitents, be they noble or ignoble, strong Christians or weak (see Zach. 12. 8.) none shall be secluded from this fountain, thus opened or exposed to all, not sealed and shut up, as that Cant. 4. 12. God is no respecter of persons, but in every

Act. 10. 34.
35.

very nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness is accepted of him.

for sin and for uncleanness] i. e. For all sorts of sinnes, though they be such, as in their desert do separate us from communion with God, and company of men. (See Levit. 12. and 15.) render us worthy to be excommunicated, proscribed, and banished out of the world, as pests and botches of humane society by a common consent of nations: as the obstinate Jews are at this day for their inextinguishable guilt in crucifying Christ. The vulgar here hath it, Ad ablutionem peccatoris & menstruationis. For washing clean the sinner, and the menstruous woman: alluding (as doth also the Chaldee) to the waters of expiation made of the ashes of a red cow Nam. 19. 11, 17. See the Note there: and importing the purging both of he-sinners and she-sinners: Or, as some will have it, both of Actual and Original sin. Lo this is the vertue of Christs merit and spirit, 1 Cor. 6. 10, 11. far beyond that of Abanah & Pharpar, of Jordan and Siloam, which yet are said not onely to wash and scour, but also to heal and cure. The Saracenes naturally stink like goats: but by washing themselves and their children in the pool of Siloam, they become sweeter. The Turks make use of it to sharpen their eye-sight. At Cyzicum there is a well called Cupids well, the water whereof is said to quench the fire of lust. This is better yet then those Bathes of Rome: concerning which Seneca no lesse wittily then truly complained, Postquam munda balnea inventa sunt, spurciores sunt qui lauant: Or those wanton Bathes of upper-Badin in Helvetia, much frequented, yet not so much for health, as filthy pleasure. They that are in Christ, have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts Gal. 5. 24. they are not onely washed from their wickednesse Jer. 4. 14 but bereft of their swinish natures, ne tanquam sus ad volutabrum &c. 2 Pet. 2. 22.

Saligniacus.
Adrichom.
Plin. lib. 31.
cap. 11.
Isidor. lib.
13. Orig. c. 13.
Heyl Geog.
285.

gnatfabim ter-
riculorum
scar-crows

Verse 2. [I will cut off the names of the idols] Heb. of the fray-bugges (as they are likewise called 1 Sam. 31. 9. 1 Chro. 10. 9. Psal. 115. 4. in contempt, as Petapim in Horace --- furum apiumq; Maxima formido ---) Or grievous idols, as Psal. 16. 4. because they tormented the mindes of the superstitious, and put them to great pains to no purpose; as is to be seen in Popish Pilgrims, who though used hardly, and lose much of their estates, and other comforts, yet satisfie themselves in this, I have that I came for, viz. the sight of a dumb idol, as Calvin noteth on that place Seek ye my face. Now of these mawmets and monuments of idolatry, these Balaams blocks, the Lord here promiseth to rid the land, as he did under the Maccabees. And as in the Primitive Church he did by the Christian Emperors, stiled therefore by the superstitious Iconomachi, and Iconoclasta: and of late by the renowned Reformers, as at Geneva, Bern, Basile (where they were burnt all together on an Ash-wednesday of Gods own making) and here in England by the command of King Edward the sixth: who the self same day obtained a signal victory at Muscleborough-field.

and they shall no more be remembered] Unlesse it be with shame and detestation, as Ezech. 16. 61. Psal. 16. 4. Hos. 14. 8. Ephraim shall say, what have I to do any more with idols? He shall pollute the idols which he once perfumed, and say unto them, Get you hence, Isay 30. 22. I was an obstinate Papist (saith Latimer of himself) as any was in England, and a grosse Idolater &c. But after that he came to a sight of his errour, he so far forth abhorred idols, that being brought forth after he was condemned to die to see a procession, he ran as fast as his old bones would carry him to one Spensers shop neer Karfax in Oxford, and would not once look toward it.

Act. and Mon.
fol. 1230.

and also I will cause the Prophets] So they will needs be called and counted: when as they are no better then unclean spirits (see the Geneva-Note here) or at least are acted and set on work by that unclean spirit the Devil, (See Mat. 12. 43. Mar. 1. 26. John 8. 44. Rev. 16. 13. with the Notes) indeed they are false Prophets Mar. 7. 15. false teachers, who privily bring in damnable heresies 2 Pet. 2. 1. vana orationis, cui nulla veritatis vel virtutis ratio subest, sunt artifices stultie loquaces & garruli, saith Montanus, they are loud & lewd liars, inspired by that unclean spirit the father of lies, ut impurati impurent alios & seducant seducti, that being themselves defiled and seduced, they may defile and seduce others. For by corrupt teachers Satan catcheth men: as a cunning fisher by one fish catcheth another, that he may feed upon both.

Junius in loc.

and the unclean spirit to passe out of the land ] This connexion is worthy to be noted, faith reverend Calvin here: because it shews us the source of all errours, viz. the letting loose the reins to perverse teachers. I confesse, faith He, we are apt enough of our selves to run after falsities, such is the corruption of our natures. Sed imerea ubi grassatur licentia quidvis docendi, necesse est corrumpi totam pietatem, & sic misceri omnia ut nihil differat lux à tenebris, &c. But where in matters of Religion, every man may think what he lists, and utter what he thinks, and defend what he utters, and publish what he defends, and gather disciples to what he publisheth, this libertas prophetandi, this liberty, or licentiousness rather of prophesying (alasse poor England!) must needs bane the Church, and bring in confusion. God therefore here gives us to know, that a Church cannot stand, unlesse false teachers be forbidden to turn the truth into a lie, and to prate at their pleasure against the word of God: and this, faith He, is diligently to be noted. Videmus enim ut hodie nebulones quidam, &c. For we see how at this day, certain vile persons take it up for a principle, that the Church is not free, unlesse every man may be suffered to preach, or broach what he pleaseth: and that it is greatest cruelty to punish an heretike, and not to give him leave to blaspheme the truth. But the Prophet here sheweth, that the Church of God cannot be kept in pure state, nor stand intire and safe, unlesse the rashness and impudency of such be restrained, as dare pervert sound and sincere doctrine. Thus He.

Verse 3. And it shall come to passe that when any shall yet prophesie ] Here the Prophet sheweth how God will effect the former promise. He will first give unto his people a spirit of judgement, and then a spirit of burning, as Esay 4. 4. so that they shall be able to discern both good and evil, and not be led away with the error of the wicked, to fall from their own stedfastness. They shall also be adeo perciti zelo, so carried on by a zeal of Gods glory, and so blessedly blown up, as I may so say, in his cause, that they shall fall upon their dearest relations in this case, and labour to bring their own children to condigne punishment, according to the Law of God in that behalf provided, Deut. 13. 8, 9. Neither let any object here, that this is Old Testament: we find no such thing in the Gospel. For the Prophet here speaketh of the times of the Gospel (chap. 12. 10.) and of the kingdom of Christ. Sequitur ergo, faith Mr. Calvin here well and worthily, non modo legem illam fuisse Judæis positam, quomodo nungantur fanatici homines, qui vellent hodie sibi permitti orbis turbandi licentiam: sed extenditur ad nos etiam eadem lex. It followeth therefore, that that Law Deut. 13. 9. was not made for the Jewes onely (as some brain-sick people conceit it, who would faine get leave to trouble the world with their fopperies) but the same law extendeth it self even to us. For if at this day thieves, and witches, and adulterers, &c. are held worthy of punishment: how much more are heretikes, seducers, blasphemers, who poison mens souls, rob God of his glory, confound the whole order of the Church, &c. See Rom 13. 4. 1 Pet. 2. 13, 14. and hold to that old Rule, Non distinguendum, ubi scriptura non distinguit; Men must not distinguish, where the scripture doth not.

Heb. 5. 14
2 Pet. 2. 17

Ob.
Sol.

that his father ] In whose heart there is naturally an Ocean of love to his own child, as we see in David toward Absalom, in old Andronicus the Greek Emperour, in our William the Conquerour, and Maud his wife toward their unnaturall sonne Robert Curtuoise, whom she maintained out of her own coffers, in his quarrell for Normandy: which the king her husband knew, and took as a cause rather of displeasure than of hatred; as proceeding from motherly indulgence for advancing their sonne.

Speed. 452r

that begat him ] This is twice here repeated for honours sake to these zelots; who forgot all naturall and carnall respects for the vindication of Gods glory, and his sincere service. See Mat. 10. 37. with the Note there.

thou shalt not live ] sc. to do more mischief, and to draw more souls to the devil, Non Catilina te genui sed patria, said Aulus Fulvius, when he slew his own sonne taken in Catalines conspiracie: I begat thee not for Catiline, but for thy countrey. More to be commended a great deal then Philip that bloody king of Spain, who said openly, that he had rather have no subjects, then Lutheran subjects; that he would not leave a Lutheran in his dominions; that if he thought his

Hieron. Catina.

his shirt smelt of that heresie, he would tear it from his own back: And out of a blind zeal he suffered his eldest sonne Charles to be murdered by the cruel Inquisition, because he seemed to favour our profession. For which noble exploit, that mouth of blasphemy, the Pope, gave him this commendation, Non pepercit filio suo, sed dedit pro nobis. He spared not his own sonne but gave him up for us. O horrible.

1 Tim. 4. 12
Rev. 2. 24

for thou speakest lies in the name of the Lord ] Lies in hypocrisie, doctrines of devils, depths of Satan, that artificer of lies, and father of them, Joh. 8. 44. which yet he would faine father, and fasten upon the God of Amen, or of truth, as he is called, Psal. 31. 5. like as varlets beget bastards, and lay them at honest mens doors to be kept; Thou speakest lies in the name of the Lord. This is to substitute the devil in the place of God, or to transform God, so as that he should nothing differ from the devil. No wonder therefore, though he that break the least commandement, and teach men so, be called least in the kingdom of heaven: especially if he pretend Gods authority for it, as the false Prophets of old, and the Swenckfeldian heretikes alate entitle themselves, The Confessours of the glory of Christ. For this is the highest indignity, or rather contumely, that can be put upon God: It is a more detestable evil, then to kill an innocent man; yea to commit parricide, or treason. Imo quacunq̃ poterunt numerare scelera non perveniunt ad hoc crimen, saith Calvin upon the text. Let Sectaries and Seducers look to it, those harmlesse, hornlesse creatures, as they would be accounted.

Mat. 5. 19

shall thrust him thorough when he prophesieth ] As Phineas did that stinking couple, in the flagrancie of their lust, Num. 25. 8. and as Levi, in like case, consecrated himself to the Lord, even every man upon his sonne, and upon his brother, Exod. 32. 29. He said unto his father and mother (when Gods glory required it) I have not seen him, neither did he acknowledge his brethren, nor know his own children, Deut. 33. 9. All naturall relations and self-respects should be drown'd in the glory of God, and the good of our own and other mens souls. They should be even swallowed up thereby, as the fuell is by the fire, and as the forcerers serpents were by Moses serpent, or the fat kine by the lean.

Ezra 9. 6

Verse 4. The Prophets shall be ashamed every one of his vision ] Of their Midianitish dreams, which they had first dreamed, and then told it for gospel to their fond neighbours. They shall be so clearly convinced, that they shall blush and bleed to think how they have been besotted, how many souls they have murdered, how oft they have even straddled over hell-mouth, and yet have been preserved, 2 Thess. 2. 10, 12. See the Note. This makes them shame, and shent themselves in the presence of God and his people, saying, O my God, I am ashamed, and blush to lift up my face to thee my God: for our iniquities are increased over our head, and our guilt is grown up to the heavens. This was fulfilled in those Scribes and Pharisees that afterwards became beleivers, and said with Saint Paul, Beware of the concision, For we are the circumcision, which worship God in the spirit, and rejoyce in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh. Luther revolted from the Popish religion which he had held and maintained, taking it for an honour to be called Apostate by them; that is, as he interpreted it, One that had fallen off from the devil.

Philip. 3. 2, 3

Qui fidem diabolo datam
non servavit.

Bugenhagius when he first read Luthers book de captivitate Babylonica, pronounced it to be the most pestilent piece that ever was published. But afterwards, when he had better considered, he grew ashamed of that rash censure, and protested that Luther onely was in the right; and all that held not the same that he did, were utterly deceived. Latimer was of the like mind after that he had once heard Bilneys confession. Vergerius after he had read Luthers books with purpose to confute them. Denckins, and Hetserus, two great Anabaptists in Germany, retracted their former false doctrines, and repented of their licentious and abominable practices. The former of them, being converted by Oecolampadius, grew ashamed of his pretended visions, and died piously at Basile. The later was beheaded at Constance for his multiplied adulteries: which first he sought to defend by Scripture, but afterwards died very penitently, confessing his former filthinesses, giving glory to God, and taking shame to himself. These two were learned men, well skilled in the Hebrew: and had joyned their forces, in translating the Prophets into the Dutch tongue. But, oh how few such as these, and of that sort of people shall a

B

Sculter. Annal.

Ibid.

man

man meet with now-adayes? Copp indeed that Arch-Ranter, Venerens ille fœcer, & Cleri dehonefamentum, is laid to have newly set forth his Recanation, which I have not yet seen, and therefore cannot tell what to say to it. Onely I wish he deale not as Bernard Rosman that first Anabaptist, and Isebius Agricola that first Antinomian did in Germany: who both of them having condemned their own errours, and recanted them in a publike Auditory, printing their revocation: yet afterwards they relapsed into the same errours, and stoutly stood to them, when Luther was dead, and more Liberty was afforded. So hard a thing it is to get poison out, when once swallowed down; and having once said yea to the devill, though but in a little, to say him nay again, when a man pleaseth: such a man especially quem puduit non fuisse impudentem, who hath gloried in his shame, and taken pleasure in his unrighteousnesse: qui noluit solita peccare, as Seneca saith of some in his time, that is, none of the ordinary sort of sinners, but hath sought to out-sin others, as unhappy boyes strive who shall goe furthest in the dirt.

*Sleidan.
Horndorf.*

*Augustin.
2 Thes. 2. 12.*

I will not say but such, by the almighty power of God, may be reclaimed, and made to see that there is no fruit to be had of those errours and enormities whereof they are now ashamed, sith the end of those things (in the desert of them) is death. But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, they will have very great cause to be thankfull to God for the cure: sith Jealousy, Frensy, and Heresy, are held hardly curable, the leprosy in the head concludes a man utterly uncleane, and excludes him the camp: Heresy is by the Apostle compared to a precipice vortex or whirle-pooles, that first turns a man round, and then sucks him in: And by others to the Syrens banks covered with dead mens bones, to Goodwins sands that swallow up all ships that come neare them, or to the Harlots house whence few or none return alive Pro. 7. 26, 27.

Rom. 6. 21, 22

Heb. 12. 9.

Verse 5. But he shall say, I am no Prophet ] Οὐκ εἰμι προφήτης & I am no Monk, no Clerk, I am not book-learned was the ignorant mans plea in Chrysostomes time, and so it is still to this day; though it serves not his turne. But here the like speech is taken up for a better purpose. Hoc etenim principium est respiciētia, saith Calvin here. Here begins their repentance, viz. in a free acknowledgement of their ignorance and utter unfitnesse for the office they had usurped.

Si venribenē si lateri. Horat.

I am no prophet ] (as for self respects, that my belly might be filled, and my back fitted, I sinfully took upon me to be one) but I am an husbandman: and can better hold the plow then handle a text, feed and follow a flock of sheep, then feed the flock of God (that have golden fleeces, precious soules) taking the oversight thereof, not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind.

1 Pet. 5. 2.

for man taught me to keep cattle from my youth ] q. d. Shephardy and husbandry I have been ever trained up to, and can better therefore skill of then of Preaching, which is certainly Ars artium & scientia scientiarum, the Art of Arts, the science of sciences as One said. Whereunto Melancthon addeth that it is the misery of miseries. And of the same minde was his Colleague Luther, when he said, An householders pains is great, a Magistrates greater, but a Ministers greatest of all: and afterward added, that if it were lawfull for him to leave his calling, he could with more ease and pleasure dig for his living, or do any other hard labour, then undergo a Pastorall charge. The mystery thereof is not an idle-mans occupation, an easie trade, as some fondly conceit. The sweat of the brow is nothing to that of the brain: besides dangers on every hand for the works sake, and armies of cares that give neither rest nor respite, but are ready to overwhelm a man. This made Luther affirme that a Minister labours more in a day many times then a husbandman doth in a moneth. Let no man therefore, in taking up the ministry, dreame of a delicacy: Neither let slow-bellies either invade it, or hold it (as popish asses and some impudent Alastores now-adayes do) to pick a living out of it. It was an honest complaint of a Popish writer, we, saith He, handle the scripture tantum ut nos pascat & vestiāt, only that it may feed us and cloath us. And Cardinal Cajetan not without cause cries out, that those amongst them that should have been the salt of the earth had lost their savour: and were good for little else, but looking after the rites and revenues of the Church. Now for such as these that serve not the Lord Jesus Christ, but their own bellies, that

*2 Cor. 11. 29.
agmen subinde
intruens. Illyr.*

Com. in Mat. 9.

like

like body-lice live upon other mens sweat, or like rats and mice, do no more but devoure victuals and run squeaking up and down; good is the countell of the Apostle, Let him that stole/steale no more: but rather let him labour, working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth, Eph. 4. 28. let him earne it before he eate it 2 Theff. 3. 10. This is hard to perswade those Abby-lubbers that live at ease in cloysters, feeding on the fat and drinking of the sweet: and those Idoll-shepheards that feed themselves and not the flock. O Monachi vestri stomachi. Erasmus truly told the Electour of Saxony, that Luther, by meddling with the Popes tripple crown, and with the Monkes paunches, had procured himself so great ill will amongst them. One of them brake out in a sermon into these angry words: If I had Luther here, I would teare out his throat with my teeth; and then make no doubt with the same bloody teeth to eat my maker at the Eucharist. How much better were it for such false prophets with quietnesse to work and eat their own bread 2 Theff. 3. 14. then to drink the blood of other men with their lives (as David spake in another case) yea with their foules which perish by their insufficiency and gastrimargy? Sed venter non habet aures. But the belly hath no eares. Ease slayeth the foolish. Non minus difficulter à deliciis abstrahimur, quam canis ab uncto corio: Among other scandals and lets of the Jews conversion this is not the least, that they must quit their Goods to the Christians? And the reason is, for that in baptisme they renounce the devil, and all his works, part wherof (say the Papists amongst whom they live) are the Jews goods; being gotten either of themselves or of their Ancestours by usury. Now this is such cold comfort to men of their mettall, that they have little mind to turn Christian. And as little doublelesse have such as with these in the text, have got their living by lying: and through covetousnesse with fained words made merchandise or prize of mens precious soules, to return to the hard labour of husbandry or any other lawful but painfull employment. Yet this was done both in Wicklifes dayes by many Fryars that fell to him, and embraced his opinions: and in the reformation by Luther; many Monkes and Nuns betook themselves to honest trades; renouncing their Popish vowes and orders; yea Scultetus reporteth that at Ausberough in Germany, by the powerfull preaching of Dr. Iohn Speiser Ann. 1523, some harlots forooke the publike stews, and married to honest men, lived chastly, and were great pains-takers.

Verse 6. And One shall say unto him, What are these wounds in thine hands?] Hierome here supposeth the false Prophet crucified for his false doctrine, and thereupon thus questioned. This is better then that of the Popish Interpreters, who will needs have it to be meant of Christ, and of his wounds on the crosse, as a deceiver of the people. Lucian the Atheist villanously teameth him ενοχοποιον the crucified Cozener. But the Text is clear, that the person here spoken to, and returning an answer, is the false-Prophet, now a true Convert; as appeareth by his fruits which he beares quick and thick: being like Aarons rod soon changed from a withered stick, into a flourishing tree. Ashamed he is at heart of his former falsities: and as in heart, so in habit he is altered: for he will no longer weave a rough garment (the garb of Prophets in those dayes) to deceive, as the Cappuchines and other orders of Friars (or rather Lyars) at this day. He abrenounceth and abjureth quasi conceptis verbis his former profession of a Prophet or chief speaker amongst others.

I am no Prophet] But a plain husbandman, or a shepheard: that's all I can truly pretendo. And lastly, in this verse, having passed thorough the churches discipline as a seducer, he shall doe, as Ioshuah adviſed Achan, Give glory to the Lord my son, and confesse thy sin: he shall approve of the Churches severity used for his correction, though he should go maimed or marked for it, to his dying day. In point of seducement (saith Mr. Cotton, descanting upon this text) if a man upon conviction shall see the wickednesse of his way, and humble his soule before God, and give satisfaction to the Church and State, where he shall be convinced; on such conviction and repentance we find liberty to pardon, but yet stigmatize him. Thus He. But what reason had the Convocation held at Oxford to set a brand of ignominy upon the cheeks of those outlandish Divines that came to assist them, because they pleased them not in the point of Priests marriage, Scultet: Anna.

pag. 52.

Ast. and Mon.

1 Chr. 11. 19.

Spec. Europ.

Οπλαιν
Mat. 27. 63.
that cozened to
our very faces.
Eustath.

2 King. 1. 8.
Isa. 20. 2.
Mat. 3. 4.

Iosh. 7. 19.

The pouring out of the 7.
vials: third
viall. 11.

riage, which they defended? Or Bishop Land for his Stigmata Landis on renowned Mr. Prinne, for his constancy to the truth? How much better his predecessors, Stephen Langton (who crucified that Pseudo-Christ, who shewed marks of wounds in his hands, feet and sides, Anno 1206.) And Odo Severus (who burnt King Edwins Concubine (whom he most doted on) in the forehead with a hot iron, and banished her into Ireland, Anno 934, &c.)

Verse 7. Awake O Sword against my Shepheard] A powerful expression, containing a commission given out to the sword by way of Apostrophe.

Awake] or, up, as the Septuagint: up and about, thou that hast long lain lockt up in the scabbard. Thus the sword is of Gods sending; it is bathed in heaven, Isa. 34. 5. Ezek. 14. 17. Jer. 47. 6. 7.] It is he that awakes it, and sets it on work: he commands it, Am. 9. 4. and ordereth it, Jer. 50. 25. Let this patient us under it, as it did Job, Chap. 1. 15, 17, 21. Among Philosophies, the most noted sect for patience was that of the Stoicks, who ascribed all to destiny.

O sword] Framea, which seems to come of goupai a (the Septuagints word here) by putting o before p, or Gl' die, which comes a clare from destruction: like as the Hebrew word Chereb, from desolating and laying waste. Hence the sword is said to condemn the rod, Ezek. 21. 10, 13. that is all lighter and lesser judgements, which are but its forerunners, and whereof it seemes to say, What does this silly rod doe here? Will not-men stoop? Let me come: Ile make them either bend or break; either yield, or Ile have their blood.

against my shepheard] i. e. saith Calvin, against Magistrates and Ministers, Gods undershepheards and Associates in feeding the flock, Labourers together with him, 1 Cor. 3. 9. But because Christ is the great shepheard, Heb. 13. 20. and the good shepheard, John 10. 11. Optimus maximus, that is, Gods fellow-mate, and yet, suspending his glorie, became a man, to seek him out a flock in the wilderness: and afterwards laid down his life for his sheep, John 10. 11. underwent the deadly dint of Gods devouring sword put into the hands of those men of Gods hand, Psal. 17. 13. who put him to many a little death all his life long, and at length to that cursed and cruel death of the crosse: at which time the Shepheard was smitten and the sheep scattered, as this Text is most fitly applied, Matth. 26. 31. therefore I understand it chiefly of Christ, the chief Shepheard and Bishop of our soules, who was wounded for our transgressions, and bruised for our iniquities, &c. And this not by chance, or malice of his enemies only (though they laid upon him without mercie, nailing him to the tree in the hands and feet, which in all men are the most sensible parts of the body (as being fullest of nerves and sinews) but in him much more as being of the finest temperature and most exquisite sense) but by the determinate counsell of God, as St. Peter shewes those Kill-Christes, Acts 2. 23. and according to the Scriptures, that went before of him, and foretold all his passion, even to the casting of the dice upon his cloathes, Psal. 22. and Isa. 53 by the reading of which lively description of Christs sufferings in that Chapter, Johannes Isaac a Jew confesseth that he was converted to the faith of Christ. He is called Gods Shepheard, because God anointed and appointed him to that Office, putting a charge into his hands, John 10. and 17. that he might tend them and tender them, and at length return them up again to his heavenly Father, without losse of any one. He is also called the Man by an excellency, that matchlesse man the chief of ten thousand: as his mother is called hagnalma that famous Virgin, whom all generations are bound to call blessed. He is Man-God both in one: and is therefore also called Gods-fellow or Mate, as being Consubstantiall to the Father according to the Godhead, and very neer akinne to him according to the Man-hood, by reason of the hypostaticall union of both natures into one person, the Man Christ Iesus.

*Hoc ego ingenuè confiteor ait ille, caput
illud ad fidem
Christi me adduxisse.*

Smite the shepheard] that that blessed Fountain of his Blood (mentioned verse 1.) may be opened, and the flock of God washed, and healed, and satiated, as the people were, when the Rock was smitten and so set abroad: and as when God clave a hollow place in the jaw-bone of the Ass, so that there came water thereout, Sampson drank and was revived: And as when the Alabaster-box of ointment was broke, all the house was filled with a sweet savour.

Judg. 15. 19.

And the sheep shall be scattered] scattered and scattered; shifting for themselves, and leaving Christ to the mercy of his enemies, who seized upon him, as so many

D d d

Carriion-

Prov. 29. 25.

Mich. 7. 18.

Psal 136 23.

Carriion Kites upon a silly Dove. Thomas ( who once said come, let us godye with him ) disappears and is lost: Peter followes aloof off, but better he had been farther off. John ( if at least it were he ) flies away stark naked for hast: Iudas comes nearer to him, but to betray him with a kisse. But is this thy kindnesse to thy friend? Christ had indented with the enemy aforehand for their securitie, Joh. 18. 8. so that they needed not have retreated so disorderly, and scattered as they did. But the fear of man bringeth a snare. Howbeit mans badnesse cannot break off the course of Christs goodnesse. For though they thus unworthily forsake him, and leave him at the worst ( as they say ) yet I will turn my hand, saith he, upon the little ones, i. e. I will recollect my disperfed flock ( how little soever either for number, or respect in the world ) and bring back my banished. So soon doth it repent the good Lord concerning his servants. He remembreth not iniquity for ever, saith the Proppher, because mercy pleaseth him: and again, He remembreth us in our low estates: for his mercy endureth for ever. He looked back upon Peter when his mouth was now big swollen with oaths and execrations, and set him a weeping bitterly. He called for Thomas after his resurrection, and confirmed his weak faith by a wonderful condescension. He sealed up his love to them all again, restoring them to their ministeriall employment: and not so much as once upbraiding them with their base dereliction, but only with their unbelief. Lyra and others fence the Text thus: I will turn my hand upon the little ones, that is, I will so smite the Shepherd Christ, that not only the sheep shall be scattered, but the little lambs also, even the least and lowest Christians shall have their share of sufferings, shall feel the weight of my hand, shall pledge the Lord Christ in that cup of afflictions that I have put into his hand; shall be conformed to the Image of Gods Son, as his co-sufferers, that he may be the first born among many brethren, Rom. 8. 29. And this was fulfilled in the persecutions that followed soon after our Saviours death. Ecclesia heres crucis, saith Luther: and Persecutio est Evangelij genium, saith Calvin. Persecution is the black Angel that dogges the Church, the red horse that follows the white at the heels. All the comfort is, that Gods holy hand hath a speciali stroke in all those afflictions that are laid upon his faithfull people, I will turn mine hand, &c.

πομπαν.

μεμνηται.
Jude 7.

ἐκκαλίσθου.

Rev. 18. 18:

Verse 8. Two parts therein shall be cut off and die ] q. d. they shall, they shall, how strange or incredible soever this sad tidings seem to you: it shall be even so, take my word for it. Behold the severity of God, Rom. 11. 22. In the Greek it is the Resection or Cutting off, as a Chirurgion cutteth off proud and dead flesh. The Just Lord is in the midst thereof: he will not do iniquity, &c. Zeph. 3. 5. Fiat iustitia, ruat coelum may seem to be his Motto. In point of justice he stands not upon multitudes, Psal. 9. 17. It is all one to him whether against a Nation or against a man only, Job 34. 29. National sins bring national plagues: heinous sinnes, heavy punishments. In the universal deluge God swept away all: as if he had blotted out that part of his title, The Lord, the Lord, gracious, merciful, &c. and had taken up that of Attilas, Orbis flagellum, The worlds scourge, Sodoms sinnes were multiplied above measure: therefore God took them away as he saw good, Ezek. 16. 42, 50. and hath thrown them out, as St. Jude speaketh, for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire. Herodotus a Heathen Historian saith the very same of the destruction of Troy, viz. that the ruines and rubbish thereof are set forth for an example of that noted Rule, that God greatly punisheth great offences, and that hainous sinnes bring hideous plagues. Here we have two parts of three cut off in the land of Judea: as it fell out at the last destruction thereof by the Romans: at which time more then a million of men perished, see Math. 24. 21. with the Note. And what think we shall become of Babylon the great? Her sinnes reach up to heaven, whereunto they are even glewed and fastened as the word signifies, Rev. 18. 5. therefore she shall be brought down to hell with Capernaum ( for flagitium & flagellum sicut: acus & filum ) therefore shall her plagues come in one day ( to confute their fond conceit of an eternal Empire ) death, and mourning, and famine, and she shall be utterly overthrowen with fire: for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her, full able to effect it, seem it to Babels brats never so improbable, or impossible. It was never besieged since it became Papal, but it was taken: whereas before, it was held invincible. Sinne that lyeth at the bottom, will easily undermine and overturn the walls, though never so strong built: as the voice from heaven told Phocas the Mur-therer.

therer. The blood of that innocent Lamb of God lyes heavy upon the whole Nation of the Jews to this day. Their last devastation and present dismal dispersion is such, as that one of their own Rabines concludes from thence, that their Messiah must needs be come: and they must needs suffer so much for killing him.

but the third shall be left therein ] A holy remnant kept for a reserve. Good husbands cast not all their corn into the oven, but keep some for seed. But yet in it shall be a tenth, saith another Prophet: there shall be two or three berries in the top of a tree, four or five in the outmost branches. Gods Elect are so very few, that the world shall wonder, Ezay 8. 18. and even hoot to see Christs flock so very little, little, as our Saviour speaks, Luke 12. 22. as Israel stood like two little flocks of kids, when the Syrians filled the countrey. There were but a few names in Sardis: and many bad in the best Churches: as at Philippi, Chap. 3. 18. Christ wondered at one good Nathanael, as rara avis in terris: and when he comes, shall he find faith? How many (think you) shall be saved in this City? saith Chrysostom in his fourth sermon to the people at Antioch. It will be a hard speech to you, but I will speak it: Though there be so many thousands, yet there cannot be found an hundred, that shall be saved. And I doubt of them too, &c. And again in his third Sermon upon the Acts, he breaks out into this speech, Non arbitror inter sacerdotes, multos esse qui salvi fiant, I do not think that there are many, no not among the Ministry, that can be saved, sith many are called, but few are chosen: like as all the people were called together by Samuel, but Saul only was chosen king. Only the called according to purpose are elected, and shall be glorified, Rom. 8. 28, 29. Christ at last day will do as Joshuah did to find out who had stolen the Babylonish garment: there were many brought together, and all to finde out one. So, all shall then appeare: out of them a small number deducted, that have heard of Christ. Out of them, those that have professed him, and out of them, those that have professed him, in sincerity, and these will be Muthe mispar, a small few indeed. Hence they are called pearls, which are but few to the number of pibbles: Jewels which are but little to the lumber: strangers that are nothing so many as home-dwellers: sons of God, and of the blood royal; and of such there are but a few to common subjects. Ruri quippe boni, saith the Poet. And Pauci sunt qui Philosophantur saith Ulpian the Lawyer; &c.

Esa. 6. 13.

Ez. 17. 6.

1 Kin. 20. 27.

Josh. 7.

They are as a gold in a wide field: as a garden in a wild wast.
Juvenal. P. de exculp.

Verse 9. And I will bring the third part through the fire ] Few they were, but not faultlesse: they must therefore thorow the fire, that there they may leave their dreggs and drosse behind them. For Quod ignis est auro, lima ferro, ventilabrum tritico, luvium pavio, sal carni, hoc tribulatio est viro iusto, saith Corn. a Lapid upon this Text: that is, what the fire is to the gold, the file to iron, the fanne to wheat, the sope to clothes, the salt to flesh, that is tribulation sanctified to a righteous man. God is said to have his fire in Zion, and his furnace in Jerusalem, Ezay 31. 9. to carry his thorow fire and thorow water, Psal. 66. 12. from above to send fire into their bones, Lam. 1. 13. to put them to the fiery tryall, 1 Pet. 4. 12. yea he himself is a Refiners fire unto them, and Fullers sope, Matt. 3. 2. (see the Note there.) He knowes them to be right gold, which will endure the seventh fire (Alchymy gold will not so) and therefore he puts them to't: that the tryall of their faith being much more precious then that of gold that periseth, though tryed in the fire, may be found to praise, and honour, and glory, 1 Pet. 1. 7. himself, mean-while, goeth with them into the fire and pulleth them out as a brand, Zech. 3. Non sic impij, not so the ungodly. True it is, the tryall of their works also shall be by fire, 1 Cor. 3. 13. and they shall give an account one day with all the world on a light flame about their ears, 2 Pet. 3. 12. Then shall they find, that the law they are judged by is a fiery law, the tribunall is of fire, Ezek. 1. 27. the Judge a consuming fire, Heb. 12. 28. his attendants Seraphims, that is, flaming creatures, Heb. 1. 7. his pleading with sinners in fire of flame, 2 Thess. 1. 7. the place of punishment a lake of fire fed with a river of brimstone, Isa. 30. 33. a formidable fire it is, fed with tormenting temper, and kindled by Gods own breath instead of bellows. Bellarmino is of opinion, that one glimpse of this fearfull fire were enough to make a man not only turn Christian and sober, but Anchoret and Monk, and to live after the strictest order that can be. Pope Clement the fifth, upon the death of a Nephew of his and one of his Catamites, sent his Chaplaine to a Conjuror, to enquire how it fared with him in the other world. The Conjuror shewed him to the Chaplaine lying in a bed of fire

Psal. 1.

Deut. 32. 3.

εν πυρι ολβ-70.

Jac. Ren. de
vit. Pont. 159.

in hell; This news so affected the wretched Pope, that he never held up his head, but (Nabal-like) died within a few dayes after it. But oh what a dreadfull shriek gave his guilty soul, to see it self lanching into an infinite Ocean of scalding lead, and to think that it must swim naked therein for ever.

and will refine them, as silver is refined ] This is all the hurt he doth them by the fire; he hides pride from them, Job 33. 19, &c. and divides betwixt the sinne which he hates, and the sonne whom he loves. For by this the iniquity of Jacob shall be purged: and this is all the fruit, the taking away of their sinne: which they may very well spare, and never hurt themselves. Surely, as one poison is antidotary to another: so is affliction to sinne: when sanctified, it is no more penall, but medicinall; not a curse, but a cure. As oil of scorpions is good against the biting of scorpions. As the wine wherein a viper hath been drowned cureth a leprosie. As the juyce of hemlock (a deadly plant) heals hot corroding ulcers, and asswageth the inflammation of the eyes: Or, as Rhubarb, though full of choler, doth mightily purge choler. Moses neglected to circumcise his child (as we do our hearts, it is such a bloody work) till God met him and would have killed him. David could never see the benefit of affliction, till God by those sharp waters had cleared up his eye-sight. Gehezi's leprosie cured him: his white forehead made him have a whiter soul. Surely, as the fining-pot is for silver, and the furnace for gold, so is affliction to the soul. Corrections of instruction, are the way of life, Pro 6. 23. But he that refuseth correction despiseth his own soul, Pro 15. 32. Winds and thunder clear the air (whereof they are the besoms, saith Rupertus) so do crosses the soul. If the outward man decay, the inward is thereby renewed: and the winter of the one, is the spring of the other. As the viper when he is lashed, casteth up his poyson: so doth the good soul when afflicted, purge it self from all filth of flesh and spirit, striving to perfect holiness in the fear of God. These Jews after they had been in the Babylonish furnace for idolatry, hated and feared that sinne as much as the burnt child dreads the fire. They would die any death rather then admit an idoll. Josephus tells how stoutly they opposed Pilate, and Petronius, that would have set up Cesars statue in their Temples, offering their throats to the swords of the souldiers, rather then they would endure that idoll in Gods house. What God is now doing with them, and for them, in this long time of their sad desolation and dispersion, who can tell? There are that think, that after much purging and proving, as here, God will gather a Church of them to himself: according to that which followeth; They shall call upon my name, and I will hear them, I will say, it is my people, &c. And that upon their profession of Christ, shall come the shortest time of affliction that ever was, chap. 14. 1, 2. when Gog and Magog with all his troops, and armies shall compass the beloved city, Rev. 20. 8, 9. But the Jews shall get a glorious Conquest: for God himself from heaven will miraculously fight for them, verse 3, 4, 5. together with all the holy Angels, the ministers of his judgements, verse 5. Sure it is, that the Turks fear some such thing as this: and therefore they cannot abide that any Jew amongst them should turne Christian. In the yeer 1528. a certain Jew dwelling in Constantinople became a good Christian, and was baptized: which the Turks understanding were vehemently exasperated against him for it; fearing lest his conversion should prove prejudiciall to their Mahometan religion, and therefore they apprehended and cruelly murdered him.

and try them as gold is tried ] viz. that when I have tried them, they may come forth as gold, Job 33. 10. Hence Gods people fall into manifold temptations, 1am. 1. 2. they fall, they go not into them step by step, but are precipitated, plunged into them: and not into one of them, or a few, but into manifold temptations, or trials: yea fiery trials, so afflictions are called, because thereby God proves what is in his people, Deut. 8. 16. Rev. 2. 10. Not to better his own knowledge of them neither; for he knows all things, and is intimo nostro intimior nobis, Job. 2. 25. Act. 1. 24. Heb. 4. 12. Artificers perfectly know the nature and properties of their own works, and shall not God see, Psal. 94. 9, 10. But tentat ut sciat, hoc est, ut scire nos faciat, he trieth us. 1. That he may make discoveries of himself unto us, especially of his power and goodnesse: and so get him a name, as Esay 63. 11, 12, 13. 2 Cor. 12. 9. Elias would have water poured upon the sacrifices, yea the Altar covered covered therewith, that Gods power might the more appear, in consuming it with fire from heaven, and the people thereupon might cry, Iehovah he is God, Iehovah he is God: think the same here. 2. That he may make discoveries of us to our selves, and to others; who are apt to misjudge and undervalue us: as not onely Satan did, Iob chap. 1. 9. but even Elihu, also (though otherwise a good man, and the best of his friends) chap. 34. 36. But when they see our holy carriage under the crosse, they can say of us as that Centurion did of our Saviour, Luke 23. Verily this was the Son of God: and as one Culocerus in the Church-history, when he saw the piety and constancy of the Martyrs, he cried out, Verè magnus est Deus Christianorum, The Christians God is a great God indeed. But as by afflictions we are made known to others, so to our selves much more. We are apt either to over-value, or else to under-value our selves, till put to the triall: as is to be seen in the history of Saunders and Pendleton. Hard weather tries what health; wind and stormes what sap: withered leaves soon fall off. Rotten boughes with heavy weights quickly break. Wooden vessels, set empty to the fire, soon break and leak; not so vessels of gold and silver. The best divination what men are is at the parting-way, as Ezek. 21. 21. When the fire comes to green wood, it will appear what's within: when the pond is empty, what's in the bottom. It is not known what corn will yeeld, till it come to the flail: nor what grapes, till it come to the presse. Grace is like the stone Chrysolampis, quem lux celat prodit obscurum, which shine brightest in the dark. The skill of a Pilot is unknown but in a tempest: the valour of a Captain, but in a battle: the faithfulness of a wife, but in an assault. The wicked tried are found to be but reprobate silver: or at best, but Alchymy-gold, that endureth not the seventh fire. They are Αυτίλοι, as Crocodiles, Chameleons, Bats, Spunges, &c. They murmur when tried, as Psal. 78. 40, 41. Or curse, as Micah's mother, Iudg. 17. Or fret, and howl upward, as Wolves when hunge-rbit, Esay 8. 21. Or faint in the day of affliction, as Saul, who lay upon the ground like a beast, 1 Sam. 28. 20. Or Nabal, who lay in his bed like a block. Or desert God and his cause, as those Renegado's, Dan. 11. 32. and those in the Palatinate, who fell to Popery as fast as leaves fall off the trees in Autumne. Many titular Christians amongst us, were, in times of peace, but as wolves in a cage, but as lions tamed by art: they wanted nothing but liberty and opportunity to shew their wolfish and worrying natures, which now these late shedding and discriminating times have sufficiently discovered. Have all these workers of iniquity no knowledge, who eat up Gods people as they eat bread, and call not upon God? They shall call upon my name, and I will hear them. No time for hearing of prayers and obtaining of suits like that of affliction. Those are mollissima fandi Tempora, the time of affliction is the very time of supplication: then our hearts are largest, then Gods ear is openest. Then the saints may have any thing for asking, Psal. 50. 15. and 91. 15. Thus Lot had Zoar at his request, Deut. 29. 23. Paul had all the souls in the ship given him, Act. 27. Jacob greatly fearing to be bereft of his Benjamin prayed, God give you bowels of mercy before the man, Gen. 43. 14. He prayed it, and he had it, ver. 30. For Ioseph made haste: for his bowels did yearn upon his brother, &c. God reserves his best comforts for the worst times: as the feast-maker kept his best wine till the last, Iob. 2. as the mother brings forth her conferves and cordials, when the child is at sickest, Israel was never so royally provided for, as in the wilderness. I will bring her into the wilderness and speak to her heart, Hos. 2. 13. As a bone once broken is stronger after setting: and as lovers are never greater friends then after a falling out: so is it betwixt God and his people. Affliction excitech devotion, as the bellows doth the fire, and excited devotion prevaieth much, Iam. 5. 16.

Esay 27. 9

2 Cor. 4. 16

Augst.

I will say, It is my people and they shall say, The Lord is my God] by a gracious compliance they shall with highest estimations, most vigorous affections and utmost endeavours bestow themselves upon that God that hath so farr owned and honoured them as to st rike a covenant with them: the fruits whereof are sure mercies, compassions that faile not, all the blessings of this and a better life. A covenant is the collection of many promises; as a constellation is the collection of many stars: and though it be (in summ) but one promise, I will be thy God, yet it is such an one as comprehends all: and is therefore fifteen times, at least, mentioned in scripture. It is the substance of the Covenant of grace, saith Junius: the soule of it, saith Pareus: the head or top of it, saith Musculus: Deus meus & omnia, saith Luther, God is mine, all's therefore mine. But then, as God must be our All-sufficient, so we must be his Altogether: and when he cries out, Who is on my side, Who? One shall say I am the Lords: and another shall call himself by the name of Jacob: and another shall subscribe with his hand to the Lord, and surname himself by the name of Israel Esay 44. 5. O it is a blessed signe that God hath chosen us first 1 Ioh. 4. 19. when we chuse God as Psal. 73. 25. sincerely avouching him for our God. Sincerity (or Evangelicall perfection) is the only absolute condition of the Covenant of grace Gen. 17. 1. God and the Saints have ever judged of men by this: Judge me, O Lord, according to mine integrity, saith David, The promises are made to it Psal. 119. 1. Mat. 5. 8. Gods eye is upon it as in David the man after Gods own heart. He blesteth the little that such have, as in Nathanael, Cornelius, the Eunuch. He passeth by their infirmities, as in Aza 1 King. 15. 14. and accepteth their services nevertheless. as 2 Chron. 30. 19, 20.

CHAP. XIV.

Verse 1. BEhold the day of the Lord commeth] Jerusalem had her day, and knew it not Luke 19. 42. (Jerusalem was not Jerusalem: the vision of peace, saw not the things that belong'd to her peace) God therefore will have his day of vengeance, as she had of visitation. He hath his season, his harvest for judgment Mat. 13. 30. and when wickednesse is ripe in the field, he will suffer it to grow no longer, lest it shed and spread: but cuts it up by a just and seasonable vengeance. These Jews were by their own confession the children of them which had killed the Prophets: and, by killing the Lord Christ with wicked hands, they had filled up the measure of their fathers Mat. 23. 31, 32. what could therefore the Lord do lesse to a nation so incorrigibly flagitious, then bring wrath upon them to the utmost 1 Thess. 2. 16? then send forth his armies and destroy those murderers, and burn up their cities? When God did this execution here mentioned, is hard to say: Whether by Antiochus Epiphanes (or rather Epimanes, as some truly called him, for that being exceedingly mad against the Jews, he persecuted the Church of God and wasted it) Or by the Roman spoilers at that last devastation under the command of Titus. Or by Cosroes the Persian, and Homar the Arabian, who successively harased and rased Jerusalem, rifling the houses, ravishing the women, killing whom they pleased, and making the rest pay deare for the very heads they wore: which servitude lasted till Godfrey of Bullin set them at liberty: so the Glosse here senseth it. Or lastly by Gog and Magog, that is, by the great Turk (for Magog is the Scythian nation from whom came the Turks, Lords of Meshec and Tubal, that is, of Cappadocia and Iberia where they first began to raigne) as is before hinted; I take not upon me to determine. The most understand it of the last overthrow of the Romans. The Spirit might have an eye to the Anti-christian persecutions of the Orthodox Professours of the Romish Edomites.

and the spoile shall be divided in the midst of thee] Freely and fearelessly, none rising up to make them afraid, the vanquished shall be so disabled and dispirited. Thus the silly doves are glad to save themselves by flight, nor fight; sometimes they sit in their dove-coats, and see their nests destroyed, and yong ones killed, not daring once to rescue or revenge.

Verse 2. For I will gather all nations] The Romans that stiled and held themselves Lords of all nations, and who had levied a mighty army out of all nations to fight against Jerusalem. See Joseph. lib. 3. belli Ind. chap. 1. and 3. Or Gog and Magog with all his armies and associates Ezek. 37. 4, 5, 6. shall compass the beloved city Rev. 20. 8, 9. See Verse 1. with the Note. Would any man take the Churches picture? then let him, saith Luther, paint a silly poor maid sitting in a wood or wildernesse; and compassed about with hungry lions, wolves, boares and beares &c. and in the midst of a great many furious men assaulting her every moment:

A&amp;T. 2. 23.

Mat. 22. 7.

A&T. 26. 11.
Gal. 1. 13.

moment: Let him give her say I, that of Martial for her Motto.

In me omnis terraque, aviumque, marisque rapina est.

and the city shall be taken] Non tamen ad exitium, sed ad exercitium. I have forsaken mine house: I have left mine heritage (saith the Lord Jer. 12. 7.) I have given the dearly beloved of my soule into the hand of her enemies. At which times there is usually, as at Athens when taken by Sylla ἀνελεῖς σφαγὴ a bloody butchery.

and the houses rifled] As at the sack of Constantinople by the Turks: where the souldiers are said to have divided money among themselves by whole hat-fuls: and were therewith so enriched, that 'tis a proverb amongst them at this day, if any grow suddenly rich, to say, he hath been at the sacking of Constantinople. The Emperour had in vaine many times with teares requested to have borrowed money of his covetous subjects, to have been employed in the defence of the city; but they would still swear that they had it not: as men grown poor for want of trade. Which in few dayes after, their enemies found in such abundance, that they wondered at their wealth, and derided their folly, that possessing so much they would bestow so little in the defence of themselves and their countrey. Turk. hist. 347

and the women ravished] These are the common calamities of war: in the in the lawlesse violence whereof those three commandments, Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not steale: as they are ranked together in the law, so they are usually violated together. Hence Isa. 13. 16. Their children also shall be dashed to peeces before their eyes, their houses shall be spoiled, and their wives ravished. The Irish rebels bound the husband to the bed-post, whiles they abused his wife before his face. In the time of K. Edward the third, the French souldiers at Winchelsey in Suffex took their lustfull turns upon a beautifull woman in the Church, and at the time of divine service, untill they had turned her out of the world, as a learned man phraseth it. Ibid. 345.

and half of the city shall go forth into captivity] An evil, an onely evil, threatened Dent. 28. and fulfilled to the utmost upon this nation, so shamelesly, so lawlesly wicked, as can hardly be peered or paralleled. I have noted before, that this their last captivity and disperion is such, as that one of their own Rabbines concludeth from thence, that their Messiah must needs be come, and they must needs suffer so much for killing him. They use to say that there is still an ounce of the golden calf in all their publike calamities. There is another thing lieth more heavily upon them to this day, were they but sensible of it. Let us be tending up, and fighting out for them that of the Psalmist, O that the salvation of Israel were come out of Zion! when the Lord bringeth back the captivity of his people, Jacob shall rejoyce, and Israel shall be glad. Psa. 14. 7.

and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city] A remnant shall be reserved as it were for royall use: whether a third part as chap. 13. 8. or an half, as here, 'tis not much materiall: in numeris non est anxie laborandum, saith Calvin here; for the direct number, it is neither here nor there as we say. God shall reserve unto himself a set and select number. He who comforteth those that are cast down, speaketh this to his, for encouragement. The Church may be shaken, not shivered: persecuted, but not forsaken: cast down, but not destroyed Donec mulier fatigata spiritum exhalaret. Walsing.

2 Cor. 4. 9.

Verse 3. Then shall the Lord go forth, and fight against those nations] Some read it, Among those nations: He shall be the Archistrategus, the Commander in chief of those Armies, which he hath brought together against Ierusalem, to revenge upon her the quarrel of his Covenant. But I like the other way better: because it is purposely spoken for the comfort of Saints in evil times. When therefore there is dignus vindice nodus, & periculum par animo Alexandri, as he was wont to say, when it is time for God to arise, that his enemies may be scattered, and those that hate him, fly before him; he will arise and have mercy upon Zion: he will awake as in the dayes of old: he will come forth from his holy place to the rescue of his praying people. There brake he the arrowes of the bow, the shield, and the sword, and the battell, Selab. There he appeared more glorious Psal. 76. 3, 4.

and

Esay 10.

and excellent then the mountaines of prey. There he did, and there he will: for this is a common and currant Scripture-medium. God shall fight against those nations, the very rod of his wrath: which after he hath worn to the stump, he will cast it into the fire. The wicked are called Gods sword Psal. 17. 13. But it will fall out with them, as with that sword which Hektor gave Ajax; which so long as he used against his enemies, served for help and defence: but after he began to abuse it to the hurt of hurtlesse beasts, it turned into his own bowels.

as when he fought in the day of battel] with his own bare hand as it were, Esay 52. 10. and in a miraculous manner, as he did for Israel at the red sea, for Isaiah, Iehosaphat, Hezekiah &c. and as he shall do at that last great battle against Antichrist and his Adherents Rev. 20. 8, 9, 10. which is here (haply) pointed at. Let the Lord but arise only and his enemies shall be scattered: but if he once take hold of shield and buckler, (for defence) he draw out the spear and sword (those weapons of offence) and appear as a man of warr Exod. 15. 3. or as a Lord and Victour of warrs (so the Chaldee there hath it) he will charge thorough and thorough, he will burn them together Esay 27. 4. and in the same place 2 Sam. 23. 7.

John 18.
Mat. 26. 30.

Verse 4. And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives that is, he shall so put forth his power for defence of his people, as if he did visibly appear amongst them, and beheld the fight from the top of a mountain: like as Zerxes used to pitch his tent on high, and stand looking on his army when in fight, to encourage them, and to send out orders. From this Mount it was, that God departed after many former removes, from Ierusalem Ezech. 11. 23. And what wonder, when as Har Hamischa the mount of Unction was become Har Hamaschith the mount of Corruption 2 King. 23. 13? the boild Jews having set up their Idol in this mount Olivet, even in the sight of the Lord: so that he never looked out of the Sanctuary, but he beheld that vile hill of abominations. From this mount it was that our Lord Christ ascended into heaven, Act. 1. 11. There he was apprehended by the Jews: there therefore it is prophecied that he shall stand against them by the Romans, say some, out of Ioseph. de Bello Iud. lib. 6. cap. 3. And that when these things should come to passe the Jews might know that their utter destruction was neer at hand. So God shewed unto the Ninivites on what side their city should be taken: and what at that time should be the power and the attempts of the enemy against them, Nab. 2. and 3. and yet neither of these repented for all this. Others (more probably) hold that here is promised such a powerful presence of God for the relief of his people, as shall far exceed the glory that appeared at the promulgation of the law, when the mountains skipped like rams, and the little hills like lambs: so terrible also was the sight, that Moses said, I exceedingly fear and quake. I also see and tremble at the resemblance (said an holy man) betwixt that giving of the law, and the requiring of it at the last day. In the one Mount Sinai only was on a flame: all the world shall be so in the other. To the One, Moses (that climbed up that hill, and alone saw it) sayes, God came with ten thousand of his Saints. In the other, thousand thousands shall minister to him, and ten thousand thousands shall stand before him. Hereunto some refer that obscure passage in the next verse, The Lord my God shall come, and all the Saints with thee: and that at the day of judgement Christ shall descend with all his Angels into mount Olivet, which hangs over the valley of Iehosaphat, that there he may plead with all nations, for his people, and for his heritage Israel, whom they have scattered, and parted their land Isaiah 3. 2. Further they say, that mount Olivet shall then be shaken with a very great earthquake: so that it shall cleave in the midst, and leave a very great valley: it shall enlarge the valley of Iehosaphat, that it may be able to receive those that are there to be judged by Christ. Thus Lessius, Sa, à Costa, à Lapide, who also citeth for his purpose Clemens Romanus lib. 7. Constit. Ap. cap. 33. speaking thus, Mons ipse Oliveti gloria venientis cedet & in quatuor partes dissectus longissime diffugiet, ut tribunali iudicis theatrum totius orbis assistat. i. e. Mount Olivet shall give place to the glory of Christ when he commeth; and being cleft into foure parts, it shall flie far asunder, to the end that the theatre of the whole world may stand before the tribunall of the Judge.

Psal. 114. 6.
Heb. 12. 21.

Judge. Thus He. and surely the following verses, 6, 7, 8, &c. seem to favour this interpretation, and to have relation to the last Day. But in Prophecies not yet fulfilled (as this may be one) it is better and more sure to expect and stay for the explication by the event, then to give it without any certain ground.

Verse 5. And ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains ] Or, ye shall flee the valley of the mountains, sc. of Mount Olivet, made by God (verse 4.) by whom the Romans were set a work to garrison Mount Olivet against the Jews: and, by digging down a great part of it, to fill up the brook Cedron or the town-ditch, and to bring a wall (where with they compassed about the whole city) thorow the midst of this mount: whereby the city was greatly pressed, and much annoyed. This Mountain ye shall flee (as many of you as are Aziz; that is separated: confer Exod. 24. 11. Esey 43. 4.) and repair to Pella, a place of rest provided for you. Not without some perturbation of spirit (though causelesse) as in common calamities it falleth out; and the like shall befall the very Elect also at the last day, till they have recollected themselves, till they remember that now their redemption draweth nigh.

Joseph. lib. 6. cap 13.

And ye shall flee ] sc. with utmost hast and fright; death being that terrible of terribles, as the Philosopher calleth it, Natures slaughterman, Hells Purveyor, &c.

like as ye fled from before the earthquake ] which might be as sad and as suddain as that at Pleures in Rheia, Anno 1618. Aug. 25. the whole town was overcovered with a mountaine, which with its most swift motion oppressed 1500. people.

Alst. Chronol.

in the dayes of Uzziah king of Juda ] Whether this earthquake fell out just at that instant time when Uzziah offered incense, and was therefore smitten with leprosie (as the Jewish Doctors affirm) I have not to say. But of the horror of it (besides Am. 1. 1. Josephus relateth, that a mountain towards the West cleft in sunder and removed from its proper place the space of four furlongs, or half a mile: and farther it had proceeded, had not a great mountain towards the East stayed its course. Camden reporteth the like hereunto to have fallen out in Herefordshire, Anno 1571. Cal. Martij 12. about six of the clock in the evening, a great hill lifted up it selfe with a huge noise, and ascending into an higher place, carryed along with it trees, flocks of cattle, sheep-coates, walked about from Saturday night till Monday noon, overturned a certain Chappell that stood in its way, &c. This kind of earthquake Philosophers call Brasmaria.

Camd. Britan.

and the Lord my God shall come ] q. d. Let scoffers doubt and deride, saying, where is the promise of his coming? My God will effect with his hand what he hath spoken with his mouth, he will, he will, Hab. 2. 3. There is an Emphasis in the word My (q. d. The God whose I am, yea ὁ θεός ἐκείνος wholly his, as Aristotle saith of a servant) and another in the following Apostrophe.

and all the saints with thee ] The Prophet in an holy indignation at his hearers obstinacy and untractableness, turns him thus to God: like as doth old Jacob, Gen. 49. 18. and our blessed Saviour tyred out with the peoples perverseness, Mat. 11. 25, 26. See the Note on both places.

Verse 6. And it shall come to passe in that day ] that is, saith Diodorus, after the destruction of Antichrist shall the son of God come in, who shall bring the Church into its glory: where, without any vicissitude or variation of day and night, of calamity and prosperity, of knowledge and ignorance, it shall enjoy eternall light by the sight of God, Ihu. 16. 19, 20. Rev. 21. 23. and 22. 5. Thus he. Betwixt this fall of Antichrist and the Consummation of all, some place the full and finall restoration of the Jews, and make this a description of that glorious Church they shall then erect. There shall be no darknesse, but perpetuall light. It shall not be saith our Prophet here, sometime clear, sometimes mistie, (variable and uncertain weather, now fair, now foule) but one day, not of day and night: for in the evening when night is wont to come it shall be light: as if he should say, it shall be alwaies day and no night ἀνέρας ὁ ἡμέρας a nightlesse day, a morning without cloudes, a clear shining after raine, as David in another case, 2 Sam. 22. 4. and as with the Hyperboreans the whole halfe year is said to be but one continueate day; so that they sowe and reape in a day.

Herefordshire de re rust.

Verse 7. Which shall be known to the Lord ] And that should suffice us, without further Calvin.

Heyl. Geors.

Clavis Apoca-
lypt p. 134.
135.

D. Harris.

Cas de bel.
Gall. 1.

1 Kin. 17. 7.

Lib. 2. cap. 130

further curious enquiries, de re nobis & toti mundo abscondita, concerning the set times and the seasons which the Father hath put in his own power, Alt. 1. 7. The Muscovites use to say in a darke point, in a difficult question, God and our great Duke know all this; And in other talk, all we enjoy health, and life, & all from our great Duke: therefore let us leave all to him. should not we much more to God? Time hath already confuted those learned men, who from Dan. 12. 11. pitched their calculation for the Jewes restauration upon the year 1650. Those that shall live a few years longer shall see what will become of their confidence? who have undertaken to prove out of Daniel and the Revelation, that the Prophetical numbers come to an end with the year of our Lord 1655. because then the seventh Trumpet shall sound; and then the six thousand years from the Creation of the world do expire as they compute.

Vers. 8. Living waters shall go out from Jerusalem] i. e. Abundance of spirituall graces frequently in scripture compared to waters, for their cooling, cleansing, quickning property, Isa. 44. 3. Ezek. 36. 25. and 47. 1. John 7. 38. And of these waters without all doubt, our baptism ordeined of God is a figure and sacrament. Living waters they are called: that is running as a Spring, not standing as a poole. The godly esteeme of life by that stirring they find in their souls, Isa. 38. 15, 16. In all these things is the life of my spirit: else they lament as over a dead soule. "O live, live (saith a Reverend man) live quickly, live much, live long. Many live more in a day then others in a year: for life consisteth in action: and so much every man liveth, as he acteth graciously. Up therefore and be doing something of worth: whereof ye may testifie that ye have lived. And for this, get a principle of life, the spirit of life which is in Christ Jesus, and then, if ye live in the Spirit, ye shall also walk in the spirit, Gal. 5. 25. and not fulfill the lusts of the flesh, verse 16. The waters of the sea, though by their natural course they follow the center, yet by obedience to the Moon they are subject to her motion; and so turn, and return, ebbe and flow, and are kept in continual motion, to keep them from corruption: so those that are spiritual, though naturally they are carried downward, and the best that of themselves they can do is but dead work: Yet so farre as they are spiritualized, heavenlyed, they are acting for God, and all their deeds are wrought in him, John 3. 21. It is their great care to weare out, not rust out: to burn out, not to be blown out: yea to flame out, not to smother out: to serve out their generation, as David did not to idle it out: to live their utmost, and not (as Job. 27. 15. with 23.) to be buried, before half dead.

in summer and winter shall it be] such is the perennity and perpetuity of true grace: it ever flows—more perennis aque. As it is not like the River Araris of which Cesar saith, that it cannot with eyes be discerned whether it flow forward or backward (so slow and still is its motion:) so neither is it like the brook Cherith, that dried up before the Prophet, because there had been no raine in the Land: or like the River Novanus in Lombardy which (saith Plinie) at every Midsomer solstice swelleth and runneth over the banks; but at mid-winter, is clean dry. But as the waters of the Sanctuary, Ezek. 47. 4, &c. And as the poole of Siloe, which served all Jerusalem, and was for every use to the citizens: or Hezekiah's watercourses, 2 Kin. 20. 20. Neh. 3. 15, 16. whereunto some think that the Prophet here alludeth. He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow Rivers of living waters. But this he spake (saith the Evangelist) of the spirit which they that believe in him should receive, John 7. 38, 39.

Vers. 9. And the Lord shall be King over all the earth] At the sounding of the seventh Angel, the Kingdoms of this world shall become the Kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ: and he shall reigne for ever and ever, Rev. 11. 15, 17. Cosmographers tell us, that if we divide all the known world into thirty parts, the Heathens part is as nineteen of this thirty: the Mahometans as six, the Christians as five only. And of those that professe the name of Christ, three parts at least of those five are posselt by Idolatrous Papists; who say they believe in one only true God, but indeed set up many He-saints and She-saints, whom they adore with divine worship: and therein are no better then Pagans. Hence they are called Gentiles, Rev. 11. 2. and are said to worship Divels, Rev. 9. 20 with 1 Cor. 10. 20. Cardinal Bemius saith of their Saint Francis, that he was in numerus Deorum ab ab Ecclesia Rom. relatus. At Ruremund in Gelderland, a play was acted by the Je- In Hist. Ven. suites, Anno Dom. 1622. under the title of the Apotheosis of St. Ignatius the founder of that Order. In the year 610. Boniface the fourth ordained the feast of All-saints, after that he had obtained of the Emperour the Idol-temple at Rome called the Pantheon; wherein he placed the Virgin Mary in the roome of Cybele the Mother of the Heathen Gods. Now the time is yet to come (and oh that it were come!) that, all false worship laid aside and abandoned, the fulnesse of the Gentiles shall be brought in: and from the Jews (as some gather from this Text compared with others) shall the Gospel go out to all Nations of the world, Isay. 2.

3. who with one consent shall submit themselves to Christ. Alfred. Chron. pag. 346.
Jac. Ren. de vit. Pont. 309.
Asshur and Egypt, all those large and vast Countries, the whole tract of the East and of the South shall embrace the faith of Christ and be converted, Isa. 19. 23, 24, 25. and 27. 12, 13.
Mich. 7. 11, 12. Psal. 68. 31. and 72. 9, 10, 11. Rev. 21. 14. O deculam illam! Neither need we think it incredible: God can hisse for them and fetch them in suddenly: he can cause a Nation to conceive and bring forth in one day, Esay 66. 8, 9.
A Text that Cardinall Poole in a letter to Pope Julius the third abused by applying it to the bringing in of Popery again so universally and suddainly in Queen Maries dayes.

[shall there be one Lord] Be the Gods of the Heathen good-fellows faith One, the true God is a jealous God, and will not share his glory with another. Be it that to Pagans and Papagans there are Gods many and Lords many: to us there is but one God, and but one Mediatour betwixt God and man, the man Christ Jesus. As for all others, say we of them, as that Heathen once did, Contemno minuos istos Deos modo Jovem propitium habeam, I care not for those petty-deities, so long as Jehovah favoureth me. Heave O Israel (faith Moses, Deut. 6. 4.) Jehovah thy God, Jehovah is one. The Hebrew word there used for One hath Daleth the last letter (which also stands in number for four) extraordinary great in the Original: to signifie say the Jew-Doctors, that this one God shall be worshipped in the foure corners of the earth.

and his Name one] that is, One way of worship; all Superstitions being abolished, see Mich. 4. 5. Or, his Name, that is, his glory as Psal. 8. 1. his transcendent excellency shall be supereminent: He shall have a name above all names, that at the name of Jesus every knee may bow. Thus the word Name is used both in Divine and Humane Authors, Gen. 6. 14. Men of Name, that is, of Renown:
so Numb. 1. 16. and 16. 2. Acts 1. 15. the number of Names, that is, of the chieftaines that were fit to act in the Election. Contrary whereunto is men without name, Job 30. 8. men written in the earth, Jer. 17. 30. shrouded in the sheet of shame, and whose happinesse it is to be forgotten in the City, Eccles. 8. 10. So the Poets call Eminent and famous men Nomina, as Ovid doth Augustus:

--ingloria vi-
ta recedit.

Vive tibi, & longè Nomina magna fuge.

And speaking of some famous person he faith

Claros inter habens nomina clara viros.

Vers. 10. All the Land shall be turned as a plain.] Or, shall be compassed about as a plain, ut agore plano, so the Tigurine translation. God shall enlarge the bounds of his Church; he shall lay all level, that people may come in again from all parts.
Every valley shall be filled, and every mountain and hill brought low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough-ways smooth, Luk. 3. 5. The wildernesse, and the solitary place shall be glad for them, and the desert shall re-joyce and blossom as the rose: It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoyce even with joy and singing. The glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it; the excellencie of Carmel and Sharon, they shall see the glory of the Lord, and the ex-cellencie of our God, Esa. 35. 1, 2. The Prophet here sheweth that all the land shall be inhabited from one end unto another; From Geba the North-confine, to Rimmon, the South-Lorder, Josh. 15. 32, 57. And from Benjamins gate unto the place of the first (or old) gate, Neh. 3. 6. which stood Westward, unto
the

Cant. 4. 6

Masius in Josh. 19. 13.Vide typ. Jerosol. ap. Adricho.

Turk. Hist.

Rev. 21. 16.

Neh. 11

ἀνὴρ ὁ
ἐν ἀνὴρ ὁ
Mat. 1. 21
Psal. 130. 8

the corner gate (See 2 Chron. 26. 9. & 25. 23.) or the gate that looketh Eastward. The limits of the Church shall be greatly enlarged; the rough and rugged mountains being made as the smooth and pleasant champions. The faithful shall pass from Geba to Rimmon, from the mountains of Myrrh and hills of Frankincense, to the Pomgranates (for so Rimmon signifieth, and from the plenty of that fruit there, this place seemeth to have taken its name) that is, from Humiliation and Supplication for pardon and power against corruption, to Love and good Works, looking up, and pressing hard toward the high prize proposed unto them; as the many grains within the case of the Pomgranate do point, and as it were all look up together unto the crown or circle that is without, upon the head of it. To the kings wine-presses] which were on the West-side, where the former two half-compasses did meet to make up a whole compass. Certain it is, that Jerusalem was a very large and spacious city, comprehending thirty furlongs at least, say those that have written of it. There was in it the upper and the nether town, whence it is called, Ier-rushalaim in the dual. There was afterwards the old town and the new, called Boretha, or Cenopolis. But Ezech. 40. 41, 42. &c. God sheweth the Prophet a new Temple bigger then all the old Jerusalem put all together: and a new Jerusalem bigger then all the land of Canaan; by these very dimensions shewing, that these things cannot be understood but spiritually. And the new Jerusalem in the Revelation as it lieth four square, looking every way to the four corners of the earth (like as Constantinople doth, which is therefore said to be a city fatally founded to command) so the measure of it is twelve thousand furlongs: which (according to some) make no less then 1500 miles.

Verse 11. And men shall dwell in it.] Heb. They shall dwell in it, sc. Multitudes of men. The new Jerusalem, the Church gathered by the preaching of the Gospel shall not be thinly inhabited, as the wilderness of Judea was: it shall not lye waste for want of people, as divers parts of Turkey do. It shall not need to call in the countrey, as in Nehemiahs dayes, to replenish it: but it shall be full thrust as an hive is with bees, where they hang out on heaps through want of room within or as Jerusalem was wont to be at the three solemn feasts; or lastly, as the Temple was at those feasts where the people were so crowded, that they were glad to stand and pray, for kneel or bow they could not. See Esay 51. 3. Ier. 31. 38, 39, 40. Obad. 19. 20. And there shall be no more utter destruction.] Heb. Cherem, which the vulgar Interpreter rendreth, Anabema; There shall be no more curse, no execrable or accursed thing; no casting out by excommunication; no cause to do so. (See the same, Rev. 22. 3. No Canaanite in the Lords house, as verse 21. Then shall Jerusalem be holy, and there shall no stranger pass thorow her any more, Ier. 3. 17. such shall be her sanctity. Others expound it of her safety and security (as in the following words, Jerusalem shall be safely inhabited. See the like, Ier. 23. 6. & 33. 16. In those dayes shall Iudah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely: and this is the name wherewith she shall be called, Iehovah isidkenu, The Lord our righteousness. A stately name indeed, and that which carries safety in the front of it. In Ezekiel the Church is called, Iehovah Shamma, The Lord is there: and the Psalmist gives the notation, and this note upon it, God is in the midst of her, she shall not be moved: God shall help her, and that right early. But the Lord our righteousness is a more August name. It is Christs own name: and imports that Christ will save his people from their sinnes (which would lay them naked to the wrath of God, and rage of enemies) he will redeem Israel from all his iniquities, and then he need not fear what man can do unto him. It was said of Achilles, that he was Styge armatus: But every child of the Church is, Cælo, Christo, Deo armatus: he hath the peace of God within him, and the power of God without him; and therefore cannot but be safe as in a tower of brass, or town of war. Pf. 90. 1.

Verse 12. And this shall be the plague wherewith the Lord wil smite, &c.] The precedent promises that were so great and glorious, the Prophet doth now farther enlarge, and illustrate in the following verses: and first the conquest of the enemies, verse 12, 13, 14, 15. Next, the profession of Christ among all nations of the world, verse 16, 17, 18, 19. And lastly, the sanctity of the Church, verse 20, 21. The conquest of the enemies is set forth, First by Gods strange judgements upon them, verse 12. Secondly, By the means, both they shall dispatch one another; and Judah shall fight bravely against them, verse 13, & 14. Thirdly, their wealth and substance shall become a prey, verse 14. Fourthly, their horses of service, and all the beasts they bring with them shall be as strangely plagued as the men themselves, verse 15. That have fought against Ierusalem.] God will go forth and fight against them, verse 2. so that they shall wish they had never meddled. Hæc erit plaga qua plagabit. God hath a mighty hand, Iam. 4. 9. and it is a fearful thing to fall into it, Heb. 10. 31. for, who knoweth the power of his wrath? Psal. 90. 11. One stroke of this hard and heavy hand, broke the angels backs, and cast them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgement, 2 Pet. 2. 4. Job felt but his little finger, as it were; and yet cries out for help, Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye my friends; for the hand of God hath touched me, Iob 19. 21. It had but lightly touched him; and yet he was hardly able to endure it. Oh the bloody wails that Gods hand hath left upon the backs of his best children! Wo then to his enemies when he comes forth to fight against them. Their flesh shall consume away, whilst they stand upon their feet.] They shall pine away in their iniquities, Levit. 26. 30. their beauty shall consume away like a moth, Psal. 39. 11. they shall melt as wax before the sun, or as the fat of lambs before the fire. God if he be not unto them as a lion to tear the kell of their hearts in sunder; yet he will be as a moth, and as a worm, insensibly to consume them, Hos. 5. 12, 14. If he break not their teeth in their mouths by smiting them upon the cheek-bone, yet he will make them to melt away as waters which run continually; as a snail which melteth, and as the untimely birth of a woman that never seeth the sun, Psa. 58. 6, 7, 8. God hath secret ways to waite his enemies, and to bring them on their knees when they are best under-set. He can trip up their heels when they are standing upon their feet, and lay them low enough in the slimy valley where are many already like them, and more shall come after them, Iob 21. 31, 32. God hath a Marasmus, an evil messenger for a malicious persecutor; as he had for Antiochus Epiphanes; for both the Herods; for Maximinus the Tyrant; for Philip the second of Spain, Charles the ninth of France, Queen Mary of England, Steven Gardiner, Arch-Bishop Arundel, Nestorius, Arrius, and other odious Hereticks, and enemies of the Church: amongst whom à Lapide the Jesuit reckons here Calvin, and saith, That like another Hered, he died a lowlie lothsom death: and for his authority thinks it enough to say, ut refert Bolsecus in ejus vita. But it must be understood, that the lives of Calvin and Beza were spitefully written by this Bolsecus their sworn enemy, that twice banished and thrice runnagate Friar (I might have said) and Physician: for those names his often changes and hard chances have given him. This man being requested by the popish side (and its likely hired by them) to write thus, is in all their writings alledged as Canonical. And their eyes shall consume away in their holes.] Physicians tell us of two thousand diseases that annoy mans body; two hundred whereof affect the eyes: All these are part of Gods hosts, which are as much at Gods command as the Centurions servants and souldiers were at his, when he said but, Go, or come, and they did accordingly. He can make mens eyes drop and cease, not without any intermission, as Lam. 3. 49. till they melt out; as the Hebrew here hath it; even the very same word as before. He can smite men with sudden blindness (as he did the sinful Sodomites, that had eyes full of adultery) such as tormented their eyes, as if they had been pricked with thorns, as the Hebrew word signifieth, Gen. 19. 11. Failing of eyes, and sorrow of minde, is threatened as a judgement, Deut. 28. 65: yea thou shalt be mad for the sight of thine eyes, which thou shalt see is another piece of the curse, verse 34. See 1 Sam. 2. 33. And their tongue shall consume away in their mouth.] As did the tongue of Nestorius the Heresiarch eaten out of his mouth with worms: Tho. Arundel, and Steven Gardiner, two bloody persecutors, died of a like disease. Didacte understands all this to be a description of hel-torments. Their flesh shall consume; yet never be consumed; for they still stand upon their feet, or subsist, that they may still suffer; having no end, that their pain may be endless. Their eyes shall consume, &c. that is, saith he, though they be alive and can see, yet shall they be deprived of light in

I Machab. 6.
Joseph. Antiq.
l. 12. c. 11.

Spec. Eur

Mat. 8. 9.

infernal darknesse : having neither eyes nor understanding, but onely to see and judge of their extream misery. Their tongue shal consume away, &c. as did the rich gluttons, Luke 16. 24. M. Calvin observeth here, that all is delivered in the singular number ; his flesh shal consume ; his eyes shal melt ; his tongue, &c. ( for so runs the Original ) to note that every of Ieruselems enemies shal taste of Gods wrath ; though some of them may haply hold themselves out of the reach of his rod. And, Secondly, that God can as easily destroy them all, as if he had to do but with one single man.

Verse 13. A great tumult from the Lord shal be among them. He shall fright them as he did the Philistines by a sound of a going in the tops of the mulberry trees, 2 Sam. 5. 24. and the Syrians by a hurly noise in the air, causing a Pannick terror, 2 King. 7. 6. Therefore some render it, Erit strepitus vel fragor Domini magnus in eis, ut 1 Sam. 7. 10. with 1 Sam. 2. 10. Or, he shall exasperate and imbitter them one against another ; as he did Abimelech, and the men of Shechem, by sending an evil spirit between them, Judg. 9. 23. that is by letting loose Satan upon them, that old man-slayer, that kindle-coal and make-bare of the world : and this in a way of just revenge for their treacherous conspiracy against the house of Gideon. Thus God first divided, and then destroyed the Midianites by setting every ones sword against his fellow, Judg. 7. 23. So he dealt by the Philistims, 1 Sam. 14. 15, 20. So the Kings of Syria and Egypt that succeeded Alexander, and were enemies to the Jews, destroyed one another : So did the Primitive Persecutors, the Turk and the Persian, the Spaniard and the French. In the year 1526. Charles the fifth Emperour of Germany, set at liberty his prisoner Francis King of France, upon this condition ( among others ) that they should joyne their forces and do their utmost to suppress and root out the Lutheran Heresie ; that is, the truth of the Gospell, out of both their Dominions. But soon after they fell at variance amongst themselves, ( the Pope blowing the bellows ) whereby the Church had her Halcyons, sic canes lingunt ulcera Lazari.

Sculter Annal.
Dec. 2. pag. 2

shall take the hand of his neighbour ] as those yonkers of Helcath-hazzurim did, that sheathed their swords in their fellows bowels, 2 Sam. 2. 16.

Verse 14. And Judah also shall fight at Ierusalem ] Shall fight like a lion, and do great exploits for his countrey ; as Judas Maccabæus did : as Hunniades, that Maul of the Turks, and Scanderbeg, who killed 800. Turks with his own hand, and fought so earnestly sometimes, that the very blood burst out at his lips. So did Zisca, and the rest of Christs worthy warriors : who by faith, ( and yet by force of arms too ) waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens, subdued kingdoms, fought the Lords battles, Heb. 11. 32, 34. They saw by faith, what is on the other side of the shore of this mortality : and that put mettle into them. The valour of the Gauls was admired by the Romans : it proceeded from that instruction they had from their Druides, of the immortality of the soul. The Swedes upon the same ground shewed incredible courage in the late German warres : running into apparent danger, like flies into the candle ( faith One ) as if they had not seen it. Faith fears no colours. What brave spirits hath God raised up amongst us alate, fighting as it were in blood to the knees for Religion and liberty, resolved either to vanquish or die, as the Black Prince, ו' תאן ו' עמ' תאן, with that Lacedemonian, either to live with the Gospel, or to die for it ? And how valiant the restored Jews shall once be upon their enemies the Turks, who now hold their countrey till their iniquities be full, who can tell ? Sure it is that Israel after their victory over Gog, shall spoil those that spoiled them, and rob those that robbed them, saith the Lord God, Ezek. 39. 10. And then perhaps it is, that the wealth of all the heathen round about shall be gathered together ( as a prize or booty ) gold, and silver, and apparel in great abundance ] Look how Abraham stripped the four kings of their plunder, Gen. 14. 16. Gideon, the Midianites, Judg. 8. David, the Amalekites, 1 Sam. 30. 18. Iehosaphat, the Ammonites, ( they were three dayes in gathering the spoil it was so much, 2 Chron. 20. 25. ) so it may fall out one day with their posterity. The Jew Doctours, as they have a saying, that whatsoever befell unto the Fathers is a signe unto the children : so of Abrahams victory over the four kings, they write, that it befell unto him, to teach that four kingdoms : ( those kingdoms spoken of in Daniel ) should stand up to rule over the world : and that in the end his children

The life of the K. of Sweden
by M. Clark.

children should rule over them, and they should all fall by their hand, and they should bring again all their captives, and all their substance. R. Menachem on Gen. 14.

Verse 15. And so shall be the plague of the horse, of the mule, of the camel ] All the beasts of service, made use of by the enemy, shall consume in like sort, as their masters. First, for a punishment to their owners, who must needs suffer losse thereby. Hence Saul was so sedulous in seeking the lost asses. Secondly, to shew how God is displeased with, and will severely punish all that are instrumentall to the Churches calamities, or serviceable to their sinne. The serpent is cursed, cut shorter by the feet, and made to wriggle upon his belly, yea confined to the dust for his diet. So God curseth and abhorreth all instruments of idolatry, Esay 30. 22. Num. 31. 22, 23. Dent. 7. 25. The graven images of their gods shall ye burn with fire: the very visible heavens, because defiled with mans sinne, are to be purged by the fire of the last day.

Verse 16. Every one that is left of all the nations ] i. e. that hath escaped the plague, verse 12. and is beaten into a better mind: as those Hunnes, that, vanquished by the Christians, concluded that Christ was the true God, and became his subjects. God had promised before to subvert the Churches enemies, but here to convert them, which is farre better. And it shall appear to be so (as conversion cannot be hid; you cannot turn a bell, but it will make a sound: and report its own motion. See Gal. 1. 23.) for they shall even go up ] sc. to the Temple, which stood upon mount Moriah: to worship the king the Lord of Hosts ] to send a lamb (or an homage peny) to Esay 16. 1. the Lord of the whole earth.

and to keep the feast of Tabernacles ] In a due manner, which had not been rightly done (a marvellous thing) all along during the reigne of David, Solomon, and all those succeeding Reformers, till about these times; as appears Neh. 8. 16, 17, 19. The sence of this text is, that the converted Gentiles shall joyn with the Jews, in the sincere service of God according to his will, and not according to their own brains and fancies: that they shall worship him with the same rites, in the same places and assemblies which they do: that Jehovah may be one, and his Name one amongst them, as verse 9. that there may be no more Jew, and Gentile, Barbarian or Scythian, bond or free, but Christ may be all, and in all. That those two sticks being joyned into one, Ezek. 37. 16. all Israel may be saved, Rom. 11. 26. and raised as from the dead, verse 15. the Gentiles also may have their part in the same resurrection. All this is here set forth in such termes, and under such types as were then most in request: as of going up to the Temple, keeping the feast of Tabernacles, &c. All which expressions are parabolically, symbolically, and enigmatically: framed to the capacity of the Jews, much addicted to these legal rites and shadows, then in use, but now done away, Col. 2. 17. Heb. 10. 1. whatever the Jews conclude from this text for their continuance under Meſſias his kingdome. Christians have their feasts or holy-dayes too, 1 Cor. 5. 8. yea their feast of Tabernacles in a mysticall sence, 1 Pet. 2. 11. Heb. 11. 1, 9.

Col. 3. 11

Verse 17. Even upon them shall be no rain ] i. e. Nullam misericordiam assequatur, saith Theodoret: They shall get no good at Gods hand. Judæa was ſumen totius orbis, as One saith, a very fat and fertile countrey: but yet so, as that her fruitfulnesse depended much upon seasonable showres, the former and latter rain: and the Prophet seemeth here to allude to that of Moses, Dent. 11. 10, &c. If God did not hear the heaven, and the heaven the earth, the earth could not hear the corn, wine, and oil, nor those hear Jezreel, Hos. 2. 19. Judæa was not like that countrey in Pliny, ubi siccitas dat lutum, imbres pulverem, where drought made dirt, rain made dust: but if the heaven were iron over them, the earth would soon be brasse under them, and not yeeld her increase, (See Pſal. 65. 9. Esay 30. 23.) and then where would they be quickly? sith Animantis cuiusque vita in fuga est, life would be lost, if not maintained by daily food. Rain is in Scripture put 1. Properly, for water coming out of the clouds, Dent. 11. 11, Prov. 16. 15. nourishing the herbs and trees. 2. Metaphorically for Christ, his Gospel, and his graces, wherewith the souls of men are made fruitfull in good works, Esay 45. 8. Dent. 32. 2. Hos. 6. 3. The want of rain is on the contrary made here, and Rev. 11. 5. a signe of a curse. It waiteth not for the finnes of men, Mic. 5. 7.

E e e 2

but

but it accomplisheth what God appointeth, Esa 55. 10, 11. Why it falleth here, and now, we know not, and wonder.

Vers. 18. And if the family of Egypt ] So called from one Aiguptos, a King there. In the Hebrew it is called, (mostly) Mizraim, from one of that name, Gen. 10. 6. sometimes, for its power and pride, it is called, Rahab, Psal. 87. 4. and 89. 11. Esa 51. 9. The family of Egypt is here put for the whole Nation (see the like Amos 3. 1.) because, after the confusion of tongues especially, Nations took their originall and denomination from the head of some family; as did the Egyptians from Mizraim, Chams second sonne.

go not up, and come not ] But they did receive the Christian religion with the first: had Christian schools, Doctours, and Professours, after that Saint Mark had there planted a Church at Alexandria, now called Scanderoon. This was fore-prophecied, Esa 19. 21. The Lord shall be known to Egypt, &c. And the Lord shall smite Egypt, he shall smite and heal it, &c. he shall cause them to passe under the rod, and to bring them into the bond of the covenant, as it is Ezek. 20. 37.

that have no rain ] Others read it thus, It shall not rain upon them. For they also needed rain in some measure, as well as other nations. See Psal. 105. 32. though not so much, by reason of the overflowings of the river Nilus: which if it arise to a just height, sc. of fifteen or sixteen cubits, as Pliny tells us, it makes the land very fruitfull: so that they do but throw in the seed, and have four rich harvests in lesse then four moneths. Indeed where the Nile arrives not, there is nothing, they say, in Egypt, but a whitish sand, bearing no grasse, but two little weeds, colled Subit and Gazul: which, burnt to ashes, and conveyed to Venice, make the finest chrystall-glasse. The Chaldee renders it, Non crescit ejus Nilus. God loves to confute men in their confidences, to dry up their Nilusses, (see Ezek. 29. 3, 9. Isa. 19. 5, 6.) as he did for two years together in the time of Cleopatra, a little before Christs birth: and once before for nine years space.

there shall be the plague ] q.d. If they escape the forethreatened evil, a worse thing abides them: their preservation from famine is but a reservation to those everlasting burnings Vers. 12. And though here they abound even to satiety, and surfeit (the Egyptians were wont to boast that they could feed all men, and feast all the gods, without any sensible diminution of their provision) yet at the last day they shall be cut short enough, eat fire, drink brimstone, God himself uttering those or the like words Esa 65. 13, Behold, my servants shall eat, but you shall be hungry; behold, my servants shall drink, but you shall be thirsty: behold, my servants shall rejoice, but none shall be ashamed. Behold, my servants shall sing for joy of heart, but ye shall cry for sorrow of heart, and shall howl for vexation of spirit.

Vers. 19. This shall be the punishment of Egypt, and the punishment ] Or sin: Indeed the sin of sins to slight Gods Ordinances and offers of grace; and to neglect so great salvation as is tendered in and by Christ. This very sin is its own punishment. This is condemnation, or hell atorehand, John 3. 19. This brought Capernaum down from heaven to hell, Mat. 11. 23. Pagans that never heard of Christ shall have an easier judgement then such, Mat. 10. 23. for they shall have a double condemnation. One from the law which they have broken, wherein Christ found them: another from the Gospel for rejecting Christ, and the bath of his blood, to the which even the Princes of Sodom are invited, Esa 1. 10. See John 12. 48. Mat. 21. 44. It is with such as with a malefactor that being dead in law, doth yet refuse a pardon. Danans observeth here that mention is made of the feast of Tabernacles especially. 1. Because this feast was now most solemnly kept among the Jews, Neb. 8. And secondly, because it was a most evident testimony of the first gathering together of the people of Israel, that is of a free ordained Church. Therefore it was better liked of the people, and a more evident sign of their uniting or knitting together within themselves, as is unto us the holy supper of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Vers. 20. In that day shall there be upon the bells of the horses ] hang'd upon their heades, or about their necks: as Judg. 8. 26. the Midianitish camels had rich collars and chains about their necks, for ornament sake. It was a witty conceit of a modern Divine, that many deal with their Ministers, as carriers do with their horses; lay heavy burthens upon them, and then hang bells about their necks: they shall Pin. lib. 5. c. 9.

*S. H. Blunt
1797 p. 77*

*Gen. 1. 1. p. 1.
lib. 14. c. 1.*

shall have hard work and great commendations: but easy commons, good words, but slight wages. This was better then that bald conceit of Theodoret and others, that this Prophecie was then fulfilled when as Constantine the Great (or his mother Helen for him) caused the bits of his horse-bridle to be made of the nails of the croise of Christ. I confesse the word is by some rendred bridles, by others trappings, Frontals, cellars. 'Tis ἀνὰ ἵμνας read only here: and hence this variety of interpretations. Calvin renders it stables of horses: which although they are but contemptible places and usually stink: yet the Prophet saith, they shall be holy to the Lord. Hereby the Prophet reacheth, saith He, that God shall so be king of the world; as that all things shall be applied to his worship: neither shall any thing be of so common and ordinary use that shall not change its nature, and be sanctified to Gods service. The comparison here is made betwixt things profane, and the inscription on the high-Priests mitre, which was Holinesse to the Lord. This is a manifest testimony of a godly mind, when godlinesse runs thorough a mans whole life, as the woofe doth thorough the web: when ordinary actions are done from a right principle, and to a right purpose: according to that old and good Rule, Quicquid agas, propter Deum agas, Whether ye eate or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God. Receive every creature with thanksgiving: in serving men, serve the Lord Christ: exercise your general calling in your particular: do earthly business with heavenly minds: Content not your self with a naturall use of the creature, as brut beasts do, but tast the sweetnesse of God in all: and in all thy wayes acknowledge Him, depending upon him for direction and successe, consulting with him, and approving thine heart and life unto him. This is to go the upper way Pro. 15. 24. which indeed is both cleaner, shorter, and safer. This is to be of that royall Priest-hood, that hath for its posy, Holinesse to the Lord. This is to be harmlesse, and blamelesse, the sons of God; known by their holinesse as Dauids children were by their garments of diverse colours. For as he that hath called them is holy, so are they also holy, and that in all manner of conversation and communion too, even when they deale with carnal men, and in common matters.

and the pots in the Lords house shall be like the bowles before the Altar] All this must be understood of the spirituall service, which should be in the Christian church: described by the ancient ceremonial service, as Isa. 60. 7. and 66. 23. Mal. 1. 11. And it is to shew, that the efficacy, force, and operation of the holy Ghost, shall be far more plentifull through Christ in the Church of the Gospell, then it was in times past, under the law. See Heb. 8. 6. Eph. 3. 5. Isa. 44. 3, 4.

Verse 21. Yea, every pot in Ierusalem &c.] That is, saith Daneus, God shall as God-like be worshiped of every faithfull person in his own house, as he was of old in his Temple by the Jews. Calvin adds, ut quicquid aggrediantur homines sit sacrificium, so that whatsoever good men enterprize, shall be a sacrifice. God shall smell a favour of rest from them, they of life and peace from him.

there shall be no more the Canaanite] The merchant, saith the vulgar after Aquila, and the Chaldee; that is, the Simoniack, the Church-chopper, such money-merchants as Christ whipt out of the Temple Mat. 21. 12. Ioh. 2. 15. But better render it Canaanite, who were indeed great Merchants Hos. 12. 7. Ezek. 17. 4. but here it stands for a wicked man, an hypocrite, that botch of Christian society. Pura erit Ecclesia ab omnibus inquinamentis, saith Calvin: the Church shall be purged of all such Pests. See Rev. 22. 27. no such owles shall be seen flying in the Churches welkin. God will, by the due exercise of discipline, and otherwise, be daily purging out all scandals, as such men are called Mat. 13. 41. and causing the unclean spirit to passe out of the land Zach. 13. 2. I conclude with Theodoret, Dominus Omnipotens hanc vocem veram esse hoc tempore præstet &c. God Almighty make good this promise unto us at this time: that there may be no cursed Canaanite found amongst us; but that we may all live according to the doctrine of the Gospell, and expect that blessed hope and comming of the great God our Saviour Jesus; to whom with the Father and holy Spirit be glory for ever. Amen.

Lib. 1. bist. cap. 18.
Ruff. in lib. 1. c. 8.
Socrat. 1. 1.

I Cor. 10. 31.
I Tim. 4. 14.
Holinesse must be written upon our bridles when we warr, upon our cups when we drink
Dr. Harris.

The Phenicians those great merchants were Canaanites.

A
C O M M E N T
O R,
E X P O S I T I O N
Upon the Propheſie of
M A L A C H I.

C H A P. I.

Verſe 1.

H E burthen ] that is, the burdenous Prophecy (as Tremellius renders it) A burden; as 1. enjoined and imposed upon the Prophet to utter, to cry aloud, and not spare, to lift up his voice as a trumpet &c. straining every vein in his heart to do it; declaiming lustily against sin and sinners, and proclaiming hell-fire for them in case they amend not.

This is a businessse of some burthen, onus ipsis eti-

Lyra.
Figuer.

Chrysoſt.

am Angelis tremendum. This was typified in the ſtaff-rings that were made to continue upon the Ark: the Kohathites ſhoulders felt wherefore. If God had not helped those Levites, they could never have borne the Ark 1 Chron. 15. 26. St. Paul was very sensible of the ministeriall burthen, rowling upon him daily 2 Cor. 11. 28. And Latimer leaped, when lighted of his Bishoprick. 2. As burdening the people with their sins, and breathing out threatnings for the same; for sin (how lightly soever accounted of) hales hell at the heels of it, and procures divine vengeance, which is a burthen unsupportable. It brake the Angels backs, and made the son of 1 Pet. 2. 24. God groan piteously, then when he bare our ſins in his body on the tree. His soul was heavy therewith even to the death: and had he not had the better ſhoulders, had not God laid help on One that was mighty (even the mighty strong God, as he is stiled Eſay 6. 6.) he had fainted and failed under his burthen. David complains, that his sins were gone over his head, and like a fore burthen, were too heavy for him to bear Pſal. 38. 4. That which comforted him was, that no sooner he had said Peccavi I have sinned, but the Prophet Nathan said, Transſulit Deus peccatum tuum, God hath translated thy sin upon Christ, hath caused thy sin to passe over to him, and (as it were) by a writt of Remove, hath cast thy burthen upon his ſhoulders. And this incomparable mercy David afterwards celebrateth Pſa. 32. 4, 5.
For

2 Sam. 12.

For day and night thy hand was heavy upon me: the guilt of sinne, and sense of wrath quelled him and killed him almost; for his naturall moisture was turned into the drought of summer: he was turned into a very skeleton, or a bag of bones, a bottle in the smoke, wofully waned he was, and wasted. But for remedy, I acknowledge my sin unto thee (saith he) I fled by faith to the true Scape-goat Christ Jesus on whom was laid (as a burthen) the iniquitie of us all, Isai. 53.6. Rom. 5.8. And thou presently forgavest the iniquity of my sinne, that is, the guilt of it, that till then lay like a load of lead upon my conscience, and, as an obligation, bound me over to condigne punishment. Cain for want of this comfort, ran roaring up and down, my sinne, that is, my punishment is greater then I can beare. And a farre better man then Cain (even holy Job, with whom God was but in jest, as it were) cries out that his calamitie was heavier then the sand of the sea, Job 6.3. and that yet his stroke was heavier then his groaning, Chap. 23.2. Those that have ever felt the misery of a laden conscience, can tell what an evil and bitter thing sinne is. Those that now run away with it, and make as light of it as Sampson did of the gate of Gaza, shall one day groan out Woe and alas, when God shall set himself to load them with tortures in hell, who do now load him with their sinnes, and weary him out with their iniquities, Esay 43.24. For prevention, oh that they would be perswaded to believe the Prophets, that their souls might prosper, to be sensible of sins burden, that Christ might ease them: to take upon them his burthen which is ours sine onere, and would be no more burthen to them then the wings are to the bird, whereby he is borne aloft, that they would imitate porters, who being called and offered money to beare a burden, will poise it and weigh it in their hands first, which when they see they are not able to stand under, no gain will entice them to undertake it. Do we provoke the Lord to anger? are we stronger then he? Is it not a fearfull thing to fall into the punishing hands of the living God? Is the the wrath of a King as the roaring of a lyon, as the messengers of death? surely they that tremble not in hearing, shall be crushed in pieces in feeling, as that Martyr said, and let all those scoffers that make childrens play of Gods dreadfull menaces (as St. Peters word importeth) that (Leviathan-like) esteem Gods iron as straw, that read his Prophetick burdens, as they do the old stories of forraine warres, or as they behold the wounds and blood in a picture or piece of Arras, which never makes them smart or feare; Let all these, I say, read and ruminate that flaming place, Jer. 23.33,37. and let them know, that if they belong to God, he will cripple their iron sinews by the sense of their many and massy or bony sinnes. As if otherwise, he will fall upon them with his full weight, and grind them to powder, Mat. 21.44. Caveo: cavebitis autem si pavetis.

Gen. 4.13.

Jer. 2.

Heb. 10.

Bradford.
ἐπιτακται.
2 Pet. 3.3.
Job. 41.27.

Am. 5.12.

to Israel] The two Tribes of Judah and Benjamin, with those few of the ten Tribes that returned amongst them from the Babylonish captivity. These, though we never find them again going a whoring after Idols (the sinne that they had paid so dear for, and had now bought their wit) yet forgetfull of former both beatings and benefits; (as children) are, they soon returned to their old flagitious practises of Polygamy, blasphemy, sacriledge, defilement of Divine Worship, unlawfull marriages, &c. and so had lost in a manner, the fruit of their sufferings: putting God to his old complaint, why should ye be smitten any more, &c. and causing him to sigh out, as even sick of them, Alas sinfull nation, &c. Reprobate silver shall men call them, &c.

by Malachi] Heb. by the hand of Malachi, i.e. by his mouth and Ministry. Isai. 7: Jer. 6: Hand is put for Mouth by a Catachresis: because the hand is the Instrument of Instruments, as saith the Philosopher. See the like, Exod. 9.35: Numb. 4.37,45. Isai. 8.11. One Expofitor noteth here, that this expression by the hand is used to teach us, that Prophets and Ministers must preach not with their Tongues only, but with their hands too: lest they be found in number of those Pharisees that say but doe not, that bind heavy burdens, and hard to be born, upon other mens shoulders, but they themselves touch them not with one of their fingers, Mat. 23.3,4. Let our hands also preach as well as our tongues, ne dicta factis deficientibus erubescant, as Tertullian speaketh, lest talking by the Talent, and working by the the Ounce, our hands give our tongues the lye.

by Malachi] i.e. Mine Angel, or an Angelicall man. Not an heavenly Angel,

as

Litica Jod in fine format nomen adjectivum, ut in Nochii alienus Chopshi liber.

All. and Men.

Lam. 5. 22.

as Origen held : nor as told and taught by an Angel how to deliver and deport himself in his office ; like as when that Bath-gol or voice from heaven came to Christ, Joh. 12. 28. the people that stood by and heard it, said, that it thundered, others said, an Angel spake to him, ver. 29. But either he was so called by his parents at his birth, and circumcision ( as Angelus Politianus and others ) or else so surnamed by the good people of those times ; as whose disposition, communication, conversation, countenance and whole carriage were Angelicall. Chrysostom, for like cause, calleth Paul, Angelum terrestrem an earthly Angel. And the Authour to the Hebrewes speaking of those faithfull Martyrs that lived and suffered soon after Malachi's time, he saith, Of whom the world was not worthy, Heb. 11. 38. Meaning, that they were fitter to be set as Angels in heaven, to be fixed in the region of happinesse, to shine full fair upon the Celestiall shelf ( as that Martyr said ) then to abide here among sinners. Chrysostom in his 55. Homily upon Matthew calleth certain religious men of his time Angels, for their sanctimony and celestiall conversation. And Dr. Taylor Martyr blessed God, that ever he came in company with that Angell of God John Bradford.

Verse 2. I have loved you saith the Lord ] Thou hast loved us ( might they reply ) whilest we were willing and obedient. Thou lovest them that love thee, Prov. 8. 17. and shewest mercy to thousands of them that love thee and keep thy commandments, Exod. 20. But now thou hast utterly re'ected us, thou art very wroth against us. Nay saith God, I do love you, so Tremelline renders this Text : I am Jehovahs, I change not, Chap. 3. 6. I do rest in my love, and will seek no further, Zeph. 3. 17. Surely Israel hath not been forsaken nor Judah of his God, of the Lord of Hosts, though their land was filled with sin against the Holy One of Israel, Jer. 51. 5. Thus it was before the captivitie. But how after ? See Zach. 1. 17. The Lord had professed before, that he had been sore displeased with their Fathers, verse 2. and it appears ver. 3, 4. they were no better then their Fathers : all which notwithstanding, see a sweet promise, ver. 17. Cry yet saying, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, My cities through prosperity shall yet be spread abroad, and the Lord shall yet comfort Zion, and shall yet chuse Jerusalem. There are four Yets in the Text, and all very gracious ones : to shew, that the fulnesse sinne in us doth not abate the fulnesse of love in God toward his people. And the same in effect is thankfully acknowledged by those holy Levites at their solemn fast, held much about the time of our Prophet Malachi, Nehem. 9. where they make a catalogue of the many fruits and expressions of Gods love to themselves and their fathers. Besides extraordinary favours not a few, he gave them good Lawes, verse 13. good Sabbaths, verse 14. his good spirit to instruct them, 20. He forsook them not when they dealt proudly against him, 16, 17. but crowned them with outward comforts, 21, 25. afflicted them when they provoked him, 26, 27. sent them Saviours when they cryed to him, 27. after often revolts, was often intreated, 28. with-held his worst and consuming judgments for a long time, 30, 31. And was there not love in all this ? Might not God well say, I have loved you ? Ribera thinks there is an Aposiopesis in the words, as if God would have said more : but very grief breaks off his speech, out of a deep sense of their detestable ingratitude. David hath such an abrupt expression, Psal. 116. 1. I love : because the Lord hath heard my voice. Such a pang, such a passion he felt, that he was not able to say, I love the Lord, but I love, and so breakes off abruptly. The like whereunto may here be conceived of God ; who cannot endure to have his love lost, his grace undervalued, as it was by these obtriperous Questionists, who put him to his proof, as those did, Jer. 2. 25.

yet ye say, wherein hast thou loved us ] Their late captivity and calamity so stuck still in their stomachs, that they could not see wherein he had shewed them any love. But had they considered Daniels weekes, they might have known that ( besides their free election, all blessings flowing therefrom, as verse 3. 4. 5. ) for their seventy years captivity, they had seven seventies of years granted them afterwards for the comfortable enjoyment of their own countrey. Sed ingrato quod donatur, deperditur, saith Seneca. And Amare non redamantem est amoris impendia perdere, saith Hierome. All's lost that is laid out upon an unthankfull people, who devour Gods best blessings as bruit beasts their prey : haunch them up and swallow them, as swine do swil : bury them as the barren earth doth the seed : use them as homely,

as

as Rebel did her fathers gods, which she laid among the litter, and sat upon; yea, fighting against God with his own weapons (mercies, I meane) as Jehu did against Iehoram with his own messengers, as David did against Goliath with his own sword, as Elisha did against Ahab with that life that he had given him: as if God had hired them to be wicked &c.

[Was not Esau Jacobs brother] Did they not both tumble in a belly? were they not both digged out of the same pit, hewen out of the same rock? and yet (as the great Turk, and his brethren born of the same parents, the eldest is destined to a diadem, the rest to an halter, so here) Esau, though the elder, and heire, was rejected, at least he was lesse loved (for so the word hated is to be taken, Gen. 29. 31. Luke 14. 26. Mat. 10. 37.) Jacob though the younger and weaker (for Esau was born a manly childe, born with a beard, as some think, and was therefore called Esau, that is, Fallus & perfectus pilis, a man already, rather then a babe) yet was Gods beloved one. And so were his posterity too, the people of Gods choyce, above the Edomites; who were now left in captivity at Babylon, when as the Jews were returned into their own countrey: yea, for the Jews sakes, and as a testimony of Gods love to them, were these Edomites still held captives, and their land irreparably ruined because they shewed themselves mercilesse, and bloody in the day of Jerusalems calamity, Obad. 10. 11. Psal. 137. 7. God had charged the Israelites, saying, Thou shalt not abhor an Edomite: for he is thy brother Deut. 23. 7. But as Esau began betime to persecute Jacob, bristling at him, and bruising him in their mothers womb Gen. 25. 22. so his posterity were bitter enemies to the Church, joying in her misery, and joyning with her enemies. wherefore thus saith the Lord God, I will also stretch out mine hand upon Edom, and will cut off man and beast from it &c. Ezek. 25. 13, 14.

[ye: I loved Jacob] And preordained him to a crown that never fadeth, as Paul expoundeth this text Rom. 9. 13. of election to eternal life, which is the sweetest and surest seal of Gods love. Let us secure our election (and so Gods special love to our souls) by those two infallible marks 2 Thess. 2. 13. First, belief of the truth, that particularity and propriety of assurance. Secondly, justification of the Spirit, unto the obedience of the truth. And as God loved Jacobs person, so he loved his posterity the Israelites above all other people: not because they were more in number, or better in disposition, ex meliore luto &c. But because the Lord loved you, therefore he set his love upon you, and chose you, saith Moses Deut. 7. 7, 8. the ground of his love was wholly in himself; there being nothing in man, nothing out of Gods self, that can primarily move, and incline the eternal immutable, and omnipotent will of God. The true original and first motive of his love to his creature is, the good pleasure of his will. See Eph. 1. 5. where all the four causes of Election are shewed to be without us.

Vers 3. And I hated Esau i. e. I loved him not as I did Jacob: I passed him by, and let him alone to perish in his corruption, and for his sin. And for his posterity; whereas they were carried captives by Nebuchadnezzar (as Israel also was) I have not turned again their captivity, but laid their land desolate; rased and harased their cities and castles made them an habitation of dragons and devils: and all this as an argument of my deep hatred and utter detestation of them. True it is, that Judea lay utterly waste, during the seventy yeers of their captivity; the land kept her sabbaths resting from tillage. Upon the slaughter of Godoliah all the Jews that were left in the land fled into Egypt: and God kept the room empty, and free from invasion of forreiners, untill the return of the Natives out of Babylon. Now it was far otherwise with Idumea: the desolation whereof is here described to be both total and perpetual, (according to that foretold by Ezechiel Chap. 35. O mount Seir, I will make thee to be most desolate, or (as the Hebrew hath it emphatically and eloquently) wastnesse, and wastnesse, extreme and irrecoverable. A navoredela, or utter ruine beset that countrey, being part of Arabia Petraea (hence mention of their mountains) and abounding naturally with serpents, or dragons; it being in the wilderness of this country of Edom where the Israelites were so stung with fiery serpents: hence it became afterwards a very den of dragons lurking there.

Vers 4. Whereas Edom saith we are impoverished] Or, thrust out of house and home, Isay 51.1.

Ezech. 35 3,
7, 15.

Num. 21. 6.

home, and reduced to extreme indigency : yet we will return, and build the desolate places. We will do it all, despiro di Deo (as that prophane Pope said :) if it be but to crosse Gods prediction, and to withstand his power and providence. Thus these earthen pots will be dashing themselves against the rocks, against those mountains of brasse (so Gods immutable decrees are called Zech. 6. 1. Thus Lamech will have the odds of God seventy to seven (so Iunius interprets it) Gen. 4. 24. Thus, when God had threatened to root out Ahab and his posterity, he would try that : and to prevent it, took more wives, and so followed the work of generation, that he left seventy sons behinds him, 2 Kin. 10. 1. Thus Pharaoh (that sturdy rebel) holds out against God to the utmost, and sends away his servant Moses, threatening death to him, even then when he was compassed on all hands with that palpable darknesse. Thus the Philistin Princes (while some plagued) gather themselves together again against the humbling Israelites at Mizpeh : and so run to meet their bane. Thus the proud Ephraimites Isai. 9. 10. The bricks indeed, say they, are fallen down, but we will build it again with hewen stones. The wilde figtrees are cut down, but we will change them into Cedars. Thus the Pharisees and Lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves Luk. 7. 30. yea would needs be found fighters against God, as Gamaliel truly told them. Thus those primitive persecutours would needs attempt to root our Christian religion ; the Jews by the leave and help of Julian, to despite the Christians, would reedifie their city and Temple, but were hindred from heaven. Otho the Emperour would make the city of Rome his Imperial seat (which was long before pointed and painted out for the Nest of Antichrist) but could not effect it. The Iesuits would fain heal the Beasts wounded head, and reestablish their kingdom of Idolatry, But this they must never look for. Christ shall reign, and all his foes shall be his footstool ; The Romish Edomites shall come to ruine.

1 Sam. 7.

Act. 5. 39.

Job de Colum-na in Mari-bistor.

thus saith the Lord, They shall build, but I will throw down] Ruit alto à culmine Roma, Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen : her downfall is sure, sore, and sudden, Versa eris in cineres quasi nunquam Roma fuisset, said Sibylla of old. And there was something surely in that which we have read, that when the wars began in Germany Anno 1619. a great brasse image of the Apostle Peter (that had Tu es Petrus &c. fairely imbossed upon it) standing in Saint Peters Church at Rome, there was a great and massie stone fell down upon it, and so shattered it to pieces, that not a letter of all that sentence (whereon Rome founds her claime) was left whole so as to be read ; saving that one piece of that sentence Edificabo Ecclesiam meam, I will build my Church, which was left fair and entire. Surely when popish mountains and Monasteries shall be desolated and demolished, when the Pope (who was wont to say that he could never want mony as long as he was able to hold a pen in his hand) shall be miserably impoverished, and his Euphrates of revenues dried up, the mountain of the Lords house shall be set above all the mountains, and the Lord Christ alone shall reign in glory : he shall overturn, overturn all Antichristian power and policy : he will utterly destroy those crows-nests (as Henry the eighth called the religious houses that he pulled down) ne iterum ad cohabundum convolent, lest those unclean birds should build again.

Rev. 16. 12.

Ezek. 21. 29.

Sanderus.

they shall build but I will destroy] It is the Lord then that both plants and pulsup kingdoms, nations and peoples : that makes and destroyes States publike or private at his pleasure : they are all in his hand and done by him, and fall not out by any fortune, or fatal revolution, and vicissitude. Dan. 2. 21. Luk. 1. 52.

And they shall call them the border of wickednesse.] Chiefly for their insulting over the people of God in their affliction, Obad. 10. That wicked one, the Pope, is grossly guilty of this Edomitish inhumanity. What feasting and sending of gifts was there, when the two witnesses were slain ? What joy and jollity when the Waldenses (those ancient Protestants) were worsted in battel ? What processions and bone-fires at Rome upon the news of the Parisian massacre ? Thuanus tels us, that the Pope caused it to be painted in his Palace : and that the Cardinal of Lorrain gave him that brought the first tidings of it to Rome, thirty thousand crowns for a reward. I do the rather parallel the Edomites and Romists, because the Rabbins usually by Edom, understand Rome : and the Thargum renders O daughter

daughter of Edom, Lam. 4. 21. thus; Romi Resignah, O wicked Rome, which is answerable to this in the Text, The border of wickedness; that is, the land of wickedness, haply called the border, or limit, as the Non ultra of impiety, of imparallel impiety: Or else because men shall onely come to the bounds and borders; and standing there aloof off, as abhorring to go further, shall as it were point and say, Ah, wicked, Ah, wicked place, Terra de diables, as the Spaniards call one country in America, or the Mouth of hel, as another place is named. Italy is at this day little better; a second Sodom. M. Ascham, Queen Elizabeth's Tutor, was but seven dayes in Venice, but he saw more wickedness there, then he had seen in seven years in London. As for Rome (that Radix omnium malorum) that once faithful city is now become an harlot; yea the great harlot, Rev. 17. yea the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth, verse 5. rosa est jam Roma lapsa, it is turned into a great brothelhouse, the habitation of divels, and the hold of every foul spirit, Rev. 18. 2. Bethel is become Bethaven; the house of God, the border of wickedness: Har-hamishcab, is become Har-hamashbith, the Mount of Uaition, the mount of Corruption, 2 King. 23. 13. What is the transgression of Jacob? Is it not Samaria? And what are the high places of Judah? Are they not Jerusalem? Micah 1. 5.

Philip of Macedonia assembled all the infamous and wicked persons into a certain city of Thracia and then called it Poneropolis The Preachers travels, 106.

Petrarch: 1

And the people amongst whom the Lord hath indignation.] The people of Gods wrath, Isa. 10. 6. and of his curse (so Idumea is called) Isa. 34. 5. And such a people was Amalek, with whom God (laid his hand upon his throne, and) swore that he would have perpetual war for their ill usage of his Israel Exod. 17. 16. He charged also his people never to forget them, Deut. 25. 19. Neither did they: Saul was sent to make an utter end of them, 1 Sam. 15. And wherein he failed of doing it, God stirred up the Simeonites in Hezekiah's dayes to smite the rest of the Amalakites that were escaped, 1 Chron. 4. 42, 43. The like judgement whereunto is befallen the Edomites long since: their very name is extinct, no memory of them being left in posterity. The destiny of Doeg their countryman is come upon them, Psal. 52. 5. God hath beaten them down for ever: he hath taken them away, and plucked them out of their dwelling place, and rooted them out of the land of the living. Selah. It is ill angriing the Ancient of dayes: His wrath lasts longer then the coals of Juniper, Psal. 120. 4. his judgements are severe and durable; as we use to say of winter, they never rot in the skie, but shall fall; if late, yet surely, yet seasonably. He that saith, Vengeance is mine, I will repay, repayeth oft times when we have forgiven, when we have forgotten; and calls to reckoning after our discharges, as he did Nabal. It is dangerous offending any favorite of him who can have (as here) indignation for ever: whose wrath and revenge is (as that of the Athenians is said to be) deumidis, Everlasting, whose destructions are perpetual.

Verse 5. And your eyes shall see.] The righteous shall see and fear, and shall laugh at him, and say, Lo, this is the man, &c. said David of Doeg the Edomite: Psal. 52. And the same is here promised by God to his people as a pledge of his love, and a special privilege: Others should hiss at Edom, and say by way of by-word, This is the border of wickedness, &c. but the saints should make more of it (a Bee can suck honey out of a flower, so cannot a flye) they should buse their eyes, and regard the work of the Lord; yea they should so consider the operation of his hand, as to say sensibly, Let the Lord be magnified: Blessed be the glory of the Lord from his place. God hath delivered me out of all trouble, saith David, and mine eye hath seen his desire upon mine enemies. The Edomites stood looking on, and laughing at the Israelites destruction, Obad. 12. 13. God saw this and it displeased him, (as he is wondrous sensible of the least indignity done to his people) He therefore payes them home in their own coyn, and promiseth his Israel that they shall rejoyce when they see the vengeance; they shall wash their feet in the blood of these wicked ones; become more cautious by their just destruction. Learn we hence, Psal. 58. 10.

First, To have our eyes open upon the judgements of God, whether general, or personal; that nothing of this nature passe our observation, lest we incur the curse denounced, Isa. 5. 12. and be made examples to others, because we would not be warned by the example of others. Sodom and Gomorrah are thrown forth ne fiat, historia.

Legē historiam

αρετιναι.
Jude 7.
Ingenia, bene-
ficia, flagitia,
supplicia.
Εμε τις ορεων
αυσεβης εστω.
Lib. 2.

forth (as Saint Iude hath it) for an example; suffering the vengeance of eternal fire. And Herodotus saith, That the ruines and rubbish of Troy are set forth for an example of this rule, That National sins bring national plagues, and that God greatly punisheth great offences. Let him that looketh upon me, learn to fear God. These words were engraven upon the standing picture of Sennacherib (after that God had by an Angel slain his Army, and sent him back with shame to his own country) as the same Herodotus testifieth.

Secondly, Learn we how far forth we may look upon the overthrow of the wicked with delight: viz. Not as our own private, but as Gods professed enemies. Not simply for their ruine, but as it is a clearing of Gods glory, and of our integrity. Psal. 9. 16. 1 Sam. 25. 39. Not out of private revenge, but pure zeal for God and his cause. I say pure zeal: for it is difficult to kindle and keep quick the fire of Zeal, without all smoke of sinister and selfe-respects.

Exod. 18. 11

1 Sam. 12. 28

Turk. hist.

Speed 799.

Dan. 101
Polyd. Virg.
lib. 19.

And ye shall say, The Lord will be magnified, &c.] Or, The Lord hath magnified himself, i. e. hath declared himself mightily to be a great King above all Gods, by executing judgement upon these Grandees of the earth; and making out, that in the thing wherein they dealt proudly, he was above them. Hence it is that praise waiteth for God in Zion, his Name is great in Israel. He is sent unto (as sometime Iobab sent to David, to come and take the city of Rabbah) to take the glory of all their deliverances and victories. Not unto us, Lord, not unto us, say they, but to thy Name be the praise. Hunniades would not own or accept the peoples applauses and acclamations, but ascribed all to God. So did our Henry the fifth at the battle of Agincourt, where he won the day. He would not admit his broken Crown, or bruised Armour to be born before him in shew (which are the usual ensigns of war-like triumphs.) He also gave strait order that no ballad or song should be made or sung, more then of thanksgiving to the Lord for his happy victory and safe return, &c. So our Edward the third after his victory at Poitiers (where he took the French King prisoner, Anno 1356.) took speedy order by Simon, Archbishop of Canterbury, that eight dayes together should be spent in magnifying the Lord from the border of England.

Psal. 1. 45. 2.
Psal. 48. 10.
Psal. 103.

From the borders of Israel.] Or, from beyond the borders of Israel; viz. throughout the wide world. The Saints have large hearts, and could beateem the Lord much more praise and service then they have for him. They would praise him infinitely, and according to his excellent greatness, filling up the distance as it were, and calling in all the help they can get, of Angels, men, unreasonable and insensible creatures, as David did, &c.

Θεοι εφελτοι Hierocl.

ελ ολ ο αυτ.

Verse 6, A son honoureth his father.] Heb. Will honour his father. Nature teacheth him this lesson, to reverence his father. Pater est, si pater non esset, said the young man in Terence; It is my father, I must not crosse him. Our parents are our household Gods, said another heathen, and to have all possible respect from us. To God and our parents, saith Aristotle, we can never make recompence. There is no nation so barbarous that acknowledgeth not this natural axiom, A son must honour his father, and a servant his master; as Eleazar did Abraham; the Centurions servants him, by being at his beck and check in all things. Servus est nomen officii; A servant is not one that moveth absolutely of himself: but he is the masters instrument, and wholly his, saith Aristotle: and therefore oweth him all love, reverence and obedience, as if he were many Masters in one: the word here used for Master, is plural. Now from this Principle in nature thus laid down, the Lord tacitly accuseth them

First, Of Ingratitude for his great love to them, evinced and evidenced in the former verses.

Secondly, Of contempt cast upon him and his service: as appeareth, first, by the application of that natural law confirmed by the custom of all countries.

If then I be a father, &c.] As you commonly call me, and claim me, Jer. 3. 4. John 8. 41. We have one Father, even God. And you have been long since taught so to do by Moses, and told by what right I come to be your Father, though with an exprobration of your detestable undutifulnesse Deut. 32. 6. Do ye thus requite the the Lord---? Is not he thy Father (and is not he by the same right and reason thy master too?) that hath bought thee? Hath he not made thee, and established, or preserved thee? Hath he not (more then all that) adopted and accepted thee for his child; begetting thee again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, unlesse thou be still in thy sinnes, then the which thou canst not chuse unto thy self a worse condition? All which considered, what more equal then that I should have both love from thee as a father, and fear as a master? A mixture of both is required of all Gods children and servants, that they yield unto him an amicable fear, and a reverent love, that they look at once upon his bounty and severity, Rom. 11. 12. and so call God Father, that they spend the whole time of their sojourn here in fear: that they fear God and his goodness, and Jacob-like, when they see nothing but visions of love and mercy, as he did at Bethel, yet then to cry out, How dreadful is this place? There is mercy with thee that thou mayst be feared. 1 Pet. 1. 3 unto you, O Priests] Whom I look upon as the chief of my children, given me in lieu of Israels first-born, the lot of mine own inheritance, that stand ever before me, and should by soundnesse of doctrine, and holinesse of life, vindicate my name from contempt, and get me honour before the people. Singular holinesse is required of ministers above others: a double spirit they had need to wish for, as Elisba. Things in the sanctuary were double to those that were common; as the shekel, cubit, &c. Ministers are called Angels, and they must walk as angels, ne sit nomen inane crimen immane, lest God renew his old complaint, The leaders of his people have caused them to erre, Ila. 9. 16. It was the complaint of Pope Pius the second, that there was no notorious wickednesse committed in the Catholick Church cujus prima origo à sacerdotibus non dependeat, the first beginning whereof arose not from Church-men. John Hus cries out of the priests of his time, Multa quæ illi ordinem dicunt, &c. Many of those things that they call by the name of order, have brought all things in Christendom out of order. Cornelius à Lapide upon this text, in his popish way bewaileth it, that the ignorance and profanenesse of many of their priests, had given occasion to Luthers heresie to spread the further. We also have no lesse cause to complain, that the insufficiency and impiety of some of our ministry hath opened the black mouth of Campion, and his popish complices to bark out, Ministres eorum nihil vilius, Their Ministers are very base. For prevention, let the souls of ministers be purer then the Sun-beams, as Chrysostom saith they should be; and let their lives be so unblameable, that no man may speak the least evil of them without a manifest lie, &c.

1 Pet. 1. 17
Psal. 13. 4

In hist. Austriaca.

Bel. Hussit. p. 9

that despise my name] This is the crime they are directly and expressly charged with. They had not honoured God as a Father, feared him as a Master; therefore they had despised and slighted him. Not to do God right, is to do him wrong: not to reverence him, is to rob him; not to blesse him, is to blaspheme him, Job. 1. 5. That's an excellent saying of Fulgentius, Deum si quis parum metuit, valde contemnit: hujus qui non memorat beneficentiam, arguet injuriam. i. e. who-so feareth God but a little, slights him overmuch: and he that maketh not honourable mention of his bounty, doth him a great deal of injury. The very not serving of God, the not sacrificing to him, is a crime, Mal. 3. 18. Eccles. 9. 2. How much more then a slubbered service, a corrupt sacrifice? There is a contempt in this latter, which is worse then a bare neglect; and displeasing service is double dishonour. Hence the present contest with those greasie priests that despised Gods name: the Septuagint hath it, Te that esteem my name at a low rate, that misprize it, (as the French translateth it) that have base and bald conceits of me and of my nomen Majestativum, Majestrick Name. (as Tertullian termeth it) that take me not into your hearts under the name and notion of an infinite Highnesse, the great and mighty Maker and Monarch of the whole world. Our safest eloquence concerning God, is our silence, saith Hooker: But if we take in hand to say any thing of him, Nullis vocibus tam plenè Deum significamus (saith learned Scaliger) quam in qua ignorantiam nostram pratendunt, We can set forth God so fully by no words, as by those that set forth our ignorance of his excellency. The very heathens when they would swear by their Jupiter, out of the meer dread and reverence of his name, forbore to mention him. The Jews would not pronounce the name Jehovah, here

ὁ θεὸς ὁνομαζόμενος

Snider.

Pfal. 111.

Pfal. 150.

Gen. 4.9.
2 Kin. 5.25.
Acts 5.8:

Pfal. 50. 13.

Procul hinc
este profani.Erasmi. Adag.
preat:

used in the text. The first among the Christians that pronounced Jehovah, was Petrus Galatians, following the pronuntiation of the Syriacks and Greeks. If at any time we take Gods holy and reverend Name into our thoughts, and (truly we should think of him almost at every breath we draw, according to that Let every breath praise the Lord) Remember to think of God as of One at all to be thought of; as one whose Wisdom is his Justice, whose Justice is his Power, whose Power is his Mercy, and all himself, Good without quality, great without quantity, Everlasting without time, Omnipresent without place, containing all things without extent, &c. This is to magnifie God, to make roomth for him in our hearts, and the contrary is, to despise his name.

And ye say wherein have we despised thy Name? Loe, the impudencie of these frontlesse Hypocrites. They traverse their aceusation, stand upon their justification, and put God to his proofs. How ordinary is it with people still, to palliate their sinnes and plead their innocencie? Hos. 12.8. In all my labours, they shall find none iniquity in me: that were sin, that were a foul businesse. But men have learned to draw a fair glosse upon a foule hand, to cast a colour, as the Calf-fish doth, to deceive the fisher-man: to hide their sinnes as Adam, Job 31.33. by down right denyall as did Cain, Gehezi, Ananias and Sapphira, or else by excusing and extenuating, as Saul, 1 Sam. 16.20, 21. Or at least by a senselesse silence, not acknowledging their sinnes, or being affected with them; but rather out facing, as Judas, John 13.21. with Mat. 2.24. Sinne and shifting came into the world together, and so they continue. Satan knowes there's no way to purge the sick soul but upwards: therefore he holds the lips close, that the heart may not disburden itself, and have ease, Prov. 28.13.

Verse 7. Ye offer polluted bread upon mine altar ] Bread, that is, Sacrifices and Oblations (so Rabbi David expounds it out of Levit. 21.6. and Levit. 3.3. and Num. 28.2.) For the Hebrews call all kind of meat by the name of bread, though it be flesh of Oxe, Lamb, or Goat, offered in sacrifice to God, whom they made account that they feasted in their sacrifices. Hence that of the Psalmist in the person of God, will I eat the flesh of Bulls, or drink the blond of Goates? Now the bread was reckoned polluted when it was neither lawfull, nor acceptable, but prohibited, and therefore abhorred; as much every whit, as Ezekiels bread prepared with mans dung, Cap. 4.13. of which he saith, verse 14. Ah Lord God, behold my soul hath not been polluted: neither ever came there abominable flesh into my mouth. What sacrifices God had flatly forbidden, see Levit. 22.20, 21, 22, &c. Take we heed that we despite not the Lord with seeming honours: we pollute him with our sacrifices, whiles either for the matter of them, we present him with will-worship; as those of old that sacrificed their children (in a foolish imitation of Abrahams offering his sonne Isaac) and the Papists at this day in their unbloody sacrifice for the living and the dead, and many other unwarranted fopperies. Or else, when for the manner, devotion is placed more in the massy materiality of the outward works, then purity of the heart, from which they proceed. This made God complain, Isai. 1. that all his five senses, nay his very soul was offended and vexed at their hypocritical performances, verses 11, 12, 13, 14, 15. their very incense (that pretious perfume) that was made up of so many sweet spices, and pure frankincense stank in his nostrils. Gods sharp nose easily discerns, and is offended with the stinking breath of the hypocrites rotten lungs, though his words be never so sented and perfumed with shews of holinesse. Never did the five cities of the plaine send up such poisonous vapours to God, as the prayers and other performances of a corrupt and carnall person. And God, not able to abide these ill sent, sends down upon such, a counterpoysen of fire and brimstone. Good actions from bad men displease: as a man may speak good words, but we cannot hear them, because of his stinking breath: and as we abhorre to tast of a dainty dish, if brought to table by a foul nasty sloven that hath been tumbling in a jakes or wallowing in a quagmire. The very Heathens, as they were very curious in the choice of their sacrifices, that they were every way sound and of the best, so they carefully shut out all profane persons: the Priest cried out τίς τῶδε who is here? those that were present at the sacrifice answered, πολλοὶ τ' ἱερεῖς there are many, & those all good men. And hence it was that Jehu sees and searches searches that no servant of Jehovah be crept into the throng of Baals worshippers. Well might this search have bred suspicion, were it not that in all those idolatrous sacrifices the first care was to avoid the prophane. Even Baal will admit no mixture: how should the true God abide it? Let all Cainists take heed how they draw nigh to him: so Luther calleth offerentes non personam, sed opus personae, all those that offer to God the work done, but do not offer themselves withall. We may fitly call those also Cainists that offer polluted bread: as if Gods table were contemptible; that think any thing good enough for God, that comes next hand, as Cain did: when Abel brought of the firstlings of his flock, and so offered a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, God testifying of his gifts: as likewise Christ did of Maries spicknard of great price, defending her against Judas the thief, that held it wast; whereas he secretly taxeth those rich wretches of baseness, who cast their brasse-money into the Treasury, as holding the worst piece they had good enough for God and his poore. Surely Papists with their vowed presents of the very best they have to their He-saints and She-saints: and Turkes with their Moschees or Temples stately built, when their private houses are low and homely, shall rise up in judgement and condemn such sordid Christians, as cannot beateem God the best of the best. Solen the Athenian Lawgiver appointed, that their sacrifices should be chosen and selected: that the sacrificers should purifie themselves some dayes before, and that none should serve God obiter, slightly and slenderly, but in all best manner, and with the best preparation they could make aforehand. Numa Pompilius King of Romans would not have them worship their Gods πέρεργον ἢ ἀμελῶς for fashion and dissolutely: but freed from all other cares and cumbres: in the time of Divine Service, the Priests, to prevent distraction, cryed out oft to the people, Hoc agite, mind the business you are about. So in the Primitive times of the Church, the Deacons called oft upon the people sursum corda, lift up your hearts. And again, Oremus, attendamus, Let us pray, let us attend. For why? Prayer without intention, and hearing without attention, is as a body without a soule. This sentence is written in Hebrew upon the walls of the Jewish Synagogues, et si nullibi minus intentionis sit quam in ipsorum precibus, &c. saith mine Authour, though there is as little true devotion to be seen amongst them in their services, as among any people, unlesse it be among the Papists (of whom perhaps they learned it) whose devotions are prized more by tale then by weight of zeale, whose holynesse is the very outward work it self, being a brain-lesse head, and soule-lesse body. In the Isle of Sardinia, as they give way, in the very time of their Masse, to vain talking, and toying, and tumults, so after Masse done, they fall to dancing in the midst of the Church: singing in the mean time songs too immodest for an Ale-house. Henry 3. King of France Processiones religiosas non intermit, ac tepidius celebrat, saith the Chronicler would not neglect their religious processions, but shewed little devotion at them. For betwixt him and his Cardinall, there went at same time a Jester, whose work was to make sport then, when the business required greater seriousness. How much better the great Turke, who when he comes into his Temple laies aside all his state, and hath none to attend him, but a Professour of their law, whose Office is to proclaim before they begin, that nothing be done against religion?

yet ye say, wherein have we polluted thee? They well understood that by offering polluted sacrifices they polluted God himself (as much as in them lay) and that the dishonour done to Gods service reflected upon himself, and was a despising of his name verse 6. whereof his true worship is a part Mic. 4. 5. and 1 King. 5. 3. 5. Hence they say not, wherein have we polluted thine Altar? but wherein have we polluted thee? This is much more done under the New Testament by all unworthy Communicants, and Unhallowed Worshippers, that present the great God with dough-baked duties, slubbered services, careless and customary performances; which they turn over as a task, holding a certaine daily stint of them, as malt-horses do their pace, or mill-horses their round, merely out of form and for fashion sake. These do enough to pollute the God of purity, and to cast contempt upon him from the sons of men; who will be apt to conclude, that he is a contemptible God, sith he will be content to take up with such contemptible sacrifices and services. But more especially those that come hand over head, and Luth. in decal.

Gen. 4. 4.
Heb. 11. 4.μαλκόν.
Mat. 12. 41ἐκκεῖτα ἱε-
ρεῖα.
Rous Arche.
pag. 57.
οὐκ ἔστιν πα-
ροικεῖν αὐτοῖς.Plur.
Cyp, de oratio-
ne Chrysost.Buxtorf.
Abbreviat.
Spec. Europ.

Heyl. Georg.

without due preparation to the Lords supper, are guilty of polluting Gods holy things, and of crucifying afresh the Lord of glory, putting him to an open shame. Dum enim sacramenta violantur, ipse cuius sunt Sacramenta, violatur, saith Hierome. When the Sacraments are violated, he also, whose the Sacraments are, is no lesse violated.

1 Cor. 11. 27.

And as these in the text are said to pollute God, in that they offered polluted sacrifices, though they never touched God himself: so unworthy Receivers are guilty of the Lords body and blood, although they never touched either his body or blood with their impure mouthes. They are as very *Kill-Christ*s as Judas was in a proportion: And look whatsoever blasphemies, irrisions, scorns, contumelies, reproaches, the miscreant Jews belched forth, and practised corporally against Christ, the same are spiritually repeated and iterated by the unworthy Receiver: who polluteth the very outward elements that he toucheth, and so offereth indignity to Christ whom they represent: like as he that doth rent, deface, trample under foot, and villanously abuse the image, seal, or Letters Patents of a Prince or State, is guilty of high treason: so is it here: The Donatists that cast the holy Elements to dogs, did it to the disgrace of Christ: and by a just judgment from him, were themselves afterward devoured of dogs. Dr. Morion reports a story of his own knowledge, of one Sr. Booth a Bachelor of Arts in St. Johns Colledge in Cambridge, who being Popishly affected, at the time of the Communion took the consecrated bread, and forbearing to eat it, convey'd and kept it closely for a time, and afterwards threw it over the Colledge wall. But a short time after, not enduring the torment of his guilty conscience, he threw himself headlong over the battlements of the chappel: and some few hours after, ended his life. God seemeth to lay of every one that commeth to the supper of his son, as sometime Solomon said of Adoniah, If he will shew himself a worthy man, there shall not an hair of him fall to the earth: but if wickednesse shall be found in him, he shall die 1 King. 1. 52.

Instit. of the
Sac. lib. 5. cap.
3. Sect. 5.

in that ye say, The table of the Lord is contemptible] Gods infinite patience in vouchsafing not only to reply to these malapert Priests, but thus to rejoyne, and to approve the Assumption of the last Syllogisme, which they so shamelessly denyed, is much to be admired. How justly might he have answered them with blowes instead of arguments: and have dealt with them as he did with Pharaoh, that sturdy rebel, that proudly asked, who is the Lord? Hereunto God made a large reply by a great many plagues, one after another, till Pharaoh was forced to answer himself, The Lord is righteous, but I and my people am wicked. And as Gods patience appeareth in his proceeding with these Priests in the text, so his wisdom too, in his thus instancing in particulars of their sins, that he might the sooner evict them, and bring them to a saving sense and sight thereof. Thus he dealt by our first parents in paradise: and afterwards by Cain. Whereas, without any more adoe, the Lord God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, cursed art thou &c. He was not so much as questioned, or convinced, because God meant him no mercy: but presently doomed, because of meer malice he had offended.

Gen. 3.

ye have said] i. e. ye have thought, as Psa. 32. 5. and 30. 7. and as good ye might have spoken out: for I hear the language of your hearts: I understand your thoughts long before, or at a great distance.

Psal. 139. 2.

the table of the Lord] that is, the Altar of burnt offerings See Ezek. 41. 22. which is therefore called a table, because by their sacrifices God did as it were feast the Lord, as is above noted. And as God prepared the Israelites a table in the wilderness, so they also (in a sense) prepared him a table: Hence Moses tells Pharaoh, that they must go to keep a feast to the Lord. And how God accepted of their kindnesse, See Hos. 9. 10. I found Israel, saith He, like grapes in the wilderness: which, to a wearied parched traveller, how welcome are they? And how the good soule still entertaineth her Christ, as Esther once did Abasbuerus at the banquet of wine, is sweetly set forth in many passages of Solomons song. See cap. 1. 12. with the Note.

Exod. 5. 1.

is contemptible] Or, lightly set by. Some are poor and cannot: others are prophane and care not to cover Gods Altar with their sacrifices. Hence the whole ministry is slighted, because impoverished. For ad tenuitatem beneficiorum, necessario necessario sequitur contemptus Sacerdotum, Lean benefices make contemptible Incumbents: And Nil habet infelix paupertas &c. Poverty rendreth men ridiculous. Or thus, The table of the Lord is contemptible, so they esteemed it, because the fat and blood powred upon the Altar were things but base and despicable in themselves: and they considered not for what end God had appointed these sacrifices, and how they were to be led to Christ by them. For the ceremoniall law was or ought to have been their Gospel, it was Christ in figure. And this, if these Buz-zards had seen, they would never have counted the Table of the Lord contemptible; as holding forth the Lord Christ unto them, that Pearl of Price, who is better then Rubies; and the Altar or Table, that typified him, or presented him to his people, was not an oyster-board as the Papiſts in K. Edw. 6. time scornfully termed our communion-table; but far more precious then either that rich table sent by Ptolemy Philadelph to Eleazar the Jews high-Priest, or that costly communion-table that had in it all the riches of land and sea, offered up by Iustinian in the temple of Sophia in Constantinople.

Panormit.

Horat.

R. David.

Alt. and Men
Joseph Antiq.
lib. 12. cap. 2.
Cedron comp.
bist. pag. 817.

Ver. 8. And if ye offer the blind for sacrifice &c. ] Their prophaneſſe in polluting Gods Altar is here further evinced and evidenced. 1. By the Illegality of their practice, whiles they offered the blind and lame as good enough for such a contemptible Altar. 2. By the incivility and indecency thereof; whilest they presented that to the Emperour of the world, that they would have been ashamed or afraid to present to some petty Prince, that had any power to punish such an affront. The Law for sacrifices see Levit. 22. 20. Dent. 15. 21. A blind sacrifice he offereth; who worshippeth he knoweth not what Iob. 4. 22. that is, to seek, and grope in the dark Alt. 17. when they yeeld not the obedience of faith, bring not to God an intelligible reasonable service, such as whereof they can render a sound reason out of the word of God; who binds us not to any blind obedience, as the Popish Padres do their Novices. And yet the most people are to this day wofully to seek for the warrant of their worships; resting on that old Popish rule, to follow the drove, and beleeve as the Church beleeves. As at Ephesus (so in our Church-assemblies) the more part knew not wherefore they were come together. They will say in generall, to serve God. But who he is, how to be served, wherein and in whom to be served, they know not. There is in a printed sermon a memorable story of an old man, above threescore, who lived and died in a parish, where there had been preaching almost all his time. This man was a constant hearer as any might be, and seemed forward in the love of the word. On his death-bed being questioned by a minister touching his faith and hope in God, he made these strange answers. Being demanded what he thought of God? he answered that he was a good old man. And what of Christ? that he was a towardly yong youth. And of his soule, that it was a great bone in his body. And what should become of his soule after he was dead? That if he had done well, he should be put into a pleasant green meddow. These answers astonished those that were present to think how it were possible for a man of good understanding, and one that in his dayes had heard at the least two or three thousand sermons: yet upon his death-bed in serious manner thus to deliver his opinion, in such main points of Religion, which infants and sucklings should not be ignorant of. But we may be sure this man is not alone: there be many hundreds whose gray haire shew they have had time enough to learn more wit, who yet are in case to be set to their A. B. C. againe for their admirable simplicity in matters of religion. Blind they are, and blind sacrifices they offer: never once opening their eyes till death (if then) as Pliny reporteth of the Mole; but alwayes rooting and digging in the earth, as if thorough the bowels of it they would dig themselves a new way to hell.

Rom. 12. 1.

Act. 19. 32.

Mr. Fensble
Sermon, misch. of Ignor.

is it not evill? ] Or, as some read it, It is not evill. g. d. 'tis good enough, and may serve turn well enough. Or thus, It is not evill in your opinion, who rather then you would lose any gaine, say, Melius est illi quam Nil ('tis Osianders rime) better that which is ill and bad, then nothing at all. But they which count all good fish that comes to net, will in the end catch the devill and all. The sense is much clearer in the interrogative, Is it not evill? It is, It is: and therefore studiously to be declined and avoided, as poyson in your meat, or a serpent in your way, Abstain from all appearance of evil, saith that great Apostle: how much more from all apparant evils, such as stare you in the face, and are so directly contrary to the plain word of God? Such are sins with an accent, wickednesse with a witnesse, great transgressions Psal. 19. 13.

and if ye offer the lame and languishing | He offers the lame that brings his sacrifice with a wicked mind, Pro. 21. 27. as Balaam and Balaam did Num. 21. 1, 2. that walks not evenly before the Lord, and with an upright foot Gen. 17. 1. that halts between two opinions, as the people did 1 King. 18. 21. inter cælum, terramque penduli hanging betwixt heaven and earth, as Meteors; uncertain whether to hang or fall. Such were Ecebolus, Baldwin, Spalaensis, Erasmus duxifus, Cyprian calleth such ancipites, palpatores temporum, in levitate tantum constantes, doubtfull-minded men. St. James calleth them double-minded men, unstable in all their wayes, as he is that stands on one leg, or as a bowle upon a smooth table. But what said that Martyr? If God be God, follow him: if the Masse be God, let him that will, see it, heare it, and be present at it, and go to the devill with it. But let him do what he doth, with all his heart. God cannot abide these Neuter-passives (I would thou wert either hot or cold.) He requires to be served truly that there be no halting, and totally, that there be no halving. To halt between two opinions, to hang in suspence, to be in religion as idle beggars are in their way, ready to go which way soever the staff falleth, how hatefull is it? When some took Christ for Iohn Baptist, some for Elias, some for Jeremias, But whom say you that I am? said our Saviour: to teach us that Christ hates to have men stand doubtful and adhere to nothing certainly: to have them as mills fit to be driven about by the devil with every wind of doctrine: or as hunting dogs betwixt two hares, running afoor after this, afoor after that; and so losing both. This for point of judgement: And for matter of practise, the soule is well carried, when neither so becalmed that it moves not when it should, not yet tossed with tempests, to move disorderly. A wise mans course is of one colour, like it self: he is homo quadratus, a square stone set into the spirituall building 1 Pet. 2. 7. he is Semper idem as Joseph was; no changling, but one and the same in all places and estates of life: his feet stand in an even place (as Dauids did Psa. 26. 12.) that is, in an equall tenour. Uniformity and ubiquity of obedience are sure signes of his sincerity: when godlinesse runs thorough his whole life, as the woof runs thorough the warp. But the legs of the lame are not equall saith Solomon Pro. 26. 7. The hypocrites life is a crooked life, he turneth aside to his crooked wayes, saith David, as the crabfish goes backwards: or as the Planets though hurried from East to West, yet by a retrograde motion of their own, steal their passage from West to East. It's a crooked life when all the parts of the line of a mans life be not straight before God; when he listeth not up the hands that hang down, and the feeble knees, and maketh straight paths for his feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way, and not rather healed and rectified, or set to rights, as the Apostles word signifieth. That's a sick soule that is not right set for heaven: and that's a gasping devotion, a languishing sacrifice that leaneth not upon Christ, and that is not quickened by his spirit, fitly called by the Apostle, a spirit of power, and of love, and of a sound mind 2 Tim. 1. 7. Surely as a rotten rag hath no strength, so an unsound mind hath no power to do ought that may please God. Frustra nititur qui Christo non innititur, saith a Father. He loseth his labour that leaneth not upon Christ (who is the power of God and the wisdom of God) that leaneth not wholly upon him, but will needs have one leg upon the earth, and the other upon the water, as that Angel in the Revelation: one foot upon the solid ground, and the other upon a quagmire: that rest upon Christ, but as a part-Saviour, as Papists: or trust to him, as the Apricock tree that leaneth against the wall, but it's fast rooted in the earth: so some seem to lean upon Christ in their performances, but are rooted (mean-while) in the world, in pride, filthinesse &c. Or, lastly as the Ivy, which though it clasp about the oak and draweth much from it, yet brings forth all its berries by vertue of its own root. Thus hypocrites also offer sacrifice, but its a sick sacrifice, because it is from themselves and in themselves: they do all in their own strength, that is, in their own weakness. For our strength is to sit still, and to work our selves into the Rock of ages. Trust ye in the Lord for ever: for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength. The blind

1 Theff. 5. 22.

Jam. 1. 8.

Bradford's
letters.

Rev. 3. 14.

Psal. 125. 5.

Heb. 12. 12, 13
ΑυορδωσαςIsa. 30. 7.
Isa. 26. 4.

blind and the lame Jebusites when they had secured themselves in the strong hold of Zion, insulted over David, as if he could not come in thither, though he did his utmost to get in to them: the very blind and lame there inclosed should be able to withstand him. But both their hold and their hope deceived them. Neverthelesse, saith the Text, David took the strong-hold of Zion, the same is the city of David. But they that get into the Rock Christ Jesus, shall neve be visited of evil, nor disappointed of their hopes: but of weak they shall be made strong, Heb. 11. 34. able to present their bodies a lively (not a languishing) sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, Rom. 12. 16. they shall do all things thorough Christ which strengtheneth them, Philip. 4. 13.

2 Sam. 5, 6, 7

Deo confisi
nunquam con-
fusi.

Gen. 42. 11

1 King. 8. 63

Lev. 5, 11,
12. & 14. 30,
31.
Cassanb. in Theoph.
Scholiast.
Aristop.Vide Pollucem.
lib. 1.

Offer it now unto thy Governour] Be it but some petty Provinciall President, some Duke of Venice, or Despot of Servia. Jacob can tell, that the Lord of Egypt will look for a present: and therefore biddeth his sonnes take of the best fruits in the land in their vessels, and carry down the man a present, a little balme, and a little honey; spices and myrrhe, nuts and almonds, of every good thing somewhat, though it were the lesse: for to do much, it was not in the power of their hands; but see that it be of the best, saith He. The poor Persian that met Artaxerxes with a handfull of water, out of the river Cyrus, went away well rewarded. So did the gardiner that presented the Duke of Burgundy with a rape-root, because it was the best they were able to do. Semblably, the Almighty takes any thing well aworth from those that are willing indeed, but alas, not able to bring a better present. Vow and performe (saith He) unto the Lord your God: bring presents unto him, that ought to be feared, Psal. 76. 11. Say not, I fear to present, because I have nothing worthy of him. Send a lamb to the Ruler of the earth, Esay 16. 1. Or, if thou hast not a lamb, offer a pair of turtle doves, or two young pigeons: but see they be young, and that thy lamb be the best in thy fold, and it shall be accepted. Every man cannot do as Solomon did at the dedication of the Temple: when he offered two and twenty thousand oxen, and an hundred and twenty thousand sheep: Or, as great Alexander, of whom Pliny reporteth, that in his childhood when he threw incense upon the Altar in great plenty, his Schoolmaster checkt him for so doing; and bade him sacrifice on that sort when he had conquered the incense-bearing countreys, and not till then. Alexander when he had subdued Arabia remembered his School-master, and presented him with a ship laden with frankincense: largely exhorting him to spare for no cost, when he sacrificed to the gods. But no man must come before the Lord empty-handed: if it be but an handfull or two of flour, or a corn or two of salt. So the Athenians thought the gods would be well-pleased with a poor man, if he offered but meal; especially if he could mingle it with oyl and wine: for they held that every man was bound to bring his best, and not to be base in saving charges in this case. Hence it was, that when the famous Artificer Phidias advised them to make the statue of Minerva rather of marble then of ivory. 1. Because it was more durable: this passed with allowance. 2. Because lesse chargeable: at the mention hereof with infinite indignation they commanded him silence. Their meat-offerings were to be sound and without blemish, whether it were an ox, sheep, goat, swine, calf. The more wealthy did cast frankincense on the altars: and in their blind devotion, thought they could hardly over-do in honour of their dunghill-deities. What then shall become of those base wretches amongst us, that think every thing too good for God, too much for his Ministers? that study to beat down the price of heaven, and will not deal except they may have it under foot?

Will he be pleased with thee?] I trow not. The Vulgar renders it, Si placuerit, &c. If it please him, or if he accept thy person: q. d. then let me never be beleevd. But the other reading is better, and more agreeable to the Original.

Or accept thy person?] Heb. Accept thy face, that whores forehead of thine, hatcht with so much impudence, that thou-darest bring him a worse present, when thou hast a better at hand, but holdest it too good for him. Araunab, though a subject, yet as a king, he gave unto the king, oxen for sacrifice, and threshing instruments for wood. And although David accepted of his courtesie, but not of his cost, yet God hath crowned him and chronicled him for his munificence, Zach. 9. 7. Echron, that is, the barbarous people of Palestina, shall be as the Jebusite, that is, as this famous Jebusite Arannab, a Profelyte, a true Convert, as appeared by his ready parting with his free-hold to God, and the best that he had to his Prince. Let all those that look for acceptance in heaven, honour the Lord with the prime of their age, with the choice of their dayes, (as the Hebrew hath it, Eccles. 12. 1.) with the primrose of their childhood, with the best of their time, and of their talents: and not unworthily, and wofully waite and cast away the fat and marrow, the flower of their age, the strength of their bodies, the vigour of their spirits in sinfull pleasures and sensuall delights, in pursuing their fleshy lusts that hale hell at the heels of them. Will they give the devil the best, and then think to serve God with the dregs, the bottom, the snuffe, the very last sands, their extreme dotage, that themselves and their friends are weary of? Surely, God takes no pleasure to pledge the devil, or drink the snuffes that he hath left. If men reserve the dregs of their dayes for him, He will likewise reserve the dregs of his wrath for them. He will put them over to the gods whom they had chosen. as Judg. 10. and make them to know the worth of his good acceptance, by the want of it. He that should set before his Prince, a dish of meat that had been half-eaten before by hogs, or dogs, would he not be punished with all severity? What then shall become of those that serve God with the devils leavings? that sacrifice to themselves, as Sejanus did, that serve not the Lord Jesus Christ but their own bellies, as those Seducers, Rom. 16. that say to God, Depart from us, and to the devil, Reigne thou over us, that are serious at his work, sleighty in Gods, &c.

2 Sam. 24. 23

Dio in Tiberio.

Verse 9. And now I pray you, beseech God! Heb. Wearie God with your prayers, presse him till he be even sick of you: improve your uttermost interest in him, if at least you have any. Pray hard, if ye can at least: for all men cannot pray, wicked men are gagged by the devil: and their character is, They call not upon God. They may cant or chatter out a charm when Gods chastening is upon them, yea, be with childe, as it were, of a prayer, and yet bring forth nothing better then winde Isai. 26. 16, 17, 18. In prosperity, they may have some few short-winded wishes as Balaam (satans spelman) had; yea, they may by strength of wit or memory devise an handfom prayer, and seem to set it forth with much life, that they may passe for men of parts and gifts: But will the hypocrite pray alwayes? Iob 27. 10. will he persevere in prayer when God seems to cast out his prayers, and to multiply his crosses? will he not rather curse in that case: as Iob's wife, and Micah's mother? will he not how lagainst heaven as the wolf, when hungerbit? and as the Parrot when beaten, leave imitating man, and turn to his own natural harsh voice? But say that wicked men do (Ioub-like) run to the horns of Gods altar, when in distresse or danger: say they roar out a confession, when they are upon the rack, (as Pharaoh) and call for good prayers: say they seek him with their sacrifices as Israel did, when he slew them, then they fought unto him &c. and made their voices to be heard on high, as the prisoner at the bar, as the hog under the knife, as a bull in a net; Say they weary out God with their many words, as those sacrificing Sodomites Isai. 11. & those hypocrites in the Gospel, that hoped to be heard for their much babbling: yet all this is but the prayer of the flesh for ease, and not of the spirit for grace: it is but the fruit of sinful self-love, to rid themselves of Gods rod, or to still the noise of their consciences, or out of a vain hope to stop Gods judgements, &c. And hence it is that they miscarry, that they pray to so little purpose (as here is hinted) and that they are not a button the better for their long prayers. For either God answers them not at all, he hath no respect to their sacrifices (which was Cains and Sauls unhappinesse. The Philistims were upon him, and God was departed from him) Or else he answers them according to the idols of their hearts, bitter answers; Or if better, its but as he answered the Israelites importunity for a king, for a scourge to them, and for quails to choak them: Deus saepe dat iratus quod negat propitius, God often gives that in anger which he denies in mercy. If it were otherwise, the devil should have received mercy from God, when, upon his suit, he was suffered to enter into the swine. Let our chief and constant Petition therefore be in all our our addresses to God, that he would be gracious unto us: that he would cast a loving aspect upon us, that what ever else he denie us, corn, wine &c. yet that he would lift up the light of his countenance upon us. This David preferred before his crown and scepter.

Hof. 5.
Psal. 78. 34

Mat. 6.

scepter. He had a crown of gold, but he valued not that, in comparison of that other crown, Psal. 103.4. he crowneth thee with loving kindnesse and tender mercies. Hence Saint Paul having himself obtained mercy, beginneth and concludeth all his Epistles with wishes of Grace, mercy, and peace: as not knowing what better to wish those whom he wished best unto. This was Abrahams prayer for Ismael, O that he might live in thy sight, that is, be joynt-heire of the promise of grace with Isaac. God answers, Divers Dukes shall come of Ismael, but with Isaac (as a token of special grace) will I make my covenant. This was also Iosephs prayer for Benjamin Gen. 43.29. God be gracious unto thee my son. This the priests were appointed to pray for, as a blessing upon the people, Num. 6. 24, 25. The Lord make his face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee. And hereunto the Prophet seems to allude in this text, q. d. you are the Lords Priests, and your office is to preach and pray Deut. 33. 10. They shall teach Jacob, they shall put incense before thee. Shew now what ye can do in a time of necessity: Beseech the Lord that he would be gracious unto us. This is the main, the mother-blessing that comprehends all the rest. Every man seekes the face of the Ruler, Prov. 29. 26. I humbly beseech thee that I may finde grace in thy sight, my Lord O king: q. d. that's better to me then all the land thou hast given me, said that crafty Sycophant Ziba 2 Sam. 16.4. How much more is the grace of God to be preferred before all outward blessings whatsoever? The Lord that made heaven and earth, blesse thee out of Zion, Psal. 134.3. saith the Psalmist, intimating that blessings out of Zion are above all the blessings besides, that heaven and earth can yeeld us; What is the ayre without light? what was Haman the better for all his honours, when the king frowned upon him? How can a wicked man be happy though wealthy, so long as God is his enemy? As that father speaks of Ahab: he describes him sitting in his ivory palace in the time of the three yeers famine in Samaria: he had gold, silver, and jewels in every place: but what good did all that when the heaven was brasse above, and the earth iron beneath? Cry therefore as those in Zachary, Grace, Grace unto us, pray for our selves and others, as David did for Ittai the Gittite, mercy and truth be with thee, 2 Sam. 15.20. Stir we up our selves to take hold of God, and to get of him Gaius-his-prosperity,  dona throni, soul-blessings, and such as accompany salvation. Jesus Christ when he came into the world, brought grace and truth with John 1. 17. And God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself, Not imputing our sins, but stretching out to us the golden scepter of his grace. Get in to him therefore till this be done; though thou shouldst spend thy time in gathering up pearls and jewels, thou art an undone creature.

this hath been by your means] Heb. From your hand q. d. You Priests have effected it, and are in fault about it. It is long of you that I and my service are so slighted, as hath been before demonstrated, you have caused the people to abhor the offering, 1 Sam. 2. 17. you should have better instructed the people in their duties, and not have suffered them so to pollute mine altar with their carrion-sacrifices, and if God reject your prayers, as here, and even curse your blessings as Chap. 2.2. and curse your seed, ver. 3. you have to thank your selves. All this is by your means. Accept therefore of the chastisement of your iniquity, leave quarrelling, and lay the blame of all where it should be, wash you, make it clean &c. For till then will he regard your persons? will he receive you to favour, and hear your prayer? Or will he think the better of you, for your office and dignity of Priest-hood? No sure, but the worse; For, sedes prima & vita ima, the highest place, and the basest life agree not. Dignitas in indigno est ornamentum in luto, even royakty without righteoufnesse is but eminent dishonour: and men of mark are therefore the worse, because they should have been better. Height of place ever addes two wings to sin, Example, and Scandal, whereby it soars higher, and flies much further. If the Sun be eclipsed and obseured, a thousand eyes gaze upon it: a lesser star may be darkned, and none take notice. A small flaw is noticed and noted in a jewel; a small spot in a swan, not so in a swine. One fly may corrupt a box of precious ointment: when a hundred flies in a tar-barrel, do no hurt to it.

Verse 10. Who is there amongst you that would shut the doors] To be a door-keeper in Gods house, to have any the meanest employment about him, David (though destined to a Diadem) looked upon, as an high preferment. Those Nethinims

1 Cor. 9. 13.

Calvin.

thinims, mentioned in Ezra and Nehemiah, were none other but the Gibeonites, who were made drawers of water to the Temple, as a kind of punishment. God (who is a liberall paymaster) made this crosse a mercy. Their employment so neer the House of God, gave them fit occasion to be partakers of the things of God. The Lord did wonderfully both reward and honour them. So he did ~~at~~ others, though but porters, that had any office about his house. Know ye not, saith Paul, that they which minister about holy things, live of the things of the Temple? and they which wait at the Altar (though but to kindle a fire upon it) are partakers with the altar? Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the Gospel should live of the Gospel. Should have, if not tythes as they had, yet honorary stipends, double honour, 1 Tim. 5. 17. duplex, id est, multiplex, as Esay 40. 1, 2. Jer. 17, 18. Or, double, comparatively to that of widows indeed, verse 2. which yet was honourable maintenance, Et ex publico alebantur. The Priests of the old Testament were plentifully provided for by tythes and other renewes appointed them by God. True it is, that in the captivity little commodity was made of the priesthood: whereupon some priests who had married themselves into the noble family of Barzillai, took scorn to be in the priests register, but called themselves after the family of their wives. Now after the return from Babylon, the priesthood grew into some gain and grace again: and then these degenerate priests, would fain have thrust in among the priests of the Lord: but the Tirshatha would not suffer them, Ezra 2. 61. Howbeit those priests that had stuck to their offices, and been faithfull in them, did not serve God on free-cost: neither was he behinde hand, or in arrere with any of them, as appears by this text: but as they did their work, so they had their wages. God put into the heart of good Nehemiah to take order, that these tythes were duely payed in to the treasurers for that purpose appointed, Neh. 13. 10, 11. What reason had these priests therefore to be so gripple and greedy of filthy lucre? as to take such lame and lean sacrifices of the people, or if fat and good, to change them for worser of their own, as holding any thing good enough for God? which because they did,

I have no pleasure in you, saith the Lord of Hosts, neither will I accept an offering at your hands ] I care not for your persons, I respect not your performances. The Lord had respect, first to Abel, and then to his offering, Gen. 4. 4. and Psal. 4. 3. But know (saith David, to those that vilipended him) that the Lord hath set apart him that is godly for himself: and this he makes the ground why his prayer should be heard. The blood of a swine may look better, and brighter then the blood of a sheep; yet might it not be offered unto the Lord, because it was of a swine. Sordet in conspectu iudicis, quod fulget in conspectu operantis. A piece of wood may shine in the night from its rottennesse: and that be fair in the sight of men that is abomination before God, Luke 16. The swan was rejected for sacrifice, because of his black skin, notwithstanding his fair feather, Lev. 11. 18. The wicked mans incense stinks of the hand that offereth it: and all his devotion is but a beautifull abomination. There is in Lombard this sentence quoted out of Augustin, Omnis vita infidelium peccatum est: & nihil bonum sine summo bono, The whole life of unbelievers is sinne, neither is there any good without the chiefest good. Ambros Spiera the Postiller saith, Crudelis est illa sententia, This is a cruel sentence. But saith not the holy Scripture the very same in effect, Prov. 15. 8, Heb. 11. 6. Joh. 15. 5? What though Papists talk much of Opus operatum? and teach that good works by whomsoever performed are accepted of the Lord, as justice in an Atheist is a good and acceptable work to him? Saint James assures us, that it is the effectuall fervent prayer of a righteous man onely, and of one reconciled to God, that availeth much. And, for this shall every one that is godly pray unto thee, saith David. The lepers lips should be covered according to the law. And to the wicked God saith, What hast thou to do, &c? It is said of witches and their good prayers, (as they call them) Si magica, Deus non vult tales: si pie, non per tales. If those prayers be abused to witchcraft, God will have none of them: and if they be never so good, God will not have them from such kind of people. Before they pray, men should see whether they are persons fit to pray: for God accepts not of a good motion from an ill mouth, Jer. 11. 10, 11. Joh. 9. 31. 1 Joh. 3. 22. Psal. 66. 16. A wicked man wants contrition, humility, faith, hope, feeling, fervency: he hath not a (spirit of grace and supplication; to endite his prayers; he hath not an Intercessour in heaven to present and perfume his prayers. The breath wherein our prayers ascend should be like pillars of smoke perfumed with Christs myrrhe and incense. Otherwise our words will be like the Egyptian pots, recking out the strong smelling onions and garlick of our own corruption, such as God can take no pleasure in; neither will he accept such an offering at our hands.

Jam. 5. 16

Psal. 32. 6

Psal. 50

Verse 11. For from the rising of the sun &c.] where as they might object, If you will not have service from us, you can have none at all: for other people walk every one in the name of his God Mic. 4. 5. and the Gentiles have their vanities, and doctrines of vanities Ier. 14. 22. and 10. 8. wherewith they are wholly taken up. Take you no care for that, saith God here, for from the rising of the sun, to the going down of the same, my name shall be great among the Gentiles] I will provide for mine own great Name, that is, for my glory (for so Gods Name is used in that sense Exod. 9. 16, Psal. 8. 1.) I will be no loser by your rejection: for I have other people that will more reverence me, and do me better service; so that I need not be beholding to you. I have from East to West those that will make hard shift but I shall have service done me. I can set a signe, and send to Tarshish, Pul, and Lud &c. that have not heard my fame, neither have seen my glory, and they shall declare my glory among the Gentiles. And they shall bring all your brethren for an offering unto the Lord out of all nations upon horses, and in charrets, and in litters &c. that though sick, weakly, and unfit for travell, yet they shall come on end; and rather in litters then not at all: they shall be content to suffer any hardship for heaven, as the stone will fall down to come to it's own center, though it break it self in an hundred peeces. The Gentiles once converted shall fly as a cloud Isa. 60. 8. that is, with greatest pernecity and swiftnesse: yea they shall in such flocks come to the Church, as if a whole flight of doves, driven by some hawk or tempest, should scour into the columbary, and rush into the windowes. There are that have observed, that the name of God in all the maternall languages consisteth of foure letters, to intimate that he hath his people in all the foure quarters of the earth, out of all countries, nations, and languages, Deut. 6. 4. Heare, O Israell, The Lord our God is one Lord. In the Original, the last letter of the word Heare, is greater then the rest, as calling for all possible heed and attention. So likewise is the last letter in the word One, which being Daleth, and standing usually for Four (as a numerall letter) signifieth, say the Hebrew-Doctours, that this One God shall be worshipped in all the four corners of the earth. This, Cyprian hath also gathered from the Greek letters of the name Adam: which do severally signifie the four quarters of the world, East, West, North and South: to teach, that Christ, the second Adam, will fetch his people from all parts: and hath therefore built his Church, his new Ierusalem four-square Rev. 21. 16. and placed on the East three gates, on the North three gates, on the South three gates, and on the West three gates, ver. 13. that all from all parts may have free and open acceffe unto him. Babylon was in like manner built four square, as Herodotus testifieth: and Constantinople is so scituate betwixt Europe and Asia, as if it were fatally founded to command both. This is much more true of Uranople, the city of the great King, open to all commers, as the Edilis or Chamberlains house in Rome was. O thou that hearest prayers, to thee shall all flesh come (saith the Psalmist) come with a courage, sith they are sure as of acceffe, so of successe in all their suites thorough Christ the Mediatour, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle-wall of partition between Jews and Gentiles. This the perverse Jews could never abide to heare of: nor can they to this day. And therefore is it that they have in their expositions basely depraved this text, and corrupted the true sense of it, as is to be seen in the Chaldee Paraphrast, and David Kimchi: calling us still Goi Mamzer bastard Gentiles, and cursing us in their daily prayers, which are not (sure) that pure offering mentioned in this verse, and interpreted by them of the prayers of the holy Jews every where disperst. The rejection of the Jews and acception of the Gentiles into grace and favour is a hidden mystery: such as maketh the Apostle of the Gentiles cry out, O the depth! Rom. 11. 23. yea it is a part of that great mystery of Godlinesse 1 Tim. 3. 16. that God manifested in the flesh should be preached

Isa. 66. 19, 26.

יהוה Θεός.
Deus, Dieu
Gott &c.

A Αναπλ.
Δ Δύσις.
A Αρκτος.
M Μεσημ.
Σελα.

Lib. 1.

Turk his.
1153.

Psal. 65. 2.

Eph. 2. 14.

unto unto the Gentiles, and believed on in the world. Let us pittie the poor hardened Jews: and pray the rending of the vail that is yet spread over them: that the rebuke of Gods people may be taken away from off all the earth Iſa. 25. 7, 8. Let us also praise God who hath made us Gentiles meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the Saints in light Col. 1. 12. And take heed that we sin not away our light, and cause God to take his kingdome from us, giving it to a nation that will bring him better fruit Mat. 21. 43. we have a fair warning given us by the example of the Jews Rom. 11. Seeſt thou another ſhipwrack? look to thy tackling.

Vide Scapul.
in Them Δω.

from the riſing of the ſun] from the Eaſt of Judæa the ſun of Chriſts Goſpel paſſed by the ſouth of Greece to the Weſt of the Latine Church, and theſe Iſlands of ours that lye in the Sea, into which the Sun is ſaid to go down, or to lye down, as in its tabernacle of reſt (which is an expreſſion of the old Greek Poets, and the Originall word here uſed agreeeth to it.) All the danger is, left the Goſpell in this it's Solar motion, be travelling for the Weſt of that other world, the American parts; and quitting it's preſent places of reſidence and unworthy poſſeſſours; And then farewell England. Oh let us pray that that diſmall day may never ariſe, wherein it ſhall be ſaid, that the glory is departed from our Engliſh Iſrael.

my name ſhall be great] Name for fame as Exod. 34. 5, 6. Philip. 2. 9. Gen. 11. 4. Renowned men are called men of name Gen. 6. 4. and baſe men are called men of no name Iob 30. 8.

ſhall be great] Not that God is great, or leſſe. Magnum & parvum ſunt ex ijs, quæ ſunt ad aliquid, ſaith Ariſtole. But Gods name is ſaid to be great, when he is declared or acknowledged to be great, as the word ( ſanctified ) is uſed Mat. 6. 9. and the word ( justified ) Mat. 11. 19. Iam. 2. 21. Gods fame and glory is ( as himſelf ) eternall and infinite; and ſo abides in it ſelf, not capable of our addition or detractiō. As the Sun which would ſhine in its own brightneſſe and glory, though all the world were blind, and did wilfully wink. Howbeit, to try how we prize his Name, and how indutrious we will be to magnifie and exalt it, he hath declared that he eſteemes himſelf made glorious; and accounts that he hath received, as it were, a new being by thoſe inward conceptions we have of his glory, and thoſe outward honours we do to his name.

and in every place incenſe ſhall be offered] Not at Ieruſalem only, as the Jews held; nor in mount Gerizim, as the Samaritans Iob. 4. 20, 21. but any place ( without difference ) be it but a chimney might make a goodly Oratory 1 Tim. 2. 8. All religious difference of places was taken away by Chriſts death. Therefore ſo ſoon as he had ſaid Iob. 19. 30. It is finiſhed, he gave up the Ghoſt, and preſently the vail of the Temple was rent from the top to the bottom Mat. 27. 51. And from that hour there was no more holineſſe in the Temple, then in any other place. Though till then, the Temple was ſo holy a place, and ſuch religious reverence did Gods people beare to it, that after the Caldeans had burnt it, they honoured the very place where it had ſtood, and eſteemed it holier then any other. This appears by thoſe eighty perſons whom Iſhmael murdered Ier. 41. 5. and by Daniels opening his windowes toward Ieruſalem, when he prayed Dan. 6. 10.

Incenſe ſhall be offered, and a pure offering] Inſigne teſtimonium pro ſacrificio Miſſæ, ſaith Bellarmino. This text is a notable teſtimony for the ſacrificing of the Maſſe, which Papiſts will needſly have to be the ſacrifice here meant and mentioned. Much like that Sorboniſt that finding it written at the end of S. Pauls epiſtles, Miſſa eſt, &c. bragged he had found the Maſſe in his Bible: So another reading Iohn 1. 4. Invenimus Meſſiam, made the ſame concluſion. We ſhall wave their arguments as ſufficiently answered by others: and take the meaning of the holy Ghoſt here to be of ſuch ſpiritual ſacrifices of the new Teſtament, as all Chriſtians, even the whole royal prieſthood, are bound to offer up to God. Theſe are called Incenſe and Offering by Analogy, the type for the thing thereby ſhadowed, as Irenæus, Tertullian, and Auguſtine interpret the Text. This incenſe is prayer, and praise, Pſal. 141. 2. Heb. 13. 15. Hof. 14. 4. Pſal. 51. 21. This pure offering is every faithful Chriſtian together with all the good things that he hath or can do. It is ſimplex oratio de conſcientia pura, ſaith Tertullian. Thus thoſe good Macedoni-

Bee-hives of Rome ſol. 93.

1 Pet. 2. 5.

Rev. 5. 8.

Rev. 8. 3, 4.

Cont. Marcion.
lib. 4.

an

and gave themselves to the Lord, saith S. Paul, and unto us by the will of God. 2 Cor.

8. 5. Thus the Romans had delivered themselves up to the form of Doctrine, that had been delivered unto them, Rom. 6. 17. and are yet further exhorted to exhibit, present, make tender, yield up and offer as spiritual priests, their bodies (and much more their souls) to God, as a living sacrifice, by a willingness to do what he requireth, Psal. 40. 6 Rom. 15. 16. and to die for his sake if called thereunto, Phil. 2. 17. 2 Tim. 4. 6. Swenkfeldians took away all external service, saith Zanchy. Libertines say, it is sufficient that we sacrifice to God the hidden man of the heart. The Pope saith to his vassals, My Son, give me thy heart: be a papist in heart, and then go to Church, dissemble, do what ye will. But God requires to be glorified with our spirits and bodies both, because both are his. The very Manichees that denied God to be the Author of the body, fasted on sundays, and in fasting exercised an humiliation of the body. But (2) as the true christian sacrificeth himself to God, so all that he hath, or can; and is ready to say as that Grecian did to the Emperor, If I had more, more I would bring thee. It comforts him to consider, That if there be a willing minde, God accepts according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not. Noahs sacrifice could not be great, yet was it greatly accepted, because of clean beasts, and offered in faith. It is the godly mans care, that his offering though it be poor, yet may be a pure offering, proceeding from a pure heart, a good conscience, and faith unfained; and then he is sure it is pure by divine acceptation through Christ. 1 Pet. 2. 5. In confidence whereof he lifts up holy hands, 1 Tim. 2. 8. And although sensible of his impurities & imperfections, his heart misgives him sometimes as Jacobs did, lest his father should discern him; yet when he remembreth that he is clothed as Jacob was, with the garment of his elder brother, the robe of Christs righteousness (which is not a scant garment, as Bernard saith, but reaching to the heels and covering all the parts of the soul) he goeth boldly to the throne of grace, and covers Gods altar with his evangelical sacrifices. Such as are contrition and self-denial, Ps. 51. 17. Confidence in God, Pl. 4. 6. Obedience to the preaching of the gospel, Rom. 15. 16. Beneficence to the poor, Phil. 4. 8. &c. In all which his aim and endeavour is to worship God in spirit, and to do all, more out of thankfulness; and lesse out of constraint of conscience. For he knows that as the greatest growth of sinners is in spiritual wickedness (as in those that sin against the holy Ghost) so the greatest growth of grace is in spiritual holiness; in worshipping God more in spirit and truth.

Rom. 12. 1.

1 Cor. 6. 20

Εἰ πλεον ἐχον, πλεον
ἐδιδουν.
2 Cor. 8.
1 Tim. 1. 5

Verse 12. But ye have profaned it. Ye Jews in general, though my peculiar people, and called by my name. You that quarter armes with me as it were, and should therefore lift up my Name as an ensign: that you should use me thus courageously, and cast dirt upon my name by your irreligion: this moves me not a little: so that I cannot but once and again complain of it. Had it been an enemy, I should better have born it. But it was thou my familiar, &c. What, thou my son Brutus? Friend, betrayest thou the Son of man, and that with a kisse? Scipio had rather Hannibal should eat his heart with salt, then Lelins his friend do him the least dishonour. God will take that of a profane person, that he will not of a professor. Philistines may cart the ark, & scape scotfree. But if David do it, God will punish him in the death of Uzzah. Augustus Caesar may send forth a decree that all the (Roman) world should be taxed or numbred, Luk. 1. 2. but if David number his people, God will make bloody wailes upon his back: & if he make Gods name to stinck among the heathen, God will scour out that blemish cast upon his name with Dauids tears and blood, See Ezek. 36. 21. & 39. 7. Amos 2. 7. Levit. 10. 3, I will be sanctified in all them that draw near unto me. Sanctified he will be either actively or passively: either in the sincerity of their conversation, or else in the severity of their condemnation. If Solomon forsake the Lord that appeared unto him twice, God will chastise him with the rods of men at least. If Israel profess Gods name, and yet profane it, God will cast them off, and turn to the Gentiles. And indeed what could he do lesse to a nation so incorrigibly flagitious, a nation so unthankful for mercies, so impatient of remedies, so incapable of repentance, so obliged, so warned, so shamelessly, so lawlessly wicked?

Καὶ σὺ τέκνον ἐστίν.

The table of the Lord] that is the Altar: see verse 7.

And the fruit thereof.] Or the revenue, the income of it: It is a base allowance

G g g

that

that the Priests have; prisoners pittance: they live that's all. Or thus, The table of the Lord is polluted, &c. That is, it is no better worth then to be polluted; neither do his Priests deserve either countenance or maintenance. So many wretched people in these dayes think there is more ado made then needs in the worship and service of God, Colo Deum, ut par est. Whereas indeed we that have received so many mercies, and have lived in such an age of miracles, should not onely servire Deo, sed & adulari as Tertullian phraseth it, serve God, but be unsatisfiable in serving him. And as Gods service is slighted, so his ministers are well nigh starved in many places: the vulgar holding the ministry no better then a idle uselesse trade, taken up to make a living of. How Shamefully are Gods ablest servants defrauded, mocked, misused. A sad prognostick of a dying State, 2 Chron. 36. 16.

Verse 13. And ye have said also, Behold what a varineffe is it, and ye have snuffed at it: &c. At what? At the chiding you have had for your lame and lean sacrifices. A little offensive breath hath blown you up into rage: This is a kinde of blasphemy, Ezek. 20. 27. when gracelesse men fall into a fustian-fume, as they say, by hearing of their faults: and bristle against a reproof, though never so just. Or thus, Ye have puffed and blown, as almost breathlesse, by carrying some carrion sheep for a sacrifice: as if it were so fat and full of flesh, that you could hardly bring it without breaking your winde; whereas ye might have blown it away, it is so thin and light. Hateful Hypocrisie! And it sped accordingly. For should I accept this at your hand? No, no: Sapiens nummularius est Deus: nummum fictum non recipiet. God is a wise mint-man: he will take no counterfeit coyn. He not onely detests the cozener, and detests him as here, but curseth him bitterly in the next verse. He rejects the hypocrites sacrifice and plagueth such Promethusses; when as he wipes not out any of the good services of his sincere people, Neb. 13. 4. but abundantly blesteth them.

Labour therefore for that truth in the inward parts, that we may be with Appelles approved in Christ, Rom. 16. and with Nathaniel, an Israelite indeed. Be we the same that we would seem to be: and, if not as the windows of the Temple were, wider within then without; yet to be no more in shew then we are in truth. It stands us in hand when to deal with God, to have the greater part of our ware in the inner part of the shop, and not all on the fore-side, on the board or stall: and to see, that though our work be but mean, yet it may be clean; though not fine, yet not foul; soyled and slubberd with the slur of a rotten heart. Sweet powders can make even leather an ornament, when the Saries of a plague-sore will render a rich robe lothsom, and infectious.

Verse 14. But cursed be that deceiver! Cursed with a curse both verbal and pend; temporal and spiritual. These last light heavy (such as are hardnesse of heart, and horiour of conscience) though lesse observed; because they come into the deceivers bowels like water, and like oyle into his bones: They soak and sink into his soul insensibly. He hath his death about him (as we say of one that hath drunk poyton, or eaten an Italian fig) though he fall not down dead immediately. He is accursed, and he shall be so, as (in a contrary sence) Isaac said of his son Jacob, He is blessed, and he shall be blessed. But usually the visible vengeance of God, doggs the deceiver at the heels: his sin findes him out, and layes him open to others, as an accused person. This was Cains case and curse, Gen. 4. 15. God sets a mark upon him; probably it was the perpetual trembling of his hands and whole body, through the horriour of his conscience. So, not long before, when Adam had played the deceiver, and hearkened to that old Impostor the subtile Serpent, God spared him, but cursed the ground (as the Persians, when their Noble-mens sons had made a fault, hangd up their coats and whipt them in their presence) Cursed is the ground for thy sake: Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth. And the truth is, it was never beautifull nor cheerfull since that curse inflicted: but lyes bed-rid, waiting for the coming of the second Adam to free it from that heavy curse. Rom. 8. 20. The barren figtree felt the power of Christs curse even to admiration Mat. 21. 20. For when the disciples saw it, they marvelled saying, How soon is the figtree withered away? They might marvel well enough: for the figtree is the most juycefull of any tree: and beares the brunt of winter-

Bern.

Psal. 51 5
John 1Mal. 3 9
Rom. 1 23
Mat. 27 5
Psal. 109 18

Gen. 3 17

winter-blasts, without withering. But the blasts of Christs mouth are more powerfull. He can blow men to destruction Job. 4. 9. as so many dust-heaps; yea frown; not some single fig-tree only, but the whole vineyard to desolation. It is burnt with fire, it is consumed: they perish at the rebuke of thy countenance, Psal. 80. 16. Men may curse, and no hurt follow; the curse causlesse shall not come, Prov. 26. 2. Michah's mother cursed when she lost her money, Jud. 17. 2. But who cared or cared the worse for that? And the like may be said of Julius Palmer the Martyrs mother, when he craved her blessing upon his knees, she drove him out of doores for an heretike, and said, Gods curse and mine go with thee.

A.D. &amp; Mon.

What was David the worse for Semei's cursing of him, or Jeremy for the peoples, or the reformed Churches for the Popes? the silly people in Italy are made to beleve, that ever since the Pope excommunicated Queen Elizabeth, the people of England are all as black as devils. The Pope is like a wasp, no sooner angered, but out comes a sting: which being out is like a fools dagger ratling and inaping without an edge. We may say of his curses (with bell, book, and candle) as Vegetius saith of chariots armed with fitches and hooks, that at first they were a terrour, and after a scorn. But Gods curses are terrible, and light heavy. Together with word there goes forth a power (as it is said in another case) and what he speaketh with his mouth, he maketh good with his hand. And 'tis a fearful thing to fall into the punishing hands of the living God: those that have felt his fingers will say so. This the deceiver is sure to do if timely course be not taken: Curat ergo penitentia, ne praecurrat sententia.

Jer. 15. 10.

lib. 1. cap. 24.

that deceiver } That fraudulent fellow, that crafty companion, that coz'ner, Quadruplator, Machinator, that dealeth subtilly with the Lord, as the Egyptians did with his people, and thinks to out-wit him, as the Medianites did the Israelites, (See Num. 25. 18. Psal. 10. 25. in both which places the same word is used, as here) that casteth and fetcheth about (versutulus & versatilis) how to deceive both God and man with shewes of devotion; not afraid to be damned, so he may seem to be saved, and seeking so long to deceive others, that in fine he deceiveth his own soul, (which is the worst kinde of deceit, as self-murther is the worst sort of murder) winding himself into the fools paradise of a sublime dotage, and that in matters of greatest consequence and concernment. Imposturam faciunt & patiuntur, as that Emperour said of them that sold glasse for pearl; they mock and are mocked, deceiving or being deceived, as Paul saith, like some drunken stage-player, they have acted a kings part so long, that now they begin to think themselves kings indeed: and like sleeping Sisera they dream of a kingdom, when as Juels nail is neerer his temples then a crown. A curse he is sure of, set on by God (who then shall take it off?) and seconded by men, yea by men that were without God in the world. Witnesse that law of the twelve tables in Rome, Sacrum, sacrove commendatum qui clepsit rapseritve, parricida esto. Let him be punished for a parricide, that shall commit sacrilege of any sort. Now an hypocrite is by Basil rightly called ιεβουλα & sacrilegious Church-robber: because he steals from God πρὸς θεὸν ἀναδινύα himself dedicated to God by profession of Christianity: and so becomes Ἀναδινύα accursed, yea, Anathema Maranatha double accursed, and put over to God to punish: who hath prepared the hottest fire in hell for such, because their sin is increased by their knowledge: as the sin of Solomon in honouring idols which he knew to be no gods, was far greater then that of his wives, which beleev'd them to be gods, as Tostatus truly observeth.

which hath in his flock a male } A flock he hath then, and is a sheep-master: able perhaps to say as he in the Poet --- mille meīs errant in montibus agni. Were he a poor man, he might be the better excused: of a little God accepts a little. Again, he hath a male in his flock, a sound, tidy fat lamb, or ram: and reserving that for his own use, though he had voluntarily vowed it to God, he brings a corrupt carrion, or a lean starv'ling for a sacrifice. This deceitful dealing is his sin, that subjects him to the curse. This was the sin, (and became the calamity) of those in Jeremy Chap. 4. 22. that served not God with the best of their understanding: of those in Haggee, that dwelt in their ceiled houses, and let the Lords house lie waste: of Solomon (some think) that bestowed twice as much time in building his own house as Gods house: of all those that seek not Gods kingdom in the first place, that give

Hag. 4. 4.

Ggg 2

Dan. hijt.
fol. 13.

על' ו' ת'ט'
ע'ת' ע'י' ו' ע'ו-נ'ל' ו'ט' Arist. Polit.
lib. 1. cap. ult.

Gen. 27. 12.

Dan. 4:

Job. Manl.
loc. com.

A.R. I מ'ג' ו' נ'

give not God the best of the best, the primrose of their age, the first thoughts in the morning, the fittest and freest times of the day for prayer &c. Scipio went first to the Capitol every day, and then to the Senate-house. David prevented the night watches to pray.* Christ was at it a great while before day Mar. 1.35. Of Charls the Great it is reported, that he spoke and conversed more with God than with man. Our King Alfred cast the natural day into three parts; Eight hours he spent in prayer, study and writing: eight in the service of his body, and eight in the affaires of his State. The Jews divided the businesse of the day into three parts. The first, ad Tephilla, that is for prayer: the second ad Terah, for the study of the Law: the third ad Malchah, for work: this they did on working-dayes; besides their weekly sabbath and other holy-dayes stricktly observed, which made Seneca (that profane Heathen) say of them, that they lost more then a seventh part of their time. How much better might he have bewailed his own losse of time, and neglect of the one thing necessary in the words of Bernard, Totum vita mea tempus perdidit, quia perdit vixi, I have lost my whole life, because I have lived without God in the world? what a happinesse had it been to him, if he had observed Aristotles rule (and Thales his examples, viz. that a Philosopher may get riches, but that's not their main businesse. Many are so busied in the world, that they think not of Gods kingdom (which yet they vowed to do when they were baptized) as the Duke of Alva told the king of France, who asked him, whether he had observed the late great Eclipse? No, said he, I have so much to do upon earth, that I have no leasure to behold the heaven. How much better Anaxagoras the Philosopher, who being asked wherefore he came into the world? answered, Ut calum contempler, that I may contemplat heaven? men should certainly minde heaven most and first; and not suffer the leaner kine to eat up the fat, the thin ears of corn the good: but honour God with the best of their substance and with the best of their abilities (if they stand bound by vow especially, if they have vowed a male to God.) Let it not be according to the Italian Proverb with us, Sciapat il morbo frandato il Santo, when the danger is escaped, the vow is neglected) lest else God curse them, as here, for a company of cozeners: and make them know and rue his breach of promise. Num. 14.34. Surely if Jacob was afraid when he went about to seek a blessing, lest his blinde father should discern him, and his deceit in dealing with him, and so he might get a curse instead of a blessing; How ought men to take heed and fear to dissemble or deal deceitfully with the All-seeing God? especially since he is so great a God (see him set forth in his greatnesse Deut. 10.17) and therefore lesse patient of affronts and indignities: he lookes to be served like himself, and according to his excellent greatnesse.

for I am a great king saith the Lord of Hosts! Yea a great King, because Lord of Hosts. See the Note on Chap. 3. 17) παντοκράτωρ, παμβασιλεύς, Αυτοκράτωρ. He is absolute Monarch of the whole world: and by him it is that all other kings reign, and Princes rule Prov. 8.15. All other Sovereignes are but his substitutes, his Viceroyes; he makes them, and unmakes them at his pleasure, as proud Nebuchadnezzar was forced to acknowledge. Hence he is rightly stiled a great King (a title anciently given to the kings of Persia, and now to the Grand Signior) yea, he is King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, in another sense then Maximilian the Emperour of Germany said that he was, because the Princes and cities of the Empire were free states, and yielded him little obedience. God hath all the Kings of the earth at his beck and check: Constantine the great, Valentinian, and Theodosius, three Emperours, called themselves Vasallos Christi, the vassals of Christ, as Socrates reporteth. And well they might; inasmuch as all nations (taken together) are in comparison of him, but as a drop of a bucket, and as the dust of the ballance: behold he taketh up the Isles as a very little thing, as one would take up a feather at his foot. And if a sacrifice fitting for him should be prepared, Lebanon would not be sufficient to burn, nor all the beasts thereof for a burnt-offering. All nations to him are as nothing &c. Esa. 40. 15, 16. Simon Magus gave out, that he was some great matter: and the world hath been troubled with Alexander the Great, and Pompey the Great &c. But what's now become of all these Grandees, with their swelling titles, and loud bragg's. Hath not God long since cut off the spirits of these petty-Princes, and become terrible to the kings of the earth? Psal.

Psal. 76. 12. where the word rendered cut off, signifieth that he slips them off, as one would slip a flower betwixt ones fingers, or a bunch of grapes off the vine. The kings of Persia were wont to give laws to their people, sitting in a chaire of State, under a vine tree of gold, that had as it were bunches of grapes made up of smaragds, or em'rals, and other stones of greatest price. The King of heaven sits upon a throne far more costly and stately: as may be seen Ezek. 1. Eesai. 6. Dan. 7. Omnino igitur oportet nos, orationis tempore, curiam intrare celestem, in qua Rex Regum stellato sedet folio &c. as Bernard excellently inferreth, it becometh us therefore at prayer-time, to enter into the Court of heaven, where the King of Kings sits in his starrie and stately throne, environed with an innumerable number of glorious Angels, and crowned Saints; with how great reverence therefore, with how great fears, with how great humility ought a poore base toad creeping and crawling out of his ditch to approach so dreadfull a presence?

Athenicus
lib. 12.

Bern de di-
vers 25.

and my Name is dreadful among the Heathen] It was ever so from the very distinction of men into Hebrews, and Heathens. At the first, before the covenant made with Abraham, all Nations were alike before the Lord. But as soon as it was said, I will be thy God, and the God of thy seed after thee, the Church was evidently divided from the world, as light was from darknesse at the first creation. The Heathens God suffered to walk in their own ways. Nevertheless, he left not himself without witnesse: but his Name was ever terrible and tremend amongst them. The Hittites honoured Abraham as a Prince of God, Pharaoh was raised up on purpose, that on him God might get him a name throughout all the earth, Exod. 9. 16. Jerbro heard of his doings in Egypt, and became a Profelyte. The hearts of the Canaanites melted, and they were made to say, The Lord your God, he is God in heaven above, and in earth beneath. Joh. 2. 11. The Philistines were woe-begon when they beheld the Ark of the God of Israel brought into the field: and were ready, as worms, to wriggle into their holes. The king of Babylon sent Embassadors and a present to Hezechiah, because he had heard that for his sake God had caused the Sun to go back. Daniel records what a Name God had gotten him in his dayes all the world over. And after the captivity neer Malachi's time, the famous victories gotten by the Maccabees were far and neer discoursed of. Judas Maccabaeus had his name from the capital letters of this motto written in his Ensigne Mi camocha Elohim Jehovah, who is like unto thee O Lord among the Gods? But besides, and above all this, Gods name is dreadfull among the Heathen in a special manner now; since the calling of the Gentiles, and the conversion of so many nations to the faith of Jesus Christ, Maugre the malice of earth and of hell. This made Calocerius an Heathen say, Verè magnus est Deus Christianorum the God of the Christians is a great God indeed. And another Αἰωρινός τ' αὐτὸς ὁ Θεὸς ὁμοῦν your God is a most Majestick God. What a mouth of blasphemay then opened that separate Papist John Hunt in his humble appeal to King James? The God of the Protestants, saith he, (whom he knowes to be the Father, Son, and holy Ghost) is the most uncivil, & evil-manner'd God of all those who have born the name of gods upon the earth: yea, worse then Pan God of the clowns, which can endure no ceremonies, nor good manners at all; True it is, that humane inventions in his service, and Popish will-worships, our God will not away with. Such strange fire if any presume to bring before him, they may look to speed as Nadab and Abihu, Coe and his complices did: but he expects and requires that all his worshippers should come before him with reverence and godly fear: For even our God (no lesse then the Jews God) is a consuming fire. He is terrible out of his holy places Psal. 68. 35. And albeit he loves to be acquainted with his people in the walkes of their obedience: yet (as a great King) he takes state upon him in his ordinances, and wilbe trembled at in his word and Saeraments. Hence Chrysostome calles the Lords table, that dreadfull table: and other Ancients call Sacraments τὰ φοβερά μυστήρια terrible mysteries. He that comes to this table without his wedding garment may look to be taken from the table to the tormentor. That's a remarkable Text Exod. 34. 10, 11, upon the nobles of the children of Israel he laid not his hand: also they saw God, and did eat and drink. So dreadfull is God, and so infinite is the distance betwixt him and the greatest Noble that comes to his table, that it is an honour they may be 17.

A. R. 24. 16,

Chap. 6.
of that Pamphlet.

Heb. 12. 28.

γενέσεις

L. Vives de caus. corr. art.
1.3

Espenc. in Tit. 1

suffered to live in his sight: how much more then to partake of his ordinances? Kings and judges are instructed to serve the Lord with fear, and to rejoyce before him with trembling, Psal. 2. 10, 11. This is horror facer, saith à Lapide upon this text descanting upon their vulgar interpreter, who rendereth the word dreadful horrible, Et nomen meum horribile. But what an odde conceit was that of a certain Sophister at Paris, who would needs be called the horrible Sophister, non minorem eam appellationem ratus quam Africani aut Asiatici, saith Vives. Perhaps he had read this Text in the vulgar Translation. Unless they had the same law at Paris that they had in Italy, that none should read the Bible, lest they should thereby be made heretikes: but rather study Aristotle (whom Peter Lombard had brought into more request then Saint Paul, as the Sorbon at Paris complained (or the Canon-Law, whereof Carlostadius had been eight yeers Doctour, ere he began to read the Scripture: and yet at the taking of his degree had been pronounced, Sufficientissimus.

CHAP. II.

Jer. 23. 15

De cultu Sanct.
1.3. c. 4.
Hom. 3. in Ag.

Lib. 4. de Consid.

In hist. Austr.
apud Callenat.
hist. Neap. 1.4.

Verse 1. And now, O ye priests, &c. Now, that is, Now again, I must have the other bout with you, besides what I had chap. 1. 6, 7, &c. for as once from the Prophets (so now from the Priests) in Jerusalem profaness is gone forth into all the land. Their white Ephods covered many foul sinnes: and their evil example proved a publike mischief. Hence the Prophet is so round with them: for he knew that a wicked Priest is the worst creature upon earth. Unfavoury salt is fit for no place; no not for the dunghill. It is an old proverb, that hell is paved with the shaven crowns of evil priests. The word priest is never used by the Apostles for a Minister of the Gospel: no not by the most ancient Fathers, as Bel-larmine himself confesseth. Indeed in Chrysostome I finde this piercing passage; Non arbitror inter sacerdotes multos esse qui salvi fiant, I do not think, saith He, that among all our priests, there be many that shall be saved. Bernard comes after him and complains, that in the court of Rome good men failed, bad men grew amain: and that the Bishops of his time, were not Doctours but seducers, not Pastours but Impostours, not Prelates but Pilates. Yea Pope Pius the second hath left it in writing, that no villanous act had been for a long time committed in the Catholike Church, the first beginning whereof proceeded not from the priests. Corne-lius à Lapide upon this chapter, cries out of the ignorance and wickedness of the Popish Clergy, as the cause of the contempt cast by us upon them. And I would we had not cause to say, that many of our Ministers neither feed liberally by charity, nor soundly by doctrine, nor religiously by life: which opened once the mouth of that dead dog Campion, maliciously to bark out, Ministri eorum nihil vilius, Their Ministers are most vile and vicious.

this commandement is for you] i. e. that curse, chap. 1. 14. implying a commandement: that if you desire to escape that heavy curse, you forthwith obey this commandement (Aut faciendum enim aut patiendum) to procure the purity and integrity of my worships, and to see that there be a present reformation of Religion. Reformation is a work that hath ever gone heavily on, and hath met with much opposition. As that made by Elias, by Iosiah, by Nehemiah, and by Hezekiah, who found the Priests and Levites very backward: which the good king perceiving, began first himself, and awaked those sluggards with these words: Obbe not deceived, my sonnes: God hath chosen you for this service, 2 Chron. 29. 11. The like backwardness was found in the Popish Clergy to a generall Councell, so much urged and called for by the Bohemians, Germans, and other Nations, that groaned under the yoke of Papall tyranny. Luther truly and trimly compared the Cardinals and Prelats that met at Rome about Reformation of the Church, to foxes, that came to sweep an house full of dust with their tails: and instead of sweeping it out, swept it all about the house, and made a great smoke for the while: but when they were gone, the dust fell all down again. When nothing could be obtained of the Pope, Luther began to reforme in Germany, where he had a great door

Sleidan Comments

door open, but many adversaries, and none more violent then the Pope, whose tripple crowne, and the Monks, whose fat paunches he so nearly touched, as Erasmus merrily told the Elector of Saxony. Bucer and Melancthon framed a form of Reformation with approbation of the Peers and States. But the Clergy of Colleen rejected it with scorn and slander, saying that they would rather submit to the government of the great Turk, then to a Magistrate that followed or furthered such a Reformation. Here in England something began to be done in the time of Henry the 8. but it was so envied and opposed by the Church-men, that little could be done to what was expected. There are many (said He, sitting in Parliament) that are too busie with their new Sumpsimus, and others that dote too much upon their old Mumpsimus. The new religion though true, He and his Clergy envied: the old, though his own, he despised. Magistrates are to have the main stroke in Reformation of Religion, (though Papists would utterly exclude them for having to do in matters Ecclesiasticall) but Ministers also must move in their own Orb, and do their part too. (why else are the priests here commanded and menaced?) 1. By teaching. 2. By exercising discipline. And here Magistrates must helpe Ministers in with boards of Cedar, Cant. 8. 9. provide for their security, whiles they do their duty, that they may be without fear among them, as Timothy, 1 Cor. 16. 10. Envied they must look to be, and hated for their zeal to Gods house, which they seek to purge. But publike respects must (like the rapt motion) carry our hearts contrary to the wayes of our own private respects, or concerns: and consider, that as it is not the tossing in a ship, but the stomach that causeth sicknesse; the choller within, and not the waves without: So the frowardnesse of men, that quarrell with reformation; and not the work it self, which is Gods commandement, as here the Prophet calls it.

Verse 2. If ye will not hear ] that your souls may live, Isa. 55. 3. but forbear, and so shew your selves a rebellious house, Ezek. 2. 8. so adding rebellion to your sinne. If you will needs resemble the deaf adder, which although by spitting out his poyson, he might renew his age, stoppeth his ears by applying one to the earth, and covering the other with his tail, lest he should hear the voyce of the charmer. Or, if ye do hear with that gristle that growes upon your head onely, and will not lay it to heart ] Heb. upon your heart, as a weight to keep it down from rising in rebellion against the Lord. If you esteeme my command a light matter, and instead of pondering it in your hearts with Mary, cast it behind your backe, Psal. 50. 17. or, suffer it to run thorow you as water runs thorow a riven vessell, Heb. 2. 4. If thirdly, you will not give glory unto my Name, by confessing your sinnes, Iosh. 7. 19. (so submitting to my justice, and imploring my mercy, which will make much to my glory) and redressing your wayes, Psal. 50. 23. by breaking off your sinnes, and bearing much fruit, Iob. 15. 8. studying mine ends more then your own, and drowning all self-respects in my glory. If you will not observe and fulfill these three fore-mentioned conditions of exemption;

I will even send a curse upon you ] that evill Angel of mine, that shall bring with him fiercenesse of anger, wrath, indignation and trouble Psa. 78. 49. The Vulgar Interpreter renders it, I will even send poverty upon you; a curse well suting with their covetousnesse, and agreeable to that threatened by another Prophet: As the Partridge sitteth on eggs and hatcheth them not: so he that getteth riches and not by right (as these Priests had done) shall leave them in the midst of his dayes, Jer. 17. 11 and at his end be a fool. A poor fool God will soon make of the covetous caitiff: and reduce him to extreame want; than the which he knowes no greater hell, no curse comparable. But the Originall is more generall, I will execrate you, or pronounce a curse against you. Howbeit, Non nisi coactus, No otherwise then as compelled to it; as that Emperour said, laying his hand upon his mouth for a good while, before he would pronounce sentence of death upon one that had deserved it. Histories tell us of Augustus, that it went as much against the heart with him, as it did against the hair with the malefactor, when he adjudged him to condigne punishment. Vespasian wept over those he sentenced. Nero, in his first five years, being to signe a warrant for execution of certain Malefactors said, O, utinam literas nescirem, O that I could not write. Our King Edw. 6. could not be perswaded by all his Councill to put his hand to a warrant for the burning of one

Melch. Ad. in vita Buc.

Jer. 17. 11

As. to Mon.

Ezek. 33. 11.

οὐκ ἔστι δὲ θεός,
ὡς ἐπεὶ οὐδὲν αὐτῷ
H redet.

one lone Butcher, that had well deserved it. Our gracious God might well say As I live, I delight not in the death of sinners, but rather would they should convert and live: why else doth he here in threatening a curse, interpose condition of repentance? why doth he warn before he wounds, and premonish before he punish? Well might the Heathen Historian say, God loves to fore signifye. Well might that Father say, Minatur Deus ut non puniat. God therefore menaceth misery that he may not inflict it. And another, Idco prolata est sententia, ut non fiat. The sentence is, therefore pronounced, that it may not be executed. Witnesse that we read Am. 4. 12. Therefore thus will I do unto thee. Thus? how? He nameth not how, that they may fear the utmost, (as Ribera noteth) and yet he addeth, Because I will do this unto thee, prepare to meet thy God, O Israel. Surely as a woman brings not forth without pain; And as a bee (usually) stings not, till much provoked: so neither doth God curse his creature, till there be no other remedy 2 Chron. 36. 16 And then, Patientia lasa fit furor: abused mercy turns into fury. If men will not accept of conditions of peace, though never so fair and reasonable (as here) but pervert his mercies to wantonnesse, his patience to presumption, he will not alwaies bear with their evill manners: but, repenting him of his kindnesse so cast away upon those that prized it not, as David repented of the good he had done unworthy Nabal, he will make them know the worth of his blessings by the want of them.

1 Sam. 25. 21.

I will curse your blessings] faith He here, I will recover mine own and be gone, as Hos. 2. 9. I will cut off the meat from their mouths, and blast all your hopes of abundance, and destroy you after that I had done you good Josh. 24. 20. Thus God dealt by his unfruitfull vineyard Esay 5. 5. he peld up the hedges and let in the wild-bore. Thus also he dealt by the unprofitable servant: he took away his talent, and turned him over to the tormentour. And thus he deales by diverse now adayes, in whom it is no hard matter to observe a waine and decay of their gifts and abilities, upon their disuse, or misuse thereof. How many have we that are wofully fallen from the affections of prayer they were wont to find and expresse? how many idle and therefore evil ministers, rejected by God, and laid aside, as so many broken vessels: whiles he causeth the night to come upon their divination, puts out their right eyes and dries up their right armes Zach. 11. 17? till at length they may say with Zedekiah, When did the spirit depart from me? Woe to me, for I am spoiled Jer. 4. 13. And in very deed what should a Prince do but take away a sword from a rebel? what should a mother do, but snatch away the meat from the child that marrs it? And what can God do lesse then take away his corn, wine and wooll, from those that not only own him to it, but go after other sweet-hearts with it?

Hos. 2. 5, 9.

Lev. 26.

Idem repetit
q̄ in culcat. a Lapide.

yea I have cursed them already] for a pledge of more malediction. For as in blessings, every former is a pledge of a future: so in curses. As one cloud followes another till the Sun disperse them: so doth one, curse succeed another till Repentance remove them. No sooner doth that rain-bow appear in our hearts, but God remembering his covenant, clears up our coasts, and lifteth up the light of his countenance upon us. Take the bark from the tree, and the sap can never find its way to the branches. Take sin from the soule, and God will soon be reconciled. But if ye walk contrary unto me, I will punish you yet seven times more, and seven times, and seven to that; till I have dashed you in pieces: as Dagon, never left falling before the Ark till his neck was broke. Sin doth as naturally draw and suck curses to it, as the Loadstone doth iron, or Turpentine, fire. The Chaldees and the Vulgar make these words but a repetition of the former: for they read the Text thus: I will curse your blessings, and I will curse them: to intimate his peremptorinesse in the thing, and that he was unchangably resolved upon it. Now when God will do a thing, who shall hinder it? Nature may be resisted and hindred in its course; as when the fire burnt not the three worthies, when the Sun stood still in heaven, yea went backward. Men and devils though never so potent may want of their will, and be crossed in their designs and desires. But if God will have this or that to be done, ther's no gain-standing him. If he have a mind to blesse his people, they shall be blessed. If he will have pity for his own names sake, which the house of Israel had prophaned Ezek. 36. 21. If he will will come in with his Non-obstante, Nevertheless he saved them &c. and dealt with his servants not according to his ordinary rule, but according to his prerogative, who shall contradict him? In like sort, if he will redouble his strokes upon his enemies, and not only curse them, but curse them bitterly, as the Angel did Meroz, who can hinder or object against his proceeding in that behalf? His judgements are sometimes secret, but alwayes just: and if he once say, I will curse, yea that I will, there is as little hope of altering him, as there was of Pilate, when he had once pronounced, what I have written, I have written, It shall surely stand.

Judg. 5

because ye do not lay it to heart] As he had repeated their curse, so he doth here their sin; instancing in that branch of it that most offended him: and that was their stupidity and senselesnesse either of their sin, or danger. This is a God-provoking evill, oft complain'd of, but especially when it proceeds from presumption, as Deut. 29. 19. Esay 22. 12, 13, 14. Ezek. 24. 13. The Lord cannot satisfie himself in threatening such: as if the very naming of it had enraged his jealousy: neither is he more absolute in threatening, then he will be resolute in punishing.

Verse 3. Behold, I will corrupt your seed] And so mar your hopes of an harvest: I will bring famine upon you, that sore judgement, worse then that of the sword, which yet is the slaughter-house of mankind, and the very hell of this present world. By this scourge God will tame his prodigals, and starve their bodies; who by the contempt of his ordinances starve their own soules. Either by immoderate drought God can cause a famine, Joel 1. 10. Or by immoderate moisture, Verse 17. The seed rotting under the clods &c. to revenge the quarrel of his covenant. Israel was plagued with famine for breaking their faith with the Gibeonites. What may they expect that keep not touch with God? David knew that the naturall cause of that famine was drought: but he enquired (though, 'twere long first) after the supernaturall. As Jacob enquired who stood on the top of the ladder and sent the Angels to and fro? so must we in case of publike calamities, ascend, to the top of them, and see who sends them, and what is the cause of them, that we may cast the traitours head over the wall, and he may return and repent and leave a blessing behind him. For till then, we may look that he should cut off our provision and victualls, as wise Princes use to do from their rebels whom they have gotten up into a walled town.

Lam. 4. 9.

Hag. 1. 4.

2 Sam. 21. 1.

Gen. 28. 13.

and spread dung upon your faces] cast contempt upon you, and cover you with confusion: make you to stink above ground, so that men shall shun and abhor your company. This is another fruit of sin, and piece of the curse: and many wicked men are more afraid of it, then of the sin that causeth it: as Chareas in Terence not ashamed to deflower a virgin, was yet ashamed to be seen in an Eunuchs habit the signe of that sin. True it is, that the best may have dung cast into their faces, as St. Paul and his precious companions had 1 Cor. 4. 13. We are filth of the world, and the offscouring of all things. The later word signifieth the dung-cart that goes thorough the city, into which every one brings and casts his filth: to note, that every foole had some filth to cast upon those Worthies of whom the world was not worthy. And truly all publike persons that are faithfull to their trust, had need carry a spare handkerchief to wipe off dirt and drivell: which yet many times will hardly stick, as dirt will not upon marble, though it will upon a mud-wall. The wise shall inherit glory: when shame shall be the promotion of foolles Pro. 3. 35. A fair promotion: but good enough for them, unlesse they were better. If the precious sons of Zion comparable to fine gold, be at any time esteemed as earthen pitchers as Lam. 4. 2. or trodden in the dirt by the fat bulls of Basan, God will in due time make all his that have laine sullied and flurred among the pots, to become as the wings of a dove covered with silver, and her feathers with pure gold Psal. 68. 13. In the mean while, they have the Edge of a good conscience, which is better then the worlds Plaudie. But profane and profligate persons with their spiritual nastinesse and superfluity of naughtinesse, stink worse then these cities of the plaine in the nostrils of God and all good men, whiles they live, (according to that, The name of the wicked shall rot, And again, Pro. 10. 7. &c. He that perverteth his wayes shall be known.) And when they dye they shall be carried carried thorough the dung-gate of death, to the town-ditch of utter destruction. At which time, that in Iob shall be verified of them, Though his excellency mount up to the heavens, and his head reach unto the clouds, yet he shall perish for ever like his own dung: they which have seen him (in his flourish) shall say, Where is he? Let those dehonestamenta Cleri look to this; all idle and evill Ministers, who as unfavoury salt are fit for no place but the dung-hill, even to be buried in a dung-hill, as Bishop Bonner was, and (mean-while) to be trodden under foot, which is a thing not only calamitous, but extremely ignominious. Mat. 5. 13.

Ech. 1. 1.

Iob. 20. 6, 7.

even the dung of your solemn feasts] i. e. for the iniquity of your most solemn services, which you have slubber'd over and made to stink, I will make you also abject and abominable: as the dung of sacrifices offered in great number on festivall dayes, was carried into some by-corner, and set out of sight. And here it is remarkable that God calleth the solemn feasts their solemn-feasts, as if they had been none of his: he would not own them. So Ier. 7. 21. in scorn he calles their sacrifices flesh, ordinary flesh, such as was bought and sold in the shambles. And Hos. 9. 4. he calleth the same sacrifices, their bread for their soule, or for their naturall sustenance, and saith it shall not come into his house. And yet he speaks there of that meat-offering Lev. 2. 5. appointed by God himself for a spirituall use, which is neverthelesse called the bread for their life, or livelyhood: because God esteemed it no other then common meat. In a like sense it was, that after the people of Israel had set up the golden calf, God would own them no longer, but fathers them upon Moses: Behold thy people, saith He to Moses, whom thou broughtest out of Egypt &c. Exod. 32. 7. David also, when he had sinned in numbring the people, was counted and called but plain David, Go and say to David &c. 2 Sam. 24. 12. whereas before that, when he purposed to build the Lord a Temple &c. then it was, Go tell my servant David &c. The Saints themselves, when they sin against God, are in a sort suspended from the covenant. Therefore it is usuall with them, when they seek the Lord for any speciall mercy, to begin with humbling themselves, and taking pains with their own hearts, as David, Daniel, Ezra, &c.

2 Sam. 7.

Verse. 4. And ye shall know that I have sent &c.] That is, ye shall know by wofull experience: your punishment shall advertise you: the curse appendent to the commandement shall teach you as Gideon taught the men of Succoth sc. with thorns and briers of the wilderness, Jud. 8. 16. and as David taught the children of Ammon better behaviour, by making them passe thorough the brick-kilne, 2 Sam. 12. 31 and as the Phrygians wax not wise, unlesse they be beaten to it, when Gods judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness Isai. 26. 9. Smart makes wit, and vexation giveth understanding. Ehuds ponyard was a message from God; who as he is said to hold his peace when he punisheth not Psal. 50. 21. Esay 42. 14. so to preach and teach when he doth Esay 28. 19. his scourges are mens school-masters διδασκαλοι αμαρτιων, One calls them, Gods free-school-masters, curstand crabbed enough, but such as whereby he openeth mens ears to discipline, and commandeth them to return from iniquity: Then he sheweth them their work, and their transgressions that they have exceeded, that they have slighted the commandement which he had sent them, and that now he would plead with them another way, sc. with patience, and with blood, Ezek. 38. 22. and so would cause them to passe under the rod, that thereby he might bring them into the bond of the covenant, purging out the rebels, and them that transgress, Ezek. 20. 37, 38. God should have no tribute from men (as those Malignants suggested against the returned captives, Ezra 4. 13. if he did not make them know his breach of promise Num. 14. 34. if he did not break covenant with them that first play false with him, and keep no condition on their part required. See 2 Chron. 15. 2. and when thou art making a covenant with sin, say to thy soul, as Boaz said to his kinsman Ruth 4. 4. At what time thou buyest it, thou must have Ruth with it. If thou wilt have the pleasure of sin, the wages of wickednesse, thou must also have the curse &c. and let thy soul answer as he there doth, No, I may not do it, I shall mar and spoil a better inheritance. Polanus and others dislike the reading of this text in the future tense ye shall know that I have sent this commandment, and tell us that the scope of the Prophecy requires,

Judg. 3. 20.

Iob 36. 8, 9, 10.

quires, that it be read in the present tense thus, Nam citis, For ye do know that I have sent &c. You know your dignity and duty as Priests: and yet ye wilfully crosse your own knowledge and conscience. Knowledge is a divine gift: it is the great talent of all other: there is a (much) set upon it, Luk. 12.48. there is a special depositum in it, as the word there used importeth. To know heavenly things is to ascend into heaven saith Agur Prov. 30. 4. But as the devil (that knowing creature, that hath his name in Greek from the largeness of his objective knowledge) was once an Angel of light till he fell from his dignity, Jud. 6. so those that corrupt themselves in that they know Jude. 10. that imprison the light they have (as a prophet from God) in unrighteousness: that know the commandment sent from God, as here, and yet after that they have known the way of righteousness, do turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them, the latter end will be worse with those men than the beginning 2 Pet. 2.20,21. they have but aspired to an higher pitch that their fall might be the more desperate. Neronis illud, Quantus artifex perco quadrabit in te peritum & periturum saith One. Thou doest but carry Utri h's letters about thee to thine own utter destruction. Thou maist go to hell with much knowledge in thy head: as a bull with a coronet and garland goes to the slaughter. Thou mayest also, for this one fault meet with an hell aforehand in thine own conscience, as Spiradid; crying out to those about him, to learn of him to take heed of severing knowledge and practise. What else was it that brought such mourning and troubles both inward and outward on those Esay 59.11,12. and that when salvation was looked for? Our iniquities, say they, testify to our faces, and we know it. All sins offend conscience: but sins against knowledge waste and destroy it. A dangerous degree, drawing neer that sin to which sacrifice is denyed. For sins against the law, though against knowledge, there was an attonement, Levit. 6. 1. to the 8. and he instanteth in perjury. But to persecute the known truth with malice, for this there's no sacrifice.

Vos probe cognitum habetis &c. Polan. μαρτυρο.

δ δαίμων quasi δαίμων

Rom. 1.18.

Heb. 19. 26.

that my covenant might be with Levi] Levi did not thrust himself into the Priesthood: but was taken by God into special covenant. See Num. 3.13,14. 1 Sam. 2.28. Heb. 5.4. No man taketh this honour unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron. Or if he do he shall smoke and smart for it, as Saul, Veziah and others: no man might come uncalled to the king of Persia, upon pain of death: much lesse to the King of heaven, as Kore and his complices, whom God hath hanged up in gibbets, as it were, for example to all bold intruders upon that tremend function of the Ministry. Men out of office are not sent of God, therefore they may not preach though gifted men Rom. 10.15. with Esay 52.8. All that are in office to preach are Apostles, Evangelists, Prophets, Pastours or Teachers Eph. 4.11. Elders onely my preach Tit. 1.5. And the contrary would prevent, the Apostle willeth that in the Church all things be done decently and in order, which could not be if all were teachers: for then there would be no distinction of Ministers and people. But Are all teachers? saith the Apostle 1 Cor. 12.29. And he answers himself, No, but onely those whom God did set, verse 13. like as he set apart the tribe of Levi, to execute the Priests office: which whiles Corah, Dathan and Abiram sought to impugne, and level, they went quick into the pit Num. 16.30. Meddle not therefore without a calling; that in the day of Gods displeasure you may appeal unto him with Jeremy, and say, As for me I have not hastened or thrust in myself for a Pastour after thee: neither have I desired the woful day, thou knowest: that which came out of my lipps was right before thee. And being able safely to say this, thou mayest binde upon it, that God who is in covenant with all his Levites, his faithful Ministers, will be their shield and their exceeding great reward, how ever the world deal with them.

1 Cor. 14.4.

Jer. 17.16.

Verse 5. My covenant was with him of life and peace] Now Gods covenant (saith an expositor here) is of four sorts.

1. General made with all creatures Gen 9.2.
2. With the Church in general Gen. 17.
3. With the Church of the Elect Jer. 31.33.
4. With some particulars of some special graces, as here with Levi, of life and peace. So then to ministers (above others) hath the Lord bound himself by special covenant to be their mighty Protector, and rewarder: to give them life and peace

Jer. 45. 5.
Gen. 45. 26.

2 Chron. 34.
28.
Hieron.

Ren. 1.

Esay 56. 2
Eccles. 5. 12.

Psal. 37. 37.

peace] that is, long life and prosperous. See Num. 25. 12, 13. Life of it self, though pestered with many miseries, is a sweet mercy, and highly to be prized. Better is a living dog then a dead lion, Eccles. 9. 4. And why is the living man sorrowful, a man for the punishment of his sins? Lam. 3. 39. As who should say, let a man suffer never so much, yet if he be suffered to live, he hath cause to be contented. It is the Lords mercy he is not consumed. When Baruc sought great things for himself, Jeremy tels him he may be glad (in those dear years of life, when the arrows of death came so thick whisking by him) that he had his life for a prey. Jacob took more comfort of his son Josephs life, then of his honour. Joseph is yet alive &c. Quis vitam non vult? saith Austin, who is it that desires not life? When David moveth the question, what man is he that desireth life, and loveth many dayes, that he may see good? Austin brings in every man answering I do, and I do. Long life and happy dayes is every mans desire. If God give these blessings to thole that are gracelesse, it is by vertue of a providence onely, and not of a promise, and that's nothing so comfortable; life in Gods displeasure is worse then death, said that Martyr, if wicked men live long, it is that they may make up the measure of their sins; and by heaping up sin, increase their torment. If godly men die soon, God taketh them away from the evil to come: as when there is a fire in an house or town, men secure their Jewels: And though they fall in wars, yet they die in peace, as good Josiah did: who also in brevi vite spacio tempora virtutum multa replevit, lived quickly, lived apace, lived long in a little time. For life consists in action Esay 38. 15, 16. The Hebrews call running water living water. Now Gods faithful Ministers, if they work hard, and so wear out themselves to do good to others, (as a lamp wasteth it self to give light, or as that herb mentioned by Pliny, that cures the patient but rots the hand that administreth it) if like clouds they sweat themselves to death to bring souls to God, yet shall they be sure to finde it a blessed way of dying: they shall more vitaliter die to live for ever. God will not send any of his to bed, till they have done their work. The two witnesses could not be slain, till their testimony was finished. No malice of man can antedate their ends a minute. The dayes of mourning for my father will come said Esau, and then I kill my brother Jacob, Gen. 27. 41. Here Esau, that rough reprobate, threateneth his father also, as Luther conceiveth. For it is as if he should have said, I will be avenged by being the death of my brother: though it be to the breaking of my fathers heart. But what's the proverb? Threatened folk live long: for even Isaac who died soonest, lived above forty yeers beyond this. My times are in thy hands saith David, and that's a safe hand; And blessed be God that Christ liveth and reigneth, alioqui totus desperassem, or else I had been in ill case, said Miconius in a letter of his to Calvin. Ministers are stars in Christs right hand, and it will be hard pulling them thence; They must carry their lives in their hands, and be ready to lay them down, when it may be for the glory of their Master: but they shall be sure not to dye (whether by a natural or by a violent death) till the best time; not till that time when, if they were but rightly informed, they would desire to die. But whether their death be a burnt-offering (of Martyrdome) or a peace-offering, (whether they die in their beds as Elisha, or be carried to heaven in a fiery chariot as Eliab) let it be a free-will-offering, and then it shall be a sweet sacrifice to him who hath covenanted with them for life and peace. They shall by death, as by a door of hope, enter into peace, they shall rest in their beds, yea, in Abrahams bosome: and as the sleep of the labouring man is sweet unto him, whether he eat little or much: so heaven shall be so much the more heaven to such as have here had their purgatory. Mark the upright man, saith holy David, and behold the just, for (how troublesome soever his beginning and middle is) the end of that man is peace.

and I gave them to him] Here's the performance of Gods covenant to Levi and his posterity. God doth not pay his promises with fair words onely, as Sertorius is said to do: Neither is he like Antigonus Adow (ignominiously so called, because) forward in promising, slack in performing. But as he hath hitherto kept promise with nights and dayes, Jer. 33. 20, 25. that one should succeed the other, so much more doth he keep promise with his people: for as his love moved him to promise, so his truth bindeth him to perform. See both these together,

2 Sam.

2 Sam. 18, 21. For thy words sake, and according to thine own heart hast thou done all these things. According to thine own heart, that is, of thine own meer motion; out of pure and unexcited love thou didst give thy word and promise: and for thy words sake hast thou performed it. There was nothing in Aaron or his seed that God should make his special covenant with him of life and peace. His rod was as dry and dead as any of the rest, til God made it to blossom. But when God had once passed his promise, and so made himself a voluntary debtor, he failed not to perform it to him and his. Aaron himself lived one hundred & three years, Phineas three hundred, as it is thought, and as some Chronologers do observe. Joshua the son of Josedeck lived (according to Helvicius) 110 years in the office of the high-priest-hood.

To these and others was expressly fulfilled a Covenant of life and peace: and God would have been ready to have performed it to these to whom Malachy prophecieth, had not themselves hindred. For they like men (or like Adam) transgressed the covenant: Or (as Junius and Tremellius read it) not tantum homines, Hof. 6. 7, but tantum hominis, they made no more of breaking it, then if they had had to do with dust and ashes like themselves, and not with the great God. Remember them, O my God, saith good Nehemiah concerning these covenant-breakers, because they have defiled the priest-hood, and the covenant of the Priest-hood and of the Levites. Nch. 13. 29 for the fear wherewith he feared me, &c. That is, the good priests did so, the bad did otherwise: but God reckons of men by their righteousness. and this was the stipulation, or the condition on the priests part performed: for in a covenant both parties undertake to do somewhat. As in the general covenant of grace, God promiseth to be the God of his people, that is, an universal good, All-sufficient, satisfactory, and every way proportionable and fitting to their souls. And they (interchangeably) promise to be his people; that is, to bestow themselves wholly upon him with highest estimation, most vigorous affections, and utmost endeavours, giving up their names and hearts to the profession of his truth. So that when he cries out, Who is on my side? Who? one saies, I am the Lords: another calls himself by the name of Jacob: another subscribes, &c. Semblably in this particular covenant with the tribe of Levi, God promised them life and peace; and they assured him of fear and humility. Fear is an affection of the soul shrinking in it self from some imminent evil. Hereof there are three sorts, natural, carnal and spiritual. Elij. 44. 5

The first is not to be disliked, if it do not degenerate into the second. The next is a base fear of the creature more then of the Creator, who is God blessed for ever. The third is nothing else but an awful respect to the Divine Majesty. Spiritual fear we called it in respect,

1. Of the Author of it, Gods holy Spirit, called therefore, A Spirit of knowledge, and of the fear of the Lord.

2. Of the object of it, The Father of Spirits, who is therefore, by an Appellative proper, called Fear, Ps. 76. 11.

3. Of the effect, which is to spiritualize both us and our services: and was therefore fitly vowed to God by those of the spirituality that stood before him continually, and were to be exact in their whole deportment, at their peril: God is of purer eyes then to behold evil. He cannot look on iniquity in any, Hab. 1. 13. Moses and Aaron among his priests, and Samuel among them that call upon his name: They called upon the Lord, and he answered them: he forgave their iniquities: howbeit he took vengeance of their inventions. Psal. 99. 8. He met Moses in the Inne and had much ado to forbear killing him Exod. 4. 44. And for Aaron, when, (together with Miriam) he murmured against Moses, and Miriam was thereupon smitten with leprosie, Aaron was spared, not so much for the honour of the Priest-hood (as Chrysostom gives the reason, but because of the feare wherewith he feared the Lord, and his humiliation that followed upon that fear.

for he was afraid before Gods name] Or, as others better render this text, Propter nomen meum humiliatus est, He was amazed, affrighted, humbled because of my name, he withdrew himself (so some render it) or threw himself out of doores, as Peter did into alone place where he might fowce himself in the salt tears of godly sorrow

H h h

forrow

Διὰ τὸ φόβον
τοῦ ὀνόματος
ἐμῆς Πολων.
Conturbatur
Consternatur
ἐμβάδων
Mar. 14. 72.

sorrow. Or, he shrunk and shriveld up, and so testified the trouble of his mind by the horror of his body. Horripilatus est, his heart fell down, his hair stood upright. See Psal. 119. 53, & 120. His humiliation was deep, and down-right, soaking and sowing his heart, Psal. 73. 21. The word here used is passive, but Levi his humiliation was active: he was not humbled onely, but humble; low, but lowly: he knew that no sacrifice could be accepted, but that which was laid on the low altar of a contrite heart, which sanctifies the sacrifice.

Verse 6. The law of truth was in his mouth] Hitherto hath been set forth what the Priests of old were for their own particular, and as private persons: they were not high-minded but feared God. Now as Pulpit-men and publike Teachers, they have here a four-fold commendation. And first, that Truth was their study and trade: they were expert in it, and had an excellent faculty in communicating their conceptions of it to others; so that if they did but open their mouthes almost, it was a sermon: they had a ready and easie way of discourse, an holy volubility and dexterity of delivering themselves to the benefit of others: as the law of God was in their hearts, so their mouthes spake wisdom, and their tongues talked of judgement, Psal. 37. 30, 31. Out of the good treasure of their hearts they could throw forth at pleasure good things, for the edification of others: yea, like full clouds, they willingly distilled, and like full paps they were in pain till eated of their milk. Neither medled they onely with toothlesse truths, lest themselves should be left toothlesse, (as One said, Truth is a good mistresse, but he that followeth her too close at heels, shall have his teeth struck out) as Balaam bad Balaam neither curse nor blesse at all: and as the Papists were wont to say, Missa non morder, the Masse biteth no man: But they held, that truth must be spoken however it be taken: and abhorred to be looked upon as the devils dirt-dawbers, and upholsters, to dawb with untempered mortar, or to sowe pillows under their elbowes. They affected rather to be stiled (as Arrianus the Historian was) φιλαλῆδεις, Lovers of Truth, plain-dealers: and, as it is reported of Snetorius, they took the same liberty to cry down sinne, that men did to commit it. Elian tells us that the High-priest among the Egyptians wore about his neck a Saphir-stone, which was called ἀλήθεια, Truth. This was but an apish imitation of Aarons Urin and Thummim, i. e. light of truth, and integrity of life. Mercuries Priests were wont to feed upon figs, and then to say, γλυκεία ἡ ἀλήθεια, Truth is sweet. It is so indeed to those that have their senses exercised to discern good and evil. But most men cannot brook down-right truth: the hearing of it galls them, as they write of some creatures, that they have fel in aure, their gall in their ears. Hence Truth breeds hatred, and plain-dealing is generally disgusted: it is bitter in the stomacks of those that hear it, though sweet in the mouth of those that utter it, Rev. 10. 9. Micaiab would not budge, or be bafe in his errand to Ahab, though he were sure to kisse the stocks for his stoutnesse. Azariah the high-Priest withstood king Uzziah to his face, and put him out of the Temple. Which whiles Uriah did not, but wickedly complied with idolatrous Ahaz, in making and setting up the altar of Damascus, 2 King. 16. 11, 16. he is branded with a black-cole for a court-parasite, and shall be infamous to all posterity. His contemporary Esay was of another spirit, and fulfilled after God. (as it is said of Caleb) He kept the law of truth in his mouth, and rolled it as sugar under his tongue, though he suffered for it. For (as Hierom tells us) he was sawn asunder by his wicked countrey-men, for two causes. First, because he said he had seen the Lord. Secondly, because he called the great Ones of Judah, Princes of Sodom, and Rulers of Gomerrah, Quintilian saith of Vespasian the Emperour, that he was patientissimus veri, very patient of truth, though it never so much touched him. But not many such to be met with. Asa though otherwise a good Prince, yet fell out grievously with Gods Prophet, for his plain-dealing, and layed him by the heels. Queen Elizabeth dealt little better with a Bishop that had in a zealous Sermon admonished her to think on her last end, by reason of her great age, which few Princes had attained unto, and of the Clymaſtericall year of her life, which happened at that time. The Bishop had the Queens Apoge, but Gods Engage. And so shall all Truths-Chaplains have, however the world entertain them. Wisdom shall be justified of her children, and God will see to their safety, modo videntur quæ sentiunt, so they shew men all the counsel of God, and keep back nothing, that they have in charge to deliver.

Ezek 13.10

Ed libertate
scripsit Imperatorum vitas
qua ipsi vixe-
runt.

Lib. ult. hist.
Exod. 28.30

Heb. 5. ult.

Implevit post
me. Num. 14.
24.

Hier. in Isa. 1.
ex Rabbin.

The Newlan-
ders cure by Sr. Wil. Vaugh.

Art. 20, 25, 27

and iniquity was not found in his lips] Heb. Crossenesse or Crookednesse: Chaldee, No falsenesse. He did not preach distorted doctrines that produce convulsions of conscience, as those Seducers did Act. 20. 30. He did not handle the word of God deceitfully, or fraudulently, as those deceitfull workers did 2 Cor. 11. 13. Neither did he broach errors, and writh from the right way for self-respects, setting his diall by that Sunn; 1 Thess. 2. 3. But being of a most masculine, disingaged, and noble spirit, that hath received the truth in the love of it, he will not be drawn to falsity or fault, to huckster the word, or handle it craftily and covetously: but as of sincerity, but as of God, in the sight of God &c. 2 Cor. 2. 17. Without mixture of errors, or humane inventions. Let Pharisees soure mens soules with their leaven of false doctrine. Let those Inhabitants of the Sea (as they are called Rev. 12. 12.) Popish Padres set abroach grosse, troubled, brackish Tenents which rather bring barrenesse to their hearers; and gnaw their bowels, then either quench thirst, or yeeld good fruit: He that feares God can pity poor soules made prize of by Sectaries and Seducers; and knowing that he that breaketh the least of Gods commandements and teacheth men so, shall be least in the kingdome of heaven Mat. 5. 19. (that is, nothing at all there Mat. 20. 16.) he hateth every false way with David: and takes care that no iniquity be found in his lips.

he walked with me in peace and equity] i. e. He kept constant correspondency and communion with me, so that we never disagreed or differed. For can two walk together, and they not agreed? He was like-minded to me in all things, and observed my law in every point and part thereof. An high commendation and a necessary qualification in a minister, that he not only talk of God, but walk with him: and that not loosely and at all adventures, but stricktly and exactly, as a pattern of the rule, as a transcript of his own sermon, ne verba factis deficientibus erubescant, lest his words blush for want of deeds accordingly: ne virtutis stragulum pudefaciat, lest he put honesty to an open shame, as Antipater did, when being vitious he wore a white cloke, the ensigne of innocency: lest his life gives his lips the lye, as it fared with those Pharisees that said and did not Mat. 23. 3. The foolish Virgins were found with their Sic dicentes so saying, but the faithfull servants shall be found with their Sic facientes so doing. And when men come to give account, it shall be enquired non quid legerint, sed quid egerint non quid dixerint, sed quomodo vixerint, not what they have taught others, but what they have practised themselves. Origens preaching and living were said to be both one. Quod iussit & gessit. So did Mr. Bucer, whom his friends could never sufficiently praise: nor his foes in any point find fault with his singular life and sincere doctrine. Tertull.

and did turn away many from iniquity] The effect of his unspeakable labours and unblameable life was conversion of soules, and those not a few. God sometimes gives a Pastour after his own heart to such places, where he takes but one of a city, or two of a family. Ier. 3. 14, 15. Quod si decimus quisque, si unus persuasus fuerit &c. saith Chrysostom. If one in ten be gained, nay if one of ten thousand be turned from iniquity, it is a great mercy. Nay (saith He) say that none be converted, the faithful Minister that indeavours their conversion, though he effect it not, non minus premii, shall have no lesse reward, then if he had prevailed for their conversion. Some good Divines think he shall have more then those that do convert; because they have premium ante premium, that which may encourage them in Gods work: but he does his utmost amidst all discouragement. Well may Ephraim love to tread out the corn, because while he treads, he seeds on the corn: but to beare and draw, to plow and work, where no refreshing was to be had till the work was done, this that delicate heifer cared not to doe. But he is an happy man that hath any hand in turning men from iniquity, though fruit, for present, appear not. The new birth of some is like the birth of the Elephant, foureteen years after the seed injected into the womb. And that divine Proverb is not seldome verified, One soweth, and Another reapeth. The Ministry is Gods arme to gather people into his bosom: and the weapons of our warfare are mighty thorough God 2 Cor. 10. 4. Surely as the rain commeth down and the snow from heaven &c. Esay 55. 10, 11. And as the rain from heaven hath a farnesse with it, and a speciall influence more then standing water: so hath preaching more then reading. Howbeit there may be fruit and yet invisible, as in Elias his time. And that which doth not yet appear, may hereafter, when the day of visitation comes. See Iob 33. 14. &c. God may have much people in the city, and Paul, for the present, not know so much. A master doth not use to set up a light, but there is some work to be done by it: and seldome doth he send his servants afield with their siths, to mow thistles only. Let Gods faithfull witnesses prophesie out their 1260. dayes: bending themselves to that office incessantly, being instant in season, and out of season, and turning themselves, as it were, into all shapes and fashions, both of speech, and of spirit, to turn people from iniquity: and then God will be with the good, as that Prophet speaks in another case. The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life: and he that winneth souls, is wise Prov. 11. 30. Say he cannot win as he would, but labour all night and take nothing, yet he shall be paid for his paines: as the Physitian is, though the patient dye. Curam exigens, non curationem, saith Bern. It is the care, not the cure of your charge that is charged upon you. You may speak perswasively, but it is God only that can perswade Japhet to dwell in the tents of Sem: Paul may plant &c. but God only giveth the increase. You shall be held wise, and shine as stars in heaven, whether you win soules or not. As there are diversity of gifts, so of operations 1 Cor. 12. 6. and the Holy Ghost may and doth work when and how he pleaseth: but usually he delights to honour those of most sincerity, with most successe as 1 Cor. 15. 10.

Verse 7. For the Priests lips should keep knowledge How else should he be instant in lip-feeding? how should his lips present it, unlesse they preserve it? How should he wise others, unlesse he be wise himself? The Pope brags of an infallibility, and pleads this Text for it: avouching, that he knowes all things knowable, and hath all wisdom and skill lockt up in scrinio pectoris, in the cabinet of his breast. But what will they say of sundry of their Popes that have been manifest hereticks? John the 23. was accused in the Councell of Constance, for denying the Resurrection of the body, and everlasting life. And of all their Popes we may safely say as the Venetian Embassadors did: when the Pope laid his hand upon his breast and said, Hic est Arca Noe, Lo here is Noahs Ark (meaning that he was the Church virtually, and was enriched in all knowledge and in all utterance) One of them presently replied, that in Noahs Ark there were unclean beasts, as well as clean: and so left him further to apply. The Priests lips indeed should keep knowledge. But those of Malachi his times, had forsaken the way, and caused many to stumble ver. 8. How this was we shall see when we come to it. Meane-while, we may take notice, that non libro sacerdotis, sed labro, non codice, sed corde, conservatur scientia: knowledge should be kept, not in the Priests book, but in his bosom, as a storehouse: neither should it lye low or long there, but sit upon his lips, that all may have benefit by it. For the manifestation of the spirit is given to profit withall. 1 Cor. 12. 7. And it was death for the Priest to enter into the sanctuary without his golden bells about him, that he might be heard by all. A minister must be both able and apt to teach. Predicationis officium suscipit quisquis ad sacerdotium accedit, saith Gregory. Hee's no minister, that's no preacher. Nor can he be a Preacher, that is not stored with knowledge of Gods Will, and peoples duty. See Mat. 13. 32. with the Note. Walter surnamed Malclerk was surely no fit man to be Bishop of Carlisle; as he was by evil and corrupt meanes Anno. Dom. 1223. If the blind lead the blind both will fall into the ditch Mat. 15. 14. but the blind guides will lye lowermost, and have the worst of it. Varro complained of the Roman priests, that they were ignorant of many things about their own rites and Religions. Mucius Scaevola (being their High-Priest) derived Pontifex of Posse & facere. This derivation pleased not Varro: but it intimated that such should both be able and active to teach the people knowledge. It was a witty observation of a Bishop who (was called in his time the gulf of learning) that Doces to teach governs two accusative cases: according to that Esay 28. 9. Whom shall I teach knowledge? Ministers, saith He, must have whom to teach, & what to teach, viz. knowledge; and must therefore give attendance to reading, that they may the better to exhortation and doctrine. 1 Tim. 4. 13. that they may feed the people with knowledge and understanding.

and

Aft. 18. 10.

Rev. 11. 3.

2 Chron. 19.

Dan. 12. 3.

Σύδναμνος
Greg. Pastor.

Vives in Aug. de civ. Dei lib.
4. cap. 1.
Pompon. Lat. de Rom. Sa-
cerdot.
B. Andr.

Ier. 3. 15.

And they should seek the law at his mouth] as at an oracle; they should depend upon the ministry, as the people hung upon our Saviours lips, Luk. 19. ult. as David went into the Sanctuary to be resolved of his doubt Psal. 73. though himself were a prophet: and as Cornelius was appointed by the Angel, to send for Peter, for further information. But what must men seek at the Ministers mouth? The law, the sincere milk of Gods word, the minde of Christ, the testimony of Jesus, non nugas & fabulas, saith Bernard, not trifles and fables, not strong lines, and strains of wit, but the simple and plain words of God. Non Oratorum filii sumus sed Piscatorum, said Nazianzen. Ministers are not to study so much to please as to profit, to tickle mens ears, as to work upon their hearts. They must not so paint the window as to keep out the light: nor so put the sword of the spirit into a velvet scabberd, that it cannot prick and pierce the hearts. Let them handle, and set out the Law as skillfully, and adornedly as they can: but still remember, that it must be dispensed, sancitè magis quàm scitè, solide potius quàm floridè, with fear and reverence, rather then with wit and dalliance. If in King Edward the fourths dayes a citizen in Cheap-side was executed as a traitour for saying he would make his son heire to the crown, (though he onely meant his own house having a crown for the signe) more dangerous it must needs be to witwanton it with the Majesty of God, Loquamur verba scripturæ, utamur sermone spiritus sancti &c. Let us speak scripture-language, let us use the speech of the holy spirit, and not go about to correct the divine wisdom and eloquence with our sophistry and vain-babbling. To the ears of that which Saint Peter calls the hid man of the heart, the plain-song alwayes makes the best musick: If heaven door may be opened to it by a key of iron, it cares not for a key of gold. A sermon works not upon the heart as it is thus elegant or admirable, but as well fraught with testimonies of holy scripture. (that most powerful Rhetorick) it is an instrument of God appointed to such an end. Let the people hear often, Thrs. is the law, this is ipsissimum Dei verbum, the very word of God; Shew scripture for what you deliver, and that will carry it. But ut drachmam auri sine imagine principis, sic verba hortantis sine autoritate Dei contemnunt homines. The Law carrieth a Majesty in it: and if Tully durst say that the law of the twelve tables did exceed all the Libraries of Philosphers, both in weight of authority, and worth of matter, how much rather is this true of the Law of God? Wherefore as Eschines said of an Oratours, so let a ministers discourse, and the Law be unisons: and let the people ask the Priests concerning the law, as they did Haggee 2. 11. and not be like tidlings, that will not eat their milk unlesse it be in a silver-dish: but account it a singular happinesse to live under those lips (how thick soever, a thin lip is a signe of eloquence Job. 12. 20.) which both keep knowledge, and utter it.

for he is the messenger of the Lord of Hosts] Heb. the Angel (See the Note on Chap. 1. 1.) and so the Septuagint and Vulgar render it. His office is as to stand before God and praise Him, so to carry messages from him to his people, and to be in his stead, 2 Cor. 5. 20. Knowest thou not, (saith Chrysostom) who the Minister is? He is Gods Angel: he speaketh not of himself, if thou despisest, thou despisest not him, but God that sent him. And to the same purpose Ambrose: The minister is Gods Angel to set forth the kingdom of Christ and eternal life: non specie tibi assignandus sed munere; he is not therefore to be judg'd of by his outside; but by his office. Those Sodomites that sought to abuse the Angels, are thrown forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire, Iude 7. Behold, Christ himself hath assured us that Sodomy it self is not an heavier sin, nor more severely punished in hell, then the dispising or abusing of a Minister in the faithfull discharge of his duty. We should therefore welcome such with trembling, as the men of Bethlehem did Samuel, and as Cornelius did Peter; Commeest thou peaceably? said the Bethlemites, as suspecting the purpose of some judgement. Now therefore are we all here present before God (not onely before thee, said Cornelius) to hear all things that are commanded thee of God. If Ahab had been like-well-affected as these good souls, he would never have asked Elijah that absurd question, Art thou he that troubleth Israel? Alas what had the righteous Prophet done more than what by his office (as Gods Ambassadour or Messenger) he was bound to do? he taxed their sin, he foretold the judgement: he deserved it not, he inflicted it not: yet he smarts, and they are guilty. As if some fond people should accuse the Herald, or the trumpet, as the

1 Pet. 2. 2.

1 Cor. 2.

2 Cor. 1.

Lib. 1 de Consider.

Speed

Pet. Ramus

1 Pet. 3.

Lipsius.

χρὴ τὸ αὐτὸ
φθέρῃ γὰρ τὸ
ἐν τοῖς ὕψι
νόμον.

Hom. 2. in ep.

2. ad Tim.

Lib. de intand cap. 2.

ἀποκρίσεις

AR. 10. 33.

cause of their war : Or as some ignorant peasant, when he sees his fowles bathing in his pond, should cry out of them, as the causes of foule weather. Saith a Divine It is a good thing to stand in awe of Gods Angels, and with reverence to receive their message howsoever distastful unto us ; considering they are but messengers.

Verse 8. But ye are departed out of the way] Heb. from that way, viz. that good old way of your progenitours : you are nothing like Levi, but are wofully degenerated from the practise of your Predecessours, and have swerved from your fathers foot-steeps : though ye have the same place, and enjoy the same priviledges. This is a foul fault and condemned even by the Heathen Sages. Seneca tells us with indignation, that Socrates his sons were more like their mother, a froward woman, then their father the wisest of men : according to that, saying, Partus sequitur ventrem, the birth follows the belly. Young Cassius was for his intemperancy, and excesse in drinking surnamed Tricongius. Catigula, that monster, was the son of Noble Germanicus. But we have scripture instances not a few. Not to speak of Eli his sons, and of Samuels, Salomon degenerates from his father David who had carefully taught him better Prov. 4. 4. and so had his mother Prov. 31. (which one calls Bathsheba's Catechisme, another Lemuels lesson) Iehoram is taxed for his not walking in the wayes of his father Iehoshaphat, and his Grandfather Asa, as if there had been no intervention of an Hezekiah. Ionathan the son of Gershom the son of Manasseh that Idolatrous Priest mentioned Iud. 18. 30. is thought to have been the grandson of Moses : so the Hebrews tell us : and that therefore the Nun in Manasseh is suspended above the rest of the letters. Certain it is that Nabal the fool was of the line of faithful Caleb 1 Sam. 25. 3. to teach us, that vertue is not, as lands inheritable. All that is traduced with the seed is either evil, or not good. Grace is by gift, and not by descent. Hence that prayer of Dauids courtiers 1 King 1. 47. God make the name of Solomon better then thy name. Agreeable whereunto is Hectors prayer in, Homer for his son Πολύδης ὅζω πολλὸν ἀμείων I wish he may be a better man then his father. And that of Juvenal,

Heyonim filij notæ.

Buxtorf.

Malo pater tibi sit Ther sites, dummodo in sis

Æacida similis, Vulcaniaq; arma capessas,

Quam te Ther site similem producat Achilles.

ye have caused many to stumble at the law] Which is a very dangerous thing : like as it is to stumble on a bridge : A bridge is made to give us a safe passage over a dangerous river : but he who stumbles on the bridge is in no small danger to fall into the river. The word is given as a means to cary us over hell unto heaven : But he who stumbles at this means (as by snuffing at it Mal. 1. 13. chattering against it and contesting with it, as oft in this prophecy, casting reproaches upon it, Ier. 20. 8, 9. gathering odious consequences from it, Rom. 3. 8. &c.) shall fall in thither, from whence otherwise he had been delivered by it. This mischief many fell into, in Malachi his dayes, by the means of those ungodly Priests who either taught them not better, or otherwise drew them into sinful courses by their corrupt glosses, or leud practises. Evil examples of ministers have a strong influence upon their people : and the sins of Teachers are the teachers of sins : The leaders of this people have made them to erre Esay 9. Corruption commonly (as in a fish) begins at the head ; neq; solum obsunt Principes, quod illi ipsi corrumpuntur, sed etiam quod corrumpunt : plusquam exemplo quam peccato nocent, saith the Oratour : they that are in office do a great deal of mischief by encouraging others in evil, through their evil example. Jupiters adulteries drew the people to like wantonneffe. Magis inveniuntur quid facerit Jupiter quam quid docuit Plato, saith Austin ; They look more what Jupiter did, then what Plato taught. I have read of a woman, who living in professed doubt of the God-head, after better illumination and repentance, did often protest, that the vicious life of a great schollar in that town did conjure up those damnable doubts in her soul. In the time of Pope Clement the fifth, the Church was so ill governed, and things so corruptly carried at the court of Rome, that Frederick King of Sicily doubted much of the truth of the Christian religion : but Cicero.

Mr Wards
Serm.

was

was confirmed, and his minde better settled by Arnoldus de villa nova who shewed him, that Offences must come, but wo be to them by whom they come. A scandalous priest is a singular mischief: for he falls not alone, but (as when a main stone in a building, or a tall cedar falls) he draws many with him into fellowship of errors, and enormities: as did Hymenæus and Philetus, 2 Tim. 2. 18. and as the dragon with his long and strong tail, drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and threw them to the earth, Rev. 12. 4. When the Pastours become brutish, all the flocks are scattered, Isa. 10. 21.

Jacob. Rca. de vit Pont. p. 198.

ye have corrupted the covenant of Levi ] The covenant on Gods part with Levi was a covenant of salt, and could not be corrupted, Num. 18. 19. non commutabitur salsitas, saith Flaccius, it putrifieth not with age, or long standing: as that pillar of salt into which Levi wife was turned, and of which Josephus saith, that something of it was to be seen till his time. But these degenerate priests had abandoned Gods holy fear, they did not humble and tremble before his Name, as Levi their father had done, verse 5. they had falsified with God, and so forfeited his favour. It was with them as Cajetan complains, and confesses of the Popish priests; that whereas by their places they should have been the salt of the earth, they had lost their savour, and were good for little else, but looking after the rites and revenues of the Church: therefore God held himself dishonoured, and was resolved that they should bear the iniquity of their priesthood, Lev. 18. 1. that is, the punishment of their iniquity notwithstanding the priesthood. That should be no protection to them, but an aggravation: because they fell as if they had not been anointed: and were therefore the worse, because they should have been better. God holds himself not bound to perform covenant with them that break with him: for why should he give the childrens bread to dogs? why should he cast away his favours upon those that value them not? We have the Covenant, the Seals, the Ministry, &c. (and this is a singular happiness, Esay 19. 25. Assyria is the work of Gods hands, but Israel his inheritance.) But alas, are not these blessings amongst us as the Ark was among the Philistines, rather as prisoners, then as privileges? rather in testimonium & ruinam quam in salutem, for a testimony against us, and for our further ruine, then for our safety here, and salvation hereafter? O consider how God hath cast off the Israelites, notwithstanding his covenant with their fathers: and when in their necessity, they would have forced acquaintance with him, he would not look upon them, Judg. 10. 14. The sword hath broken in pieces those seven golden candlesticks in Asia, merely for their covenant-breaking. See the Note on verse 5.

Comment. Matth.

Ideo deteriores sumus quia meliores esse debemus Salvian.

Verse 9. Therefore have I also made you contemptible and base ] And so have cried quittance with you, and returned you your own with usury. God loves to retaliate, and to proportion jealousy to jealousy, provocation to provocation, Deut. 32. 21. forwardness to forwardness, Psal. 18. 26. contrariety to contrariety, Lev. 26. 18, 21. contempt to contempt, 1 Sam. 2. 30. and here. How these unworthy priests had slighted God, and exposed his Name and Service to contempt and obloquy, hath been before set forth sufficiently. And now it is come home to them. It was threatened before verse 3. (see the Notes there) and now it is executed. Graceless men are apt to imagine that God threateneth in terram only: and are ready, with those miscreants in the Gospel, to say, God forbid: we hope he will be better then his word, and not be so unmercifull as the Preachers would make him. They beleeve the predictions of Scripture, but as they beleeve the predictions of an Almanack, which saith, such a day will be rain, and such a day winde: men think it may come to passe, and it may be not. But shall God say the word, and not see it fulfilled? Is not his dicere, his facere? his word, his deed? Yea, doth he not sometimes, dicto citius, break out upon his enemies, as he did upon Nadab and Abihu, Nebuchadnezzar, Herod, &c. God had poured contempt already upon these degenerate priests. And the like he had threatened to those, Jer. 23. 40. See Mich. 3. 7. Zach. 13. 4. Ribera upon this Text bewailes the businesse in their Romish Clergy, now become despicable by reason of their evill manners. Petrarch complain'd long before, that the stench of that sink the Court of Rome was come up to heaven. Erasmus layed them open in their colours, and did them more mischief jocando, by his jeering and Marcidi.

rebaulde.
Parisiensf.

Heyl. Geog.
pag. 55.

and jesting at them, then Luther did stomachando, by dry blowes and invectives, as One well observeth. He made the world look up ( that had been long luld asleep ) and take notice of the truth of that which Chrysostom had long before discovered and lamented, Multi sacerdotes, & pauci sacerdotes, multi in nomine, pauci in opere. There are many Priests, and yet but few: many so in name, few so indeed. Fy on such rascall rebaulds said the excommunicated Barons in K. Johns time ( in their declaration ) concerning the Pope and his Cardinals, and yet they were no Protestants. No more are the Venetians: and yet how they slight their Pope ( who is now, like the cuckow in June, heard but not regarded by them ) is sufficiently manifested by their Manifesto's to the Christian world. In Biscany ( anciently Cantabria ) a province of Spaine, they admit no Bishops to come amongst them: such an hatred they have taken against that order of men. And when King Ferdinand came in progress thither, accompanied amongst others by the Bishop of Pampeluna, the people arose in armes, drove back the Bishop, and gathering all the dust on the which they thought he had trodden, flung it into the sea. What our Bishops did in Q. Maryes dayes we all know: that bloody Bonner especially, buried at length in a dunghill ( too good a grave for him. ) Sure it was an unhappy proverb that was then learnt, The Bishops foot hath trodden here. They are now utterly cashiered, and lye wrapt up in the sheet of shame for this very sin ( amongst others ) here charged upon these Priests, their dishonouring Gods great Name, his services, and servants. For it was come to that height of wickednesse amongst us, a little before the late troubles, as to cast odium in religionis Professores tanquam in adversarios, an evill report upon the professors of religion, as so many adversaries, as Bede saith the ancient Britains did immediately before their destruction by the Saxons. He that would not be an Arminian, was therefore accounted a practickall Puritan. He that was not for the jure divino of Episcopacy, was little better then a publike enemy. If the Ministry of England be under any abuses at present, as they are thorough the iniquity of the times, and the overflow of errors and Atheisme, let it serve to humble them for their desire of vainglory, and not seeking the honour that commeth from God onely Iob. 5. 44. let it also work in them a greater care to approve themselves to God, that they may be glorious in his eyes and to his people, who dare not but honour such as feare the Lord Psal. 15. 4. and have his Ministers in singular esteeme for their works sake. 1 Theff. 5. 13.

according as ye have not kept my wayes] q. d. your dignity is decayed, like as your duty hath been neglected: You are fallen out of the hearts of good people, and are aviled by all. Neither is it any wonder: for a vicious life breeds vileness of estimation: but vertue is a thousand escucheons. Hence that close connexion, If there be any vertue, if any praise Psal. 4. 8. this treads upon the heels of that as it were; followes it as close as the shadow doth the body. When Adam stood in innocency, the savage beasts did him reverence. And the same God which did at first put an awe of man in the fiercest creatures, hath stamped in the cruellest hearts a reverend respect to his own Image in his faithfull ministers, as in Saul to Samuel, Herod to Iohn Baptist, those gallants of Israel to that mad fellow, as they were pleased to call the Prophet that came to anoint Iehu: upon whose words ( as mad as they made of him ) they will presently adventure their lives, and change the crown. Gods Image ( as Gods name Psal. 111. 9. ) is holy and reverend: And they that would have good repute and report amongst men, must carefully keep ( or, as the word here used may be rendred ) watch Gods wayes. He shall have enow that will watch for his halting, and take any little occasion to revile him with open mouth, as Shimei did David, when he had declined Gods way. It is therefore excellent counsell that Solomon giveth, and worthy of all acceptation. Pro. 4. 25, 26, 27. Let thine eyes look right on: and let thine eyelids look straight before thee. Ponder the path of thy feet: and let all thy wayes be ordered aright. Turn not to the right hand, nor to the left: remove thy foot from evill. Lo, this is the ready road to honour and estimation, Do worthily in Ephrata, and so be famous in Bethlehem. Ruth 4. 11. Sic famam extendere factis Hoc virtutis opus. But those Balaams that perswaded by their Balacks, seek for honour honour by evill-doing, these seek the living among the dead, figs of thistles, heaven in hell &c.

but have been partiall in the law] Heb. ye have accepted or acknowledged faces in the law. i. e. you accept persons; you deal partially in expounding and applying the law, making it pinch the poor, and favour the rich. The Church hath ever been pestered with such Aretalogi, such parasitical Preachers, whose practise hath been like Abahs Prophets, to speak magis ad voluntatem quam ad veritatem, more to please then to profit. And there is a very great sympathy between great ones that have first flattered themselves, and these false flatterers, who prove a fit helve for such an hatchet, and meet letice for such tips. Such an one was Uriah the high-priest to Abah 2 Chron. 28. His motto seemes to have been Mihi placet, quicquid regi placet. Such were those dirt-dawbers for the devill in Ezekiels dayes chap. 13. 10, 11. &c. the Herodians, the Arians, the Arminians, Utenbogardus &c. the Queen of Navarr's Preachers, who periwaded her, out of politick respects, to consent to that unhappy match that gave opportunity for the Parisian Massacre. The Apostle chargeth his son Timothy to do nothing of popularity or partiality, by tilting the ballance on the one side, as the word signifieth: but as a just law is an heart without affection, an eye without lust, a mind without passion, a treasurer which keepeth for every man that he hath, and distributeth to every man that he ought to have: so should a Minister be; remembring that of Iob chap. 13. 10. He will surely reprove you, if you secretly accept persons, that is, he will chide you, smite you, curse you for it, and so set it on, as no creature shall be able to take it off. If you reprove meger men, and wink at the faults of great Ones, reproving he will reprove you, he will not do it to halves: no, he will rather do it double; you shall have it both surely and severely. Let your resolution therefore be that of Elihu Iob 32. 21. 22. I will not now accept the person of any man, neither will I give flattering titles to man. For I may not give flattering titles, lest my Maker should suddenly take me away, lest my Master, whose steward I am, finding me unfaithfull in the dispose of his mysteries, should confound me before you. Ier. 1. 17. Nisi fideliter dixerim, vobis erit damnosum, mihi periculosum, If I should not deale faithfully and freely with you, it would be to your loss, but to mine utter undoing.

Buchole.

*I Tim. 5. 21.
χρὴ ἀνεξουλι-
σθαι*

*Timeo itaque damnum vestrum, timeo damnationem
meam, Egn.
de T. imp. 99.*

Verse 10. Have we not all one Father?] Here begins a second contestation, viz. with the people (as the former was with the Priests) for their unrighteous dealing; where we have so many words, so many arguments. In brevitate verborum est luxuries rerum. How many Ones are here, and all to periwade to unity. See the like Eph. 4. 3, 4, 5. Let those that take upon them to periwade others to equity and unanimity, learn to marshall their matter handsomely, and to fill their mouths with arguments, such as may fall thick, and prevail, being seconded and set on with intimation of heartiest affection. Oh that I could somewhere meet with you both together said Austin to Hierome and Ruffinus (hearing of their differences) I would fall down at your feet with much love; and many teares, I would beseech you for Gods sake, for your own sakes, for weak Christians sake &c. not to suffer these dissentions to spread further. So Mr. Bradford in a letter to a distressed Gentlewoman that was in a despairing condition, beseech you, faith He, I pray you, I desire you, I crave at your hands with all my very heart, I ask of you with hand, pen, tongue and mind in Christ, through Christ, for Christ, for his name, blood, mercy, power and truths sake, that you admit no doubting of Gods finall mercyes toward you, howsoever you feel your self. Oh that I could get words (said Another holy man to his hearers) to gore your very hearts with smarting pain, that this doctrine might be written in your flesh? By this One Father in the Text is meant Adam, say the most Interpreters, who was the common Parent of us all, and the very stock and root from whence all mankind did spring. It is therefore a sin against Nature it self and common humanity, to deal treacherously against another, or to hide thy self from thine own flesh Isa. 58. 7. This is to be more unreasonable then beasts, birds, and fishes, which love their own kind; and those that feed on flesh will not eat the flesh of their own kind. But our Age over-aboundeth with unnatural Mis- eaters, that (not only like a pickrell in a pond, or shark in the sea, devour the lesser

Iob 21. 4.

*Hei mihi qui vos alicubi
invenire non possum &c.*

Ab. and Mon.

Psal. 14. 5

lesser fishes of another alloy, but also) eat up Gods people, as they eat bread, make no more conscience, nay take as much content in undoing a poor brother, as in eating a meals-meat, when they are hungry: they make but a breakfast of a whole representative Nation; as those gun-powder-papists designed to do. How oft are wicked Oppressours compared to hunters, for their cruelty, and fowlers for their craft? to shew that they spare none that fall into their nets: young, old, male, female, all go together into the bag. This raised a great cry of the people, and of their wives against their brethren, those usurious Jews, that had both robb'd and ravished them, Nehem. 5. 1. And what could they say for themselves, but the same in effect with this in the text. Yet now our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren, our children as their children, &c?

Psal. 10. 9

Ephes. 2. 10

have we not all one father? hath not One God created us? ] Here the Prophet riseth higher, viz. from Adam to God, out of whose mint when Man came first, he shone most glorious, for he was Gods own workmanship created unto love and good works: yea, as iron put into fire, seems to be nothing but fire: so Adam, come fresh out of Gods hands, who is perfect love and goodnesse it self, was no other then a very lump of love to God, and kindnesse to his fellow-creatures. But now alas, we may sit and sing, O quantum hac Niobe, &c. how strangely are we altered, and fallen from our first love! and what great cause have we, with those in Ezra, to think of this Temple that was burnt, and lament? yea, write Lamentations with Jeremy, and say, as He; They ravished the women in Zion, and the maids in the cities of Judah. Princes are hanged up by the hand, the faces of the Elders were not honoured, &c. Lam. 5. The wonder was the lesse, because these that did all this were of a different religion. But for those that serve the same true God, the Creatour of all, to jarre and warre (as we, alas, do at this day) this is lamentabile bellum, and speaks a great decay and defect of the power of godlinesse: true religion being of an uniting nature: and the strongest tye. Sanatior sane est copula cordis quam corporis. This Ioseph brethren knew, and therefore held it their best plea, Gen. 50. 17. And now we pray thee forgive the trespasses of the servants of thy fathers God. They had one common father: but, as a better string to their bowe, they had one common God. The very Turks are found to be much braver fouldiers upon the Christian, then upon the Persian, because they begin alate to be infected with Persianisme, whom they acknowledge better Mahometans then themselves.

Voyage into Leuant. p. 89.

ἡμεῖς
ἐπὶ τοῦ

why do we deal treacherously? ] Or, fraudulently. The Prophet puts himself into the number though innocent, that his reproof might the better take with them. That which he taxeth them for, is their wrong-dealing (in generall) one with another; whether it were by force or by fraud, by violence or cunning contrivance, which what is it else, but crimen stellionatus, the very sinne of counsage, and hath God for an avenger? 1 Thess. 4. 6. Now it is dangerous offending him whose displeasure and revenge is everlasting, and who oft calls to reckoning after our discharges. Take heed therefore of all sorts of injustice. Curse not the deaf, lay not a stumbling-block before the blind: but fear the Lord Jehovah, Lev. 19. 14. And considering that to deal treacherously with another (a brother especially) is a sinne (as hath been above-said) both against nature and religion: both against Race and Grace (which teacheth righteousness as well as holinesse, Tis. 2. 12. and turning the leopard into the lamb, &c. causeth that none do hurt so, or destroy another in all Gods holy mountain, Esay 11. 6.) let us so carry our selves, as that, with blessed Paul, we may glory and say, We have wronged no man, we have consumed no man, we have defrauded no man, &c. 2 Cor. 7. 2.

Eos fœdera
rescire.

by profaning the covenant of our fathers ] i. e. by degenerating from the promises, and practises of our pious progenitours. Of this see verse 8. A certain popish Prince said, It is not amisse to make covenants: but wo be to him that is necessitated to keep them. He had learned, (belike of Machiavel) fidem tamdiu servandam esse quamdiu expediat, that covenants are to be kept so long as a man shall see cause. That which was anciently said of the Thracians is now verified of the papists, that they keep no covenants, with heretikes especially. The Turks (taught by them) say, There is no faith to be kept with dogs, that is with Christians. Their leagues grounded upon the law of Nations, and solemnly confirmed by oath, oath, have with them no longer force then standeth with their own pleasure and profit. And if Turks and Papists onely were truce-breakers, and sedifragies, it were the better to be born with. But what shall we say to those Christianocategori (as Bellarmino saith a certain sort of heretikes were called of old) those blots and botches of Christian religion, and holy tociety, that can say and unsay at pleasure, make vows to God in their distresse, and break them as fast when delivered? Just like those Jews in Jeremy, chap. 34. that set free their servants when the enemy lay before the walls: but reduced them into bondage, when the siege was raised, though they had cut the calf in twain, and passed between the parts thereof; a most solemne way of sealing up covenants. So dealt their fathers before them, Psal. 78. 34, 35, 36, 37. And so dealt here their Nephews after them. They profaned the covenant of obedience to Gods commandements, that their fathers, for themselves and their successours, entred into. But should men thus play with covenants as children do with nuts? should they slip them at pleasure, as Monkeys do their collars? should they snap them in sunder, as Sampson did his cords? Had Shimei peace that brake his oath to Solomon? or Zedekiah that kept not touch with Nebuchad- nezzar? &c.

De. eccles.
triumph. l. 2. c.
11.

Verse. 11. Judah hath dealt treacherously [Judah the confessor] as his name imports Judah that once ruled with God, and was faithful with the Saints: Judith in whom God was known, his name was great in Israel Psal. 76. 2. Prosper conceit was, that Judei were so called because thy received ius Dei, the law from Gods mouth: whence Iosephus calls the Common-wealth of Israel Θεοκρατία a God-government. For, to them pertained (among sundry other precious priviledges recited Rom. 9. 4, 5.) the Covenants, that is, 1. The moral law in two tables. 2. The giving of the law, that is, the Judicial law. 3. The service, that is, the seremonial law, which was their Gospel: whence Judea is called the glorious land Dan. 11. 41. (or the land of delights, or ornaments as the Hebrew hath it) a pleasant land, or a land of desire Ier. 3. 19. because as it is Ezek. 20. 6, 15. it was the glory of all lands. Jerusalem the metropolis, was not onely the most famous of all the cities of the East, as Pliny confesseth it, but also of the whole world si insignia Dei spectemus beneficia, as one saith, if we consider Gods marvellous kindnesse shewed to it in a strong city, as David hath it. But, as ingentia beneficia, flagitia, supplicia, the greater the priviledges of any place or people are, the more hainous are their offences, and the more hideous their punishments; so fell it out with this nation so advanced, so obliged, so shamelesly, so lawlesly wicked. They were but newly returned from captivity, scarce yet warm in their nests, when they fell afresh to their old trade of treachery, doing wickedly with both hands earnestly. Abomination was committed in Israel and in Jerusalem, even such as Gods soul abhorred, and was ready to be loosened or disowned from them Ier. 6. 8. because in the land of uprightness they dealt unjustly, and would not behold the majesty of the Lord Iay 26. 10. Judah had profaned the holinesse of the Lord which he loved, that is, the very place that he had espied out for himself, and that was dedicated to his name and service, the holy and separate land, the Isle, as it is called Isai. 20. 6. (though part of the continent) because compassed about with Gods favour as with a shield. Psal. 5. 12. In such a consecrated countrey to act their villany, was no small aggravation of their wickednesse: this made it swell like a toad in the eyes of the Almighty, it was an abomination. Filthynesse in a stewes, in a strumpet, is nothing so odious, as in a pretended Virgin. A nettle on the walte is better born with then in a garden. To see the Devil in hell is no wonder: but what makes he in Paradise? England was anciently called the kingdom of God it may much better be so called now, that Gospel of the kingdom is preached amongst us. It was also called Albion quasi Olbion (Happy or fortunate, the fortunate Island say some) or ab albis rupibus from the whitenesse of the rocks. True it is, we were black all over with superstition, first Pagan, and then Papagan; But Christ hath made us white again as snow in Salmon. And do we again fully and soil our selves with finnes filthynesse, with that unclean kitchin-stuffe? do we profane the holinesse of the Lord, which he loved, to drive him away from us by degrees, as those Jews did, Ezek. 8. 9, 10, 11. sinne is the leaven that defiles our passeover; and urgeth God to passe away and depart from us. Sin is the snuff that dimmes our candle-stick, and threatens the re-

Hof. 11. 12.

Psal. 31. 21.

Anglia regnum
Dei. Pol. Vng.

moveaal

L. 1. 1. 5. c. 1.

movall of it. Let those that live in Gods good land, but not in Gods good Laws (as Aristotle complained of his Athenians to like purpose, and as Seneca laid to the Romans, that they were become more filthy since they had bathes to wash in) look forward to the following verse, and tremble at that utter destruction there threatened to such, Disperdet Dominus &c. And thereunto Saint Paul seemeth to allude 1 Cor. 3. 17. If any man defile the Temple of God, him will God destroy.

and hath married the daughter of a strange God! This is that particular sin where by they had dealt treacherously against their brethren, profaned the Covenant, polluted the Church, and committed abomination in Israel: they had married with women of a strange worship, and joyned in affinity with the people of those abominations, as holy Ezra phraeth it Chap. 9. 14. and withall setteth it forth for such a sin in those newly-returned captives, as he thinks heaven and earth might well be ashamed of. A sin it is, flatly forbidden in both Testaments, Deut. 7. 3. 2 Cor. 6. 14. and reasons added: as 1. Danger of defection at least, from former forwardnesse: but most commonly of infection, as in Solomon 1 King. 11. Nehem. 13. 26. what's the reason the Pope will not dispense in Spain and Italy, if a papist marry a Protestant; yet here he will, but in hope to draw more to them. See 1 King. 12. 25. and 2 King. 8. 27. 2 Great inconveniency: as 1. Of grief to the godly parents Gen. 26. 35. and 27. 36. 2. Ill education of children, who commonly take after the mother (as did most of those Idolatrous kings of Judah) and follow the worse side, though it be the weaker, as the conclusion in a Syllogisme follows the weaker proposition. The birth, we say, followeth the belly: and most men, we see, do matrissare take after the mother, in matters of religion. Hereunto might be added, that Gods service must by these unequal matches necessarily be hindered, if not altogether omitted, (to gratifie a froward Zipporah, or a mocking Michol) and the better party forced to see and hear that, that cannot but grieve the Spirit of God. Besides danger of disloyalty, and a cursed posterity, as Edomites of the daughters of Heth. Here then I could joyn with that Reverend Contemplator in that holy wish of his, that Manoah could speak so loud that all our Israelites might hear him; Is there never a woman among the daughters of thy brethren, or among all Gods people, that thou goest to take a wife of the uncircumcised Philistines? If Religion be any other then a cypher, how dare we not regard it in our most important choyses? how dare we yoke our selves with any untamed heifer that beareth not Christs yoke? what mad work made that noble pair of naughty-packs, Iezabel and Athaliah in the kingdoms of Israel and Judah, the later beginning her reigne in the same year that the former perished, as Bucholter observeth? And who knoweth not what a deal of mischief was done to the poor people of God in France, by Katherine de Medices, Q. Mother, with the advice and assistance of the Cardinall of Lorrain? Concerning which two it was said,

D. Hall.

Non audent stygius Pluto tentare quod audent Esfrantis Monachus pianaque fraudis annis.

Verse 12. The Lord will cut off the man that doth this ] Though the Magistrate be careless and corrupt: though he either cannot punish this evil, it being grown so universall, or will not (and so impunity in the Magistrate maketh impenitency in the offendours) God will take the sword in hand, and cut off every mothers child that doth this, (nisi currat pœnitentia) as a chirurgion cutteth off a rotten member, so will God destroy such for ever: he will take them away, and pluck them out of their dwelling places, and root them out of the land of the living, Psal. 52. 5. Neither shall this be done to himself onely, but to his wretched posterity (such a legacy like Joabs leprosie, leaves every gracelesse man to his children) for so the Chaldees here rendreth and interpreteth that proverbiall expression in the text, both the master and the scholler, filium & filium filii, his sonne, and his sons sonne, though he teach never so well by wholesome instruction, and politick advisement, to prevent the mischief: Agreeably hereunto for sence Piscator rendreth this text thus, The Lord will cut off his children that doth thus, the children that he begets of the daughter of a strange god. An heavy curse surely, and frequently inflicted, as upon

Metaphora est à Medicis dicta. Polan.

*Sic & R.
Salom.*

Abab:

Abab: though he to avoid it, so followed the work of generation, that he left seventy sonnes behind him; which yet would not do.

and him that offereth an offering &c. | that is, Although he be a Priest, Or Although he seek to make peace with me by an offering: as hoping thereby to stop my mouth or stay my hand to expiate his sin, or to purchase a dispensation as those Mic. 6. 6, 7. and Esay 58. 2, 3. Thus Saul sacrificeth, Abab trembleth and humbleth, Ieroboams wife goeth to the Prophet, Isab taketh hold of the horns of the Altar: the king of Persia having lost some of his children by untimely death (as Ctesias reporteth) sends earnestly to the Jews for prayers for him and his, Ezra 6. 10. So did Maximinus in like case to the Christians. Tully tells us that they which prayed whole dayes together and offered sacrifice, ut sui liberi D. nat. Pier. superstitius sibi essent, that their children might out-live them, these were first called superstitious persons: afterwards the word was taken in a larger sense. But devotion without holy conversation avails nothing to avert Gods judgements Isa. 1. 12. 15. and Eccl. 3. He that killeth an Ox unlesse withall he kill his corruptions is as if he slew a man: he that sacrificeth a lamb, unlesse by faith he lay hold upon the Lamb of God, is as if he cut off a dogs neck: he that offereth an oblation &c. This men are hardly drawn to, viz. to part with their sins, to cast the traytours head over the wall, to hang up the heads of the people before the Sun. Sin harboured in the soule, is like Achan in the army, or Jonas in the ship; much paines the mariners were at, and much losse too, to have saved Jonas from the sea, they ventured their own casting away ere they would cast him over-board: but there could be no calme, till they had done it effectually. So it is here. Full faine men would keep their sins, and yet save their soules: but that's impossible. God will not be bribed Psal. 50. nor brought to suffer sin unrepented to escape unpunished. Poor soules when stung by the Friers sermons, they set them penances, pilgrimages, all sorts of good works, which filled them a while: and for them they thought they should have pardon. 'O many run now amongst us to holy duties, but with the same opinion they did them, as bribes for a pardon. These dig for pearles in their own dunghills, make the meanes their mediators, think to save themselves by riding on horses &c.

Verse 13. And this have ye done againe? Or, in the second place. q. d. Not content to have married strange wives, yea have brought them in to your lawfull wives, to their intolerable vexation; so adding this sin to the former, as a greater to the lesse. This is still the guise of gracelesse men, to add drunkennesse to thirst, rebellion to sin, to amasse and heape up one evill upon another, till wrath come upon them to the utmost. For three transgressions and for four I will not turn away their punishment Am. 1. that is, so long as the wicked commit one or two iniquities, I forbear them: but when it comes once to threes and fours, (how much more to so many scores, hundreds, thousands, as one cipher added to a figure makes it to many tens, two to many hundreds, three to many thousands &c.) God will bear with them no longer. Of those old Israelites it is demanded, not without great indignation on Gods part. How oft did they provoke him in the wilderness, and grieve him in the desert? Yea they turned back and tempted God &c. Psal. 78. 40, 41. Good men, if they fall once into foule practises, they fall not often. Of Judah it is expressly recorded that he knew Tamar no more. Lot indeed committed incest two nights together: but the orifice of his lust was not yet stopped by repentance. Think the same of Solomon, Samson, Jonah, &c. their acts were as it were continued acts: and, in the interim, little or no remorse or regret. Let us that have received mercy, be admonished to sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto us. There is a woe to such as draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin as it were with a cartrope Isa. 5. 20. Babels sins in the Revelation reached up to heaven, or they were shewacked together thick and threefold one upon another Rev. 18. 5. there was a concatenation, or a continued series of them: therefore she fell surely and suddenly. When wickednesse is once ripe in the field, God will not let it shed to grow again: but cuts it up by a just and seasonable vengeance.

covering the Altar of the Lord with teares | That is, You caused your poor wives, when they should have been chearfull in Gods service, as 1 Sam. 1. and in many other places it was required of the Israelites to rejoyce whensoever they appeared before the Lord, Earthly Princes love not the company of mourners Esph. 4. 4. to cover the Lords Altar with tears, with weeping, and with crying out, to throw themselves, blubbered and swoln with tears, upon the Altar, which was a profanation of it: so that God regarded not the offering any more. 'Twere happy if we could be so affected with our unkindnesse to Christ, our husband, that wee could cover his Table, when we come to it, with our tears. How should the Lord regard our service so much the more? how should it be unto him as Musick upon the waters, farre more harmonious! What a gracious respect had He to the weeping women that followed him to the crosse; and what an honour was that to one of them, (Mary Magdalen I mean) that she had the first sight of the revived Phoenix, whom she held fast by those feet that she had once washed with her tears, and that had now lately trod upon the lion, and adder, &c? It was appointed by Deut. 21. 13. Moses law that the bond-woman should bewail her father and mother a full moneth before she might become an Israelites wife. We, that are strangers to the Commonwealth of Israel, as we cannot be presented a chaste virgin to Christ, but as weeping over him that bled over us, so we never please him better, then when we weep over our tears, sigh over our sobbes, mourn over our griefs, as not proportionable to our miscarriages. But to return to the Text: The Jews as they are noted for a nation overmuch effeminate, and given to women, (as they say) so when they have satisfied their lust, and served their own turns, they are as willing to be rid of them as Amnon was of Tamar. Hence those many cautions in the law to put bounds to their petulancy: and that politick permission of a divorce, for the relief of the poor despised woman, lest she should come to a mischief, by the hatred of the churl her husband, Deut. 22. 13, 14 with chap. 24. 3. At this day they look upon women, as not having so divine a soul as men, but are of a lower creation, made onely for the propagation and pleasure of man. They use them as their drudges, lay upon them with their unmanly fists, are ready to cut out their tongues (as the Welsh-men dealt by their French wives, lest they should corrupt the language of their children) put them away upon every slight occasion, covering that violence with the garment of the law, as verse 16. Or if they kept them, they took other wives to them, to vex them, and to make them to fret, 1 Sam. 1. 6. or (as the word there signifies) to thunder: not onely treading upon their breast, with the voyce of doves, (as Nahums expression is) but filling the air, yea covering the altar (as it is here) with their laments and lowings, flellu & mugitu, (so the Vulgar rendreth it) for their husbands harshnesse, and their concubines insolencies, and indignities. Hierom tells us, that these returned captives slighted their old wives brought with them from Babylon, (as being by that tedious journey become infirm and deformed) and matched with strangers, who were fresh, fair, rich, &c. this he gathers out of Ezra 9. and 10. whereas they should rather have nourished and cherished them as their own flesh, Ephes. 5. 29. they should have handled them gently, because of their weaknesse, as so many chrysell-glasses. They should have given them all lawfull content, as Abraham did Sarah, his faithfull fellow-traveller. They should have given all honour unto them, saith Saint Peter; and why? Mark his many reasons. 1. They are the weaker vessels, and are therefore to be handled with all tendernesse. Some translate it the weaker instrument: and (as Luther speaks of it) as a knife with a tender edge men will not cut stones, brasse, or iron with it: so here. 2. They are heirs together of the grace of life, that is, of the life of grace, and of glory too: for souls have no sexes, and as every one is in Christ, all are equall, so that the husband is bound, in this respect, to make his wives yoke as easie as may be, sith she draws even with him, though on the left side. 3. That your prayers be not hindered, as they will be, where there is not so much conjugium, as conjurgium. How can they pray together comfortably, that live so discontentedly? How can they bring their gift to that altar that is covered with the tears, and moans of their justly aggrieved and abused wives? Or, if they do, will God regard their offering any more, or receive it with good will at their hands? Will not the tears and groans of their distressed wives (who yet hold out their devotion, and will not be hindered by their just grief, from praying to God, and pouring out their souls before him) move God more then

Psal. 91. 13.

Deut. 21. 13.

Ipsæ lachrymæ sunt lachryma-biles, &c.

*Heyl. Geog.
pag. 93.*

*Nah. 2. 7.
Lamentis ge-mituque & fe-minico ululatu
Tellæ fremunt-Virg. Æneid.*

1 Pet. 3. 7.

then their sacrifices can do? Especially if they bring them with a wicked mind, as Solomon hath it: and as Lyra maketh it to be the sence of this Text: Ye have covered the Altar of the Lord with tears, &c. but he regardeth not the offering any more, &c. that is, (saith Lyra, and he hath it from Chrysostom) you are resolved to retain your idolatrous wives, though God have declared against it: And that ye may expiate this wickednesse, and make amends by your good deeds for your bad; you run to the Temple, and there with many tears, and groans you beg pardon. But all in vain, because you have no purpose at all to break off your sins, but will needs persist in your unlawfull marriages. See more of this in the Note on chap. 2. 16. doct. 4. use 1.

Verse 14. Yet ye say wherefore?] A senselesse question: but there is nothing more stupid, and stubborn then an hypocrite: he will not yeeld, though never so clearly convinced, but will have still somewhat to say though to small purpose, as had Saul to Samuel, 1 Sam. 15. and these Questionists here to God, whom (as before oft, and again after) they put to his proofs. (See the Note on chap. 1. verse 2, 6.) and his answer is ready:

Because the Lord hath been witnesse between thee and the wife of thy youth] The Heathen could say,

Maxima debetur pueris reverentia siquid

Turpe parat: —

And again,

Turpe quid acturus te, sine teste, time.

We should not do wickedly if but a child be by. And, when thou art about to do ought amisse, fear thine own conscience, which is a thousand witnesses. But if God be by as a witness, should not men fear to offend him? Tremble thou earth, at the presence of the Lord, at the presence of the God of Jacob. He that dares sin, though he know God be an eye-witness, is more impudent in sinning then was Abalom, when he spread a tent upon the top of the house, and went in to his fathers concubines, in the sight of all Israel, and of the Sunne. These treacherous husbands could not but know that they had entred into a covenant of God, Prov. 2. 17. when they married: that the bond was made to God, and that upon the violation of it, he would be ready enough to take the forfeiture: for whoremongers and adulterers God will iudge, Heb. 13. 3. That God had been witness, or had protested (so Montanus renders it) and withall had, by interposing of his own authority, confirmed the contract and compact, saying, verbis conceptis, as Hos. 3. 3. Thou shalt not be for another man, so will I also be for thee, and not for another woman, till God shall separate us by death. Indeed if the husband or the wife be dead, the surviving party is at liberty to marry again (whatsoever the Canonists say against bigamy.) Hierome tells us of an old man in Rome that had buried twenty wives, which hee had married one after the death of another: and that he had taken to wife the one and twentieth, who also had buried nineteen husbands. And that, burying that wife too, he followed the corps to the Church (so his neighbours would needs have it) with a garland of bayes upon his head in manner of a triumph. But against Polygamy (which is, when a man or woman couples himself or her self in marriage to more then one) here are an heap of arguments in the text, which we shall take as they lie in order. Mean-while it is worthy our observation, that the first Authour of Polygamy was that Thrafonicall Lamech; noted for a profane and wicked person: as was likewise Esau another Polygamist. Laban though he had cheated Jacob into the having of his two daughters to wife, yet he could not but confesse it to be a sinne against the light of Nature. Hence at parting he takes a solemne oath of Jacob, Gen. 31. 50. If thou shalt afflict my daughters, or if thou shalt take other wives besides my daughters: no man is with us: see God is witness betwixt me and thee. Some of the Fathers were herein faulty, as Abraham, David, &c. and some say it was their priviledge: but that's not likely. Rather it was their ignorance, or incogitancy, (they considered not that it was a breach of the first institution of marriage) or, as some conceive, it was their meer mistake of the Text, Lev. 18. 18. Thou shalt not take a wife to her sister, to vex her, to uncover her naked esse, besides the other, in her life time. Here they took the word (sister) for one so by blood, which was spoken of a sister by nation, as those clauses to vex her,

Protestatus est.

Rom. 7. 2.

Hier. apud Lo-
nice in Theat.
hisor. p. 734.

Confer Ezek.
1. 9.

and de gher life, do evince. One thing was, the commonesse of the sinne, and the g custome of it. So long had it continued, and was grown so fashionable, that it seemed to be no sinne. But debt is debt, whether a man know of it, or not: And sin, as a debt, may sleep a long time, and not be called for of many years, as Sauls sin in killing the Gibeonites slept forty years; and Joabs killing of Abner slept all David's dayes, &c. Another thing that might cause desire of many wives, was want of love and chaste affection to the wife of their youth. Isaac is noted for a most loving husband to his Rebecca: and he never desired more wives then her. Re once in the wife of thy youth: Let her be as the loving Hind, and pleasant Roe, &c. This will keep thee from being ravished with a strange woman, or embracing the bosom of a stranger, Prov. 5. 18, 19, 20. The Hind and the Roe are most loving to their mates, and therefore most faithfull to them. So, among birds, are the turtle-dove, and the stork. The former, they say, as he keeps close to his mate, while she lives; so when she dies, he groans and moans continually, and never sits upon a green bough. The later are chaste, and severe, in punishing those of the kind that are not. It is credibly reported by some that have seen it, that whole flocks of } Storks meeting in a meadow, they have set in the midst of them two of their company that have been found disloyall, and running upon them with main force have killed them with their beaks. So that the company breaking up, and all the rest flying away, the two offending Storks onely have been found dead in the place.

Sphinx Philof.
pag. 131.

against whom thou hast dealt treacherously ] viz. by superinducing another wife contrary to thy covenant. This is not a simple injury against thy lawfull wife; but such as is joyned with contumely, which the Greeks call ŭcis: and the children that come of such copulation they call ŭcidz, because they are subject to contumelies. The Hebrews call them brambles; Alimelech was such an one, Iudg. 9. 14. a right bramble indeed, who grew in the base hedge-row of a concubine; and scratcht and drew blood to purpose. Lo, this is the Prophets first argument against Polygamy: it is treachery against both God, who is deeply interested in the marriage-covenant, and against the true wife, who is hereby extremely defrauded, and defeated. Follows now the second:

yet she is thy companion ] thy compeer, and copartner, thy consort, and fellow-friend, such another as thy self (so the woman is called, Gen. 2. 18.) a second-self, a mate meet for thee, a piece so just cut out for thee, as answereth thee right-ly in every point, in every joyn. A wife is not a slave, (saith One) but a companion: a yoke-fellow, standing on even ground with thee, though drawing on the left side. From the left side (say some) she was taken where the heart is, to teach, that hearty love should be betwixt married couples. Made she was of a rib, a bone of the side; not of the head, (the wife must not usurp ant: ority over her husband) nor yet of the foot, she may not be trampled upon, or disregarded as an underling. A bone, not of any anterior part; she is not præluæ, preferred before the man: neither yet of any hinder-part, she is not postposita, set behind the man: but a bone of the side, of the middle, of the indifferent part, to shew that she is thy companion and the wife of thy covenant. A bone she is from under the arm: to put man in mind of protection, and defence to the woman. A bone, not far from his heart; to put him in mind of dilection and love to the woman. Neither can the rib challenge any more of her, then the earth can do of him. And as he was ignorant when himself was made, so he knew as little when his second-self was made out of him: both that the comfort might be greater then was expected; as also that he might not upbraid his wife with any great dependance or obligation; he neither willing the work, nor suffering any pain to have it done. Shine she must with the beams of her husband: Share she must with him, in his masterly government of the family, as Sarah did with Abraham by Gods allowance, Gen. 16. and as the Roman Ladies were wont to say to their husbands, Ubi tu Caisus, ibi ego Caisa, where you are Lord, I am Lady. That over-lordly carriage of husbands towards their wives, and that usage of them as drudges, is condemned by the Heathen Philosophers, in the very Barbarians themselves, as a great ataxy, and disorder in the family.

and the wife of thy covenant ] And is it nothing to be a covenant-breaker with a wife; especially where God also is engaged, as above said? Factus tuus tu non servas.
m515,

nis, ab eadem radice, perform your trust, make good the troth you have plighted. Otherwise, if the fruits of the flesh grow out of the trees of your hearts, surely, surely, saith Master Bradford Martyr, the devil is at inne with you: you are his birds, whom when he hath well fed, he will broach you, and eat you, chaw you, and champ you world without end, in eternall wo and misery. Ser. of Rep. p. 70.

Verse 15. And did not he make one ] Another forcible argument against Polygamy, and adultery. See our Saviours explanation of it, Mat. 19. 4, 5, 6. with the Notes there. The onely wife God made but one woman for one man at the first creation: and ordained that those two should be one flesh, two in one flesh, not three, or four, or as many wives as a man is able to maintain, as among the Turks, who (as a just hand of God upon them) are grievously vexed with jealousy, not suffering their women to go to Church: nor so much as look out at their own windows: Or if they go abroad upon any occasion, they must go muffled, all but the eyes. Sardus tells us, that the old Britains would ten or twelve of them take one woman to wife. Belike women were rare commodities with them. As likewise men were in Judæa, when seven women took hold of one man, saying, We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel: onely let us be called by thy name, to take away our reproach, Esay 4. 1. That is, we will maintain our selves and thee: onely be thou an husband to us, and let us have children by thee.

B uni. 106.

yet had he the residue of the spirit ] Or, breath: so that he could as easily have made more, and breathed into their faces the breath of life. And although it is not said of the woman, that God breathed into her the breath of life, as of Adam, (whence Tertullian concludes, that she had both body and soul too from Adam) yet Austin rightly gathereth, that their souls were both alike imbreathed by God: Otherwise, the scripture would not have been silent in it, no more then it is in the new manner of the creation of her body. Thence also it is that Adam saith not, This is soul of my soul, but bone of my bone, and flesh of my flesh, Gen. 2. 23. Souls are not propagated by the Parents, but created of God, and joined to the body, by an occult operation, Augustine following Origen, held the contrary for a long time. At length he began to doubt, and after a while changed his opinion: Hierom stoutly defending the contrary against him: Aristotle also understood the truth hereof, and concluded, that the soul was divine, and came from above: and, though of nothing, yet is it made a matter more excellent then the matter of the heavens, in nature not inferiour to the Angels. An abridgement it is of the invisible world, as the body is of the visible. And why may we not say, that the soul as it came from God, being divine particula aurea, so it is like him? One, immateriall, immortall, understanding spirit, distinguisht into three powers, which all make up one Spirit. In this respect it is said, Gen. 9. 6. that in the image of God made he man. There is a double image of God in the soul. One in the substance of it: this is never lost, and of this that text is to be understood. The other is the supernaturall grace, which is an image of the knowledge, holinesse, and righteounesse of God, and this is utterly lost, and must be recovered. This the ancient Heathens hammered at, when they fained that the soul once had wings: but, those being broken, it fell headlong into the body; where when it hath recovered it's wings, it flies up to heaven again. That was very good counsell given by a godly man to his friend, not to busie his brains so much in enquiring how the soul entred into the body, as how it may depart comfortably out of the body. And seeing the soul is more excellent then the body, (saith another grave Divine) like as Jacob laid his right hand upon the younger, but his left upon the elder, so our best care, and the strength of our thoughts should be for the soul, younger as much as it is, then the body: they should be but left-hand thoughts for the body.

10. Lib. sup. Genes.

Ἀέματα δὲ
τῆς ψυχῆς μόνον
δύνασθαι ἐκείσθαι καὶ
δύνασθαι τὴν
ψυχὴν ἐν
τοῦ σώματος
Lib. 2. c. 9.
de gen. anim.

and wherefore one? that he might seek a godly seed ] Heb. a seed of God: not a bastardy brood, a spurious issue, a Mamzer, as the Hebrews call such, that is, labes aliena, a strange blot, a seed of the adulterer and the whore, Esay 57. 3. but such as God appointeth, and approveth, such as may be holy, with a federall holinesse at least, if not sanctified from the womb, as some have been, and are: lastly, such as in and by whom the Church and religion may be propagated, and not idolatry spread and increased.

I Cor. 7. 14.

therefore take heed to your spirit ] that is, to your wife, which is the residue of your spirit; keep and cherish her: so Remigius and Lyra interpret it. But they do better that expound it by that of Solomon, Keep thy heart with all diligence, Prov. 4. 23. and by that of the Apostle, Mortifie therefore your members which are upon earth, fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, &c. Col. 3. 5. These are those that defile the man, Mat. 15. 19, 20. These make his heart a filthy dunghill of all abominable lusts, and his life a long chain of sinfull actions, a very continued web of wickednesse, therefore take heed to your spirits, that is, to your affections, keep those pure and chaste: abstain from fleshly lusts that fight against the soul. Take heed where you set gunpowder, sith fire is in your heart. Austin thanks God that the heart and temptation did not meet together. Look well to the affections: for by those maids Satan woos the mistresse. Look to the cinque-ports, the five senses: shut those windows that death enter not in thereby. Take heed to thy fancy: we allow an horse to prounce and skip in a pasture; which if he doth when backt by the rider, we count him an unruly and unbroken jade. So, howsoever in other creatures we deny them not liberty of fancy, yet wee may not allow it in our selves, to frisk and rove at pleasure, but by reason bridle them, and set them their bounds that they shall not passe. The Lord quieteth the sea, and turns the storme into a calme, Psal. 107. 29. If then the voluptuous humours in our body (which is but as a cup made of the husk of an acorne in respect of the Sea) will not be pacified when the Lord saith unto them, Be still, every drop of water in the sea will witness of our rebellion and disobedience.

and let none deal treacherously against the wife of his youth ] He had convinced them of this sinne before, verse 14. Now he admonisheth them to abrenounce and abandon it. Lo this is the true method and manner of proceeding, in administering admonitions. The judgement must be convinced, ere the affections can be wrought to any thing: like as in the law, the lamps were first lighted, before the incense was burned: First, know thine iniquity, and then turn from it, Jer. 3. 13, 14. Exhortation is the end of doctrine, science of conscience, reformation of information, conversion of conviction: and wo be to those that being convinced, or reproved for their faults, get the bit between the teeth, as it were, and run away with their rider. When I would have healed Ephraim, then his iniquity brake out (as if it were to crosse me) like the leprosie in his forehead, Hos. 7. 1. what can such sturdy rebels expect better, then that God should resolve, as Ezek. 24. 13. as if he should say, Thou shalt have thy will, but then I will have mine too: I shall take another course with thee, sith thou refuseth to be reformed, hatest to be healed: thou shalt pine away in thine iniquities, Levit. 26. 39. O fearfull!

Verse 16. For the Lord the God of Israel saith, that he hateth putting away ] Heb. Put away, q. d. God hates that Put her away, Put her away, that is so much in your mouthes. For, because you are justly reproved for Polygamy, for keeping two wives, you think to mend that fault by putting away your old ones, and plead you may do it by a law, licensing divorces. But the Lord would ye should know, that he hates such your practises: and the rather because you maliciously abuse his law, as a cloke of your wickednesse. Divorce is a thing that Gods soul hateth, unlesse it bee in case of adultery, (which breaks the marriage knot) and malicious perpetuall desertion. This last was the case of that noble Italian convert, Galeacius Caracciolus Marquesse of Vico (as is to be seen in his life, written by my much honoured brother, Mr. Samuel Clark, in the second part of his Marrow of Ecclesiasticall history, pag. 101.) who by the consent of Mr. Calvin, Peter Martyr, and other learned Divines (who met and seriously debated the case) sued out a divorce against his former wife, who had first maliciously deserted him, and had it legally by the Magistrate at Geneva granted unto him: after which he married another, Anno 1560. The Civill Law of the Empire permitted divorce for diverse other causes. And these Jews, for every light cause (if but a blemish in the body, or crookednesse of manners) pretending to hate their wives, would write them a Bill of divorce, and turn them off. Our Saviour deals against this, Matth. 5. and 18. See the Notes there. This sinne was also rise among both the Athenians (who were wont to put away their wives upon discontent, or hope of greater portions, &c.) and the Romans, whose Abseptionale, or Writ of divorce was this onely, Res tuas tibi habeto; Take what is thine, and be gone. It is ordinary also among the Mahometans: But the

1 Cor. 7. 15.

Archaeol
Antic. 140.

the Lord God of Israel faith here, that he hateth it: and it appeareth so by his practise to his Spouse the Church. See Jer. 3. 1. Joh. 13. 1. and then say, that Gods mercy is matchlesse; and that he takes not advantages against his revolting people, but follows them with his favour: no otherwise then as when a man goes from the Sun, yet the Sun-beams follow him, shine upon him, warm him, &c. Zanchy (and some others) reads the text thus, If thou hatest her, put her away, in that discourse of divorces, which he wrote upon occasion of Andreas Pizzardus his divorce, as indeed agreeing best with the matter he undertook to defend. But in another book of his he utterly disliketh the doings of Luther, and some other Dutch Divines, who advised Philip, Lantgrave of Hesse to marry, alteram, hoc est, adulteram, his former lawfull wife being yet alive. Archbishop Grindall, by cunning practises of his adversaries, Leicester and others, lost Queen Elizabeths favour, as if he favoured Prophecies, &c. but in truth, because he had condemned an unlawfull marriage of Julio an Italian Physician with another mans wife, whilest Leicester in vain opposed against his proceedings therein.

*Zanch. Misc.
Epist. dedit.*

*Camb. Elizab.
Archbishop Abbots also died in disgrace for opposing Sammesets at hor-
red march with the Countesse of Essex.
Figuier.*

for one covereth violence with his garment] This Text had been easie, had not Commentatours (the Hebrew Doctours especially) made it knotty. Rabbi David in opening of it, obscurior videtur, quam ipsa verba que explicare conatur, seems to be more obscure then the words themselves which he undertaketh to open; faith Figuier, who also reciteth the expositions of severall Rabbines. Concerning which, I may say as One did once, when being asked by another, whether he should read such a Comment upon Aristotle? answered, Yes; when Aristotle is understood, then read the Comment. The plain sense is this: These wicked Jews pretended the Law of God, as a cloke and cover of their sinne, that it might be no sinne to them. And though the Lord had protested to hate their divorces, yet they pleaded I know not what liberty permitted them by Moses: but this was but a politike coverture of iniquity, Mat. 18. 8, 9. The like hereunto was the sin of Saul, 1 Sam. 15. of Jezabel, 1 King. 21. 13. of those Jews, Joh. 19. 7. of those Libertines, 2 Pet. 2. 8, 9. of all Heretikes, that plead Scripture for their heresies: and some others impudently impious, who lest they should seem to be mad without reason abuse Gods holy word to the defence of their unreasonable and irreligious practises. These mens judgement now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation sleepeeth not, 2 Pet. 2, 3.

therefore take heed to your spirit] A repetition of the dhortation: of which see verse 16. Good things must be often inculcated, Phil. 3. 1. one exhortation must peg in another, till they stick in our souls, as forked arrows in the flesh. Men do not use to lay ointments onely upon their lame limbes, but rub them, and chafe them in; so here. Austin perswades the Preacher, so long to insist upon a necessary point, till by the gesture and countenance of the hearers he perceiveth, that they understand and relish it. Chrysostome being asked by his people, when he would give over preaching against swearing? answered, Never till you leave your swearing.

Verse 17. Ye have wearied the Lord with your words] Laborare fecistis Dominum, so the Vulgar renders it. Ye have put the Lord to pain, as it were; ye have even tired out his patience, whilest yee have made him to serve with your sinnes, and have wearied him with your iniquities, Esay 43. 24. I have long time holden my peace, I have been still and refrained my self, saith the Lord: Now will I cry like a travailling woman, that hath long time bitten in her pain, I will destroy and devour at once. God can bear and forbear as well as any other: Who is a God like unto thee for this, saith Micah, chap. 7. 17? Were the patientest man upon earth in Gods room, but for a very short space, to see and hear the provocations, and indignities daily done unto him by the sinfull sonnes of men, he would soon be weary of it, he would quickly make a short work upon the earth, Rom. 9. 28. It would trouble his patience to spread out his hands all a day long to a rebellious people, Esay 65. 2. to give forty dayes respite to Nineveh that bloody city, full of lies and robbery, Nahum 3. 1. to be grieved forty yeers long with a perverse people, and to suffer their evil manners in the wilderness, Acts 13. 18. to bear four hundred yeers with those wretched Amorites, who had filled the land from one end to the other, with their abominable uncleanneses, Ezra 9. 11. In the fourth of Ezekiel God is brought in as lying upon his

Esay 42. 14

Ezek. 4. 5, 6

1 Cor. 10. 22

Deut. 16. 20
Ezek. 1.

his left side for three hundred and ninety years : a long while to lie on one side, without turning on the other) and all to set forth his long-sufferance. Our text tells us, that hee is patient even ad defatigationem usque, toward the wicked : he bears till he can bear no longer. See the like Rom. 9. 22. and the reason, Rom. 2. 4. and the ill use that is made of it, Eccles. 8. 11, 12, 13. till they tire out him that is indefatigable, Jer. 15. 6. and make him weary of repenting. But is this a safe course they take? Do they provoke the Lord to wrath? Are they stronger then he? Hear ye now, O house of David: Is it a small thing for you to weary men, but ye will weary my God also? Esay 7. 13. Will he not put an end to his abused patience, that justice, justice, (as Moses hath it) actual and active justice may take place? God in Ezekiel is said to sit upon a throne, to shew his slownesse: but this throne hath wings, to shew his swiftnesse to come, if need require. His patience passeth along as a pleasant river. But if men stop the course of it by their blasphemies, and contumelies as here, and presse him with their provocations, as a cart that is loaden with sheaves, Am. 2. 13. God will surely have his full blow at them, Neh. 1. 2, 6. Rom. 2. 4. Heb. 12. 29.

with your words] that is, with your continuall contentions and quibblings : or with those ensuing words, blasphemous enough, and Atheisticall : together with your bold justification of them : yet ye say, wherein, &c.

when ye say, every one that doth evil, &c.] As if they should say, God punisheth not but prospereth the wicked : therefore he loveth and favoureth them above better men. Job, Jeremy, and David were once, for a fit, in the same errour, but soon recanted it, when once the waters of the Sanctuary had cured their eye-sight, Psal. 73. 17. for such are land-blind, and cannot see far off, 2 Pet. 1. 9.

Cern. à Lapid.

or where is the God of judgement? ] q. d. No where : either there is no God : or at least, not a God of that exact, precise, impartiall judgement. (such an Emphasis there is in the Heb.) Diagoras turned Atheist, because his adversary that had robbed him was not presently thunder-struck. The like is recorded of Porphyry, Lucian, Averroes, and others. See the Notes, on chap. 3. 14, 15.

CHAP. III.

Verse 1. BEhold, I will send my messenger] It is well observed by the learned, that this whole Prophecy of Malachy, though distinguished (as now) into severall Chapters, yet is but one entire Sermon, at once delivered. Those Atheists that asked in the precedent verse, ( and they did it with an accent too, that they might not be slighted ) where is the God of judgement? are here fully answered : and that they might the better attend, they have it with a note of pregnancy, Behold, I will send, &c. q. d. differtur quidem iudicium sed non aufertur. Tandem veniet, profecto veniet. Judgement comes not so soon as you call for it : but come it will, be sure it will. For behold, I send ( in the present tense ) my messenger, the Baptist, and ( at his heels, as it were ) Messiah the Prince, who shall reforme and rectifie all disorders. For judgement, saith He, come I into the world, that they which see not might see, and that they which see, might be made blind, Joh. 9. 39. And then, you that call for judgement shall have enough of it : when ye see my Messenger, harbinger, or herald, know that I am hard at hand. Behold, this is set here as the sound of a trumpet before some Proclamation, to arouse mens attention.

I will send] Heb. I do send, or, am sending : though the thing was not done till four or five hundred years after : but in Gods purpose and promise it was a done thing already. All things are present with him, for he is a pure act ; his whole essence is wholly an eye, or a mind : he is all things eminently, exemplarily, and contains all things in himself. Hence he knows temporall things after an eternall manner, mutable things immutably, contingent things infallibly, future things presently. Hence he calleth things that yet are not, as if they were, Rom. 4. 17. and this, as in the works of Creation, Renovation, Resurrection, so in the accomplishment of his promises, which we must not antedate, as we are apt to do ; but learn to live by faith, Hab. 2. 2. Possibly the Kalendar of heaven hath a post-date to ours. Strive to be strong in faith, and glorifie God.

my messenger } Not Christ, as Eusebius doated: nor Messias the sonne of Joseph, that is, of the tribe of Joseph, as Rabbi Abraham would have it. (For the Jews foolishly expect two Messias's, one the sonne of David, and the other the sonne of Joseph) Nor an Angel of heaven, as Rabbi David interprets it, according to Exod. 23. 20. But John Baptist, as our Saviour expounds himself, Mat. 11. 10. who is here called Christs Messenger, or Angel, by reason of his office: one, by whom he would manifest his mind to his people. He was a burning and a shining light, or lamp, and shone for a season, till the Sun of righteoufnesse came in place: as lights and candles are of good use till the Sun riseth. See 1 Sam. 3. 3.

Lib. 5. de demon. Evang. cap. 28.

Joh. 5. 35

and he shall prepare the way } Expurgabit, Everret, emundabit. He shall clear the way, sweep it, accoutre, or dresse it. He shall remove all rubs, and remov. s out of the way, he shall pare and pave a path for Christ into the soul, open those everlasting doors that the king of glory may come in, he shall make ready a people for the Lord, Luke 1. 17. Mans heart is full of mountains and vallies, Luke 3. 5. These must be levelled, ere Christ can be admitted: and that's not done but by repentance unto life. As John Baptist was Christs fore-runner into the world; so must repentance be his fore-runner into the heart: for he that repenteth not, the kingdom of heaven is far from him: so he that cannot see it (as the Hebrew word here used imports he must do) for his lusts that hang in his light.

ויהי וiam apertam & oculis intuitum conspicuam faciet.

and the Lord whom ye seek } Dominator, that Lord Paramount of whom David speaketh, Psal. 110. 1. and for whose sake Daniel desireth to be heard, chap. 9. 17. Messiah the Prince, verse 25. the Prince and Saviour, Act. 5. 31. Lord and Christ, Acts 2. 36. the God of judgement, whom they called for, Mat. 2. 17. and whom they are said to seek for. As God he is not very far from any one of us, faith Paul Acts 17. 27. not so far as the bark is from the tree; for in him we all live, and move, and subsist. And as God-Man he shall suddenly come to his Temple } suddenly, that is, in the fulnesse of time, (which is but a short time in respect of the long expectation of the Patriarches) and speedily after John Baptists birth; suddenly also, because unexpectedly to the most, who stood amazed at his preaching, and said, Whence hath this man this wisdom, and these mighty works? Is not this the carpenter, &c? To his Temple he came, when presented there to be circumcised, Luke 2. when he put forth a beam of his Divinity there, in his disputation with the Doctours, verse 46. But especially when he purged the Temple: 1. By his Doctrine, Matt. 5. and 15. and 2. By his Discipline, Joh. 2. 14, 15, 16. and 12. 12. at which time, Tell ye the daughter of Zion, faith God, Behold, thy king cometh unto thee, meek and sitting upon an asse, &c. Not upon a stately palfrey, as an earthly Potentate. And that was the very cause, that these in the text that are said to see him, when they had him amongst them, could by no means think well of him in respect of his mean and despicable condition. They had a certain notion of the Messiah: and were in expectation of him, and of temporall deliverance and felicity by him. Of which, when disappointed, they were as blank, as when they saw the hoped issue of their late Jewish Virgin turned to a daughter: or as when they saw Mahomet eat of a camell; whom till then, when they saw him arising in such powetr, they were ready to cry up for their long looked for Messiah.

Mat. 21. 5.

D. Hall's Peacemaker.

even the messenger of the Covenant } viz. of the covenant of grace: for in Christ God reconciled the world to himself. And of this covenant Christ is the Angel, or Messenger, because 1. He revealeth it, and we must take heed how we slight it, Heb. 2. 3. sniff it, Heb. 12. 25. 2. He mediateth it, 1 Tim. 2. 5. and in, and by him it hath accomplishment, 2 Cor. 1. 20. Hence Esfy 9. 6. he is called the Prince of peace, and (according to the Septuagint there) the Angel of the great Counsel. Let all that would receive mercy from God, get into Christ, and so into Covenant. For as the Mercy-seat was no larger then the Ark, so neither is the grace of God, then the covenant of grace: And as the Ark and Mercy-seat were never separated, so neither are such from God, as are found in Christ.

Messias noster Cuius aye ysa.

whom ye delight in } They delighted in his day (the better sort of them) though afar off, Joh. 8. 56. they saluted him, and were resaluted by him, Heb. 11. 13. They promised themselves through Christ malorum ademptionem, bonorum adeptionem,

onem, freedom from all evil, and fruition of all good. Hence he is called, the desire of all Nations, Hag. 2. 8. The Church in the Canticles, faith he is totius desiderabilis, altogether desireable, chap. 5. 16. The Church in Esay desires him with her whole soul, chap. 26. 9. and chap. 64. 1. as impatient of further delays, crieth out, Oh that thou wouldst rent the heavens, and come down, that the mountains might flow down at thy presence. Drop down ye heavens from above, and let the skyes pour down righteousness: Let the earth open, and let them bring forth salvation, &c. chap. 45. 8. Lo what earnest pantings and inquietations were in those ancient beleevers after Christ, what continuall fallies, as it were, and egressions of affection.

behold, he shall come ] He shall, he shall: nay he is even come already: for so the Hebrew hath it, Hinneh ba, behold; he is come: me-thinks I even see him. A like text there is, Habak 2. 3. The duty required is, Wait: the promise is delivered, doubled, and trebled: It shall speak, it will come, it will surely come. Nay doubled again. It shall not lie, it will not tarry. It is as if God had said, Do but wait, and you shall be delivered, you shall be delivered, you shall be delivered; you shall, you shall. Oh the Rhetorike of God! oh the certainty of the promises! A Lapid his Note is not here to be passed by. This word Behold, signifieth that this coming of Christ in the flesh, should be 1. New, admirable, and stupendious. 2. Sure and certain. 3. Desireable, and joyfull. 4. Famous and renowned.

saith the Lord of Hosts ] And that's assurance good enough: for hath he said it, and shall he not do it? Here is firm footing for faith: and men are bound to rest in Gods Ipse dixit. Abraham did, and required no other evidence, Rom. 4. He cared not for the deadnesse of his own body, or of his wives womb. He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief, &c. No more must we, if we will be heirs of the world, with faithfull Abraham. Gods truth and power are the Jackin and Boaz, the two pillars whereupon faith must repose: beleeving God upon his bare word, and that against sense in things invisable, and against reason, in things incredible.

Verse 2. But who may abide the day of his coming? ] The Prophet Esay asketh, Who shall declare his generation? that is, the mystery of his incarnation, (that habitatio Dei cum carne, which the Magicians held impossible) or the history of his birth, life, and death (as some fence it) whose tongue shall be able to speak it, or pen to write it? Who can think of the day of his coming? so the Vulgar reads this text: viz. of all the glory, graces, benefits of that day? But the Hebrew word is the same, as Prov. 18. 14. The spirit of a man will sustain his firmity: and is so rendred here by the Chaldee and Kimchi. Who can sustain, or abide the day of his coming, sc. in the flesh? What wicked man will be able to endre it? for he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, (that is, the consciences of carnall men glued to the earth) and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked, Esay 11. 4. And this is spoken of the Branch that grew out of the root of Jesse, verf. 1. when the goodly family was sunk so low, as from David the king, to Jeseph the Carpenter. With what terrour struck he the hearts of Herod, and all Jerusalem by the news of his nativity? Mat. 2. 3. And si praeſepe vagientis Herodem tantum terruit, quid tribunal judicantis? If Christ in the cradle were so terrible, what will he be on the Tribunal? The Text that troubled those miscreants, was Mic. 5. 2. which some (taking tsagur in the Neuter Gender) render thus: And thou Bethlehem Ephrata, it is a small thing to be among the Princes of Judah: out of thee shall come a ruler, &c. Thus, Herod and his complices could not hear of without horrour: as neither could that other Herod, of the same of Christs mighty works, Mat. 14. 1, 2. such a glimpse of Divine glory shone in them. The sinners in Zion are afraid: fearfulnesse surprizeth the hypocrites: and they run as farre, and as fast as they can from Christ, with these frightfull words in their mouthes. Who amongst us shall dwell with the devouring fire? who shall abide with the everlasting burnings? The Ruffianly souldiers were flung flat on their backs, when he said no more but, I am he, Joh. 18. 6. Quid autem judicaturus faciet, qui judicandus hoc fecit? What will he do when he comes to judgement, who was thus terrible now that he was to be judged? Oh that the terrour of the Lord might perswade people to forsake their sins, and to kisse the Son, lest he be angry. Though a lamb, he can be terrible to the kings of the earth: and though he break not the bruised reed, Matth. 12. 20. yet

Esay 53. 8.
Daniel. 2. 11.

August.

yet his enemies he will break with a rod of iron, and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel. Be wise now therefore, O ye kings, &c. Psal. 2. 9, 10. And as the Sun, Moon, and eleven Starres in Joseph's vision, did obeysance to him; so let our souls, bodies, all our temporall, naturall, morall, and spirituall abilities bee subject and serviceable to Christ, as ever wee hope to look him in the face with comfort.

and who shall stand when he appeareth? ] Heb. at the sight of him. True it is, that Christ coming to help us in distresse, for the want of externall pomp in his Ordinances, and worldly glory in his Ministers, and members, and splendour of humane Eloquence in his Doctrines, is despised by those that form and frame to themselves a Christ like to the mighty Monarchs of the earth: like as Agesslaus King of Spartans, coming to help the King of Egypt, was slighted in that country for his mean habit, and contemptible outside. But if the Centurion were worthy of respect, because he loved the Jewish Nation, and built them a Synagogue; Shall not Christ much more, even as Prince of the Kings of the earth, sith hee loved us, and washed us with his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father, Revel. 1. 5, 6? By whom also hee is made unto us, righteousnesse, (imputatively) wisdom, sanctification, and redemption, effectively, by way of inherency and gracious operation? Who is able to stand before this holy Lord God? as the men of Bethshemesh once said. Who would not fear this king of Nations, saith Jeremy, this king of Saints, saith John? for to him doth it appertain: sith there is none like unto him: neither can any stand before him when he appeareth, any more then a glasse bottle can stand before a Cannon shot. O come, let us worship, and bow down, let us kcel before this Lord our maker. If we harden our hearts, he will harden his hand, and hasten our destruction. There's no standing before this Lion, no bearing up sail in the tempest of his wrath: you must either be his subjects, or his footstool: either vail to him, or perish by him. Thine arrows are sharp in the heart of the kings enemies, whereby the people fall under thee, Psal. 45. 5. What a world of miseries have the refractory Jews suffered, and do yet, for rejecting the Lord Jesus? They might have known out of their own Cabalists (besides Daniels seventy weeks, and other Scripture-evidences) that the Messiah was amongst them: for it is there expressly recorded, that Messias should come in the time of Hillels disciples: one of whom was Simon the just, who embraced the child Jesus in his arms: who also foretold that that child was set for the ruin and rising again of many in Israel, and for a signe which should be spoken against, that the thoughts of many hearts might be revealed. And to the same purpose St. Peter 1 Epist. cap. 2. ver. 7, 8. But before them both, Our Prophet here.

1 Sam. 6. 20.
Jer. 10. 7.

Rev. 15. 3, 4.

Psal. 95.

Vide Malachy. in Act. 18. 28.

Luk. 2. 34, 35.

For he is like a refiners fire | Intimating, that the times of the Messiah would be discriminating, shedding times: and that he would separate the precious from the vile, the gold from the dross, the sheep from the goats: That Nabal should no more be called Nadib, the vile person liberal, the churle bouctifull, Esay 32. 5. but that good people should be discerned, and honoured; hypocrites detected, and detested, as was Judas, Magus, Demas, &c. slit up and slain by Christs two-edged sword, by his presence and preaching. Surely his fame is in his hand, though the devil and hisimps would fain wring it out, and he will thoroughly purge his floor (malum in area nobiscum esse possunt, in horreo non possunt) he will drive the chaff one way, and the wheat another: for what is the chaff to the wheat, saith the Lord? he will purifie the souls of his Saints, in obeying the truth through the spirit, unto unfeigned love of the brethren, 1 Pet. 1. 22. So that they shall be united to such, and separated from sinners. Fire, we know, congregat homogenea, segregat heterogenea: for what fellowship hath light with darknesse? The spirit of Christ, called a spirit of judgement, and of burning, washeth away (so here refiners fire, and selters sope) the filth of the daughter of Zion, and purgeth the blood of Jerusalem from the midst thereof, Esay 4. 4. By filth and blood understand their excessive bravery, mentioned chap. 3. which now they had learned to call by another name, since their own names were written among the living in Jerusalem, verse 3. And here God made good to them that he had promised, Chap. 1. 25. that he would purely purge away their dross, and take away all their tinne: and that though their finnes were as scarlet, they should be

Augustin.
Mat. 3. 12.
Jer. 23. 20.

Sponaria.
vide Plin. lib.
10. chap. 3.
ut sunt Candidari Dei.

Sambedrim.

August. de Roma in Concil. Basil.

Jer. 13. 23.

Itinerar.
Scrip. pag. 20.

2 Cor. 9. 8.

be white as snow: though red like crimson, they should be as wooll verse 18. Fullers sope (or sope-waſh, as ſome render it) is of ſingular uſe to fetch out ſtains and ſpots, and to a whiten wooll: So (much more) is the blood and ſpirit of Chriſt, to whiten ſinfull ſoules, and to make men his Candidates. Such were thoſe Corinthians 1 Eph. 6. 11. Such were ſome of you, (that is, as bad as bad might be, lepers all over) but ye are waſhed ſo. by that Fuller of ſoules Chriſt Jeſus. And if any ask, How waſhed? It followes, but ye are ſanctified, but ye are juſtified in the name, that is, by the merit of the Lord Jeſus, and by the ſpirit of our God. The Jews in their Taloud hammer at this, when they queſtion, What is the name of Meſſias? Their answer is Hhevara Leprous (ſo. by imputation 2 Cor. 5. 20. Eſay 53. 6. whence alſo he is ſaid by one to be Maximus peccatorum, the greateſt of ſinners) and he ſitteth among the poor in the gates of Rome, carrying their ſickneſſes, according to that, Himſelf took our infirmities, and bore our ſickneſſes. There are two things in guilt. 1. The merit and deſert of it: this Chriſt took not. 2. The obligation to puniſhment: this he took, and ſo he became ſin, that is, bound to the puniſhment of ſin: which alſo he ſuffered even to the effuſion of his blood (that true Pactolus, or rather Jordan) whereby he hath cleaſed his people from ſins both guiltineſſe and filthineſſe. We have inveterate ſtaines, which will hardly be got out till the cloth be almoſt rub'd to peeces: corruption cleaves ſo cloſe to us, that fire and fullers ſope is but needfull to fetch it off. Nature and cuſtome have made our ſpots like that of the Leopard, which no art can cure, no water waſh off; becauſe they are not in the ſkin only, but in the fleſh and bones, in the ſinews and in the moſt inner parts. Hence David prayeth again and again to be waſhed therowly, to be purged with hyſſop, to be waſhed and wrung in this fullers ſope of Chriſts blood, and with the clean water of his holy ſpirit. This is the only true Purgatory, the Kings-bath, the fountain opened for ſin and for uncleanneſſe Zach. 13. 1. Here Chriſt waſheth his, not only from outward deſilement, but from their ſwinish nature: that when waſhed clean they may not, (as elſe they would) wallow in the next guzzle. Here are thoſe ſovereign mundaying waters of the Sanctuary, which ſo waſh off the corruption of the ulcer, that they cool the heat, and ſtay the ſpred of the infection: and by degrees heal the ſame. Hither poor ſinners need not come as to the poole of Bethſaida one by one, but, as Turks to their Mahomet, Papiſts to their Lady, by troops and Caravans, true Chriſtians to their All-ſufficient Saviour, how much more? In that poole of Bethſaida, the Priests uſed to waſh their ſacrifices; becauſe no unclean thing might come within the Temple. The water was of reddiſh colour, and ran into that place in great abundance; and therefore it was called faith One, the houſe of effuſion. This ſhadowed out, that every of Chriſts ſheep muſt be waſhed in the poole of his blood, before they can be meet ſacrifices, an offering unto the Lord in righteouſneſſe, as it is in the next verſe. Other blood ſtaines what is waſhed in it: this blood of the ſpotleſſe lambe whiteneth as fullers ſope, and purifieth from all pollution of fleſh and ſpirit Rev. 7. 14. This is he that came by water and blood, even Jeſus Chriſt: not by water only but by water and blood 1 Ioh. 5. 6. The Priests of the old law were conſecrated firſt with oyle, and then with blood: So was Chriſt, firſt with the ſpirit Eſa. 61. 1. and then with his own blood for our benefit.

Verſe 3. And he ſhall ſit as a refiner i. e. he ſhall ſtick to the work, and not ſtart from it, till he bring forth judgement to victory Mat. 12. 20. that is, till he have perfected the work of grace begun in his people, (for he is Author and finiſher of their faith Heb. 12. 2.) and by patience, made them perfect and entire, wanting nothing. Iam. 1. 4. Chriſt, who is the God of all grace, and hath called them to his eternall glory, will, after they have ſuffered awhile, in his ſornace or ſining-pot (Pro. 17. 3.) of afflictions, make them perfect, ſtabliſh, ſtrengthen, ſettle them 1 Pet. 5. 10. yea make all grace to abound toward them: that they alwayes having all ſufficiency in all things may abound to every good work. For which holy purpoſe, Chriſt our Refiner hath his fire in Zion, and his furnace in Ieruſalem Iſai. 31. 9. his conſtatories, and his crucibles, wherein his third part being brought thorough the fire ſhall be refined as ſilver is refined, and tried as gold is tried Zach. 13. 9. that the triall of their faith (who have glorified him in the very fires Iſa. 24. 15.) being much more precious then that of gold that periſbeth, may be found to praise and honour and glory 1 Pet. 1. 7. True gold will undergoe the triall of the seventh fire, which Alchymy gold will not. Christ Jesus after that he hath been to his people as a refiners fire, and fullers sope, that is, after that he hath justified, and sanctified them also in some part, will sit as a refiner and purifier of silver, that is, he will be serious, accurate, and assiduous in scouring them from corruption by correption, in purging out the remnants of sin by affliction sanctified. For by this shall the iniquity of Jacob be purged, and this is all the fruit, to take away his sin, Iſa. 27. 9. Christ hath bought off all our corruptions, redeemed us from all iniquity Tir. 2. 14. and God will have the price of Christs blood out: what the word purgeth not, the rod must; like as what evill humours Summer purgeth not out by sweating. Winter concocts by driving in the heat. And as winter is of use for mellowing the ground, and for killing worms and weeds &c. so is the crosse sanctified for quelling and killing fleshly lusts that fight against the soul. He that hold the winds in his fist, stayes his rough wind, Eſay 27. 8. and lets out of his treasury such a wind as shall make his yong plants fruitful, and blow away their unkindly blossomes and leaves. Black sope makes white clothes, if God set in and set it on with his battle-dore, as that Martyr phrased it. Fowl and stained garments are whitened and purified, by laying abroad in cold frosty nights. Scouring and beating of them with a stick, beats out the mothes and the dust: so do afflictions, corruptions from the heart. Aloes kills wormes: so do bitter crosse crawling lusts. Rubarbe is full of choler, yet doth mightily purge choler. Hemlock is a deadly plant, yet the juyce applyed heales ignis sacer and hot corroding ulcers: and much asswageth the inflammation of the eyes. The sting of a scorpion, though arrant poyson, yet is an antidote against poyson. Nothing is better to cure a leprosie, then the drinking of that wine wherein a viper hath been drown'd. The viper (the head and tail being cut off) beaten and applied cures her own biting. Affliction is in it self an evill, a fruit of Gods wrath, and a peece of the curse. Christ alters the property to his, and makes one poison antidotary to another, and cures security by misery: as Physitians oft cure a lethargy by a fever. Every affliction sanctified rubbs off some rust, melts off some drosse, empties and evacuates some superfluity of naughtineſſe, strains out some corruption. Iob 10. 10. Christ straines out our motes, whiles our hearts are powred out like milk, with grief and fear: he also keeps us from setting on the lees, by emptying us from vessel to vessel: Ier. 48. 11. when as the wicked have no changes, and therefore they fear not God: they come not in trouble like other men, therefore they face the heavens, and their tongues walk thorough the earth: Pſal. 73. All that are Christs people are sure of sore and sharp afflictions, fiery tryals and tribulations, piercing and pressing crosses Pſal. 34. 19. Iam. 1. 2. He will be sure to plow his own ground, whatsoever becomes of the wast; and to weed his own garden, though the rest of the world should be let alone to grow wild. He will cast his purest gold into the fire of afflictions: but they shall lose nothing by it. Gold cast into the fire wasteth not, cast into the water rusteth not. No faint was ever the worse for his sufferings, but the better: the least that can come of it, is to do good duties with greater zeal, and larger affection Eſay 26. 9. Now, who would not fetch such gold out of a fiery crucible?

very

and he shall purifie the sons of Levi] Whom he had before faulted chap. 1. and 2. Or he may mean the Ministers of the Gospell, called Priests and Levites Eſay 66. 21. Or rather, all the royall Priest-hood of Gods people, whose office is to offer up spirituall sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus christ. 1 Pet. 2. 5, 9. Rom. 12. 1, 2. Now for these, Christ 1. Of bad makes them good, as he did Joſes the Levite Act. 4. 36. and many priests Act. 6. 7. He makes them passe under the rod, and so brings them into the bond of the covenant Ezek. 20. 37. 2. Of good he makes them better and brighter, he powres them forth as molten mettall, so the Septuagint read this text. Gold that is melted in the furnace, is not only purified, but also made malleable: yea fit for the mould. Their hearts are brought down, they speak as out of the ground Eſay 29. 4. in a low language, and like broken men: they put their mouths in the dust, they lie low at Christs feet, and lay, -Speak Lord, for thy servant heareth. Thus haughty Hagar humbled by affliction

Prov. 5. 11,
12. 5.

St. Ambrose
De Virginitate
lib. 1. c. 10.
Certe animam.

Iſa. 48. 10.

a flaccid harkenerh to the Angell, and submits to her miſtreſſe: that yong gallant, that in the pride of his proſperity, in the ruſh of his jollity would not be warned; when his ſleſh and his body was conſumed, when his bones clattered in his ſkin, and the mourners expected him at the doors, he is of another mind, and he may be talked with: then like the beaten viper he caſteth up his poyſon both of high-mindedneſſe and of earthly-mindedneſſe, and if you have any good counſell to give him, he is ready to receive it. See the like Iob 33. 19, 20, 21. See.

and purge them as gold and ſilver] Colabit eos, ſaith the Vulgar. He ſhall ſtrayne them as ſome liquor or liquid matter: ſo that the purer part ſhall go thorough the ſtrayner or colander, and the dreggy may be left. The ſame thing is again and again promiſed, as for more certainty ſake, ſo to ſhew that the purity ſhould be very great in the dayes of the goſpell. Howbeit for the comfort of his poore people who are conſcious of more drowle then good oare, Chriſt hath promiſed that he will refine them, but not as ſilver, he will not be over-exact with them; he will not mark all that's amiſſe. he will not contend very much, leſt the choice ſpirits of his afflicted people ſhould faile before him Iſa. 57. 16. when the child ſwornes in the whipping, Chriſt lets fall the rod, and falls a kiſſing it, to fetch life into it again. As 'tis a rule in phyſick ſtill to maintain nature: ſo God is careful ſtill to keep up his peoples ſpirits by cordials; though he purge them ſometimes till he bring them almoſt to ſkin and bone, that there may be a ſpring of better blood and ſpirits.

that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteouſneſſe] Or a right offering, a pure worſhip, holy duties from a right principle, and to a right purpoſe. Two things make a good Chriſtian, good actions, and good aymes. Though a good ayme doth not make a bad action good (as we ſee in Vizza) yet a bad ayme makes a good action bad, as we ſee in Iehu. If Gods worke be not duely done, we may meet with branches inſtead of bleſſings 1 Chron. 15. 17. David failed but in a ceremony: yet God was angry. Iehu's zeal was rewarded in an act of juſtice quoad ſubſtantiam operis, in regard of the ſubſtance of the work: and yet puniſhed as an act of policy, quoad medium for the perverſe end. Let no man meaſure himſelf by the matter of things done; for there may be malum opus in bona materia, an evill work in a good matter: Works materially good may never prove to formally and eventually. Religion is a curious clock-work: if but one wheel be diſtempered, all may go wrong. David in numbring the people omitted that duty Exod. 30. 12, 13, 14, 15. and thence, the plague.

Verſe 4. Then ſhall the offerings of Judah and Jeruſalem] That is, of the Latine church, and of Rome, ſaith Ribera. A partiall fancy of a Poriſh Interpreter boldly propounded, barely proved: and therefore as he affirmeth without reaſon, ſo he may be diſmiſſed without refutation. Underſtand it rather of the whole church wherſoever, in Cities, or Countries: and obſerve, that neither Judah nor Jeruſalem, how highly ſoever honoured or favoured otherwiſe, ſhall have their offerings accepted in heaven, unleſſe their hearts be firſt purified by faith. Till then, their ſacrifices, how ſpecious ſoever, are neither living (but dead works, as the author to the Hebrews calles it) nor holy, that is, pure and unpolluted 1 Cor. 7. 34. unleſſe themſelves be partakers of the grace of life 1 Pet. 3. 7. and can boldly ſay with David, preserve my ſoule, for I am holy, or one whom thou favoureſt. Pſal. 86. 2. So Pſal. 4. 3. he makes this the ground of his hope, that his prayer ſhould be heard, that the Lord looked upon him as a godly perſon. God regards not the prayer, if the man be not right. The blood of a ſheep and of a ſwine are like: yea, it may be the blood of a ſwine is better and ſweeter then of a ſheep, yet was it not to be offered, becauſe of a ſwine. See Heb. 13. 16. Philip. 4. 18. Iob. 15. 16. Pſal. 147. 11. Eſay 62. 4. Heb. 11. 6. Look how light, ſaith Chryſoſtome, maketh all things pleaſing to men: ſo doth faith to God. True faith is like the ſalt that healed the waters 2 King. 2. 21. O pray Chriſt to caſt in a cruſe-full of it into our hearts, or elſe we loſe all our ſervices; nay we do worſe then loſe our labour, for diſpleaſing ſervice is double diſhonour: we do but take paines to go to hell. See more of this matter in the Notes on chap. 1. verſe 9, 10.

Rom. 12. 1.

as in the dayes of old, as in former years] i. e. As the sacrifices of Abel, Abraham, Aaron, &c. as the prayers and holy performances of David, Eliab, Samuel (who is thought to be the same with Pethuel Ios. 1. 1. which signifieth a Perwader of God, and that he was so called, because he could have what he would of God) Cornelius, Paul &c. were very effectually available, and did wonders even to the opening and shutting of heaven, as Eliab to the opening of the doores of Leviathan, as Jonah, to the delivering even graves of their dead, as Heb. 11. 35. &c. so they shall be still, as effectually, as those Ancient Saints, we draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evill conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water Heb. 10. 22. See Iam. 5. 16, 17, 18. and Hos. 12. 4. The Prophet speaking of Jacob his wrestling with God by weeping, and his prevailing by praying (so that he was knighted for his good service, and dubb'd Israel, or a Prince of God) subjoynes for our comfort, God found him in Bethel, and there he spake with us. So then, what encouragement accesse and successe Jacob had at Bethel, the same have we: provided that we so carry the matter, that it may be said of us, as Psal. 24. 6. This is the generation of them that seek him; of them that seek thy face: this is Jacob: Provided that as Jacob wrestled in the night, and alone, and when God was leaving him, and upon one leg: so do we, amidst all difficulties and discouragements.

Iob. 41 14.

Verse 5. And I will come neer to you to judgement] q. d. You conceit me a great way off, and put far from you the thoughts of my coming, having been so bold as to ask, Where is the God of judgement &c. Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me. Not, as you desired, to avenge you of your enemies, but as justice requireth, to be avenged of you for your impieties which I have here billed up against you. And that ye may not think to escape, know that as I am a Judge at hand, so a present witnesse, testis festinantissimus a most swift witnesse, to evict and punish you, for your most secret sins. So then, howsoever the Lord spare long, yet he will be at length, both a hasty witnesse and a severe Judge against those that abuse his patience: he will not alwayes stand them for a sinning-stock, but pay them home for the new and the old. Ier. 6. 6. Mic. 1. 3. God owed a revenge to the house of Eli: and yet at length, by the delation of Doeg, takes occasion to pay it. It is a vain hope that is raised from the delay of judgement: No time can be any prejudice to the Ancient of dayes. If his word sleep, it shall not dye: but after long intermissions breaks forth into those effects which men had forgotten to look for, and ceased to fear. The sleeping of vengeance causeth the overflow of sin Eccles. 8. 11. and the overflow of sin causeth the awaking of vengeance Psal. 50. 21. so that sometimes he strikes ere he gives any further warning: as Abalom intending to kill Amnon, spake neither good nor evil to him. Sabito tollitur qui diu toleratur. Till the fiery serpents, God had ever consulted with Moses, and threatened ere he punished. Now he strikes and sayes nothing. The anger is so much more, by how much less notified. Still revenges are ever most dangerous and deadly, when God is not heard before he is felt (as in hewing of wood, the blow is not heard, till the axe be seen to have struck) or if he be heard to say as Neh. 1. 9. what do ye imagine against the Lord? he will make an utter end: affliction shall not arise up the second time: its a signe he is implacably bent, and meanes to have but one blow. The wicked's happiness will take its end surely and swiftly. The end is come, is come, is come, saith Ezechiel chap. 7. The Lord is come neer to you to judgement, and he will be a speedy witnesse. Judge and witnesse both: which in mens courts cannot be: but God being infinitely both wise and holy, may be and will be both witnesse and Judge against the workers of iniquity: and when they are (as Adonijah's guests were 1 King. 1.) at the height of their joyes and hopes, he confounds all their devices, and layes them open to the scorn of the world, to the anguish of their own guilty hearts, and the dint of his own unsporable displeasure, which is such as none can avert or avoid.

*Ad poenam tardus Deus est, ad premia velox, Sed pensare solet vi graviore moram.
Pena venit grovior, quò magè sera venit.*

against the forcerers] Or Jugglers, Wizards, Negromancers &c. See the several sorts forbidden, and to be punished Deut. 18. 10. By Gods law such might not be suffered to live, Exod. 22. 8. yet did this evil prevail in Israel 2 Chron. 33. 6. Jer. 27. 9. and here, It was done by unlawful means, as Saul said to the witch, Divine unto me by the familiar spirit, 1 Sam. 28. 8. and it was a thing hateful to God, even as high rebellion, 1 Sam. 15. 23. sith the ground of this familiarity is a diabolical contract overt, or covert, explicit or implicit. It is fitly called the black Art, for theres no true light in them that use it Isai. 8. 19. they depart from God and his testimony, ib. and so tempt the devil to tempt them. This was Sauls sin, for which the Lord killed him 1 Chron. 10. 13. and hath threatened to cut off all from among his people, that do enquire of such, Levit. 20. 6. Thou hast been partaker with the adulterer, Psal. 50. 18. so are such with forcerers. Surely the wounds of God are better then the faves of Satan; as Ahaziah found it. And they which in case of losse or sicknesse &c. make hell their refuge, shall smoke and smart for it in the end. Satan seeks to them in his temptations, they in their consultations seek to him: and now that they have mutually found each other, if ever they part, it is a miracle: He is an untpeakable proud spirit, and yet will stoop to the meanest man or woman to be at their command (the witch of Endor is twice in one verse 1 Sam. 28. 7. called the Mistrisse of the Spirit, because in covenant with him) whereby he may cheat them, and their clients of Salvation. Every one that consults with him, worships him, though he bow not, as Saul did: neither doth that old man-slayer desire any other reverence, then to be fought unto.

and against the adulterers] Sept. the adulteresses. Adulterium, quasi ad alterum, aut alterius torum, a going up to another mans bed, as Reuben did, and was severely sentenced for it, Gen. 49. 4. It was to be punished with death, even by the law of Nature: because the society and purity of posterity could not otherwise continue amongst men. Nebuchad-nazzar roasted in the fire Zedekiah and Ahab two false prophets of Judah, because they committed adultery with their neighbours wives, Jer. 29. 22, 23. The Egyptians used to cut off the nose of the adulteresse: the Prophet alludes to this Ezek. 23. 25. The Athenians, Lacedemonians, and Romans were very severe against this sin; as Plutarch recordeth in his parallels. The old French and Saxons also, as Tacitus tells us. By Gods law they were to be stoned to death; and the High-priests daughter was to be burned for this fault, Lev. 24. 9. a peculiar punishment, and not to be paralleled in the whole law. If men fail to fall upon such (it is an hainous crime saith holy Job, and an iniquity to be punished by the Judges, Chap. 31. 10.) God himself will do it, Heb. 13. 4. and did it effectually, 1 Cor. 10. 8. and on the filthy Sodomites, Gen. 19. and on Charles 2. King of Navar who was much addicted to this sin, which so wasted his spirits, that in his old age he fell into a Lethargy. To comfort his benumbed joyns he was bound and sewed up in a sheet steeped in boyling Aquavita. The Surgeon having made an end of sewing him, and wanting a knife to cut off his threed, took a wax candle that stood lighted by him. But the flame running down by the threed, caught hold on the sheet, which according to the nature of the Aquavita burned with that vehemency, that the miserable king ended his dayes in the fire. But say the adulterer be neither stoned, nor burned: yet God usually stoneth such with a stony heart, Hos. 4. 11. which is a most fearful judgment: and when they die burneth them with the hottest fire in hell. Prov. 2. 18. the whores guests go down to the dead. Heb. el Rephaim, to the Giants: to that part of hell where those damned monsters are. See 2 Peter 2. 10. and mark the word Chiefly.

and against false swearers] A sin of an high nature, condemned by the height of nature, and punished by the Heathens. Perjurii poena divina exitium; humana, dedecus; This was one of the laws of the twelve tables in Rome. God punisheth perjury with destruction: men with disgrace. Tissaphernes the Persian General, being overcome by Agessilaus King of Spartans, craved three-moneths truce, and had it: They both sware to be quiet on both sides. Tissaphernes soon brake his oath: but Agessilaus religiously kept it, saying, that Gods and men would favour him for his fidelity, but curse and execrate the other for his perjury. God shewed

Zachary

Venus ab antiquis ἀφροδίτη
dicta
See Pro. 5. 8.

Cornel Nepos
in vit. Agess.

Zachary a flying role long and large, ten yards long, and five broad, tull of curses against the false swearer, with commission to rest upon his house, which he he holds his castle, and where he thinks himself most secure. Michael Paleologus Emperour of Constantinople made the Greek Church acknowledge the Popes supremacie, and did many other things contrary to his oath: and therefore lieth obscurely buried, shrouded in the sheet of defame, saith the Historian. So doth Rodolphus Duke of Sueveland, who by the Popes instigation broke his oath of allegiance to Henry the Emperour, and by the cutting off his faithlesse right hand lost his life. So doth Sigismund the Emperour, for his false dealing with John Huss. Ladislaus king of Hungary, for his perjurious setting upon Amurath the great Turk at the battle of Varna, where he was deservedly defeated. What a blur was that to the old Romans, if true, that Mirchanes the Persian General should say of them, Romanis promittere promptum est &c. The Romans will promise any thing, and swear to it, but perform nothing that makes against their profit? There were at Rome such as could lend an oath at need: and would not stick to swear that their friend or foe was at Rome and at Interamna both at once. How slippery the Papiſts are, and how bloody, both in their Positions and dispositions, is well known to all. But God is the avenger of all such: because they call him to witnesse a falshood: and dare him to his face to execute his vengeance. See Zach. 8.17.

Turk. hist.

Procop.
1. de bello
Persic.

and against those that oppresse &c. Either by denying, diminishing, or delaying their wages. The vulgar rendereth it, who caluminate, or make cavils to detain wages, which is the poor hirelings lively-hood, whereupon he setteth his heart Deut. 24.15. and maintaineth his life; which is therefore called the life of his hands, because upheld by the labour of his hands. He gets it, and eats it: and is in his house like a snail in his shell; crush that, and you kill him. This is a crying cruelty Jam. 5. 4. and hath a woe against it Jer. 22.13. Jam. 2.13. Laban is taxed for it Gen. 31. 7. and for those that are guilty, if they mend not, and make restitution, Master Lamimer tells them they shall cough in hell.

Isai 57. 10.

the widow A calamitous name: she is called in Hebrew from her dumbnesse Almanan: because, death having cut off her head, she hath lost her tongue, and hath none to speak for her. A vine, whose root is uncovered, thrives not: so a widow, the covering of whose eyes is taken away, joyes not. God therefore pleads for such as his clients, and takes special care for them: the Deacons were anciently ordained specially for their sakes Act. 6.1. 1 Tim. 5.3. and Pharisees doomed to a deeper damnation for devouring widows houses, Mat. 23.14. and Magistrates charged to plead for the widow, Isai. 1. 17. as judge Job did Chap. 31. 16. and all sorts to make much of her, and communicate to her, Deut. 24.19,20,21.

and the fatherlesse We are Orphans, and fatherlesse, saith the Church Lam. 5. 3. And we are all Orphans, said Queen Elizabeth (in her speech to the children of Christs Hospital) let me have your prayers, and you shall have my protection. That Hospital was founded by her brother King Edward the sixth for the relief of fatherlesse children, after the example of the ancient Church, which had her Orphanotrophs Orphan-breeders. With God the fatherlesse findeth mercy Hos. 14.3. and all his vice-gods are commanded the like, Psal. 82.1,2,3,4. unlesse they will consult shame and misery to their own houses, and Job-like, leave the leprosy to their little ones for a legacy. Better leave them a wallet to beg from door to door, then a cursed hoard of Orphans goods.

and that turn aside the stranger The right of strangers is so holy (saith Master Fox) that there was never nation so barbarous that would violate the same. When Steven Gardiner had in his power the renowned Peter Martyr then teaching at Oxford, he would not keep him to punish him: but when he should go his way, gave him wherewith to bear his charges.

Ayl. and Mori.
Joh. 1783.

and fear not me This is set last as the source of all the former evils. See the like Rom. 3.18. and Psal. 14. 1. where Atheisme and irreligion is made the root of all the sin in the world. Gods holy fear is to the soul, as the banks are to the sea, or the bridle to the horse, it was so to Isaac, who reigned in the reverend fear of God, when he saw that he had done unwilling justice, durst not reverse Jacobs blessing

Juvenal.

Exod. 18.

sing, though prompted to it by natural affection and Esaus howlings, Gen. 27. 33. It was so to Job, Joseph, Nehemiah, Daniel &c. who could easily have born out their oppressions by their greatnesse. And indeed whereas other men have other bits, and restraints, great men, if they fear not God, have nothing else to fear: but dare obtrude and justifie to the world the most malepart misdemeanours, because it is facinus maioris abolla, the fact of a great one, who do many times as easily break through the lattice of the laws, as the bigger flies do through a spider-web, as Anacharsis was wont to say of his Scythians. Hence Jethro would have his Justice of peace to be a man fearing God: And this qualification he fitly placeth in the midst of the other graces requisit to him, as the heart in the body, for conveying life to all the parts, or as a dram of musk perfuming the whole box of ointment Exod. 18. 21. Nothing makes a man so good a patriot as the true fear of Gods blessed name, and a zealous forwardnesse for his glory, goodnesse, and good causes. This, this alone is it that can truly beautifie and adorn all other personal sufficiencies, and indeed sanctifie and blesse all publick employments, and services of state. Whereas on the contrary, sublata pietate, fides tollitur, take away piety, and fidelity is gone; as we see in the unjust judge Luk. 18. 2. in Abrahams judgement of the Philistines Gen. 20. 11. and in Constantinus Chlorus his experiment of his Councillours and Courtiers: whence that famous Maxime of his recorded by Eusebius, He cannot be faithful to me, that is unfaithful to God: religion being the ground of all true fidelity and loyaltie to king and Countrey. Hence that close connexion Fear God, honour the king: And that again of Solomon, My son, fear thou the Lord, and the king: and meddle not with them that are given to change Prov. 24. 21.

Verse 6. For I am the Lord, I change not ] I am Jehovah. This is Gods proper and incommunicable name. It imports three things.

1. That God is of himself. This Plato acknowledged calling God τὸ ὄν, and τὸ ὄν ὄντως, Julius Scaliger by a wonderful word calleth God ἀνταρτὴν One that hath his being or existence of himself, before the world was, Ejy 44 6.

2. That he giveth being to all things else, for in him they both are and consist. He sustains all, both in respect of being, excellencies and operations, Heb. 1. 3. The greatest excellencies in us do as much depend upon God, as the effigies in the glasse upon the presence of the face that causeth it.

3. That he giveth being to his word, effecting whatsoever he speaketh. Hence when either some special mercy is promised, or some extraordinary judgment threatened, the name of Jehovah is affixed. See Exod. 6. 3. Ejy 45. 2, 3. Ezek. 5. 17. The Ancient Jew-Doctours make this distinction between Elohim and Jehovah. By Elohim say they, is signified Middath din, a quality or property of judgment. By Jehovah, middath Rachamim, a quality or property of mercy. And here unto they apply that text Psal. 56. 11. In God (Elohim) I will praise the word, in Jehovah I will praise the word, that is, five ure agui mecum, five ex aequo & bono, whether he deal strictly with me, or graciously, I will praise him howsoever. But this distinction, as it holds not alwayes; so not here. For to shew the certainty of the judgement denounced verse 5. is this subjoynd, I am Jehovah &c. And if Jehovah come of Hovah (which signifies Contrition or destruction) as Heronymus ab Oleastro will have it, what can be more suitable to the Prophets purpose? it is somewhat like that in Ejy chap. 13. 6. Shod shall come from Shaddai, destruction from the Almighty, or from the Destroyer as some interpret Gods Name Shaddai.

I change not I am neither false nor fickle, to say, and unsay, to alter my minde, or to eat my word Psal. 89. 34. The eternity of Israel cannot lie, nor repent, said Samuel to Saul (and it was heavy tidings to him, as Ahi ah said to Ieroboams wife, I come unto thee with heavy tidings) For, he is not a man that he should repent. Men are mutable, and ther's no hold to be taken of what they say. Of many it may be said, as Tertullian of the Peacock, all in changeable colours: as often changed as moved. Italians all, as Eneas Sylvius said of Italy, Novitate quadam nihil habet stabile, ther's no taking their words. Of a certain Pope and his Nephew it is storied, that the one never spake as he thought, the other never performed what he spake. But God is not a man that he should repent: or if he do, it is after another manner manner then man repents. Repentance with man is the changing of his will: Repentance with God, is the willing of a change. It is mutatio rei non Dei, effectus non affectus, facti non consilii. Gods repentance is not a change of his will, but of his work. It noteth onely, (saith Mr. Perkins) the alteration of things, and actions done by him, and no change of his purpose and secret decree, which is immutable. What he hath written, he hath written, (as Pilate said peremptorily) there's no removing of him. If the sentence be passed, if the decree be come forth, none can avert or avoid it, Zeph. 3. 5. Curat ergo poenitentia ne praecurrat sententia. Chrysolog. Go quickly and make an atonement, as Moses said to Aaron, Num. 16. 46. Prepare to meet thy God, O Israel, Amos 4. 12. Mitte preces & lachrymas cordis legatos: meet him with intreaties of peace, agree with him quickly: who knowes if he will return and repent? for he is gracious and mercifull, slow to anger and of great kindness, and repenteth him of the evil, Joel 2. 13, 14. It should seem so indeed by this Text: For even whiles he is threatening, and ratifying what he had threatened, his heart is turned within him, his repentings are kindled together, Hof. 11. 8. And hence the following words, Therefore ye sonnes of Jacob are not consumed. A strange inference, (considering the fence and occasion of the foregoing words, as hath been set forth,) and not unlike that Hof. 2. 13, 14. I will visit upon her the dayes of Baalim--she went after her lovers, and forgot me, saith the Lord. Therefore (mark that Therefore) behold I will allure her, and bring her into the wilderness, and speak comfortably to her: And I will give her, &c. So Esay 57. 17, 18. For the iniquity of his covetousnesse was I wroth, and smot him: I hid me, and was wroth, and he went on forwardly, &c. I have seen his wayes, and will heal him: Wayes? what wayes? his covetousnesse, forwardnesse, &c. and yet I will heal him. I will deal with him not according to mine ordinary rule, but according to my Prerogative. If God will heal for his names sake (and so come in with his Non-obstante, as he doth, Psal. 106. 8) what people is there whom he may not heal? Well may these sinfull sonnes of Jacob be unconsumed: well may they have for their seventy years captivity, seven seventies of years (according to Dan. 9. 2, 3 weeks) for the re-enjoying of their own country: and Gods mercies shall bear the same proportion to his punishments, which seven (a complete number) hath to an unity. Provided, that they return to the Lord that smot them (as in the next verse) for else he will surely punish them seven times more, and seven times, and seven to that, Levit. 26. 21, 23, 27, &c. three severall times God raiseth his note of threatening, and he raiseth it by seven, and those are discords in Musique. Such sayings will bee heavy songs: and their execution heavy pangs to the impenitent.

Ezek 20 8, 14, 22, 45.

Verse 7. Even from the dayes of your fathers ye are gone away from mine ordinances] The more to magnifie his own mercy (by a miracle, whereof they had hitherto subsisted, by an extraordinary prop of his love, and long-suffering) God sets forth here their utter unworthinesse of any such free favour, by a double aggravation of their finnes. First, their long continuance therein, so that their finnes were grown inveterate, and ingrained, and themselves aged and even crooked therein, so that they could hardly ever be set strait again.

from the dayes of your fathers, &c.] q. d. Non hoc nuper facitis: nec semel ut erroris mereamini veniam: sed hereditarium habetis impietatem, &c. as Hieron paraphraseth this Text. You are no young sinners: it is not yesterday, or a few dayes since you transgressed against me: you are a seed of serpents, a race of rebels: you are as good at resisting the Holy Ghost, as ever your fathers were. Act. 7. 51. Secondly, their perversity and stiffnesse: they would not yeeld or be evicted. But ye say wherein shall we return? as if they were righteous and needed no repentance. Still they put God to his proofs, as Jer. 2. 35. and shew themselves an unperswadeable, and gainsaying people, Esay 65. 2. and this had been their manner from their youth, Jer. 22. 21. when they were in Egypt they served idols there, Ezek. 16. and 23. In the wilderness they tempted God ten times, and hearkened not to his voice. Num. 14. 22. Under their Judges, and then their Kings, they vexed him, and he bore with them, till there was no remedy, 2 Chron. 36. 16. After the captivity, they do antiquum obtinere, and are found guilty here of sundry both omissions, and commissions, calling for a just recompense of reward, Heb. 2. 2.

All

Chrysolog.

All which notwithstanding, Deus redire eos sibi non perire desiderat. God solliciteth their return unto him here by a precept and a promise, two effectual arguments, if any thing will work: and ratifieth all with his own authority, which is most authentick, in these words, saith the Lord of Hosts. A stile oft given to God, as elsewhere in Scripture, so especially in these three last Prophecies to the people returned from Babylon, because they had many enemies, and therefore had need of all encouragement: For God is called the Lord of Hosts, quod ille numine suo & nomine terreat terras, temperet tempora, exercitusque tam superiores quam inferiores gubernet, to shew that he hath all power in his hand, and doth whatsoever he pleaseth in heaven and earth. See the Notes on verse 17. of this chap. doct. 1. And for the Doctrine of returning to God (from whom we have deeply revolted) by repentance, see the Note on Zach. 1. 3.

Alsted.

But ye said, Wherein shall we return? This was their pride, proceeding from ignorance: they were rich and righteous, as those Laodiceans, Rev. 3. 17. not in truth, but in conceit, vainly puffed up by their carnall minds, drunk with self-dotage, as Luke 16. 15. Hence they stand upon their pantofles, and none must say, Black is their eye. Sin is in them as in its proper element, and therefore weighs not: till by long trading in wickednesse, they grow to that dead and dedolent disposition, Ephes. 4. 14. their heart fat as grease, their conscience cauterized, 1 Tim. 4. 2. that is, so benumbed, blotted, senselesse, filthy, and gangrenate, that it must be seared with an hot iron: whereupon it grows so crusty and brawny, that though cut or pierced with the sword of the spirit, it doth neither bleed nor feel: and though handfulls of hell-fire be flung in the face of it, yet it starts not, stirres not: but is deprived of all even passive power, and so Satanized, that there's no help for them.

Elementum in suo loco non ponderat.

Verse 8. Will a man rob God? Adam pillage Elohim? frail weak man seek to supplant (so the Septuagint render it) the great and mighty God? Giant-like boldnesse! Cacus met with his match, when he robb'd Hercules. Mercury (say the Poets) had a mind to steal Jupiters thunderbolts, but durst not meddle, lest he should speed as Prometheus had done, for stealing fire: or lest they should burn his fingers. The Eagle in the fable, that stole a piece of flesh from the Altar, and carried it together with a live-coal that stuck to it, to his nest, set his young and all on a light fire. Dionysius, that robb'd his god, was cast out of his kingdom, though he was wont to boast, that he had it bound to him with chains of Adamas. Belshazzar paid dear for his bowzing in the bowles of the Sanctuary. Cardinall Wolsey and five of his servants, employed by him in interverting consecrated goods, though perhaps to better purposes, came all to fearfull ends, as Scultetus noteth, and thereupon wisheth, Utinam his & similibus exemplis edocli discant homines res semel Deo consecratas timide attrahere. It is a snare to the man that devoureth that which is holy, Prov. 20. 25. They may be compared to those that, being of a cold and stegmatick stomach, eat hard and cholerick meats: well they may please their palates, but it cannot be for their health: no more can the murthering morsels of such sacrilegious persons, as devouring holy things, have their meat sawced and their drink spiced with the bitter wrath of God. See Job 20. 23. Polanus reads the Text thus, Will a man rob his Gods? q. d. Will any Heathen do so? did not they that worshipped Idols, abhorre sacrilege? Was it not one of the lawes of the twelve tables in Rome, Sacrum sacrove commendatum qui clepserit rapieritque, parricida esto; Let every sacrilegious person passe and bee punished for a parricide? And doth not Tully affirme of those Lawes, that they did exceed all the libraries of the Philosophers, in weight and worth? Did not those old Idolaters freely bestow their most precious things upon their Idols, Ezech. 16. 16, 17, 18, 19. Exod. 32. 3? yea their very children in sacrifice to Moloch, or Saturn? 2 King. 16. 3. and 17. 17. being as mad upon their Idols, as ever was any wicked wanton upon his harlot, lavishing out of the bag, &c. And are not our moderne Idolaters the Papists, as bountifull to their He-saints, and she-saints? so that their Churches are not able to hold their vowed presents and memories, but that in many places (as at Loretto, Sichem, &c.) they are faine to hang their Cloisters and Churchyards with them? Shall they in their petitions to our Parliaments plead for favour and forbearance upon this ground, because their ancestours (they say) bestowed so Ælian. lib. 2.

Var. hist.

Scult. Annal.
332.

Spec. Europ.

so great cost upon this land for church-maintenance : and shall it be said ( now that they are worthily cast out ) Possidebant Papista, possident Rapista, Wicked Papists had them, ungodly Rapists have them : Impropropriaries, I mean, that hold by an improper title, and all others that appropriate that to them and theirs which the Almighty is invested in. This is here instanced as a capitall crime, and called robbing of God, as well it may ; * Forasmuch as ministers maintenance (being tythes) is called the Lords, and holy to the Lord Lev. 27. 30. because separated from man and mans use, and therefore might not be altered. Verse 28. Or if any had a mind to redeem them, they were bound to add to the price every fifth penny above the true value. Verse 31. Let all those look to this whether Impropropriators false Patrons ( Latrones rather ) or others that either by force or fraud rob God of his right, deteyning part of the due at least, as Ananias and Sapphira did ; God hath a Quare Impedit against them, which one day they must make answer to.

Nunquid homo fraudabit Deum? sic verunt Aquila, Symmachus & Theodotion.

yet ye have robbed me ] Because ye have robbed my Ministers who are in my stead 2 Cor. 5. 20. and in whom he receiveth tythes, of whom it is witnessed that he li- veth, like as did Melchisedech, as a Priest and tyth-taker, and type of Christ. Heb. 7. 7, 8, 9. And as God is sensible of the least curtesy done to a Prophet to reward it, even to a cup of cold water Mat. 10. 42. ( so that he is a nggard to himself, that scants his beneficence to a Minister ) so for those that wrong and rob them, that deny them that double honour of countenance and maintenance that he hath appointed them, and hold them to hard allowance : muzzling the Ox, or giving him but straw at the best, for treading out the corn, they will dearly answer it before God, who holds all done to them as done to himself. Surely as David could not but feel his own cheeks shaven, and his own coat cut in his Embassadors ; they did but carry his person to Hannun : So here. And as there was never any king so poor and weak, but thought himself strong enough to revenge any wrong done, or abuse offered to his Embassadors : So the king of heaven will not fail to curse with a curse whole nations that forget God and forsake his Levites Dent. 12. 19. it being all one to God to deal in this case against a nation or against a man only. Job 34. 29.

Legati quod erant appella i superbius, Co- rinthum Pa- tris vestri ta- tius Gracia lu- men extinctum esse voluerunt. Cic. pro lege Man.

in tythes and offerings ] He had told them before they had robbed him : or ( as some read it ) stabbed him as with a ponyard. And here they should have confess- ed the action and craved pardon. But because they did nothing lesse ; standing upon their justification ( as before often ) God descends to the particular wherein they robbed him, In tythes and offerings : The originall hath it, Tythes and offer- ings, without the particle ( in ) and it is as if the Lord should say, you may easily know my meaning without so many words, but that you love to contest. You cannot be ignorant, that the Levites, for want of maintenance, are fled every man to his field, and so my work and worship is left undone. Good Nehemiah was sensible of it chap. 13. 10. and because he knew that, by this means, religion it self would be soon undermined and overturned, he contended with the Rulers, and made all the people pay their tythes : and this he worthily reckons among his good deeds, praying God to remember him for it, and not wipe it out chap. 13. 10. H Ezekiah, that great Reformer, shewed the like zeal in commanding the people that dwelt in Jerusalem to give the portion of the Priests and Levites, that they might attend upon the law of the Lord ( so the Vulgar ) that they might be encouraged in the law of the Lord, so we read 2 Chron. 31. 4. that is, that they might not follow their call- ings heavily for want of maintenance, but cheerefully bend themselves wholly to the service of the Lord. And here ( as Ferns once wished for the Romish syna- gogue ) I would we had some Moses, said He, to take away the evils of the times : non enim unum tantum vitulum sed multos habemus, for we have not one golden calf, but many : So have we of these times cause to wish we had some zealous Nehemiahs and H Ezekiahs to stickle and stand for Christs Ministers, not de- frauded of their due maintenance only ( a signe of gasping devotion ) but trampled upon by the foul feet of the basest of the people, as the filth of the world and the offcoursing of all things. Tythes they say are Jewish : but if Melchisedech tythed Abraham, by the same right whereby he blessed him : and if tythes by all lawes of Heb. 7. God, Nature, Nations, have been hallowed to God, as Junius and other modern Divines

Divines alledge and argue: and lastly, if things consecrated to Gods service may not be alienated, out of case of necessity Pro. 20. 25. Gal. 3. 15. it will appear to be otherwise. Or if tythes be Jewish, and yet Ministers must have a maintenance (Christ having so ordained 1 Cor. 9. 14.) and that both honourable 1 Tim. 5. 17, 18. and liberall Gal. 6. 6. how else shall they be given to hospitality, 1 Tim. 2. 2? (if they be not hospitable, they will be despicable) how will men satisfie their consciences in the quota pars: the particular quantity they must bestow upon them? The scripture speaketh only of the tenth part. Sed manum de tabula. Enough of this, if not more then enough.

Verse 9. Ye are cursea with a curse. Aug. ye are cursed with penury and scarcity of victuals, according to Deut. 28. 23. &c. and so great was this peoples poverty, that they were forced for food to sell not their fields only, but their sons and daughters Neb. 5. They had pinched on Gods side, and he had paid them home in the same kind: they thought in the famine to have kept the more to themselves, and they had the lesse, for keeping from him that which was his. A just hand of God upon all church-robbers: for most part they are alwayes in want and needy, their wealth melting away as snow before the sun, and their fields of blood purchased with the spoiles of Christ, proving as unfortunate and fatal to them as the gold of the Temple of Tholose did to Scipio's souldiers: of which who ever carried any part away, never prospered afterwards. What get men by such a deriny that shall prove their fatal destiny? Say they leave the gold behind them, yet they are likely to carry the guilt to hell with them 1 Cor. 5. 1, 2. yea to cough in hell, as Latimer phrased it, unlesse they make restitution, to digest in hell, what they have devoured on earth, as Austin. Because Pharaoh saith the river is mine own, therefore saith God, I will dry up the river Ezek. 29. 3, 9. The Merchant that denyeth to pay his custome, forfeits all his commodities: so here.

for ye have robbed me And therefore I have cursed you. God never punisheth people, but there is just cause for it, could they but see it: but that they are hardly drawn to, as here, and Esay 26. 11. the root of the matter is in themselves, as Iob speaks in another case; the plague of their own hearts 1 King. 8. 38. procureth them all the mischief, and may say to them as the heart of Apothecarius the tyrant seemed to say to him; who dreamed one night that he was fleced by the Scythians, and boyled in a caldron, and that his heart spake to him out of the kettle, It is I that have drawn thee to all this. Let men therefore, when under any misery, lay their hand upon their heart, thrust their hand into their bosom with Moses, they shall be sure to bring it out leprous: let them turn short again upon themselves, and say every man, What have I done? what evill have I committed, or at least admitted? what good have I omitted, or intermitted? Profane Esaü, beguiled of the blessing, cries out of his fathers store, of his brothers subtlety: not a word of his own prophanesse in slighting and selling his birth-right: he had forgot since he did eat and drink, and went his way Gen. 25. 34. The Jerusalem-Paraphrast adds, that he also despised his portion in the world to come, and denied the resurrection. But this he never taketh notice of. So Pompey beaten by Cesar out of the field blamed the divine providence for his ill successe: when he should rather have faulted his own retchlesse security (that he never considered into what place he were best to retire if worsted) and especially his sacriledge not long before that defeat, when he sackt Jerusalem, and ranackt the Temple. He might have considered what became (a little before his time) for the same offence of Alcimus, Heliodorus, Lyfimachus, Antiochus, Menelaus, and Nicanor, all notorious Church-robbers, and all hang'd up in gibbets, as it were, for example and admonition to all that should come after. Sacriledge is a fiare (saith Solomon, Pro. 20. 25.) that 1. catcheth suddenly. 2. holdeth surely. 3. destroyeth certainly. Cavete.

even this whole nation] The disease was grown Epidemicall, like that which Physicians call corruptio totius substantie, or that which the Prophet Esay also complaineth of chap. 1. 5, 6. The whole head is sick, the whole heart is faint &c. This sin of sacriledge was grown Nationall: there was a conjuncture of all sorts in this wickednesse; a rabble of rebels they were, ripe for judgement: yea though

Εγώ σοι
τέταυ διτίκα

1 Maccab. 9.
54, 55, 56.
2 Maccab. 3.
24, 25. and 4.
39, 41, 42. and
5. 15, 16. and
13. 4, 8. and
15. 30, 34.

Gods judgements were upon them, yet they persisted Neh. 13. 18. and increased wrath Ezra. 9. 13. God had smitten them, but they sorrowed not: but to be revenged on him, as it were, for laying famine upon them, they took away his tythes &c. Jer. 5. 3.

Vers. 10. Bring ye all the tythes into the store-house All, whether prædiall, or personall, all, and of every kind.

into the store-house the standing place for tythes, as it is called Neh. 13. 11, 12, 13. the tyth-barn, as the Vulgar hath it.

that there may be meat in my house Tereph, unde Tereph: and the English, prey: that there may be maintenance for my Ministers; enough not for themselves only, but for to be distributed to those that are about them: that they may not eat their morsels alone, that they may not be slaves to others, servants to themselves: that they may not bite with their teeth, and cry peace, teach for hire, and divine for money Mic. 3. 5, 11. that is, be fain to maintain themselves with sordid and unworthy flatteries. Balaam the false Prophet rede with his two men Num. 22. Gods Levite had one man Judg. 19. 11. Augustin lived neither like a Lord, for he ate his meat in wooden and marble dishes: neither lived he like a begger, for he used to eat with silver spoons. Possidon. in vii. Aug. What pity was it that Luther was forced to cry out in his Comment on Gen. 47. Nisi superesset spoliū Egypti quid rapuimus Paup. omnibus ministris verbi fame percundum esset. Quod si sustentandi essent die contributione populi misere profecto & duxerit viverent. If it were not for the spoil of Egypt which we have snatcht from the Pope, all the Ministers of the word must have been assamished. For if they should be put to live upon the free contribution of the people, they would certainly have a miserable hard living of it. Alimur ergo &c. We are maintained then, as I said of the spoiles of Egypt: and yet that little that we have is prey'd upon by the Magistrate: for the parishes and Schooles are so spoyled and peeled, as if they meant to starve us all. Thus Luther. Melancthon comes after him and complains in the year 1559. Principes favebant Luthero: sed jam iterum vilitis ingrati tudinem mundi erga ministros &c. The Princes did at first favour Luther: but now ye see again the unkindnesse of the world to the Ministers of the word. Calvin was so ill dealt with at Geneva (together with other faithfull Ministers there) that he was forced once to say, Certe si hominibus servivissem &c. Truly if I had served men in my Ministry, I had been very ill requited. But its well that I have served Him who never failes his: but faithfully performeth with the better what ever he hath promised them. Our Doctour Stroughton observed, that the manner of very many in the City was to deal with their minister as Carriers doe with their horses; viz. to lay heavy burthens upon them, and then to hang bells about their necks; they shall have hard work, and great commendations, but eay commons; be applauded for excellent preachers, have good words, but slight wages. Melch. Adam. in vita. Thus in the City; but what measure meet men with in the Countrey? Hear it from a Countrey-Ministers mouth. How many thousands in this land (saith He) stand obnoxious in an high-degree to the judgements of God for this sin of sacriledge, which is the bane of our people, and blemish of our Church? Somewhere are who rob God of his main tythes, yet are content to leave him still the lesser: they pluck our fleeces, and leave us the taglocks, poor Vicarage tithes, whilst themselves and children are kept warme in our wooll, the Parsonage. And and others yet more injurious, who think that too much, would the law but allow them a pair of sheers, they would clip the very taglocks off. These (with the deceitfull taylour) are not content to shrink the whole and fair broad-cloth to a dozen of buttons, but they must likewise take part of them away, and nimme the very shreds, which only we have left. After they have full gorged themselves with the Parsonage grains, they can finde means either by unconscionable leases or compositions, to pick the Vicaridge-bones &c. Thus He and much more to the like purpose. Our blessings (saith Another eminent Divine) are more then those of old, our burthen lesse. And yet how unwilling comes even a little to the painfulllest Minister? And those, that upon a kind of conscience pay other duties, think all lost that goes to the maintenance of the Ministry, and that with such repining, as if that were mony of all other worst bestowed &c. Mr. Reg. his Strange Vin. in Palest pag. 303.
D. Selauer.

Psal. 113. 6.

Subest jurandi
spectes. Figuiet.

Psal. 106. 14.

and prove me now herewith] Dignatio suspenda, A wonderful condescension, that God should call upon man to take experiment of him, to make but a triall, to put it to the proof whether he will not prosper the penitent. This is somewhat like that other passage Psal. 34. O tast and see that the Lord is good &c. or that, Come and let us reason together. O the never-enough adored depth of Gods goodnesse, that he should stoop so low to us clay and dirt, dung and wormes-meat! He is so high, that he is said to humble himself to behold things done in heaven. If he look at all out of himself, to see but what the Angels do, he doth therein abase himself. That he will deal so familiarly with us (who are no better then so many walking-dunghills) as to bid us prove him what he will do for us, this deserves acknowledgement and admiration in the highest degree. Should he have used martiall law with these malapert miscreants in the text that had robbed him of his rights: and not only have reprov'd them and curst them with a curse of penury, but have (Draco-like) written his lawes in blood upon them, he might have justified his proceedings. But thus to commune with them, and not only to prescribe them a remedy for removall of the curse, Bring ye all the Tithes &c. but thus to perfwade with them, and to permit them to prove his bountifullnesse in giving, and his faithfullnesse in keeping promise with them, and that with an oath (as some conceive.)

if I will not open the windowes of heaven] then never beleieve me more; what a wonderfull goodnesse was this? Surely we may well say of it, as Chrysostom doth of the happinesse of heaven, Sermo non valet exprimere: experimento opus est; We can never sufficiently praise it, but must take the counsell he gives us, and prove it, Prove me &c. There is an unlawfull and damnable proving or rather provoking of God, when men separate the means from the end, holinesse from happinesse, will needs live as they list, and yet presume they shall be saved by the unknown mercies of God. Such were those that tempted and provoked the most high God, and kept not his testimonies Psal. 78. 56. like as before they had lusted exceedingly in the wilderness, and tempted God in the desert; whilest, bearing themselves over-bold upon their externall priviledges, they refused to observe his statutes, and keep his lawes. This sin, in the new Testament is called tempting the Spirit of the Lord Act. 5. 9. Ananias and Sapphira did so, when by a cunning concivance they would needs prove and make triall whether God could dectry and would punish their hypocrisy: So did Judas the traytour when he boldly demanded, Is it I Lord. So do all grose hypocrites that present unto God a carcase of holinesse, like Cham, or that curst Cozener Mal. 1. 14. Such also as refuse Christs offers of grace: and when he bids them as here, Prove him if upon their obedience to the lawes of his kingdome, he will not open the windowes of heaven and rain down righteousness upon them, even mercies without measure: and (for confirmation) wills them as once he did wicked Abaz, Ask thee a signe of the Lord thy God, Ask it either in the depth, or height above; they churlishly answer him in effect as he did, I will not ask, neither will I try the Lord. Whereupon the Prophet that made the motion, in an holy indignation, Heare ye now saith He, ye house of David, Is it a small thing for you to weary men, but ye will weary my God also? Isa. 7. 12. 13.

if I will not open you the windowes of heaven] Vulg. the cataracts or flood-gates, or spouts of heaven: meaning the clouds, those bottles of raine, which God here promiteth to shour down abundantly, tanta copia, impetu, & fragore, ut ruere potius quam fluere videatur. A phrase noting great plenty 2 King. 7. 2. for in those hot countries drought ever made a dearth. Hence the proud Egyptians whose land is watered and made fruitfull by the overflow of the river Nilus, were wont in mockery to tell the neighbour nations, that if God should forget to raine, they might chance to starve for it. They thought the rain was of God, but not the river. God therefore threateneth to dry it up Ezech 29. 9. Isa. 19. 5. 6. and so he did:

Ovid.

*Creditur Aegyptus caruisse juvenibus arva.
Imbribus, atq; annis sicca fuisse novem.*

To teach both them and us, that both plenty and scarcity, drought, and rain are his work: he carries the keyes of the grave, of the heart, and of the windows of heaven the clouds, under his own girdle. Vessels they are as thin as the liqueur which is contained in them. There they hang and move, though weighty with their burden. How they are upheld, and why they fall here, and now, we know not, but wonder at it, as Gods handy-work. In the Island of St. Thomas, on the backside of Airike, in the midst of it is an hill: and over that, a continuall cloud, wherewith the whole Island is watered. In the midale region of the air, God hath made dark esse his secret place: his pavilion round about him is dark waters and the clouds of the skie, Psal. 18. 11. These he weighs by measure, so that not a drop falls in vain, nor in a wrong place, Job 28. 15. When he uttereth his voice there is a multitude (or noise) of waters in the heavens, and he causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth: he maketh lightnings with rain, &c. Jer. 10. 13. A wonderfull thing surely, that out of the midst of water, God fetcheth fire, and hard stones out of the midst of thin vapours. This is the Lords own doing, and it is (worthily) marvellous in our eyes. Are there any among the vanities of the Gentiles that can give rain? or can the heavens give showres? (So the Naturalists will needs have it: but what saith the Prophet?) Art not thou he, O Lord our God? therefore we will wait upon thee: for thou hast made all these things, Jer. 14. 22. A pious resolution surely, and that which the Lord here would have this people to take up: viz. in the way of his judgements to wait upon him, and walk before him, to honour him with their substance, and with the first fruits of all their increase. So should their barnes be filled with plenty, and their presses burst out with new wine, Prov. 3. 9, 10. The liberali soul shall be made full: and he that watereth shall be watered also himself, Prov. 11. 25.

God will poure him out a blessing ] because he is a font of blessing, as the Hebrew hath it in that place of the Proverbs last cited, and he shall have rain enough, Ipse pluvia erit, as Kimchi rendreth the last words there. He shall be a sweet and reasonable showre to himself and others. Therefore they shall come and sing in the height of Zion, and shall flow together to the goodnesse of the Lord, for wheat, and for wine, and for oil, and for the young of the flock, and of the herd: and their soul shall be as a watered garden, and they shall not sorrow any more at all, Gen. 31. 12. O precious promise, every syllable whereof drops myrrhe, and mercy! Abraham that Father of Tube-paying, (so we may call him as the Hebrews call Jacob the Father of Vows, because he is the first we read of in scripture that vowed a vow unto the Lord) had this promise of abundance plentifully performed unto him. So had Constantine the first Christian Emperour, the Churches great Benefactour. Deus Deus, saith Augustine, Constantinum Magnum tunc terrenis impleret muneribus quam a opere nullus aunderet. The good Lord filled Constantine the Great, with so many temporall blessings, as never any man durst wish for.

There shall not be room enough to receive it ] Ita ut domus satis est, so that you shall say, It is enough: Thus the Chaldee rendreth it. Rabbi Abraham, Non quod sufficiat, sed et in quod sedet in quod super sit Rab. David. Ultra sufficiens. Montan. shall have more then enough, as the Sareptan had, 2 King. 4. 4. the cruse never ceased running till there was no room. Borrow of thy neighbours, saith the Prophet, but shut the doors upon thee. It was time to shut the doors, saith One, when many greater vessels must be supplied from one little one. Shee had a Prophets reward with a witnesse. And so had the Shunamite. Her table, and bed, and stool was well bestowed: That candlestick repaid her the light of her future life and condition; that table, the means of maintenance; that stool, a seat of salety; that bed, a quiet rest from the common calamities of her nation. So liberall a paymaster is God: his retributions are more then bountifull: he will not be overcome by his creature in liberality, Jam. 1. 5. They shall be sure to have their own again with usury, either in money, or moneys-worth. What they want in temporalls (a sufficiency whereof they shall be sure of, if not a superfluity) he will make up in spirituals, joy and peace through believing, as much, or more then heart can hold. Some holy men have so over-abounded exceedingly with joy, that they have been forced to cry out, Hold Lord, stay thine hand, &c. their spirits were even ready to expire, with an exuberancy of spirituall ravishment: as the Church in the Canticles was sick of love, and therefore calls to the Ministers, to stay her from sinking Godfr. in ult.

Bern.
Epist. l. 1.
Confess. l. 6.
c. 22.

ing and swooning, to bolster her up, being surprized with a love-qualme: as the Queen of Sheba rapt with admiration, had no more spirit in her: as Jacobs heart fainted, when he heard the good news of Joseph alive. Bernard, for a certain time after his conversion, remained as it were, deprived of his senses, by the excessive consolations he had from God. Cyprian and Austin testify the like of themselves.

Vers. 11. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes ] Caterpillars, Canker-wormies, and such hurtfull creatures, Gods terrible army, as they are notably set forth in their march and mischief, Joel 2. 2, 3, 4, 5, &c. with chap. 1. 4. to tame his rebels, to ease him of his adversaries, and to avenge him of his enemies, Esay 1. 24. These he will rebuke ( for every creature is at his beck, and check ) as he rebuked the red-sea, and it was dried up, Psal. 105. and as he rebuked the winds, Mat. 8. 26. the fever, Luk. 4. 39. the devil, Mat. 7. 18. he will say unto them, Abite altitum hinc. Get you hence, and that's enough, for they are all his servants, Psal. 119. 91. He is the great Centurion ( or rather Lord of Hosts ) that saith to this creature Go, and he goeth, and to another, Com, and he cometh, &c. if he do but say, Who is on my side, who? all creatures look out at their windows, as ready prest to do his pleasure: neither is there any so mean amongst them, or so despicable that cannot, if set on by him, make the proudest on earth stoop, and say, This is the finger of God. But of this see more in the 1. Doct. on vers. 18. of this Chapter. Let all that look for Gods blessing, either upon their persons or possessions, make their peace with God ( the genealogie of corn, and wine is resolved into him, Hos. 2. 22. ) and bring him all his tythes into the store-house, &c. lest hee blast their fair hopes, cut off the meat from their mouthes, take his own and bee gone, take away his corn in the time thereof, and his wine in the season thereof, &c. Hos. 2. 9. The Jews in our Saviours time, suis milis edocti, were punctuall in paying their tythes, even to a potherb, Matth. 23. And at this day, though not in their own countrey, nor have a Leviticall Priesthood, yet those of them that would be reputed religious, do distribute, in lieu of tythes, the tenth of their increase unto the poor: being perswaded that God doth blesse their increase the more: For their usual proverb is, Decima ut dices fias, Tythe and be rich. Of the young Lord Harinton ( the last of that name ) it is reported by Mr. Stock, who preached his Funerall, that he constantly gave the tenth of his yearly revenue to pious and charitable uses. And of reverend Mr. Will. Whately Minister of Banbury, it is likewise recorded in his life, that he set apart and expended for many years before he died for good uses, the tenth part of his yearly comings in, both out of his temporal and ecclesiasticall means of maintenance: and that he never thrived in his outward estate, till he took that course. Besides the sweet comfort that the spirits of his wealth thus distilled, as it were, brought to his conscience, both in life and at death: and the blessing of a good name left behind him, according to that which follows next in the text, And all nations, &c.

Vers. 12. And all nations shall call you blessed ] viz. for the abundance of outward comforts and commodities, by the which the Nations measured mens happiness saying, Blessed is the people that is in such a case, Psal. 144. 15. Cyprus was for this cause anciently called Macaria, that is, the blessed countrey, as having a sufficiency of all things within it self: and England was called Regnum Dei, the kingdom of God, or the Fortunate Island, and Englishmen Daires, as those that were set safe de ira Dei, from the wrath of God. In the time of Pope Clement the sixth ( as Robert of Avesbury testifieth ) when Lewis of Spain was chosen Prince of the Fortunate Islands, and for the conquest thereof was to raise an Army in France and Italy; the English Agent at Rome, together with his company departed and gat home, as conceiving that the Prince was bound for England, then the which they thought there was not a more fortunate Island in the world. Of the Island of Lycia, Solinus saith, that all the day long, the sky is never so cloudy, but that the Sun may be seen there. Semper in Sole fixa est Rhodus, The Rhodes is ever in the Sunshine, saith Aeneas Sylvius. And of Alexandria in Egypt, Ammianus Marcellinus observeth, that once in the day the Sun hath been seen to shine over it. I confesse the same cannot be said of England: I remember also what I have read of a certain Frenchman, who returning home out of England, and being asked by a country-

Godw. Heb.
Antiq. p. 272.

Lyciam Horatus claram
dicit.

man

man of his that was bound for England, what service he would command him into this country? Nothing but this, said the other; When you see the Sunne, have me commended to him: for I have been there two moneths, and could never see him in all that space. Belike he was here in the deep of winter. For at Summer Solstice Tacitus (in the life of Agricola) hath observed, that the Sun shineth continually in Britanny, and neither setteth nor riseth there; but passeth so lightly by us by night, that you can scarce say, we have any night at all: But if we speak of the Sunshine of Gods grace and favour, either for spirituals or temporals: as Delos is said by Solinus, to have been the first country that had the Sun shining upon it, after the generall deluge, and therefore to have had its name: so was England one of the first Ilands that both received Christ, and that shook off Antichrist. And for temporall blessings, all nations call us blessed, and count us a delightful land indeed, a land of desires, such as all men would desire to dwell in, for the exceeding fruitfulness and pleasantness of it: it being the Court of Queen Ceres, the granary of the Western world, as forreigne Writers have termed it, the paradise of pleasure, and garden of God, as our own Chronicler. The truth is, We may well say of England, as the Italians do of Venice, by way of proverb: He that hath not seen it, cannot believe what a dainty place it is: and he that hath not lived there some good space, cannot understand the worth of it. Our Mr. Ascham, Schoolmaster to Q. Elizabeth, had lived there some time, and had soon enough of it: for though hee admired the place, he utterly disliked the people for their loose living. And the like (alasse) may be too truly affirmed of us. We live in Gods good land, but not by Gods good lawes: we eat the fat and drink the sweet, but we sanctifie not the Lord God in our hearts, we live not as becometh Christians. Our hearts (like our Climate) hath much more light then heat; light of knowledge, then heat of zeal; our lukewarmnesse is like to be our bane, our sinnes our snuffes, that dimme our candlestick, and threaten the removall of it. O si fiat id in nobis (saith One) quod in Sole videtur, qui quibus affulserit, is etiam calorem & colorem impertire solet! O that the Sun of righteousness would so shine upon us, as to warm us, and transforme us into the same image from glory to glory, as by his Spirit! O that he would set up his own kingdom here more and more amongst us! then should wee be more happy then the Israelites were under the raigne of king Solomon, or the Spaniards under their Ferdinand the third, who reigned 35. years: in all which time there was neither famine nor pestilence in the land.

Per duos enim menses quibus ibi fuit, Solem mihi videre non licuit. Ga- rinceris de tabe Anglica. p. 84. Ut finem atq; initium lucis exiguo discrimine in terminoscas. Nomenq; ex eo sortitam. Polyb. c. 17.

Lopez Gloss. in prolog par. 1

Vers. 13. Your words have been ston against me ] Or, reenforced, or strongly confirmed. Superant me verba vestra, so some have rendred it. By your hard and hatefull words you have been too hard for me, as it were. And it is, as if God should say, I have given you my best advice to break off your sinnes, and to bring me my tythes, that I might blesse you both with store, and honour. But I have lost my labour: I see well, my sweet words are worse then spilt upon you, who are so hardened in your error and blasphemy, that you are still clamouring and casting out odious words against me. Once before you had set your foul mouthes against me, and like so many wolves (that were wood) you held up your heads and howl'd out these ugly words, Every one that doth evil is good in the sight of the Lord, and he delighteth in them, &c. (was it possible that the wit of malice could devise so high a slander?) And now you are at it again, creaking like doors that move upon rusty hinges, nay clattering and blustering out such bellish and hideous blasphemies, as at the hearing whereof, it is great wonder if the heavens sweat not, earth gape not, sea roar not, all creatures conspire not to be avenged upon you: as the very stones in the wall of Aphek turned executioners of those blasphemous Aramites, when as being but ignorant Pagans, their tongues might seem no slander.

Prov. 23. 8. Verba quid incassum non proficientia perdo? Mal. 2. 17.

Your words have been stout against me ] Yea stouter and stouter: your wickednesse frets like a canker, and encreaseth still to more ungodlinesse, 2 Tim. 2. 17. Evil men and deceivers grow worse and worse, 2 Tim. 3. 13. as being given up by God, Rom. 1. 28. acted and agitated by the devil, Ephes. 2. 2. serving diverse lusts and pleasures, Tir. 3. 3. which to satisfie is an endlesse piece of businesse. Neither let any here say, they were but words that these are charged with, and words are but wind, &c. for words have their weight, and are marvellous provoking. Leviter volant, sed non leviter violant. You shall find some, saith Erasmus, that if death be threatened, can despise it: but to be belied they cannot brook, nor from revenge contain themselves. As a murdering-weapon in my bones, saith David, mine enemies reproach me, Psal. 42. 10. Desperate speeches and blasphemies that impose upon the Lord any thing unbeseeming his Majesty (a thing common among the Jews, even at this day) he can by no means away with. See how God stomacketh such proud contumelious language, Psal. 73. 11. and 94. 4, 5, 6, 7, &c. Zeph. 1. 12. Ezech. 9. 9. See how he punished it in him that bored thorough his great Name, Lev. 24. 11. Ludovike commonly called St. Lewis, caused the lips of blasphemers to be seared with an hot iron. Philip the French King punished this sin with death, yea though it were committed in a Tavern. The very Turks have the Christians blaspheming of Christ in execration: and will punish their prisoners sorely, when as, through impatience, or desperatenesse, they wound the ears of heaven: Yea the Jews in their speculations of the causes of the strange successe of the affairs of the world, assigne the reason of the Turks prevailing so against the Christians, to be their blasphemies: and among other scandals and lets of their conversion, are all those front words darted with hellish mouthes against God in their hearing, so ordinarily and openly, by the Italians especially, who blaspheme oftner then swear, and murder oftner then revile or slander. Andrew Musculus in his discourse, intituled, The devil of blasphemy, hath a memorable story of a desperate dice-player in Helvetia, Anno 1553. at a town three miles distant from Lucerna. Where, on a Lords-day, three wretched fellows were playing at dice, under the town-wall. One of them, named Utricus Schraetervs, having lost a great deal of money, swore that if he lost the next cast, he would fling his dagger at the face of God. He lost it, and in a rage threw up his dagger with all his might toward heaven. The dagger vanished in the air, and was seen no more: five drops of blood fell down upon the table where they were playing, which could never be washed out, (part of it is still kept in that town for a monument) the blasphemer (to say the best of him) was fetcht away presently body and soul by the devil, with such an horrible noise, as affrighted the whole town. The other two came to a miserable end shortly after. The truth of this relation is further attested by Job Fincelius, and Philip Lonicerus, Theat. hist. pag. 142.

Specul. Europe

yet ye say, What have we spoken so much against thee? Chald. What have we multiplied to speak before thee? As if they should say, it is not so much that we have spoken, that thou shouldest make such a businesse of it. Nothing more ordinary with gracelesse men, then to elevate and extenuate: great sins with them, are small sins, and small sins no sins: when as every sinne should swell like a toad in their eyes, and the abundant hatred thereof in their hearts, should make them say all that can be said for the aggravation and detestation of it: sith there is as much treason in coyning pence as bigger pieces; because the supreme authority is as much violated in the one as in the other. But this sin of theirs was no peccadillo, as appeareth by the following instance.

Verse 14. Ye have said, It is vain to serve God Vulg. He is vain that serves God. Ye are idle, ye are idle said Pharaoh to the Israelites when they would needs go sacrifice, and to Moses and Aaron, Ye let the people from their works. Any thing seems due work to a carnall mind saving Gods service: that's labour lost, time cast away, they think. But this is their want of spirituall judgement; they see not the beauty of holinesse, they taste not how good the Lord is: they discern not things that are excellent, they measure all by present sight, sense, and taste, as do children, swine and other bruit creatures: And therefore they themselves are vani & vanissimi, as an Expositor here speaketh, vain, and most vain, and that for two reasons, and in two respects. First, for that they take themselves to be servers of God. Secondly, they stick in the bark, serve him with the out-side onely, honour him with their lips, and not with their hearts, to bring him vain oblations, empty performances, serve him with shews and formalities which he delights not in, nay he rejects them with infinite scorn, as he did the Pharisees devotions, Luk. 16. 15. because they were but skin-deep, and not heart-sprung; therefore they were not a button the better for them. God loves and looks for truth in the inward parts, Psal. 51. 6. he looks that men should do his will from the heart, Ephes. 6. 6. and serve him in their spirits, Rom. 1. 9. In doing whereof there is great reward, Psal. 19. 11.

premium

premium ante premium, that Euge of a good conscience: this the stranger medleth not with, conceives not of, the wealth of Gods pilgrims standing more in Jewels, and gold, things light of carriage, and well portable, then in house and land. His servants have that here that doth abundantly pay them for their pains afore-hand: righteousnesse being its own reward; and they knowing within themselves, that they have in heaven a better and an enduring substance. But hereafter oh the rich recompence that God shall make them! oh the heaped up happinesse of such at the last! when these vain talkers in the text, and all that are of their mind, shall roar out Nos infensati, We fooles counted their lives madnesse: But now &c. See more of this in the following Note on ver. 16. doct. 5.

what profit is it that we have kept his ordinance? The Chaldee hath it, Quod mammon adeptisumus? what mammon or wealth have we gained? Mammonists are all for gain, their very godlinesse is gain, still they have an Eagles-eye to the prey, when they seem to fly highest toward heaven: If they may not get by God, they soon grow weary of his work. What shewes forever they make of better, sure it is their belly is their God, they mind earthly things. These will follow the chafe, as Jonathan, till they meet with the hony-combe; or as a curr followes his master till he meet with a carion. These come to Christ (as that yong Pharisee did) hastily, but they go away heavily; because they consider not, that with the Lord are durable riches Pro. 8. 18. and that godlinesse as it hath many crosses, so it hath many comforts against them; like as no country hath more venomous creatures then Egypt, none more Antidotes. This these Sensualists, having not the spirit, understand not; and hence their complaint of a disappointment; casting a sturr upon Gods house-keeping, as those spies did upon the promised land, and ready to run back into Egypt to their flesh-pots, garlick, and onions there. Lo, this is the guise of gracelesse persons, with whom that's the best religion that brings greatest advantage in the things of this life. If the Ark bring a blessing with it, as it did to Obed-Edom, it shall be looked upon as worthy of entertainment; but if a plague of poverty come with it, these Philistines will be glad to rid their hands of it. The garishnesse of honour, wealth, and pleasures do to dazle their eyes, that they think it the only happinesse to have and to hold. Such fooles they are, and such great beasts, if David may judge Psal. 73. 22. to fly a fooles-pitch, and to goe hawking after that that cannot be had, as Solomon saith Pro. 23. 5. Or if had, yet cannot be held, as being of swiftest wing, and as soon gone, as a post that passeth by. Godlinesse hath the promise of both lives: and we read of some godly men in scripture, that were richer then any other. But God will have it sometimes to be otherwise, that godlinesse might be admired for it self: and to shew that his people serve him not for commodity Iob 1. 9. But that none serves God for naught, no not so much as smit a deo. or kindle a fire. See before chap. 1. 10.

that we have kept his ordinances? which if they had done indeed, they would never have thus begged, much less blasphemed: they would have accused themselves, as not the living providence; they would have said with holy Ezra, All this is come upon us for our evill deeds, and for our great transgression: and thou, our God, hast punished us less then our iniquities deserve. Almightiest thou not be justly angry with us till thou hadst consumed us, so that there should be no remnant nor escaping? Ezra 9. 13, 14. Thus the good wheat falls low at the feet of the fanter, when the chaff whiffes and flies at his face. Thus the sheep, when shorn, bleat and lookes downward: whereas the hungry rbit wolf lookes up and howles against heaven. Hypocrites use to wrangle with God and expostulate the unkindnes of his non-acceptance of their services as Esay 58. 3. Wherefore have we fasted, say they, and thou seest not? wherefore have we afflicted our soules, and thou takest no knowledge? God was, in their opinion, far too short and much behind with them; and therefore much to blame, and they must give him the telling of it; They do so: and they have their answer. So they shall have here in the following verses, and the next chapter, which ought not to be divided from this, as some conceive. They upbraid the Lord as with their observances, so with their humiliations.

and that we have walked mournfully] Or, in black, the habit of mourners:

whence that of the Heathen Oratour, Athenienses non nisi atrati &c. The Athenians are never so good as when they are all in black; that is, under some heavy affliction. And a great Satefman of this kingdome had this verse written upon his study door.

Anglica gens est optima flens & pessima ridens.

1 K ng. 21. 27.

Great Brittain all in black, is in its best condition. But what is it to wear sackcloth, and walk softly, with Ahab, when he had sold himself to do wickedly? what is an humbling day without an humbled heart? not only an irreligious incongruity, but an high provocation; like Zimri's act, when all the congregation were weeping before the dore of the Tabernacle. Surely God may say to such pretenders, as Isaac did to his father, Behold the fire and the wood, but wher's the lamb for a sacrifice? or as Jacob did to his sons that brought him the bloody coat, Loe her's the coat, but wher's my child? your garments are black, but your hearts and lives are much blacker. Go, cleanse your hands ye sinners, and purifie your hearts, you double-minded. Be afflicted, in good earnest, and mourn to some purpose, and weep, soak and souce your selves in teares of true repentance: let your sorrow for sin be deep and downright: turn your laughter to mourning, and your joy to heaviness. Jam. 4. 8, 9. And then come, let us reason together, saith the Lord. All these unkind contestations shall cease, and all loving correspondencies shall passe betwixt us. God had said as much as all this before to them verse 7, 10, 11. Sed surdo fabulam, their adamant was too hard to be mollified. Their bulrushes, though bowed down for a day, while some storm of trouble was upon them, was now so pierkt up, as if it would threaten heaven. witnesse their continued contumacy, their robustious language in the next verse also, flouting it out still with God.

Pfal. 31. 23.

Verse 15. And now we call the proud happy! Such as, boyling and swelling with spite and spleen against God and his people, deal arrogantly and insolently, doing wickedly with both hands earnestly Exod. 18. 11. and 21. 11. and working their own ends confidently and daringly: these we call and count happy, becaute wealthy and well underlaid, as they say, because they live in the height of the worlds blandishments. But the whole book of Ecclesiastes is a clear and full confutation of this fond conceit, had they but ever read or regarded it. How can the proud person be happy that hath God for his profest enemy? what was all Hamans honour to him, when the king frown'd upon him? what was Ahab the better for his ivory palace, his gold, and his jewels in every place, when the heaven was as bras above, the earth iron beneath? Surely God abhorreth pride as an abomination of desolation: and though he preserveth the faithfull, yet sooner or later he plentifully rewardeth the proud doer. Like metall in the fire when they shine brightest, they are nearest to melting: and like a bulging wall, they will shortly fall. Swelling is a dangerous symptom in the body, so is pride in the soule. Tolluntur in altum, ut lapsu graviore ruant. Neither are they therefore to be reputed ever awhit the more happy, because they come not in trouble like other men, but prosper in their wickednesse. For God is never more angry with such, then when he seemes best pleased. Pharaoh had fair weather made him, till he was in the midst of the Sea: fatting cattle are but fitting for the shambles. Never was Jerusalem's condition so desperate, as when God said unto her, My fury shall depart from thee, I will be quiet and no more angry Ezek. 16. 42. Nor Ephraims, as when he said, I will not punish your daughters when they commit whoredom. And, Ephraim is joyned to idols, let him alone Hos. 4. 14, 17. sc. till I come and fetch my full blow at him. Clem. Alexandrinus cites Plato expressing himself thus: Although a righteous man be tormented, although his eyes be digged out, yet he remains a blessed man: and the contrary.

Pfal. 17.

they that work wickednesse are set up Heb. they are built up sc. in posterity, and prosperity of all sorts. The Psalmist expresseth it thus: They are full of children, and leave the rest of their substance to their babes. Thus God built the midwives houses, that is, he gave them children, for their mercy to those new-born-babes Exod. 2. 21. Thus he builded David an house 2 Sam. 7. And thus those that return to the Almighty Almighty have a gracious promise that they shall be built up Job 22. 23. That these stout and stiff Stigmaticks were built up and prospered, though (after so sweet an invitation) they turned not to him that smot them, we need not wonder, sith it is their portion, as David sheweth, all they are like to have, or must ever look for. Besides, Is not God the true proprietary of all? Is not the earth the Lord's purse, with the fulnesse thereof, and may he not do with his own as he pleaseth? Add hereunto that what wicked men have, they have it with a curse, and for mischief: their table is a snare to them; they are like to pay dear for their sweet mortels, as Haman did for his wine at Esthers banquet. Bernard calles the wicked mans prosperity miseri cordiam omni indignatione crudeliorem, a ~~more~~ more cruel, then any adversity. Anstin affirmeth, Nullum mare tam profundum, quam est Dei cogitatio ut mali floreat &c. No sea is so deep as the divine dispensation that good men should suffer, bad men prosper. They are built up with blessings, as they say the Phenix builds her nest with hot spices, wherein she is afterwards burned. They build as those at Babel, and feather their nests, as if their lives were rivetted upon eternity: but as their foundation is laid upon fire-work, so brimstone is scattered upon their habitations Job 18. 15. If the fire of Gods wrath but touch it, all will be quickly consumed. Dioclesian that bloody persecutor despairing of ever rooting out the Christian religion as he had endeavoured to do, gave over his empire in a discontent, and decreed to lead the rest of his life quietly. But he could not escape so: For, after that, his house was wholly consumed with lightening, and a flame of fire that fell from heaven, he hiding himself for fear of the lightening, died within a little after. Their inward thought is (saith the Psalmist of such wicked Atheists) that their houses, (honours, riches, nephews) shall continue for ever: and their dwelling place to all generations; they call their houses after their own names; as Cain called his new-built city Enoch after the name of his son, that he might leave him Lord Enoch of Enoch. Nevertheless man being in honour abideth not: he is like the beasts that perish Psalm 49. 11, 12. The use to be made hereof see ver. 16. Be not thou afraid when (a wicked) one is made rich, when the glory of his house is increased &c.

Mat. 20. 13.

In Psalm 91.

Euseb. de vita Constant. lib. 5.

yea they that tempt God are even delivered] Still these Miscreants are grunting out their grudges against God. What this sin here instanced, viz. of tempting God is, hath been shewed before in the note on ver. 10. of this chapter: Here it is to be taken for an audacious daring of God to take vengeance, as Num. 15. These very worst sort of sinners are sometimes not only spared, but prospered Ier. 12. 1. &c. Their Epha is not yet full, their iniquity not found to be barefull enough yet. But the wicked is kept (by the patience of God) unto the day of destruction: and shall be brought forth to the day of wrath, as condemned Malefactors are to execution, some by posterns and by-gates, others through the market place: so here. He that hath stolen a good horse, rides gallantly mounted for present, till shortly after, followed close by Hue and cry he is soon apprehended, sentenced, and brought to condign punishment. And this is the very state of presumptuous sinners, and will be. I know well, that because sentence is not presently executed, therefore the hearts of the sons of men are set in them to doe wickedly. Felix scelus virtus vocatur, as we see here, The proud are called happy, because, for present, in prosperity. See the like Ier. 44. 11. Gen. 30. 18. Dionysius, after the spoile of an Idol-temple, finding the winds favourable in his navigation, Lo, said he, how the Gods approve of Sacriledge. But the weakness of this argument see set forth by Solomon Eccles. 9. 1, 2, 3. with the Notes there. God gives outward things to the wicked, no otherwile then as if a man should cast a purse full of gold into a jakes. He gives them riches to furnish their inditement out of them: as Joseph put his cup into their sack to pick a quarrel with them, and lay theft to their charge. The sunshine of prosperity ripens their sin apace, and so fits them for destruction. Let God therefore be justified, and every mouth stopped.

Eccles. 8. Cicero.

Verse 16. Then they that feared the Lord &c.] Then: when all flesh had corrupted their ways: and the whole world turned Atheists. Then when there was no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land (none, to speak of) but that it was even darkened with profaneness, as Egypt was with those very grie-

Gen 6. 12. Hof. 4. 1.

vous

Esay 1. 21, 22.

vous locusts that covered the eye thereof, Exod. 10. 14, 15. Then when the faithful city was become an harlot: her silver turned into dross, her wine mixt with water: her people not dilute onely, but dissolute: her self ex aurea facta est argentea, ex argentea ferrea, ex ferrea, terrea (as One once said of Rome) of gold become silver, of silver iron, of iron earth, or rather muck.

Rev. 3. 4.

1 Joh. 5. 18.

Then they that feared the Lord ] Those few names that had not defiled their garments in so foul a season: but had kept themselves unspotted of the world, undefiled in the way; so as that that wicked One had not touched them, had not thrust his deadly sting into them, had not transformed them into sins image. These stood up to stickle for God, to stop the mouth of blasphemy, and to stablsh one another in perswasion of Gods holy truth, and constant care of his dear children.

spoke often one to another ] Montanus renders it, Tunc vastati sunt timentes Dominum; sc. ab impijs & Atheis impune eos invadentibus; That is, Then were those that feared the Lord wasted and destroyed, viz. by those wicked Atheists, who fell from fierce words, to bloody blows: to the word is used, 2 Chron. 22. 10. Psal. 2. 5. But this is far set, and nothing so agreeable to the mind of the Holy Ghost here, as our English after other approved Translations. It is the same word that is used verse 13. Those spoke not so much against God, as these did for him, and about him to each other, for mutuall confirmation, that that which was halting haply might not be turned out of the way, but healed rather. Great is the benefit of Christian conference, for strengthening the weak knees, and comforting the feeble minded. How forcible are right words? One seasonable truth falling upon a prepared heart, hath oft a strong and sweet operation: as some speeches of Staupicius had upon Luther: Of whom it is also storied, that he was much cheared up by conference with an old Priest discoursing about Justification by faith, and explaining the Articles of the Creed to him. Latimer likewise was much furthered by hearing Bilneys confession, and having frequent conference with him, at Heretikeshill, as the place where they most used to walk in the fields at Cambridge, was called long after. Surely, as a little boat may land a man into a large Continent: so may a few good words suggest matter sufficient for a whole lives meditation. This Satan well knows, and therefore as he did what he could to keep God and Daniel asunder, Dan. 6. 7. So he doth still to keep the saints one from another, that they may not build up themselves in their most holy faith, pray in the holy Ghost, pull one another out of the fire, &c. How were the Apostles persecuted for their Christian meetings, the primitive Christians banished and confined to Isles and Mines, where they could not have access one to another, as Cyprian complains: the poor saints here in times of Popery, meeting as they could for mutuall edification; and therefore accused of sedition: for prevention wherof it was ordained, that if men should flock secretly together above the number of six, they should be attached of treason: so the Protestants at Milcenburg in Germany were forbidden upon pain of death to speak together of Scripture-matters. And at Nola the Jesuites strictly charged the people not to talk of God, either in good sort or in bad. See more of this in my Treatise on these words, called The Righteous mans Recompense. Chap. 4. Doct. 3. annexed to this Commentary.

Heb. 12. 13.

Job 6. 25.

Life of Luth.
by Mr Clark.
pag 85.

Atts & Mon.
fol. 1574.

Jude 20, 23.

1 Tim. 4.

Atts by Men.

Luth. Epist.

Turk. hist. fol.
227.

and the Lord hearkened and heard ] He not onely heard, but hearkened, or listened; Gistus hic est diligenter auscultantis, Esay 32. 3. It imports, not onely attention of body, but intention of minde, (as when a man listeneth as for life, and makes hard shift to hear all) and retention of memory. For which purpose also a booke of remembrance is here said to be written before him, or by his appointment. Liber monumenti, A book of Acts and Monuments, in allusion to the custome of Kings. See Esph. 2. 23. Tamerlan (that warlike Scythian) had alwayes by him a catalogue of the names and good deserts of his servants, which he daily perused, and whom he duely rewarded: not needing by them, or any others in their behalf, to be put in remembrance. Much lesse doth the Lord, who bottles up the tears of his people, files up their prayers, puts all their holy speeches and practises on record, that he may make all honourable mention of them at the last day, in that great Amphitheatre, that generall Assembly: not once remembering any of their misdeeds, Mat. 25. 35. Heb. 8. 12. See more of this in the Righteous mans Recompense, Chap. 5. & 6.

and

and that thought upon his Name ] That had God before their eyes, Psal. 10.8. that minded his glory, 1 Cor. 10. 31. that thought upon his commandements to do them; Psal. 103. 18. that can truly say with the Psalmist, How precious are thy thoughts unto me, O God? how great is the summe of them, Psal. 139. 17. See more of this verse in my Righteous mans Recompense, Chap. 7. Doct. 16.

Verse 17. And they shall be mine ] by peculiar right: Et suum cuique pulchrum: we all affect and admire our own things most. God chuseth them for his love: and loves them for his choice. I will be a Father unto them: and they shall be my sonnes and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty, 2 Cor. 6. 18. which is all one with that here, They shall be mine saith the Lord of Hosts. Concerning all which see my Righteous mans Recompense, Part 2. Chap. 1. and 3.

In the day when I make up my jewels ] viz. from the worlds malignities, and misfages. They shall not plunder him of his Jewels, rob him of his chief treasure. None shall take, or pluck them out of Christs hands, Joh. 10. 29. they that attempt it, shall find it a work not seisable. When one desired to see Great Alexanders treasure, he bade one of his servants shew him not his gold and silver, but his friends. Henceforth I call you not servants — but I have called you friends, Joh. 15. 15. And a friend is as a mans own soul, Deut. 13. 6. The Church is the dearly beloved of Gods soul, Ier. 12. 7. yea his dearly beloved soul, as the Septuagint, and Vulgar render it, &c. See my Righteous mans Recompense, Part 2. Chap. 2.

Liban. progre. Chria. 1.

and I will spare them ] Or, indulge them, as David did Mephiboseth, 2 Sam. 21. 7. Vide ubi supra, Chap. 4. & 5.

Verse 18. Then shall ye return and discern ] See The Righteous mans Recompense, ad calcem.

CHAP. IIII.

Verse 1. FOR behold the day cometh ] This Chapter should not be divided from the former: for here Gods different dealing with the righteous and the wicked, proposed in the former verse, is further amplified by diverse effects of Christs coming in the flesh. And if any ask, saith an Interpreter, how this was verified of that his first coming? we answer, It was inchoative, and by way of preparation then: and shall be consummate in the day of the last judgement, This day comprehendeth all that time that is called by the Apostle, the ends of the world, 1 Cor. 10. 11. and the world to come, Heb. 2. 5. all the administrations of Christs kingdome, from his Incarnation to the end of all things, which also is at hand, and, as it were, under view already, Behold, The day, that notable day, so long-looked for by the Jews, who boasted of a Redeemer, and promised themselves all possible comforts then: Tunc enim Deus nos dignabitur clarissima visione, (saith Jacobiades on Dan. 12. 4.) tunc intelligemus res ipsas prout sunt. Then shall we have a most clear vision of things as they are, &c. Lo that day cometh: not such a day as you imagined, but like that in Amos, A day of darknesse, and not light: even very dark, and no brightnesse in it. A day that shall burn like an oven: Nebuchadnezzars oven, seven times more heated then it was wont. This day is come, the end is come, it watcheth for thee, behold it is come. It was fulfilled in part upon this people at the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, and their miserable exile ever since for their unbelief. Howbeit, all these are but the beginning of sorrows: their present sorrows but a typicall hell, the pile whereof is fire and much wood, the breath of the Lord, like a stream of fire, doth kindle it. It is said to be prepared for the devil and his angels, Mat. 25. 41. as if the All-powerfull wisdome did deliberate, and, as it were, sit down and devise most tormenting temper, for that most formidable fire. The fire of the last day shall surely be very terrible, when all the world shall be on a light fire, and wicked men shall give account with flames about their ears, with the elements melting and falling like scalding lead, or burning bell-mettall on their heads. But all this will be but a shadow, or spark of that fire of hell, the smoke whereof ascendeth for ever and ever, Rev. 19. 3. Some have held the fire of hell to be no true materiall, and corporeall fire, but metaphoricall, qualem novit Deus.

Am. 5. 20. Dan. 3. Ezek 7. 6.

Isa. 30. 23.

The

De civ. Dei
lib. 21. c. 10.

Esse aliquos Manes Nec
pueri credunt,
nisi qui non-dum ere larantur. Juven.

The most conspire in the contrary Tenent: because bodyes are to be punished by it. How Ipu its are also thus tormented as the rich gluttons Luk. 16. Austin sits down and admires the mystery: He tells us that for vehemency of heat, it exceeds our fire, as far as ours doth fire that's painted on a wall. I would we had not cause to complain that preaching of hell is but as the painting of fire: which men can look on and handle without hurt or affrightment. Surely he that observes the impiety of this age, may say to us as Cato did to Cesar, Credo, quæ de inferis dicuntur, falsa existimas, I beleieve you think hell to be a very fable.

and all the proud, yea and all that do wickedly &c. ] Those proud whom you pronounced happy chap. 3. 15. because jolly, and full of worldly prosperity, rich and renowned: those workers of wickednesse whom you looked upon as set up, built upon a firm basis: God shall abate every one that is lifted up, he shall repay the wicked-doer to his face Deut. 7. 10. and into his bosom Esay 65. 6. What ever arrowes are in the bow-string, will one day fly, and hit, and strike deep. They shall be as stubble, saith the text, as stubble that is fully dried Nah. 1. 18. even when they be folden together as thorns. Who would set these briers and thorns against me in battle? saith the Lord: I would go thorough them, I would burn them together Esay 27. 4. Did he not deal so by Pharaoh, Senacherib, Herod, the Primitive persecutors, &c? Those mighty Magnificos that here seemed fortes, ferrei, & anei, strong, and made up, as it were of brasse and iron, shall appear to be but as stubble that cannot stand before Gods fire.

the day that cometh shall burn them up ] Heb. shall so burn them ut flamma ex ipsis excitetur, as to set them aflame. Here Christ burneth up his enemies with invible judgements, inward terrours and torments, pangs and plunges, a very hell in their consciences, a fore-tast of eternall torment, (as was to be seen in Belshazzar, and our Rich. 3.) But what will they do at the last day, when the law they shall be judged by is a fiery law Deut. 33. 2. the tribunall of fire. Ezek. 1. 27 the Judge a consuming fire. Heb. 12. 29 his attendants flaming Seraphims, his pleading with sinners in flames of fire 2 Thess. 1. 7. the place of punishment, a lake of fire fed with a river of brimstone Isa. 30. 33? what can be the fruit of such a fiery proceeding but utter excision? Surely this fire will leave them neither root, nor branch.

Verse 2. But unto you that fear my name What shall be the condition of gracelesse persons, hath been said already. Now for the righteous, that they have not served God in vain, it shall well appear by the many benefits they shall reap and receive by Christ: five whereof are here recited. 1. Imputation of Christs righteousness; which is compared to the illighting of this lower world by the beames of the Sun. 2. Remission of sins, which is compared to the healing of diseases. 3. Regeneration, which is likened to a sick mans walking forth, when he is somewhat recovered. 4. Spiritual growth, as calves of the stall. 5. Victory over all enemies corporall and spiritual, which shall be trodden under foot, as ashes of the furnace ver. 3.

* Psal. 84. 11.

shall the Sun of righteousness arise? So Christ is called (as by other Prophets Isa. 60. 1, 2, 19. Luk. 1. 78. Ioh. 8. 12.) to signifie the joy of Gods elect at the sight of him: as those that have long layne in darknesse count it a pleasant thing to see the light. A Sun of righteousness he is said to be. 1. As asserting and vindicating the righteousness of God, called in question by those Blasphemers. 2. As bestowing upon his people a double righteousness (Imputed and Imparted) as the Sun doth his light Ioh. 1. 16. It is further said here, that he shall arise, that is, he shall appear and shew himself on earth, who now lieth hid, as it were in heaven; as the materiall Sun doth under the Horizon. God was manifested in the flesh 1 Tim. 3. 16. Manifested out of the bosom of his father, out of the womb of his mother, out of the types of the law &c. In his Nativity he came forth as the Sun doth, as a bridegroom out of his chamber. In the whole course of his life he rejoiced as a Gyant to run his race. He enlightened and warmed the dark and dry hearts of men, he filled them with the fruits of righteousness Ioh. 1. 5. He could not be stay'd or stopped in his course: He made his gospel to run and be glorified. He was and is still in continuall motion for the good of his Church: as the Sun in heaven is for the good of the world. He went under a cloud in his passion, and brake forth again in his Returrection. From heaven he daily darts forth forth his beams of righteousness, and shewres down all spirituall blessings in heavenly priviledges Eph. 1. 3. The Sun sucks up foul water from the earth, drawes it up into the ayre, not to hold it there; but first purifies it, and then distilles it down again with a fattening and fructifying property. Hereupon the thankfull earth brings forth most fair and fragrant fruits and flowers &c. Semblably this Sun of righteousness took on him our sins and miseries, sordes nostras induit, assumed our humane nature, not to retain it, and glorify it in himself alone, but that we might be conglorified, and, in the mean space, filled with those fruits of holiness, which are by Jesus Christ unto the glory and praise of God. And as the Sun the nearer he runs to the earth, the weaker he is in operation (as in winter-time) But the higher in heaven, the more effectually: So while Christ was not yet ascended, the holy Ghost and his graces were not in that full measure imparted, nor Churches gathered as afterwards Ioh. 7. 39. Lastly at that last and great day he will shew himself in speciall manner a Sun of righteousness: clearing all obscurities, bringing to light the hidden things of darkness, causing his people: most holy faith, that now lyes hid in great part, to be found to praise, honour and glory, Chearing up their spirits after manifold tribulations, healing all their spiritual maladies; for he comes with healing under his wings] and making them as so many Sampsons (whose name signifies, a little Sun) in the Noon of their full strength. For the righteous shall shine as the Sun in the kingdome of their Father Mat. 13. I shall shut up this discourse with that observation of an Ancient: When the Sun of righteousness was yet in his Mothers womb, he might be said to be in Virgo: when on the Cross, in Taurus: when he rose from death, in Leo: when he shall come again to judgement, in Libra. And as when the Sun is in Libra the day is of an equall length: so when Christ cometh, all shall be perfected.

Philip. 1. 10.

*Ipse est ergo
noster Apollo
sanitatis praeses. A. Lap.
Solitus.*

with healing in his wings] that is, in his beames. This implies sickness in all, to whom Christ comes: the world being as it were a great Hospitall, or Nosocomium (though few feel it) and that true of every person that is spoke of the whole people Esay 1. 6. The whole head is sick &c. O my head, my head, said the Shunamites son: my belly, my belly, saith the Prophet, my leanenesse, my leanenesse &c. And surely it were happy if men would be more sensible of their malady, and make out to this Iehovah Rophe, this Almighty Physitian, that wants neither will nor skill to cure all that come unto him. See him hanging out his tables as it were, and setting to sale his eye-salve Rev. 3. 18. for there he begins the cure Act. 26. 18. Hear him. 1. Complaining of our dulnesse, backwardnesse, frowardnesse Ier. 8. 22. Ezech. 24. 13. Hof. 7. 1. 2. Wishing we had more care of our poor soules. Oh that this people were wise &c. Why will ye dye? 3. Threatening Ezech. 24. 13. 4. Promising Hof. 14. 4. Mat. 11. 28. 5. Performing Psal. 103. 3. 2 Cron. 30. 20. Lastly providing all sorts of physick for us: preventing, purging, restoring, corrosives of the law, lenitives of the Gospel, plaisters of his own blood (for here Sanguis medici est curatio phrenetici) and requiring us no more but to come unto him (as they of old did to the brazen serpent) with sorrow for sin, and faith in his name, having a good opinion of our Physician, and casting our selves wholly upon him for cure: Calling upon him, as blind Bartimeus did, and crying out as that Martyr did at the stake, Son of God shine upon me; and immediatly the Sun shone out of a dark cloud to full in his face, that he was constrained to look another way. What shall I say more? this blessed Sun of Righteousnesse must be sought in the West, if we will get the kingdome (as Strato's servant in Iustin did by the advice of his master, whom he had preferred) upon the cross I mean, and in the state of his Abatement: so shall we be sure to finde healing in his wings, that is, the gracious influence of the holy Spirit conveying the vertue of Christs blood to the conscience, as the beames of the Sun do the heat and influence thereof to the earth; thereby calling out the herbes and flowers, and healing those deformities that winter had brought upon it.

Exod. 15. 26.

*Act. and Mon.
fol. 1398.*

Lib. 18.

and ye shall go forth] To shew that ye are thoroughly healed, ye shall rise up and walk? Where the spirit is, there is liberty: live things love to be stirring: 2 Cor. 3. 17. and those that are restored to health after sickness, are not satisfied till they can go about their businesse in their accustomed strength, Quod sanitas in corpore, id sanitas sanctitas in corde. Holinesse is to the soul, what health is to the body. Let men make it out, that Christ Jesus hath wrought a cure upon their soules, by being active and abundant in his work. Life consists in action Esay 38. 16. O Lord by these things: and in all these things is the life of my spirit, saith Hesekiah: And, if you in my commandments, ye shall live in them saith the Lord; as the fish lives in his element, as the lamp lives in the oyle, and as the creature by his food. Up therefore and be doing; Live betime, live quickly, and apace. Some men live more in a day, then others in a moneth: as wise men speak more in two words, then a fool in two hundred: or as one piece of gold is more worth then twenty of brasse. Devise what to do for God, as David did Psal. 116. 12. serve out your time as he Act. 13. 36. do not idle it out, wear out, do not wast out: flame out, do not smother out: burn out, be not blown out. Be not buried alive as Iob 27. 15. hilled out of the world ver. 23. as Facit in Seneca. Fall not from the tree of life, as leaves in Autumne, as that saplesse fellow Nabal did: and as those withered trees in St. Jude, Without fruit, twice dead, pluckt up by the roots. God expects that, acted first by him, we should act as the inferiours do, when moved by the Superiours, that when he hath infused sap, we should fructifie, that when he hath tuned us and doth touch us, we should make musick, when he hath once made us willing, he requires that we both will and work that which is good in his sight. When we set victuals before an hungry man, we expect he should eat it Nature teacheth the sucking child to draw the breast when it is once put to the mouth, and to labour for its living, as we use to say He that made us without us, doth not live us without us; but expects that our will, which at first conversion were merely passive, should be afterwards active in adding to faith vertue, and so vertue knowledge. Grow in working out our salvation with fear and trembling Phil. 2. 12. Herein we make the work of him that sent us, as our Saviour did: we finish the work which he gave us to do Iob. 17. 4. This work is, to magnifie him with our bodies whether it be by life or death Phil. 1. 19. Yea to glorifie him in our bodies, and in our spirits, which are his Cor. 16. 220. God sells us increase of grace for sweat, saith One. He gives it as Boss gave Ruth corn, chap. 2. 13, 16, 17. He could have given her at first an Ephah of bariy; and it had been no more charge to him: but he will have her gather it, glean it, beat it out, use her endeavour, and that should be the price she should pay for it. So here Gods people heale must go forth or leap about, use legs and have legs &c. This I had because I kept thy precepts Psal. 119. 86. What had he? but an ability to keep Gods law ver. 55. he kept it: because he kept it: for every new act of obedience fits the soule for a following act Rom. 6. 19. And to you that hear shall be more given Mark. 4. 24. and grow up as calves of the stall] ye shall battle and thrive both in flesh and fat, as R. David expounds it: your soules shall be flourishing and fair-looking as waters of the sanctuary they shall use higher, as trees planted in Gods paradise, they shall bring forth new fruit every moneth: as the morning-sun they shall shine more and more unto the perfect day Pro. 4. 18. which the wicked by growing worke and worke stumble in darknesse ver. 19. so that they lie down in sorrow Isa. 50. 10. The blessing on man in the first creation was increase and multiply: in the second, Grow in grace Esay 61. 3, 11. A Christian hath his degrees of growth, and his severall ages, of childehood, youth, or well-grownage, full-grown, and old age Iob. 2. 12. These things write I unto you, that beleeve in the name of the Son of God, that ye may beleeve in the name of the Son of God, (saith the same Apostle) that is, that ye may grow in that belief, as ye grow in dayes and yeeres, proceeding from faith to faith: as the Church in the Canticles hath her first light like the day-dawning, her second beauty like the Moon, her third degree like the Sun Cant. 6. 10. A Christian (though in some sense perfect) yet hath he still his Plus-ultra, and may take for Motto Charles the fifth his Uterius Further yet: he must be still adding grace to grace, that he may have an entrance further and further into Christs kingdome 2 Pet. 1. 5. and 11. as by steps and stairs they went up to Solomons temple. And the Apostle there gives us to understand, that those that thus add not to their stock of grace, shall have little comfort either from the time past, for they shall forget that they were purged from their sins; or from thoughts of the time to come, for they shall not be able to see things farre off

Mic fitus est Facit.

Ut agimus

Aug.

2 Pet. 1. 5

*Ezech. 47. 12.
Ioh. 15. 2.*

2 Tim. 3. 13.

1 Ioh. 5. 13.

Phil. 3.

off ver. 9. because they delight not in high-flying as Eagles : their wings, as the Ostriches, do little more then bear them above-ground. Many care for no more grace then will keep life and soul together, that is, soul and hell asunder. This is a low and unworthy strain, and comes not near that of St. Paul, who set up for his mark the resurrection of the dead Phil. 3. 10. that is, that perfection of holiness that accompanieth the resurrection. To the attaining hereunto he followed hard on, reaching forth, and stretching out head, hands, and whole body, to lay hold on the high prize proposed unto him. ver. 12, 13, 14. and would have all men to be thus minded. Runners in a race look not how much they have run, but how much remaineth : and although moderate in the beginning, (for hot at hand feldom holds out) yet the nearer they grow to the goal, the faster they speed their course ; that their last dayes may be their best dayes : accounting that day lost wherein they have not some sensible commings in from Christ ; like as good husbands in dead times when stirrings fail, are discontented, when they have had no takings.

Verse 3. And ye shall tread down the wicked Christ the Champion of his Church hath already won the field, and will shortly set his peoples feet upon the necks of all their enemies. The broken horns of Satan himself shall be the trumpets of their triumph and the cornets of their joy Rom. 16. 20. See what honour all the saints have in this respect Psal. 149. 7, 8, 9. See what comfort Job. 16. 33. See what conquests Rom. 8. 37. How much more at the last day, when the thrones shall be set &c. Mat. 19. 28. Rabbi David Kimchi, understands this text of temporall victories only. And no wonder, as being a Jew, and minding earthly things, he ascends no higher. Such grasshoppers, if at any time they leap above the earth, they soon fall down to it again : and as they are of the earth, so they speak of the earth, and the earth heares them. Petrus à Figuero writing upon those words in the former chapter ver. 12. For ye shall be a delightful land, Nota modum loquendi, saith He : Mark that expression, He saith not your land shall be a delightful land, but ye shall be &c. Fortè enim tacite Judæos percillit terram eos vocando. It may be the Lord hereby closely meets with them for their earthly mindedness : as those that by promise of earthly blessings, were soonest prevailed with to serve God, when as these should have been but as steps or stirrups to mount their hearts up to a desire of the things above. Victory in their sense is doubtlesse a speciall mercy : and is so promised to the obedient Deut. 28. 13. The Lord shall make thee the head only and not the taile : and thou shalt be above only, and not beneath &c. Hence the Israelites, delivered from the Egyptians at the red sea, sang The Lord is a man of warr. Exod. 15. 3. the Chaldees there hath it, The Lord and Victour of Warrs. The Grecians delivered from the Persians (vanquished and driven out by Themistocles) called their Jupiter, thereupon Ελευθεριος The Deliverer. It was the thankfull acknowledgement of Generall, Captaines, and souldiers at Edge-hill-fight, that the Lord was seen in the Mount, Never lesse of man in such a businesse, never more of God. But what shall it profit a man to conquer countries, and yet be vanquished of vices ? to tread upon his enemies, and yet be taken captive by the devill at his pleasure ? to command the whole world, as those Persian kings, and yet were commanded by their concubines, so by their base lusts, by yeelding whereunto they give place unto the very devill, and receive him into their very bosomes Eph. 4. 26. who thence leads them away naked and barefoot, as the Assyrian did the Egyptians Isa. 29. 2. How much better Valentinian the Emperour, who said upon his deathbed that among all his victories over his enemies this one only comforted him, viz. that by the grace and power of Christ Jesus he had got the better of his corruptions, and was now more then a Conquerour, even a Triumpher. for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet] Even the ashes of that stubble burnt in Christs oven Verse 1. This shewes their utter and ignominious destruction. And the like is foretold of mysticall Babylon Rev. 18. Tota eris in cineres quasi nunquam Roma fuisses, sang Sibylla of old. Fiat, Fiat. Our corruptions also shall one day be incinerated ( they are already buried Rom. 6. 4. Col. 2. 12.) the fiery spirit of Christ will do with the body of sin, as the King of Moab did with the King of Edom Am. 2. 1. burn its bones into lime.

In the day that I [shall do this] &c. partly here, but perfectly at the last day. Mean while sinne may rebel in Gods people, but it cannot raigne. Satan may nibble at their heele, but he cannot come at their head: the world may kill them, but cannot hurt them: Be of good chear, saith Christ, I have overcome the world, Joh. 16. 33. All evils and enemies shall cooperate for their good, Rom. 8. 28.

[saith the Lord of Hosts] Who hath also said, Heaven and earth shall passe, but not one jot or tittle of my word &c.

Vers 4. Remember ye the law of Moses viz. Now henceforth, in the fail of Prophecy, for Malachi knew, that after him untill the dayes of John Baptist, no Prophet should arise. Hence this exhortation, to read and remember the Law, as leading them to Christ: the Law I say in all the parts of it; not excluding the Prophets, those Interpreters of the Law, and most excellent Commentaries thereupon, with like reverence to be read and received. The Jews at this day read in their Synagogues two lessons: One out of the Law, by some chief person, another out of the Prophets correspondent to the former in argument, but is read by some boy, or mean companion: for they will in no sort do that honour, neither attribute they that authority to any part of the Bible, that they do to their Law. But this their way is their folly: yet their posterity approve their sayings, as the Psalmist speaketh in another case. Two things offer themselves to our observation from these first words. First, the little coherence that this verse hath with the former: the Prophet chusing rather to fall abruptly upon this most needfull, but too too much neglected duty of remembering the Law, then not at all to mention it. See the like Rom. 16. 17. where the Apostle breaks off his salutations, to warne them of their danger by seducers: and that done, returns thereto again. Secondly, In the Hebrew word rendred Remember, there is in many Bibles, a great Zain: to shew, as some think, the necessity and excellency of this duty of remembering the law of Moses. It is well enough known, that since the fall mans soul is like a filthy pond, wherein fish die soon, and frogs live long: profane matters are remembered, pious passages forgotten. Our memories are like sieves, or nets, that retain chaffe and palterment, let go the good grain, or clear water: Gods word runs thorough us, as water runs thorough a riven vessell. And as hour-glasses, which no sooner turned up and filled, but are presently running out again to the last sand, so is it here. And yet the promise of salvation is limited to the condition of keeping in memory what we have read or heard, 1 Cor. 15. 2. And Dauids character of a blessed man is, that he meditateth in the Law day and night.

Psal. 49. 13

*Buxtorf. in Comment.
Mafor. c. 14.*

Psal. 1. 2

Nor. ep. 6.

Hoc primum repetens opus, hoc postremus omittens.

Bishop Babington had a little Book, containing three leaves onely, which he turned over night and morning. The first leaf was black, to innde him of heil and Gods judgements due to him for sinne: The second red, to minde him of Christ and his passion: The third white, to set forth Gods mercy to him through the merits of his Son, in his Justification and sanctification. The Law of the Lord, as it is perfect in it self, so it is right for all holy purposes, Psal. 19. 7, 8. It serves to discover sinne, Rom. 3. 20. and 7. 9. shews the punishment due to sinne, Gal. 3. 10. scourgeth men to Christ, Gal. 3. 24. And is a perfect rule of obedience: it being so penned that every man may think it speaks de se, in re sua, as Athanasius saith of the book of Psalms: and must therefore be of all acknowledged to be Θεοῦ ἐννοημα, Gods own invention. Moses was but the Pen-man onely, though it be here called his Law: because God gave him the Morall Law written with his own hand, Deut. 10. 2. adding it to the promise made to Abraham, that thereby guilt being discovered, &c. men might acknowledge the riches of free-grace, and mercy: and that they might walk (as Luther hath it) in the heaven of the promise, but in the earth of the law: (that, in respect of beleiving, this of obeying) that they might live as though there were no Gospel, die as though there were no Law, passe the time of this life in the wildernesse of this world under the conduct of Moses, but let none but Josuah (Jesus) bring them over to Canaan the promised land. This the generality of the Jews could not skill of, (though the Morall-law drove them to the Ceremoniall, which was then, Christ in figure, as it doth now drive us to Christ

Demost.

Gal. 3. 19

Deut. 33.2
Deut. 33.2

Deut. 33.2

Joh. 5.45

R. David.

Pfal 119.89

Mat. 5.

Lege Melachim meum;
meum, inquam
meum: quicquid
enim didicimus et tenemus nostrum est. Ro-
log in lib. Reg.
Scripturas sanctas memoriter
tenebat.

have him deliver; or, at utmost, a Mediatour, Gal. 3.19. not of expiation (for so Christ only) but of communication of the Law to all Israel, Exod. 20.19. wherein he was faithfull in all Gods house as a servant, Heb. 3.5. Famulus ingenuus, a servant of the better sort, a man of worship, as the word there seemeth to import. The place where Moses received the Law is mentioned, Horeb (the same with Sinai, Act. 7.30. Exod. 19.1, 18.) to inmind them of the terror of the Lord on that mountaine, when God came down upon it with ten thousand of his Saints: from his right hand went a fiery law for them, Heb. a fire of law. And surely that fire wherein the law was given, and shall one day be required, is in it still, and will never out. Hence are those terrors, which it flasheth in every conscience that hath felt remorse of sinne. Every mans heart is an Horeb: and resembleth to him both heaven and hell. The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the Law, 1 Cor. 15.

to all Israel And it is reckoned as a singular priviledge to that people, Neh. 9.14. Rem. 9.4. *Prosper*s conceit was, that Judai were so called because they received Jus Dei, the Law of God. Josephus calleth their Common-wealth a Theocratie, or God-government. That of Philo is not so solid, that their law was given in a wilderness, because it is to be learned in a wilderness, seeing there we cannot be hindered by the multitude. But what a wretched conceit is that of the Jews at this day, that the law of Nature shall bring to heaven those that observe it: but the Hebrews (unto whom the Law of Moses was peculiarly given) by keeping it, shall have a prerogative of glory? How shall the Lion of the tribe of Judah roar upon them at that day, and say, Do not think that I will accuse you: there is one that accuseth you, even Moses in whom ye trust. Get you to him whom ye have chosen: but cold comfort ye are like to have from him: a very froward generation he ever found you, children in whom is no faith, Deut. 33.20.

With the statutes and judgements] that is, with the Ceremoniall and Judicall Law. But what meant that false Rabbins to adde to this Text these following words, Quamdiu non venit dies iudicii; Till the day of judgement comes: as if men were bound till then to the observation of the ceremoniall and judicall Law? But it is ordinary with those Jew-Doctours to corrupt the Text for their own purpose; adding, and altering at their pleasure. The judicall law was fitted to the Jews, and was the best that they could suffer, as Solon said of the Athenian Lawes. The ceremoniall law was their Gospel, pointing them to Christ: and therefore abolished by him, as having no use in the Church after his death, but by accident. As for the Morall law, (called here by an excellency the Law of Moses) it is established for ever in heaven: and albeit some duties of certain commandments shall cease when we come to heaven, yet the substance of every one remaineth. This perpetuity of the morall law was noted by engraving of it in stone, Exod. 34.27 2 Cor. 3.7. The Jew have a saying, That God hath more respect to the letters of the Law, then to the stars of heaven, And Christ either alludes to, or confirms it in that saying of his, Heaven and earth shall passe before one jot or tittle of the Law passe. Think not that I am come to destroy the Law (viz. the Morall Law) or the Prophets, who presse Morall duties, as explainers of the law: they do as it were unfold and draw out that Arras which was folded together before. These therefore together with the Law of Moses must be daily and duely read and remembred. Hurom calls the books of Kings his own; because by the frequent use and reading of them, he had got them by heart, and as it were made them his own. Of Paul he testifieth, that she had most of the Scriptures by heart. Of Nepotian likewise, that with daily reading and continuall meditation he had made his heart Bibliothecam Christi, the Library of Christ. See my True Treasure. pag. 315.

Verse 5. Behold, I will send you Elijah the Prophet] Not Elijah the Thishitee, as the Septuagint corruptly read: and the Popish Expositours make no small use of it, to prove that the Pope is not Antichrist, because Enoch and Elias are not yet come, and yet are to come in his time, before the day of judgement (as they fondly fable) to preserve the Elect in the faith of Christ, and to convert the Jews. But we have better Interpreters of this Text. 1. An Angel, who applies it to Iohn Baptist, Luk. 1.17. 2. Christ, that Angel of the Covenant, Mat. 17.10, 11. and 21.14. Hear ye him, against all Antichrists Agitatours. Saint Mark begins his Gospel Gospel with these very words of Malachy: to let us know, that this Elias is the Baptist, who is called Eliab the Prophet, because of the like gifts, calling, and ministry, office of reforming habit, people with whom they dealt, &c. The like almost may be said of Luther, a third Elias for boldnesse, courage, zeal, knowledge, successe, &c. But yet we see no footing in this Text for Lucas Osianders conceit, viz. that the Prophet here pointed at Luther as well as at John Baptist: and that men must receive his Doctrine, or else look to be smitten with a curse. Howbeit this is more passable and possible then that of the Jesuites, who presume to controul Christs own Exposition: and give out, that as the Devil stirred up Luther to call the Pope Antichrist: so God raised up them to resist Luther. But what a mad fellow was that Spaniard (of whom Severus Sulpitius writeth) that professed himself first, to be the Prophet Eliab, and afterward when he had gained authority, to be The Christ: carrying himself so cunningly in his collusion, that Bishop Ruffus was led away with the error, beleiving in him, and adoring him as God: for which he was justly deprived of his dignity? Had we not need receive the truth in the love of it, lest God give us up to the efficacy of error, 2 Thess. 2. 10. ? left being first infatuated, we be seduced, and then being seduced we be damned, as Austin glosseth on that Text?

Lib. 1 de vita
S. Martini ferē
in calce.

before the coming of the great and dreadfull day of the Lord] Great, in respect of the good, and dreadfull, or horrible, in respect of the wicked, as Montanus interprets it, paralleling it with Mar. 3. 12. Or, great, because it shall be a beginning of great changes, both to the godly and the ungodly: and dreadfull to the bad, yea and to the best also at first; till they have recollected and better bethought themselves, as Another senceth it; as taking it of the last day, which is the generall mistake of Popish Expositours, and that upon this ground, because Christs first coming was an acceptable time, and a day of salvation. But though it be so to Gods people, yet to others it was terrible, as hath been shewed in the Note on Chap. 3. verse. 2. and is so described Luke 2. 34. and 2. 9, 17. and 19. 44. Mat. 21. 44. Esay 11. 4. He shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with his two-edged sword he shall slay the wicked. See the like, R.v. 2. 16. And by his Ministers he doth it still, 2 Thess. 2. 8. 2 Cor. 2. 15, 16. 2 Cor. 10. 6. Vengeance is as ready in Christs hand as in the Ministers mouth, for the disobedient. Some read the words thus, Before the day of the great and dreadfull Lord come: like as others read that Jam. 2. 1. Have not the glorious faith of our Lord Jesus Christ in respect of persons. Both readings are good, and the Text will bear both.

Verse 6. And he shall turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, &c.] John Baptists office and efficacy is here described; He shall, as a powerfull instrument (by preaching repentance, Mar. 3. 2. and prevailing, as he did, with all sorts, even to admiration; so that all men mused in their hearts, whether he were the Christ or not, Luke 3. 10, 12, 14, 15.) convert sinners from the errors of their way, reduce them to the faith of the old Patriarches, make them unanimous in the love of God and of one another, and tie them up together, as it were, by his Baptisme. For the multitude of beleivers were of one heart and one soul, Act. 4. 32. (animo animaque inter se miscbantur, as Tertullian phraseth it) neither was there any controversy at all amongst them, as One ancient Greek copy subjoyneth there. Controversies there were great store among the Jews, when the Baptist came. As Joseph found his brethren in Dothan, (which signifieth Defection) so did he. They were all gone out of the way: and, being led aside by the error of the wicked, they were fallen from their own steadfastnesse. Many strange opinions and dotages they had taken up, and were wofully divided: specially by those three different Sects, Pharisees, Sadduces, and Essenes: which the Prophet Zachary calleth three shepherds, that were to be destroyed in one moneth, at Johns coming, Zach. 11. 8. The Pharisees were held the best of those three, si ad legem respexeris, saith Tremellius, if you look to the law: and Saint Paul, who was once a Pharisee of the Pharisees, calleth them the most strictest Sect of the Jewish religion, Act. 26. 5. (like those districtissimi Monachi among the Papists:) and yet there were seven sorts of Pharisees, as we find in their Talmud. Hence much alienation of affection amongst them, and great animosities: father hating sonne, and sonne father, for truths sake, as Mat. 10. 35. So powerfull should John be in his Ministry, that although the leprosie were gotten Talm. tract.

Suta. cap. 3.

into their heads, and were therefore held incurable Lev. 13. 44. yet he should turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just, to make ready a people prepared for the Lord Luke 1. 17. All head-strong and brutish affections should be calmed and corrected, as Isa. 11. 6, 7, 8. and the peaceable wildome from above intilled Iam. 3. 17. so that they shall endeavour to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace. And albeit some jars may fall out (as betwixt Paul and Barnabas) yet Gods people can soon peceagain, and reunite. De aer percussus non leditur, imò ne dividitur quidem, sed refundit sese, & spissior redit &c. As the ayre divided by a stone or stroke, soon cloeth and thickeneth the more. Certainly, there is no such oneness, and entireness any where as among the saints: their love is spirituall Cant. 6. 9. The very Heathens acknowledged that no people in the world, did hold together and love one another so as Christians did. Tacitus observeth of the Jews, that there was misericordia in promptu apud suos, but contra omnes alios hostile odium, mercy enough for their own countrey men amongst them, but hostile hatred against all others: they use to say, that there is no Gentile but deserves to have his head bruised &c. But John Baptist by his preaching made Jewish Pharisees, and Roman soldiers (according to the phrase that Josephus useth of him) to convert, and knit together in baptisme.

Eph. 4. 3.

Ish. Worver.
in Polymath.In Battist.
mō convertit.
Antiq. lib. 18.
cap. 7.

[lest I come and smite the earth with a curse] that is, lest coming I smite &c. For there is no doubt to be made of his coming: and as little of his smiting, if men amend not. These words menace as many as resisted Johns ministry, with utter destruction; whether it be done against the whole nation, or against a man only. Iob 34. 29. The Romans came and took away both their place and their Nation: not for letting Christ alone (as they feared Iob. 11. 48.) but for laying wicked hands upon him, and putting to death the Lord of life. Act. 2. 23. John also preached damnation to them Mat. 3. and so did our Saviour Mat. 23. where by eight dreadfull woes, as by so many links of an adamantine chain, he drawes those irreformable hypocrites down to hell, their place: and then leaves them to be reserved unto judgement. S. Jerome was called Fulmen Ecclesiasticum the Church-thunderbolt. Mr. Perkins was a most earnest preacher, and would pronunce the word Damne with such an Emphasis, as left a dolefull Echo in his Auditors eares a good while after. And when, Catechist of Christs-colledge, in expounding the commandments he applied them to home, that he made his hearers hearts fall down, and their hairs to stand upright almost. And surely this is the way to work upon hard-hearted sinners: whence the Apostle bids Titus rebuke with all authority: and then turning him to the people (as Calvin senseth it) chargeth them not to despise him for so doing. Tit. 1. 13. The Apostle knew well that men are, for most part, of delicate eares: and can ill abide plain dealing. Abub hates Micajah, and hath him in prison, ever since that dreadfull denunciation of displeasure and death, for dismissing Benhadad (for he was, probably, that disguised Prophet:) for which he was ever since fast in prison, deep in disgrace. But truth must be spoken, how ever it be taken: and those that will not be pricked at heart as Act. 2. but take up bucklers to ward off the blow, must have the sword of the spirit sheathed in their bowels, and bathed in their blood: for all this we are a sweet savour unto God 2 Cor. 2. 15. yea though a savour of death unto death. The barren earth must be smitten with euiling, and they that minde earthly things (Terra autem sunt, qui terrena sapiunt, sicut Asina) have damnation for their end, so that St. Paul cannot speak of them without teares of compassion Philip. 3. 18, 19. Oh that it might expresse from them teares of compunction! Oh that they would be forewarned to flee from the wrath to come! Oh that they would think upon eternity, and by breaking off their sins, disarthe Gods indignation justly conceived against them. He therefore threatneth that he may not smite: he proceeds not to punish till there be no remedy 2 Chron. 36. 16. Crudelem medicum intemperans ager facit: An unruely patient makes a cruell Physician. O that we could all resolve to deal by our sins as Levis King of France did by the Popes Bulls (whereby he required the fruits of vacancies of all Cathedrall Churches of France, about the year 1152.) he cast them into the fire, saying, he had rather the Popes Bulls should rostin the fire, then his own soul should fry in hell.

M. Fullers
Holy State 90.XATÉVYH-CAY.De civ Dei.
20. c. 29.

Speed. 496.

For

For a perclose of all, take an observation of Amamas, and before him of Buxtorfes: that in many Hebrew Bibles, the last verse save one of this Prophecy (as also of Ecclesiastes, Isaiah, and Lamentations) is repeated again in the end thereof, though without pricks, lest any thing should be thought added to Gods word, Factum hoc ex Scribarum decreto &c. This the scribes thought fit to do, either for the dignity of those repeated verses, that the Reader might again ruminare and remind them: or else (as some will have it) because all those bookes end in threatenings and sad speeches. And therefore, lest the Sun of Righteousnesse should seem to set in a cloud, or not to shine upon the departing passenger, they thought fit to leave the verse before to be last; as being sweet and full of comfort, that the Reader might Sampson-like, goe his way, feeding on that hony-comb.

Laus Deo in æternum.

THE

Author ~~prose~~ & Duke Jaxony 527
Tythob, allowedly. — c. Nature, & Nature p 669. 670
Blasphemy — — 676.

The Righteous mans Recompence.
 O R,
 A TRUE CHRISTIAN CHARACTERIZED, AND ENCOURAGED,
 Out of MALACHI 3. 16, 17, 18.

Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another: and the Lord harkened, and heard it: and a booke of remembrance was written before him, for them that feared the Lord, and thought upon his Name.

CHAP. I.

The Text opened and analyzed.

IHAT which was anciently spoken of John Baptist, who was more then a Prophet, a may not unfitly be, applyed to Malachy the last of Prophets, b that he is the boundary c and buckle d of the Law and Gospel, the golden girdle that knits up and ties together those two breasts of Consolation e the old and new Testament: between the which he seemes to lie as a bundle of Myrrhe, or cluster of Camphire, the sweet scent whereof fills the whole house of God, f and greatly affects all such as have their senses habitually exercised to discern both good and evill g. Such were these good soules, the subject of our text. Reserv'd they were to those last and lofely times of the Jewish Church after the return from Babylon; where it seemes their seventy years captivity had not much mended the most of them: b such (alas!) is the hardnesse of mens hearts, that till the Spirit mollify and make them malleable, Afflictions (Gods hammers) do but beat cold iron. Little good is done, nay much hurt by accident: for un sanctified persons grow worse with afflictions, as water more cold after a heat: witnesse these proud miscreants that gave the occasion of this text. Gods correcting hand had laine long time sore upon them, to turn them from their enterprizes, and to hide pride from their hearts i. But he had not his end upon a Math. 11. 9.

b Prophe. arum ultimum & veluti sigillum &c. Petrus à Figueroa pro. am in Mal. Judai in hujus propheta obitum collocant.
 חתום id est ob signatio- nem prophetia. In ejus locum successisse aiunt.
 חתום id est, oraculum divinum, quo post prophetia- rum tempo. a dicunt fuisse revelata futura. Alsted. Chron. c Malachias à Tertulliano limes in tervetus & novum Testam. vocatur, ad quem desineret Judaismus, & à quo inciperet christianismus d Ioh Baptista fuit ut ita dicam legis & gratia sibula Chrysol e 11. 66. 11. f 1 Tim. 3. 15. g Heb 5. 1. Summa libri est, quod cum Judai nuper reversi essent in patriam, statim simul redierunt ad ingenium: & immemores gratia dei, ita se dederant multis corripulis, ut nihilo melior esse: status eorum, quam patrum ante fuerat, quasi Deus operam lussisset castigando eorum scelera, Calvin. in Malach. prosm. i Job. 33. 17.

this

Cobarene. this untoward generation, nor they the best use of this affliction. Witnesse their words above the text, where they stand shouting it out with the Lord of Hosts ver. 13. and stick not to charge him with deep oliscancy, and forlorne neglect of his best servants, ver. 14. yea with flat iniquity, and most unequall administration of his earthly kingdome. For now we call the proud happy, say they, and those that work wickednesse are set up, yea they that tempt God are even delivered. As who should say, Surely there is no reward for the righteous: verily there is not a God that doth judge in the earth. Either things are not ordered by a divine providence, but left at randome, and let run at sixes and sevens, as it happens: or else, there is not an equall hand held over the sons of men, but partiality, and unrighteousnesse found with the iudge of all the earth: & whiles the proud thus tempt God, and trample upon his people, and are not only not punished, but even prefer'd for their labour. Thus they in their madnesse set their mouths against heaven, & spare not despitefully to spit their venome in the face of God himself. At the hearing of which abhorred blasphemies, || I wonder, if the heavens did not twear, the Sun blash, the Earth wax weary of her burthen, and Hell gape wide and enlarge her self, for these prodigious Atheists, these Gyants || these monstrous men of condition. I am sure the Godly of these times were much affected with it, and met often about it; not without a great deal of good conference, and much holy duty perform'd, on all hands, to that God with whom they found all best audience and acceptance for the present, together with a promise of fuller and further reward for the future, to the comfort of his people, and confusion of his enemies.

|| Mirum videtur celum hoc dislo non sudare, terram hinc mare non commoveri &c. Cart. Hist. Xpi. m Esay 5. 14. || Θεομαχον. Act 5. 39. & 23. 9.

16. Then they that feared the Lord, spake often one to another: and the Lord harkened and heard it, and there was a booke of remembrance written before him, for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his Name.

17. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of Hosts &c.

The words present unto us	{	1. a duty performed: set forth	{	1. in the circumstances.	{	1. of time, Then	{	2. of persons, they that	{	feared the Lord.
				2. in the substance, they spake often one to another				present, he regards what they did,		thought upon his Name.
				1. Gods gracious acceptance, in that for				the Lord harkened, and heard it.
				future, he records it; And a booke of remembrance was written &c.
		2. A mercy returned: and that's double.		2. his righteous retribution of		1. Mercy to his people respecting.		1. their persons which he will		1. own, they shall be mine &c.
								2. their performances, I will spare them, as a man spareth his owne son that serveth him.		2. honour, in the day when I make up my Jewels.
						2. Judgement to his enemies: ver. 18. Then shall ye return, and discern &c.

CHAP. I.

Doctr. I. Saints must be best in worst times.

THe[n] men were arrived at this height of impudency and prophanenes, as to say, 'Twas to no purpose to serve God: even then, when their black mouths were now big swolne with such like blasphemies, n then, they that feared the Lord were thus busied as in the text. Note hence,

That Gods servants must labour to shew themselves best in the worst times: and then most bestir them in his businesse, when others are most carelesse of it, and contrary to it.

n Illis de Dei judicio blasphemantibus. Hieron. Tunc cum blasphemant talia loquerentur. Pet à Figurio in locum. Deil.

SECT. I.

The Point confirmed 1. by precept 2. by practise.

THis you shall see confirm'd, and commended to us. 1. by precept from Gods mouth: 2. by the constant practise of his best children in all ages. For precept, first, what can be more direct and expresse, then those common texts, Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evill. o Save your selves from this untoward generation. p Come out from among them my people, and be ye separate. q Be not ye conform'd to this world, but be ye transform'd by the renewing of your mind. r Have no fellowship with the unfruitfull works of darknesse: but reprove them rather s. with a number more that I might add with ease. That one of Solomon for all, My son, saith he, if sinners entice thee, consent thou not. If yet they say Come with us, let us lay wait for blood &c. Cast in thy lot amongst us, let us all have one parte; My son, walk not thou in the way with them: refrain thy foot from their path. t For their way (in the issue of it) is the way to hell, going down to the chambers of death. u Even that second death (as the scripture tearms it) which though hand joyn in hand w and they muster up and unite their forces (as hoping haply to scape in the croud, or to carry it away cleanly, because a multitude) yet they shall never be able to avoid or abide. For the wicked (be they never so many of them) shall be turn'd into hell, and whole nations that forget God. x

*o Exod. 23.2.
p Act. 2.40.
q 2 Cor. 6.17.
r Rom. 12.2.
s Eph. 5.11.*

*t Pro. 1.10, 11,14,15.
u Prov. 7.27.
w Prov. 16.5.*

x Psal. 9.17.

This the Patriarch Noah (that I may shew you secondly the practise of the point in some particular examples of ancient and later times) this, I say, Noah believed ere he saw, and therefore lived to see what he had afore believed: not whole Nations only, but a world-full of wicked people swallowed up together in one universall grave of waters: their spirits being now in prison, reserved in everlasting chaines under darknesse, unto the judgement of the great day y. The foresight whercof by a lively faith, (being warn'd of God of things not seen as yet z.) made him walk uprightly with God even in his generation a. Now for him to walk alone in a divers way to a world of wicked people, as Chrysostome hath it, b to keep himself unsupported in such a foul season, as another speakes of him, c nay, like a right orient and illustrious planet, not only to hold out a constant counter-motion to that of the vulgar, but also to shine so fair with a singularity of heavenly light, spirituall goodnesse, and Gods sincere service, in that darke midnight of damned impiety; this was that whereby he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousnesse which is by faith e. The next, in the Apostles roul there remembered and registred is Abraham, that precious man, pull'd as a brand out of Ur of the Chaldees: from whence he went forth (forsaking father, house and friends who served other Gods beyond the flood) not knowing whither he went, saith the text, g nor much daring, so long as he had God by the hand. For whom also his first care was, where ever he came: setting up Altars to Jehovah h in the mid'st of those Idolaters, and making open profession of his service before

*y 1 Pet. 3. 19.
z Heb. 11.7.
a Gen. 6.9
b Solus ipse diversè ambulavit, virtutem malicie præferens &c. Chrysost. Hom. 22. in cap. 6. Genes.
c inter corruptissimos inane in incorruptis. Pare in Gen 6
e Heb. 11.7.
f Iosh. 24.2.
g Heb 11.8.
h Gen. 12.6 7 8. & 13.4,18.*

the

Josh. 24. 2
Rom. 1. 12
Josh. 24. 14

Malorum non
est electio.
Arist.

m Job 27. 5, 6
n Job 29
Chrysostom.

o Psal. 119.
126, 127. and Psal. 39. 2
resolving first upon silence
among wicked company, could not hold his spirit
so burnt, &c.
p 1 King. 17.
10.

Rom. 11. 3
q 1 King 22
r 1 King 8. 12
s Job 2. 17
t Act. 4
u Act. 12. 5.
ouvéry, et inimicus & apud
se astuabat, pra
zeli ardore.
w Act. 17.
So he gave thanks afore
meat in the midst of iusi-dels. Act. 27.
25.

x A people so debauched,
that they made a law, Μηδεις ημων
ομνισος εστω,
Let there bee
never an honest man amongst us.
And it is storied, that they therefore cast

out one Hermodorus, as by an ostracisme, because he was a good husband and a temperate man. y 1 Tim. 4. 23.
z Rev. 2. 13. a Philip. 4. 22. b Ologinta sex annos illi servio, nec ulla in re me unquam laetit, & quomodo possim maledicere, &c. Euseb. Eccles. hist. l. 4. c. 15. c Erasmus in vita Orig. oper. praefixa. d Legatur Ilyrici Catalogus testium. Dr. Usher, graviss. quæsti. Cade, &c. e Ingenuus orbis & mirabatur se factum esse Arrianum. Hieron. contra Luciferianos. Iste vir totius orbis impetum sustinuit. f Psal. 139 ult. g Matth. 11. 19. * Haud perinde in crimine incendij quam Otio Humanj generis convulsi sunt. Sic de Christianis sub Nerone uerbis incensa falso accusatis.
Tacit. lib. 15. Et Tertullianus in Apologet. ait, in Christianis nomen damnari & puniri, non crimen & scelus.

the people of the land; which was a reall confutation of their heathenish foppesries. Thus Abraham then; and thus, after him, Johna by his example; which he therefore useth and urgeth in that parliament he called and held at Shechem, a little afore his death. I took your father Abraham (saith he there, in Gods behalf) from the other side of the flood, &c. whose children ye shall well approve your selves, if ye walke in the steps of his faith, by putting away the strange gods from among you, as he, and serving the Lord I. In which holy practise however you come off, choose you this day whom you will serve (though in evils of sin there be no choise) whether the gods of your fathers beyond the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve Jehovah.

The time would fail me to tell of Job, who would not part with his Integrity, to die for it, though instigated thereunto by the wife of his bosome, & set on doubtlesse by the Devil: who of all the parts of his body had left his tongue onely free from blisters, if haply he might be drawn to curse God therewith and die.
To tell you (next) of David, who therefore loved Gods statutes exceedingly, because men had made void his Law. Of Elias, who though alone and singular, continued therefore zealous for the Lord of Hosts, because they had added down his Laws, &c.
Of Micaiah, who would not flatter the King, though 400. false prophets had done it afore him: Of Obadiah, that feared God greatly, in a common detection, &c.
Look to the New Testament, and there you have our Saviour taken up with the zeal of his Fathers house, when by all sorts polluted: his Apostles, soon after his departure, resolving to obey God even contra gentes, against whatsoever opposition, and not to swim down the stream of the times for any menaces of the Council.
Paul, (that heavenly spark) burning in spirit against a Church full of unbelieving Jewes at Corinth, and openly contesting with the Gentiles at Athens about their senselesse superstition. What should I stand longer to tell you of Timothy, so abstemious and temperate among the luxurious Ephesians, that Saint Paul was fain to prescribe him a little wine for his bellies sickness. Of Antipas, who held forth the word of life, even to the death, when the Satans throne was set. Of Neros family, to whom Saint Paul sends salutations: Of Polycarp, that blessed Martyr of Jesus Christ, who being solicited by the Tyrant to do sacrifice to the Idoll, and so to provide for his own safety, as diverse others had done before him. Forty years and odd years, said he, have I served my Master Christ, and he never deceived me: an shall I now desert him? God forbid me any such wickednesse: I scorn to be delivered upon any such dishonourable termes. Of Origen, who chose rather to continue a poor Catechist at Alexandria, in daily danger of his life, then with Plinius, his fellow-pupill. to live at Court in great authority and favour, would he but, with him, have reneagued Christ, and renounc'd the Faith. It were easie to come lower, and nearer our own times, and to bring upon the stage a great sort of such as held forth the word of life, by a bold and wite profession, in the darke midnight of damned popery, and Satans universall raigne: But I shut up with Athanasius, that notable Champion of Christ, and stickler for the truth: to the defence whereof he stood stoutly, when all the Christian world besides was turn'd Arrian; as a Father phraseth it. Whence, it went abroad of him, That the whole world was set against Athanasius, and Athanasius against all the world. A brave commendation, a stately praise. Such honour have all his Saints. Wisdom ever hath been, you see, and ever must be justified of her children against all obloquies, and op-positions of the mad multitude, ever besides it selfe in point of salvation.

SECT. II.

The point confirmed by reasons 1. from God. 2. from men, both 1. good. 2. and bad.

And there's good reason for it too, as you shall soon see, whether ye look upward or downward, to God or men, the saints themselves, or others. All which Reasons are grounded upon our Text, and shall be thereence gathered.

For God, first, his people should therefore strive then to be best, when others are at worst. 1. Because he graciously accepts it, he hearkens and hears, saith the text. 2. He plentifully rewards it, for there is a book of remembrance, &c. that this, their labour of love may never be forgotten.

Ver. 16.

H. b. 6.

For themselves next, Gods saints shall hereby well approve, that they are. 1. True Christians, fearing the Lord. 2. Zealous Christians, such as think upon his name.

Lastly, for others. 1. Good men shall be thereby notably confirmed, whiles they speak often one to another for mutuall quickning, and encouragement. 2. Bad men shall be utterly confuted and confounded, while they return, that is, change their minds, and discerne, perforce, a plain and palpable difference between themselves and Gods servants. Yea whiles they are constrained by the testimony of their own evil consciences, and by the evidence of their own evil experiences, to see and say, Verily there is a reward for the righteous, verily there is a God that judgeth in the earth &c.

h Psal. 28 11

Here then to begin with the first Reason, taken from God, and therein (not to urge his command, which yet is reason sufficient, and tacitely implied in the text: for what the Lord approveth and rewardeth, that he certainly willet and requireth; sith his approving and prescribing will are (though distinct yet) not different the one from the other, but) to make use of so much onely in the text, as lies above ground for our present purpose. First, the Lord doth curiously observe, and graciously accept of such his servants as continue constant with him in depraved times, in a generall declension, when sinne is grown usuall, and almost universall. The Lord hearkned and heard, saith the text: It imports, that he was much taken with their sweet conferences, and those savoury speeches that fell from their mouthes. No noise so delightfull, no musick so melodious to his heavenly ears; which therefore he applies close, and layes near to their honey lips; as loth to lose any part of that precious language. Well might Saint Peter say, out of the Psalms: The eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers; we read, we open to their prayers &c, but the Originall is more emphaticall, his ears are unto their prayers, or rather into their prayers; so farre is he affected therewithall. And look what the Apostle speaks there of their prayers, by way of instance) the same is as true of their whole Christian practise. Not a prayer they make, not a good work they do, not a good speech they utter, nay not a good thought they take up, but he both notes it well, (he hearkned and heard) and sets it down in his note-book too: for a book of remembrance was written before the Lord for them that but thought upon his Name in an evill time, when mens words were stout against God, verse 13, 14. and their thoughts Atheisticall verse 15.

Reas. 1.

ὁ οὐ καὶ ἐπὶ
τῶν καλῶν σω-
ζόντων μέλει ἔσται αὐτοῦ. De Nestore suo Homerus.

k 1 Pet. 3. 12

Psal. 34.

Reas. 2.

l Psal. 50. 5.

m Num. 18. 19

n 2 Chron. 13. 5

o Deut. 32. 9

p οὐκ ἔστιν ὁμοί-
ατος τοῦ
παιδίου, προ-
πrium, singula-
re, thesaurus.
p καὶ οὐκ ἔστιν ὁμοί-
ατος τοῦ
παιδίου, προ-
prium, singula-
re, thesaurus.

q 1 Pet. 2. 9.

Such as comprehend all his gettings.

(as his gettings.

(as

(as

(as

(as

(as

(as

(as

(as

(as

N n n

(as

XUM

q Psal. 19. 11
 Perinde ut
 homo cum ho-
 mine amico, vel Domino suo ubiq; & judiciale inambu-
 lans, &c. Aug.
 r Am. 3. 3
 s Heb. 11. 5
 t τίς ἐκ τῶν
 ἁγίων αὐτοῦ.
 u Jude 14, 15
 ex ἀνθρώπων. Ver-
 bum ex vultu,
 aurum, incorve-
 niens. &c.
 x Psal. 5. 9
 y Psal. 111. 9
 z Heb. 6. 10
 a Heb. 11. 5
 b ἡ ἀκούσιος
 τῆς διαβολῆς
 τὰ ῥήματα ἐν
 τῷ ἡρώδῃ αὐτοῦ.
 Rev. 11. 19
 c Gen. 5. 27
 d Ecclef. 11. 5
 e Esay 49. 4
 f Jam. 1. ult.
 g 1 Cor. 11. 19
 h Non à Deo,
 sed ab hominis
 corruptione vo-
 luntaria, Bez. 4.
 i Mar. 3. 7
 k Philip. 2. 15
 αὐτοὺς ὡς ἡμέτε-
 ρα.
 Great lights.
 * ἐν τῇ γενέσει.
 o Esay. 44. 20
 p. 350. ex
 eodem ore calidum & frigi-
 dum effluere.
 q Zeph. 1. 3
 r 2 Thes. 2. 10
 s 1 King. 18. 21
 t Hof. 7. 8
 u 2 Cor. 6. 16
 v 2 King. 5. 18
 w Exod. 20
 x As the fifth comm'nde-
 ment is the first with promise, so is the second the first with punishment,
 which the Lord severely threatens there, to them
 that worship him not aright, because men commonly inflict punishment
 on them that do.
 y 1 King. 21. 20
 z 1 King. 18. 12
 13.

(as Saint Peter after the Septuagint renders the word here found in our Text:) in summe, his Jewels, whom he will highly prize, and safely set up by him in the golden cabinet of his speciall providence, and fatherly protection. Not casting them out for every small flaw, nor lesse esteeming them for every little dust that falls upon them, and fouls them; but prizing them aright to their utmost value, and giving them their allowance, (as men deal by light gold) he will take them for currant: And wherein they come short of what they should be, he will spare them as a man spareth his own sonne that serveth him. Then the which I know not what the Lord could have spoken more effectually for the glory of his own rich grace, or the stirring up of our utmost affections to an holy contention in godlinesse, be the times never to bad or boisterous: sith in doing thereof there is so great reward q. In which respect, how fitly doth the Authour to the Hebrews close up the story of Henocho his heroicall faith, with that golden corollary, He that cometh to God, (as Henocho did, who walked familiarly with God, as a man with his friend * with whom he is in covenant: for can two walk together, (saith the Prophet) and they not be agreed? r) must beleieve that God is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him s. The Greek text hath it, that seek him out t, namely when he is cast into a blind corner, (if I may so speak with reverence to the Divine Majesty) conveyed out of the way and covered (as it were) with the calumnies and flout words of the wicked, these hard words (against which Malachy here, and Henocho anciently prophesied u) of ungodly persons, whose throats are as open sepulchres x to bury Gods Name in, as much as they may: were it not for Henocho and such as hee, that do daily and diligently vindicate that reverend y Name, from their false aspersions; and as it were dig it out of the grave, wherein they had villanously conceald, after a sort, and cover'd it. But what lost Henocho by this labour of love z? had he not this testimony from heaven hereupon, that he pleased God a, was hee not translated, as a Jewel of price, into the heavenly Cabinet b? and were not the fewnesse of his dayes on earth, in comparison of his forefathers, recompensed in that longest life of his sonne Methuselah c? And why all this? but because he walked with God (when others walked after the lust of their hearts, and sigh of their eyes d) seeking to take men off from their lewd and lawlesse courses, by the terror of the Lord, which he most powerfully denounced, Jude 14, 15. In doing whereof, though (to his own thinking) he laboured in vain, and spent his strength for nought, yet surely his judgement was with the Lord, and his reward with his God e, which was the first reason taken from God. The second follows, respecting our selves. And so; by cleaving close to Jehovah in corrupt times, it shall well appear; first, that we are the same we would all seem to be, Men fearing God. For, this is pure religion indeed, to keep a mans self unsport of the world f. The e must be heresies amongst you, saith the Apostle, that they which are approved may be made manifest g. And, by a like reason, there must h be a perverse and gracelesse generation, a viperous brood i, amidst whom Gods spirits may shine as lumps in the world, and so approve themselves blamelesse and harmlesse, the sonnes of God without rebuke, Holding forth the word of life k for an Ensigne *, by a bold and wise profession, and practise of the truth that is in Jesus; then, when it is most oppos'd, and oppress'd by the sonnes of Belial. This is the guise of a man that truly fears God: he cannot blow hot and cold o, as they say: he dare not swear by God and Malchom p, he will not hold the truth in indifference q. God, he knows, must be worshiped truly, that there be no halting r, and totally, that there be no halving s: for what communion hath Christ with Belial? and what fellowship hath the temple of God with idols t? Out upon those Rimmonites, that plead for an upright soul in a prostrate body u. Thou shalt not bow down to them, nor worship them w, for any mans pleasure. And why? for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, &c. therefore let my fear fall upon thee, as a strong counter-blast to the base fear of any tyrant x. For as one fire drives out another, so doth the fear of God, the fear of the creature. Obadiab (for instance) that good steward of a bad Lord, that Non-such-Ahab. I mean, a man, that had sold himself to do wickednesse y. Not so Obadiab: but (whatever my Lord the King, and the whole State do) I fear God greatly, saith he to the Prophet z. I, but how shall this appear, Obadiab? Why, when Jezabel kild up the Lords Prophets, I (not standing to cast perils) hid them, and fed them by sly in a cave, not without the hazard of my my head if it should ever have been noticed. Loe here's a man of courage fearing God; and he gave the best testimony of it, by ruling with God, and continuing faithfull with the Saints, as Judah; then when Ephraim compassed him about with lyes, and the whole house of Israel, with deceit. b

But secondly, as the practise of this point proves one a Christian fearing God, so a zealous forward christian, one that sollicitously thinks upon Gods name; that high and holy Name whereby he is called, and wherewith he is intrusted, d with charge not to take it in vaine, e but to bear it up aloft (as the word f in that third commandment signifies) to lift it up as a standard, saying Jehovah Nissi g the Lord is my banner: or as servants do their masters badges upon their shoulders, so they Gods Impres upon their foreheads, yea, upon the bridles of their horses h (in their common conversation also) even Holinesse to the Lord. Being confident of this very thing, with Paul, that in nothing they shall be ashamed: but that with all boldnesse, i as alwayes, so now Christ shall be magnified in their bodies, whether it be by life or death. See an instance of this in the holy Apostles standing before the Council. We cannot, say they, but speak the things we have heard and seen, what ever be the issue of it k, they being now (albeit afore fearfull and faint-hearted to the deserting of Christ, and betraying a good cause by their cowardise, yet now being) not, drunk with new wine, as those scoffers cavil'd them, l but filled with the holy Ghost m (a wine that would make even the lips of them that are asleep to speak n) were necessitated o to an holy so wardnesse and forthputting: being like vessels, that when they are fill'd and stop't up, must either vent or burst without remedy. See it again in St. Paul, that precious man, who when once he became a chosen vessell to the Lord Christ to bear his name, p never was he so mad q afore in havocking those that called upon that name in all places r as he was now fierce and fiery against all that did any thing contrary to the Name of Jesus. s Not to meddle with his encountering of Elymus the socerer; he set his eyes upon him t faith the text, as if he would have run thorough him: After which lightening followed that terrible thunder-crack, O full of all subtilty, and mischief &c. But more to our purpose is his handling of Peter, a man that feared God as well as himself, but yet thought not all out to well upon his name (for that time at least) as he did: whom therefore Paul withstood to his face. u He did not hale with him for company, as good Barnabas had done (being carried away x by the authority of the man, against his old associate y. t. Paul, with whom also he had once before had a bitter bickering) a justifying fit: ) but blamed him before a great sort of Peters own disciples, when he found him temporizing shamefully z and not footing it aright a according to the simplicity that is in Christ, b and the truth of the Gospel. c Indeed Cardinal Baronius withstands Paul as stiffly as ever Paul did Peter: and dares maintain that Peter was not to be blamed, but Paul a great deal too busie rather. A bold censure and well befitting a Jesuite, with whom what more common (when they are in place where) then to vilify a this prime Apostle, for dealing so roundly with their God Peter, and so to put the lye upon the Holy Ghost himself.

sonat. z Caveno scandalum levius-gravius dedit idq. geminum &c. pareq; a de domo dei b 2. c Gal. 2. 14. d Of mine own knowledge and hearing, some of them teach in the pulpit, that St. Paul was not secure of his preaching but by conference with St. Peter: nor that he durst publish his epistles till St. Peter had allowed them. I have heard also credibly reported that some of their Jesuites of late in Italy, in solemn sermons, commending St. Peter for a worthy Spirit, have censured St. Paul for a hot-headed perion; who was so transported with the pangs of zeal, and eagerness beyond all compasse in most of his disputes, that there was no great reckoning to be made of his Assertions; yea he was dangerous to read, as favouring of heresy in some places, and better perhaps he had never written. Agreeable to which I heard other of their Catholikes deliver, that it hath been heretofore very seriously consulted among them, to have censured by some meanes, and reform'd the epistles of St. Paul &c. Sr. Edwin Sands in his Relation of the western Religion. Oh tongues worthy to be pulled out of their heads, cut into gobbets, and driven down their throats, that durst utter such prodigious and till atate unheard of blasphemies against the Lord Christ, and his heaven-inspired Apostle.

But I hasten to the third and last rank of Reasons respecting others. And so Good men first shall be, by our holding out in hard times, much confirm'd and comforted, whiles we cease not to speak, as these in our text, and speak often one to another: for thats the force of the Hebrew word here used (sermonis frequentationem a Exo. 18. 21.

b Hof. 1. 11. 12.
Real. 4.
c 2 Chr. 7. 14.
d 2 Chr. 12. 13
e Exod. 20.
f NWI
elevavit,
elevationem.
Elay 5. 26.
elevabit vexillum ad gentes.
g Exo. 17. 15.
h Zach. 14.
20, 21.
i ἀπαρτία.
q ἀπαρτία.
freedom of speech.
k Act. 4. 20.
l Act. 2. 13.
m ἀνδρῶν
cavillantes.
Beza contumeliam irrisum indicat.
n Act. 1. 18.
o Cant. 7. 9.
p 2 Cor. 5. 14.
q οὐκ ἔστιν alludit ad vatium furorem. Beza.
r Act. 9. 15.
s Act. 26. 11.
t Act. 9. 14, 21
u Sunt qui prophetiam Jacobi de lupo processuro d. tribu Benjam. Paulo applic.
v Act. 26. 9.
w Act. 13. 9.
x τῶν ὁσίων.
y Gal. 2. 11, 13
z ὁ ἀντιπαρῆς.
a Act. 15. 39.
b ἀποεὐαγλίσ.
animorum exacerbatio, in qua aliquid fuit acerbi &c.
c enim acutum

Cer. 11. 3.
e 17272.
frequentationem

In Radicibus. quentationem significat, it imports a frequency of speech, faith Kimchi) f And that's the property of true grace, to knit mens hearts in a holy communion, as all g Prov. 17. 17. ways, so in evill times especially; for misery breeds unity. And, although a friend love at all times, yet a brother is born for adversity. g Sheep when they are coursed, nay twine, when they are lugg'd, will get together, and grunt together, and make what head they can against a common adversary, for each others safety. And shall not the saints of God, who are linked together by the same spirit, and knit together by the same bond of love (that bond of their perfection h that unites persons and vertues, and perfects them by frequent actions and offices tending to mutuall confirmation and encouragement) shall not such, I say naturally i care for the estate one of another? and striving together for the faith of the gospel, k build up each other in that most holy faith, keep themselves carefully in the love of God, pray together in the holy Ghost looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ; of some having compassion, making a difference, and others save with fear, pulling them out of the fire l? Blessed Bradford reckoned that hour lost, during his imprisonment, wherein he had not done good to some one or other of his brethren and companions in tribulation, and in the kingdome and patience of Jesus Christ, m either by tongue, hand, or pen. n Neither was the Lord wanting unto him in the good successe of his holy endeavours that way, as appears in the following instances. " Bishop Farrar being in the kings-bench prisoner, was travell'd withall of " the Papists, in the end of Lent, to receive the sacrament at Easter in one kind;
 " who, after much perswading, yielded unto them, and promised so to doe.
 " Then so it fell out by Gods providence (faith mine Authour, in whose own " words I relate the whole story) the Easter-eave, the day before he should have " done it, was Bradford brought to the kings bench prisoner; where (the Lord
 " making him his instrument) Bradford only was the meanes that the said Bishop
 " reyoaked his promise, and would never after yield to be spotted with that papist
 " call pitch. At another time, B. Ridley being prisoner in the Tower, had the " liberty of the same, to prove belike (faith mine authour) whether he would go " to masse or noe: which once he did. But Mr. Bradford being then prisoner,
 " and hearing thereof, writeth an effectuall letter to perswade him from the same,
 " which (God be honoured) did Mr. Ridley no little good: for he repented
 " thereupon and did no more so. Hence St. John, I write unto you, faith he, that " do beleve on the name of the son of God, that ye may beleve on the name of the son of " God o, that is, that you may, by my writing, be further confirmed, continued and " increased in the faith once received. * The zealous forwardnesse, and godly care
 " of good people in bad times being a matter of singular avails for the settling,
 " strengthening, and stablishing of the hands that hang down, and the feeble knees which
 " else would buckle and warp, and turn out of the way. p
 " Lastly, as good men shall be hereby confirmed, so bad men convinced and confounded,
 " not only in the last and general judgement (when the Queen of the south shall rise
 " up and condemne such a sluggard as Herod the king, who desired to see Christ q (of " whose great works he had heard but would not stir a foot to finde him out) but
 " in this present world also, they are made many times to return and discern between
 " the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God, and him that serveth him
 " not. Witnesse those two mighty Monarchs in Daniel, Nebuchadnezzar and Darius.
 " How was the first of these appaled and abashed, when he saw the well-knit " resolution, and redoubted courage of Gods three worthies, in changing the kings " word and yielding their bodies that they might not worship a strange God r? And the " latter, how was he amused, and amazed, when Daniel had stoppt the mouths of " lions (like another Lyfymachus) by the force of his faith r after he had stood it
 " out stoutly to the face of his adversaries, who could finde none occasion against him
 " but in the matter of his God u? How did the innocency and piety of these godly " men triumph in the consciences of those two tyrants; making them afraid of the " name of God whereby they were called, x and compelling them to vote and voice
 " the same way that they had persecuted: y yea and to proclaime that God for
 " the onely true God, whom yet they had no minde to set up for their own
 " God. For so it is, that even naturall conscience cannot but stoop and do homage " to Gods image fairely stamp't upon the natures and works of his people: fo

h Colof. 3. 14.

i γυνδιας.

Philip. 2. 21.

k συναδελφύ-

τες.

Philip. 1. 27.

l Jude 20. 21,

22, 23.

m Hieron: vocat

sanctam vio-

lentiam, p labi-

lem rapinam.

n Rev. 1. 9.

n Fox Marty-

rolog.

ibidem.

ibidem.

o 1 Ioh. 5. 13.

* Memini, in-

quit Lutherus,

initio meæ cau- se D. Staupici-

um ad me

dicere: hoc mi-

hi placet, quod

de doctrina

quam prædicat,

gloriam & om-

nia soli Deo at- tribuit. Deo

autem

(quod luce cla- rius est) nimis

um gloria &

bonitatis tri-

bui non potest.

Et vox me

vehementer

confirmavit

& consolata est

Melchior A-

dam vit. Staup.

p Heb. 12. 12.

13.

Reaf. 6.

q Luc. 9. 9.

Tamen ne pe-

dem regiâ ex-

tulit ut illum

videre, ut amet-

si sibi in ani-

um induxe-

rat deum pro-

phetâ excitaf-

se à mortuis.

Ex qua quam

verum illud

fit Luc. 16. ult.

videre licet.

Cart. Hist.

Christi.

r Dan. 3. 28. 29

s Dan. 6. 23.

t Heb. 11. 33.

u Dan. 6. 5.

x Deu 28. 9. 10

y Dan. 3. & 6.

* Redwald K. of East Saxons, the first of his nation that was baptized: but afterwards seduced by his wife, he had in the self same Chappell, one Altar for Christs religion; and another for sacrifices unto devils. Bede.

b Pro presenti temporum conditione mirabiles Josephus. Quoties Judæos felicitate de gere viderant, cognoscerunt se appellantes, utpote a Joseph oriundi: quando vero eos rebus adversis confecti intellegunt, aspernare nobiles ad se pertinere, neque ex remotis gentibus ad eam venerint. ib.

i Junius in parabolis.

k Gal. 2. 11. 1 Añ 11. 25.

m It is notoriously known, that the most honourable name of Christian is in Italy and a Rome a name of reproach, and usually abused to signify a fool, or a dolt. Fulk. on the Rhem. Testam.

ñ 11. sect. 4 out of Christoph. French Coll. Jesuit in fine n Sabbata cum Judæis, nobiscum diem Dominicum in honorem Refurrectionis observant. Ebionæi verò pauperes in agnitione gloriæ Christi. Euseb. lib. 3. cap. 27.

o Ecebolius se ad Imperatorum ingenia & naturam conformans, &c. Socrat. Eccl. hist. l. 3. c. 11. Such also were the Melchites, a kinde of mongrell Christians that would be of the kings religion whatever it was. Brierwoods Enquiries ex Niceph.

* Melchior Vitis exier 2. 5.

p Hæc quam multis tales non doctrinam moribus Samaritanos. inter Christianos hodie reperias qui et in religione sunt duci cōti, dubij atq; neutræ, & ad laus navis felicitus, pro temporum ratione, sese inclinant, &c. Buchol. Chronol.

q Nehem. 13. 24.

r Num. 23.

s 1 Chron. 12. 32.

t 1 King. 13. 2.

u Gen. 37. 33.

w James 1. 8.

x Rom. 1. 18.

y 2 Cor. 12. 15.

z Revel 21. 8.

4 Judg 7. 3.

b Mark. 8. 38.

Such of old were those Assyrian Colonies, 2 King. 17. 41. that feared the Lord, and withall served their graven images *. And such for all the world, were their successours the Samaritans, of whom Josephus recordeth, that they could weather-cock-like, turne with the times b, and shift sail, with the sea-man, to the sitting of every wind. The Jews, while they flourished, should be their dear Cousins; but, if at any time under-hatches they would not once own them. Such also may the ancient Nazarites seem to have been, who (as the learned i conceive) mistled at first by example of Saint Peters Judaizing at Antioch k, fell afterwards to defend such halting betwixt two religions, and sought to bring in a miscellany of both. In detestation of which new-bred heresie (falsely fastned upon them by the infamous name of Nazarites) it is thought that the Church of Antioch, protesting against that sect and title, called themselves l by the (once honorable, but now among the Antichristian rout, despicable m) name of Christians. Such were the ancient Ebionites, and the modern Libertines, Nicodemites, Familists. Of the former, Eusebius tells us, that they would keep the sabbath with the Jews, and the Lords day with the Christians: like men that would seem to be of all religions, when in truth they were of none n: Of the latter, Cuius in and many others complain, that they held it no sinne to serve idols with their bodies among Papists and Pagans, so they kept their heart free to God; pretending for their practice, that counsell of Apocryphall Baruc, Chap. 6. Wherefore when ye see the multitude of people worshipping them behind and before, say in your hearts, O Lord it is thou that oughtest onely to be worshipped. Such a Polititian was Ecebolus o of old, and Baldwinus alate: of whom Beza testifies, that he had religionem ephemeram, for every day a new religion, ab his ad illos, ab illis ad hos leviter iens & levius transiens *; to day a Papist, to morrow a Protestant, in nothing so constant as in his unconstancy. And have we not now adayes (that I may come lower and nearer home) more then a good many p, brats of the same breed, beasts of the same litter, that stand halting between two, in utrunque parati, unresolved to either, and ready to be any thing with the State. These ask not of their father (saith a Divine) a fish but a scorpion: for a fish would teach them to go onely forward, but a scorpion doth teach them to go backward and forward. Like they are to Barnacles, saith Saint Austin, that are neither flesh nor fish: to Bats, that are neither birds nor beasts: to the mongrell Israelites, that spake both Hebrew and Aſſyrian q: to Baalam, that could both blesse and curse r, to the sonnes of Issachar, men skilfull in the times s. Using religion for a cloak, to wear abroad, cast off at home; or to put on, onely upon high-dayes, when they are to converse with their betters, as Jeroboams wife did her demure clothes t, when she was to speak with the Prophet. Of all which kind of persons, I may justly ask, as Jacob once of his lost Joseph, Here's the coat but where's the man u? a parry-colour'd coat, a double minded man w, unstable in all his wayes, imprisoning the truth in unrighteousnesse x, and dissembling it ever and anon for carnall respects; pulling in his horns, with the snail, for every pile of grasse, and ashamed of his Masters cognizance for every light counterblast of disgrace or danger. Oh detestable sheepishnesse, and dastardlinesse, fit for such a doom, even to be turned out among dogs y and hell hounds. For the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, &c. shall all have their part in the burning lake z: but the fearfull first. Lo these are held worthy to be set in the front, and to lead the ring-dance of such rebrothers, as shall be hurld into hell. The Lord holds all such white-liver'd foulders in such speciall detestation, that he will not employ them so far, as to break a pitcher. or to bear a torch in his service a. And for as many as are ashamed of Christ afose men, he will one day be as thie every whit, and as much ashamed of them before his Father, and the blessed Angels b:

at what time he will make most ample relation, and all honourable mention of every such Onesiphorus as was not ashamed of his chaine, & but fed him hungry, clothed him naked, visited him imprisoned &c. the good Lord will grant them to finde mercy, may glory and honour and immortality in that day e.

And lastly for all luke-warm Laodiceans, profligate professors, and temporizing Gospellers that can tune their fiddles to the bate of the times, resolving to play nothing but what the company calls for, the Lord will spew such parasites out of his mouth, f as too leathsome a mortell for his nice stomach to brooke or beare with. Now when a man spues he gets him into a corner: so will Almighty God rid his stomach of such into Hell. Ab, saith he, I will ease me of mine enemies, g I will lay up this loathsome stuff that lies so hard upon my stomach, which done, the devill, as a dog, stands ready waiting to lick up Gods vomit: he walks up and down, saith St. Peter (for the nonce) seeking whom he may swallow down: h whence also he is elsewhere called the great red dragon: i a dragon for his cruelty, and a great red dragon, for the blood of soules he hath sucked, and wherein he hath drenched and even dyed himself red again.

SECT. 4.

Use 2. A forcible Exhortation to courage for Christ, with foure helps thereunto.

WHose madnesse let us all learn to enjoy,* and (for a second use) be exhorted to sett seriously in hand with the practice of this most necessary, but much neglected duty: labouring to shine for h in these evil times, k like the lamp that shined out in the smockie furnace: l like the bright Starr that shew'd it self in the midst of darknesse: m nay like God himself who then doth his best works when men are at worst, n overcoming our evil with his good, and not suffering our perversenesse to interrupt the course of his kindnesse. o Be ye followers hereof God, as dear children, p let your piety and patience then most appear, when impiety and violence do most prevail. Let your zeal (by an holy Antiprismaticis) then flame out and break thorough all impediments, when most oppos'd and oppugned: like lime which is kindled with water: like gold that glitters most in the fire: like the rose that smells sweeter in the still than upon the stalk. Sauls malice serves but to enhance Davids zeal: the more outrageous was the one, the more courageous was the other; As the colder the ayre, the more the fire scorseth, and as the harder the weather the more the b a h scaldeth. And what though David here traytor q from Saul, and runnagate r from Nabal, and all that naught is from the abjects and base companions, that came round about him and made mouths at him. s It is a brave thing to do well and h ar ill, t said that Heathen-Prince. And, Doe well and bear ill is written upon heaven gates, said that Martyr u once, that was hasting thither. Elias-like in a fiery charret. Gods way was ever evill-spoken of, and such a trodd it, as little favoured of the world, as David was of the Philistin-Princes. w But what saith the son of David, who himself also was called traitour and Beelzebub, and had triall of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea moreover of bonds and imprisonment? x Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you for my sake, Rejoyce and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven. y Take up the reproach of the mad multitude (that speak evil of that good they know not, * having hearts as barren of grace as Michels womb was of children) and say: It was before the Lord z who hath done such and such great thing for me, and therefore if this be to be vile, I'll be yet more vile to you, that I may be more preciouslly esteemed of God. What though you finde few or none that will set in, or side with you in this important worke, in this one thing necessary? a what though all men forsake you, as they did st. Paul at his first answer b and appearance before Neros tribunall: yet the Lord will stand with thee, and strengthen thee, c 2 Tim. 1.

17, 17, 18
d Mar. 25. 53.
e Rom 2. 7.
f Rev. 3. 16.
g h i l Salva-
m: dum anatepidos evenit Hieron.
g Elay 1.
h 1 Pet. 5. 8.
i n t o v n r a n a r a n i q.
j Rev. 12. 3.
k r o p p s c u at u r i g n a s i n-
f e r n a l i s.
l l i e 2.
m * O p t i m u m e s t a l e n a f u i
i n f a n t i a.
n A E p h e s 5. 16
o Gen. 15. 17
p m M a t t h e w 2 n 1 P e t. 1 5
with
2 T i m. 3 1
2 P e t. 3 3
o H o s 2 12.
p E p h e s 5 1
A s S a m s o n
s t i r r e d u p h i s s t r e n g t h w h e n
h e h e a r d t h e P h i l i s t i n s w e r e u p o n
h i m
q 1 S a m. 22. 8
r 1 S a m. 25 10
s P s a l. 35. 15
t 1 T i m. 5. 20
u 1 P e t. 2. 12
v 1 P e t. 2. 12
w M o g. i n P l u s.
x A p o b y e x h i s
M a r t y r.
w 1 S. i n 29. 9
x H e b. 11. 36
y M a r. 5 11. 12
z G e n t i l e s c h r is t i a n o s d i c er u n t h m i c id a s s a c i l e g o s, i n c e l t o s h o p e s p u b l i c o s a d or a t o r e s a f i n i E r o T e n u l l.
* 2 P e t. 2. 12
z 2 S a m. 6. 22
a E g o D a v i d e m p l u s s t u g e s at i o n e m q u a m
p u g n a n t e m:
p u g n a n d o q u i pp e h e s t e s f u id i n s f l a m m a
a n t e m c o r a m d o s e p l u m v ic i n. G r i g l i b.
27. c a p 25.
b 1 L u k e 10. 42
c 2 T i m. 4.
16, 17 18

<sup>c</sup> Heb. 12. 12
<sup>d</sup> Act. 7. 55. 56 Agnotheta dicebatur, qui facis certaminibus præerant
 erant; decem-viri. Jul: Polie
 f Rev. 3. 21.
 g 1 Pet. 1. 4.
 audet. 277

Yea like pearls which though they grow in the sea, yet retain the colour and brightness of heaven Christ.

* Orcus flavi-
 us in Peneum
 illabatur, quem
 nec Peneus
 recipit, sed

instar olei supernantem brevi spatio portatum abdicat, nec penales aquas, Dirisque genitas, argenteis suis aquis misceri permittit. Solin.

h Exod. 23. 2.

Si turbam in-vitari volueri-
 tis, inter paucos

angustam viam ambulantes
 non eritis Aug.

i Rom. 7. 12.
 Major pars
 meliorem vin-
 cit. Non possu-mus negare

plures esse ma-
 los; & tam plures, ut inter eos

proprus non appareant grana
 in area. Aug. in Psal. 47.

k Mar. 7. 14.
 677 577 In vetustis codici-
 bus legitur

77 577 idq; Theophylactus
 interpretatur,

quasi particula 77 sit admiran-
 tis, & 77 ita scriptum esset

ῥαββί, ὁ σοφὸς
 ἐστὶ σοφός
 l. Luc. 12. 32.

σοφὸς σοφός.
 m 1 King.
 20. 27.

n

n ut cum paucis inveniri merearis in regno dei. o Theodoret. lib. 2. cap. 16.

* Mali undiq; perserpunt, Quare sic vivis? Tu solus christianus es, quare non facis quod faciunt alij Aug. in Psal. Dementia est te solum in doctrina religionis majorem esse lucem consecutum putare, quam tot hominum millia multis jam seculis videre poterunt &c. Malvenda apud Senarchanum in vita Johan Diazij p Numerus pusillus non obest ubi abundat pietas, nec multiplex predest ubi abundat impietas. q Non numeranda suffragia sed expendenda. Non numero hac judicantur sed pondere. Tull Off. 7 Luc. 9. 23. ἀπαρυσάμεθα with a stout and constant denial again &
 again, so so unreasonable
 a request.

thee, as he did him, yea preserve thee safe and entire to his heavenly kingdom. Lift up the hands therefore that hang down, and the feeble knees: & yea lift up your eyes, and see heaven open over your heads with Steven, d God and his holy Angels looking on and applauding him: yea see Christ himself (that heavenly Agnotheta) standing over thee, as there, e and holding out unto thee an immaculate crown with this inscription, VINCENTI DADO. To him that overcometh, will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my father in his throne. f In confidence of which high prize, let the saints be encouraged, Joshua-like, to advance forward in a holy singularity, with all sweet content, and undauntedness of spirit, toward that incorruptible and unfadeable g crown above: not swimming down the stream of the times, nor being carried along by the swinge and sway of the place where they live: but like fishes retaining their naturall sweetness in the salt sea: * like Salamanders unconscin in the fire: like oyle that will overtop all other liquors, but not commingle: * ever holding a constant countermotion to the course of the world, and the corruptions of the time; that amidst all, you may keep a good conscience, that richest treasure, and dearest Jewel (as One saith well) that ever the heart of man was acquainted with.

To help you herein for it is a duty (of greatest difficulty) take these few rules and directions. First, presse upon your consciences the former precepts; Follow not a multitude h &c. with the rest above recited: consider withall the equity and reasonableness of those commandments: for there is not any one law of God but is holy and just and good, i could we but see into it. Who cannot say that the greater part overcometh, the better, and that the most are ever the worst; and shall we go against common sense, and universall experience? Besides, the scriptures are plain in this point as in all other, simply necessary to salvation) telling us that the way to hell is broad and well-beaten: and the many go in thereat. But oh how straight is the gate, and narrow the way that leads to life, and how few there be that finde it. k Christ's flock hath ever been found a little flock: l standing, as the host of Israel, like two little flocks of kids: when the wicked (on tother side) like the Aramites, fill the country. m This the pblind Philosopher could see, and therefore say, Sapientum cum paucis: n and Diogenes thought he should ever do best, when he did least what the most did. And Cassianus counsels us in his epistles. Vive ut pauci, &c. Live as those fewest live; that with the few ye may be found in the kingdom of heaven. o It was a brave answer of Liberius an orthodox Bishop in the primitive times, who when he was pressed by the Emperour Constantius to forsake the truth, and vote for Arrianisme by this argument. o Quota pars es tu orbis terrarum? Art thou wiser then all the world? * He very honestly and discreetly reply'd, The truth is no whit prejudiced by myaloneness in standing out: nam & olim tres solum &c. for of old also there were three only that would withstand the wicked edict of the king of Babel. And remarkable is the speech of Nicolas the first, Bishop of Rome to Michael the Emperour of Constantinople. p It matters not how small the number be, if godly: nor how great, if ungodly; with multitude and Antiquity are but ciphers in Divinity, and not much to be stood upon, further then they will bear waight in the ballance of the Sanctuary. q.

Secondly, study that great but much neglected art of self-deniall; and learn to say peremptory & nay to any whether person or thing (though never so deare or delightfull) that would coole thy courage for Christ, or call thee off this most favoury favoury course. And first, if carnall Reason come in and offer to obtrude that twise-fodden colewort f of hers (perswading thereby to a politick forbearance of forwardnesse by the fear of what may follow) Be not righteous overmuch, neither make thy self over-wise t q. d. be discreet and wary, and stand not so strictly upon tearmes of conscience: why shouldst thou destroy thy self? why shouldst thou incur the needlesse danger of envy and vexation, by thrusting thy self over-eagerly into observation? Stop thine eares, I say, to this subtle enchantresse, u and rather harken to the voice of Gods spirit in the verses immediately following. Be not wicked overmuch (saith he, in opposition to that former, Be not just over- much w) q. d. He that slackes, and remits but a little in goodnesse, and (for his owne ease and honour) qualifies it, though but with a little degree of badnesse, the same is wicked, and over-much wicked: Neither be foolish (in opposition to that above-laid, Be not wise over-much) as all are, that temper spirituall wildome with carnall pollicy: for why shouldst thou dye before thy time? to wit, by an unseasonable death from Gods hand; then when it were better for thee to do any thing then to dye: sith after death there is judgement, and hell-fire, and all to be passed thorough by the poore soule. This is the voice of heaven, wherewith ye are to still and stop the mouth of that wildome which descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish. x

Next, for carnall friends, deny your self also in them y if you mean to keep in with Christ. They'le be ready enough with Peter z to prompt you to be good to your self, and not rashly to run the hazard of a singularitan, to your I know not how great disgrace and disadvantage * &c. For a counter-poison, consider: is there any friend to God? or any toe to him? Did not Eli pay dear for displeasing the Lord, to please his children a? and had it not like to have cost Moses his life for forbearing to circumcise one child (as he had done another) for angring his wife b? Tell me not here I shall be mockt, and hoored at, if I refuse to be fashionable. why, what of that? if a lame man laugh at thine upright walking, wilt thou therefore halt *? if dogs bark and bounce at the Moon, shall she therefore hide her head, and cease to shine any longer c? David became the drunkards song, and a by-word among the sons of Belial, who came round about him, ma- king mouths and mowes d was he ever a whit the worse man for that? Did not Paul hear Pest, Elisba baldpate f, our Saviour himself Conjuror, traitour, mad-man?
 So true is that of Chrysostome, Mad sinners censure all for mad that come short of themselves in madnesse g. A very Philosopher could pittie those that set him at naught, and count it his honour and happinesse to be despised by the many h. And Seneca's enemies could not faster learn to raile, then he to neglect. i 3 Deny your selves further, in your liberties * with Michajah, who would not baffle for any mans pleasure, nor voice with the rest of Abahs parasiticall Prophets, though he were sure to kiss the stocks for his stiffnesse, and there to be fed with hard-meat, till the kings return in peace. Deny your selves lastly in your lives, if call'd unto it.
 What cared the three children for Nebuchadnezzars wrath, burning seven times hotter then his furnace k? kill them he might possibly, * hurt them he could not l, and that made them so resolute. For he that truly feares God, and thinks upon his name, dreads no danger, * feares no colours, denies himself utterly, m takes Christs crosse upon his shoulders, a tagot in his armes, and his life in his hand, n and so resolves to follow Christ thorough thick and thin, thorough fire and water, poison and sword, or any thing else that stands in his way. *

Thirdly blow up thy smaller spark into a flame of zeal; which is an extream heat of all the affections, love, joy, desire, indignation, detestation, and the rest
 This as it will make us come off more roundly in Gods hardest or hottest services,

f Crambe bis
 pfitia fater.
 Eras.
 1 Ecclef. 7. 16.
 u Mar. 16. 24.
 w Eccle 7. 17
 See Pemble in
 locum.
 x Lam. 3. 15.
 y Deut 33 9.
 z Mat. 16. 22.
 12505 021
 κυρε.
 * If my father stood weeping on his knees before me, and my mother hanging on my neck behiud me &c. I would sling
 my mother to the ground,
 run over my father, and tread him under my feet,
 thereby to run to Christ,
 when he calls
 me. Hierome.
 a 1 Sam. 2. 29.
 See the story
 of Rebezies
 the French martyr Ad. G.
 Mon f 842.
 b Exod. 4. 24.
 eb.

fol.

* πᾶσι δὲ ἀπολογέσθαι
 ἑαυτοῦ
 κ. v. Plato.
 c En peragit
 cursus furda Diana suos.
 d Pl 35. 15, 16
 e Act. 24. 5.
 λοιμὸς,
 a borch.
 f 2 King. 2. 23.
 Ascend thou bald-pate as Eliab did before thee
 Sarcastic
 g Inter insanos
 insanus videtur
 quisquis non insanit.
 h τὸ κατὰ

ἐπὶ τοῦ δαίμονος τῶν πολλῶν. i didicit ille maledicere, & ego continere * I am in prison till I am in prison said Sincere Saunders. Ad. Mon. p. 1358. 1 King. 22. 26, 27. k Dan 3. 16. 19. l occidere potes, ledere non potest. *Petrus de Nerone apud Dion: Cass: * Mihi vita eripi potest, at non confessio veritatis.* Basil. Mar. 16. 24. abdicat semetipsum, & perinde habet atque si nihil ad se pertineret. Beza n 1 Sam. 19. 5. * Hic est ille Faurellius qui nullis difficul-tibus fractus, nullis minis, convitiis, verberibus deniq; in suis territus &c. Melchior Ad. in vit. p. 115.

( fervent

o Rom. 12. 11. (Jerem in spirit serving the Lord o, saith the Apostle) so it will kindle it self from others coldnesse, sharpen it self from others dulnesse, quicken it self from others slownesse and heavinesse to duty: like as the cold of the air makes in us our naturall heat the stronger, and as water causeth the fire in the forge to flame the faster. See an instance of this in David: My zeal, saith he, hath consumed me, because thine enemies hath forgotten thy p word. Lo, his anger so burnt against the sinners of his time, that it eat him up q, yea it inflamed his very hatred. So far was he from running along with them, that he abhorred them in his heart: for do not I hate them, O Lord, that hate thee, and am not I grieved with those that rise up against thee? I hate them with perfect hatred, I count them mine enemies r. David knew well that patience in Gods cause, and in case of his offence, was but blockishnesse; moderation, mopishnesse; connivence, cowardize; and that madnesse here was better then meeknesse: which made him hate such wicked ones as spoke against God, and took his Name in vain, with perfection of hatred: and not make dainty upon any politique respect, to cast down the gauntlet of defiance to the faces of them, as his utter enemies. Now the blessing of God light on that Good heart that hath a stomack (as David, and the good people in the Text had) against Gods dishonour. But 'tis a fearfull thing, and a fore signe of a spirituall declension, when Christians can comport with Gods enemies; and digest their oaths and other outrages, with as much ease, as the Ostrich doth the hardest iron. The angel of Ephesus could not abide them that were evil, nor away with those counterfeits, that called themselves Apostles, and were none s, and is highly commended for it: though otherwise none of the forwardest t. When the contentious Corinthians heard carnall, for coming so near, and looking so like the wicked, that they could hardly be distinguished. Are ye not carnall, and walk as men u? A foul fault in a Christian.

from others coldnesse, sharpen it self from others dulnesse, quicken it self from others slownesse and heavinesse to duty: like as the cold of the air makes in us our naturall heat the stronger, and as water causeth the fire in the forge to flame the faster. See an instance of this in David: My zeal, saith he, hath consumed me, because thine enemies hath forgotten thy p word. Lo, his anger so burnt against the sinners of his time, that it eat him up q, yea it inflamed his very hatred. So far was he from running along with them, that he abhorred them in his heart: for do not I hate them, O Lord, that hate thee, and am not I grieved with those that rise up against thee? I hate them with perfect hatred, I count them mine enemies r. David knew well that patience in Gods cause, and in case of his offence, was but blockishnesse; moderation, mopishnesse; connivence, cowardize; and that madnesse here was better then meeknesse: which made him hate such wicked ones as spoke against God, and took his Name in vain, with perfection of hatred: and not make dainty upon any politique respect, to cast down the gauntlet of defiance to the faces of them, as his utter enemies. Now the blessing of God light on that Good heart that hath a stomack (as David, and the good people in the Text had) against Gods dishonour. But 'tis a fearfull thing, and a fore signe of a spirituall declension, when Christians can comport with Gods enemies; and digest their oaths and other outrages, with as much ease, as the Ostrich doth the hardest iron. The angel of Ephesus could not abide them that were evil, nor away with those counterfeits, that called themselves Apostles, and were none s, and is highly commended for it: though otherwise none of the forwardest t. When the contentious Corinthians heard carnall, for coming so near, and looking so like the wicked, that they could hardly be distinguished. Are ye not carnall, and walk as men u? A foul fault in a Christian.

Quod Salcedi inere meabit, quo nunc meat, eosque nunquam societatem cum Xerxe cabimus faciam. ap. Plut. f Rev. 2. 2. t Vers. 4. Avaritia mine taxari videtur bonus aliqui Episcopus. Pareus. Si fuit Timotheus, ut quidam contendunt, &c. it. ver. 1. u 1 Cor. 3. 3. καὶ ἀνθρώπων τέλει παύσεται.

W Heb. 3. 1. x Ephes. 4. 1. Colof. 1. 10. 1 Theff. 2. 12. y τὸ πρέπον. z χαλῶς, Heb. 13. 18. ευχρηστός, Rom 13. 13. εὐτερές, Tit. 2. 3. αἰτίας τῆς δού. 1 Theff. 2. 12. ἀκεῖνός, Eph 5. 15. τὰς τὸ εἰς ἀκρον βάλειν, 10 go to the utmost of a thing. a Ephes 5. 3. b Eph 2. 19. c Eph. 5. 15. d Rev. 12. 12. e Mat. 24. 51. τὸ μέγιστον αὐτῶ. f In maxima fortuna minima licentia. Salust in Cat. g Ideo deteriores sumus quia meliores esse debemus. Salust. h Mat 5. 47. ἢ τὸ πλεονάζειν. i Neh. 6. 11. k 1 Sam. 6. 10, 11.

l 2 Sam. 6. 8. m Levij. 10. 3. n Aut a nobis, aut in nos Aug. Keeping their virtue fall like a pearl in a riddle. o Phil 2. 15. Qui in excelso atque agant, eorum salta cunctis in malis novire. Salust. ad Casarem.

q Omnium oculi in te sunt converfi Som. Sirp. r Jer 20. 10. σινοπτιζομεντες, 11 Jer 2. 2 They are not observed that do as the most: but if any vary from the multitude, all eyes are upon him. Bishop Hall's Contemp.

Lastly, Think sadly and seriously upon thine high and heavenly calling w, and labour to walk worthy of it, as the Apostle often exhorts x: And know, that God will take that from others which he will not abide in his own. Every calling hath a Decorum, a seemlinesse, a suitablenesse appertaining to it. A Gentleman hath another manner of behaviour than a scullion, a Courtier then a Carter, a Prince then a peasant: and to shoulde a Christian too, then another man. He should demean himself nobly, bravely, gallantly z, worthy of God, and as becometh a saint a, a citizen of heaven, and a burgesse of the new Jerusalem b: Not clownishly, unworthily, basely, foolishly c, like an inhabitant of the earth d, or a free-holder of hell e. Greatest States afford least liberty f, and therefore are such worse (saith that Father) though they be no worse then others, because they ought to be better g. It is some singular thing h that God looks for from his people; and that which is excellent, extraordinary, and above vulgar possibility. Should such a man as I she? said good Nekemias i. q. d. Though other men haply may, yet I may not do it: though the Philistines might carry Gods Ark in a new cart, and hear no further of him k: yet if Israel attempt such a thing God will make a breach upon them l. This is that which the Lord hath said, I will be sanctified in all them that draw near unto me m, sanctified he will be, one way or other; either in us or upon us n. 'Tis sure, he will be no loser by us: as he should be in a high degree, should not we be harmlesse and blamelesse, the sonnes of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation amongst whom we shine as lights o, so that the Sun may go unseen, as soon as such p. And as the least aberration is quickly espied in those heavenly bodies, so in the saints of God: nothing they do escapeth sight and censure; all is markt and observed q. They watch for my halting r, saith Jeremi, as those that would desire no better sport: they pore and pry s into every particular, if haply they may take us tripping in any thing: they search into our whole conversation more narrowly, rowly, more thoroughly, then Laban once did into Jacobs stuffe t: ready preit, and prepared to blaze, and blaspheme for the least slip they can lay hold on, be it but in a rash and indiscreet speech that falls from us, or the like. Now what a glory is it to slaughter envy it self? to stop an open mouth? nay to reprove their darknesse by our light n, their covetousnesse by our contentednesse, their pride by our lowlinesse, their peevishnesse by our patience and peaceablenesse, &c. and so to clothe them with their own shame w, by our unblameable behaviour, that they shall self condemned x return and discern between the righteous and the wicked: and be forced to testifie of us, as Saul of David, that we are more righteous then they y. This is to shine as lights z in the world. Herein indeed, like the Sun, which although wicked men may at sometimes hate, because it discovereth their deeds of darknesse, yet are they so convinced with its beauty and excellency, that they cannot for shame speak against it.

Now to wind up all in a word: Look to your selves that we lose not those things that we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward a. The ends of the world, you see, are come upon us b, cast we are upon the last and worst times of all c, those hard and perillous times d, which the Apostle long since prophesied of: wherein because iniquity aboundeth, the love of many is waxen cold e. Who seeth not every age worse then other, and (to go no further) this then the last \?* Do not diverse among us fall from the love of the Gospel? Is not religion turned, with many, into a meer formality and policy? our ancient heat and forwardnesse, into a generall coldnesse in profession, lukewarmnesse in religion, denying the power of it in our lives and conversations? Well, I lay no more to as many of you in our Thyatira as have not the doctrine of Iezabel, and which have not known the depths of Satan, as they speak, but this, That which ye have already, hold fast till Christ come f. And seeing ye know these things before, take heed lest ye also, being pluckt away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastnesse g. Take heed that ye prove not, with the Prophet Esay, men of polluted lips h: that ye learn not to swear, with Ioseph i, by conversing with swearers: and to curse with Peter m, by being awhile among the ruffianly fouldiers. The worse any times are, and the lesse comfortable, the better should we be, and the oftener in Gods presence n: therefore walking exactly o, (or, as in a frame) and redeeming the time, by a redoubled diligence in all holy duties, because the dayes are evil. Let others strange p and wonder what's come to us alate, that we refuse to run with them (as once) into the same excessse of riot: say thou to thy self \;* Better go to heaven alone, and with the ill will of my neighbours, then to hell with never so much company, and with the love of all the world. But indeed ye are not alone, however it may seem so (as it did once to Elias q): for ye have many fellows abroad, your brethren and companions in the kingdom and patience of Iesus Christ r, who will be ready, as here, to joyn with you in speaking often one to another for mutuall edification, and encouragement \.* Beside those other also above, (whom you may see by the eye of faith) the crowned and glorified Saints, I mean: all which trode the same tract of holinesse with you, have gone to heaven alone, and been hated for it s: yet is not any one of them heard now to say. Oh what fools were we, when time was, to be so strict and conscientious, to stand upon such nice points, to sequester our selves from the corrupt courses and companies of others t, to deprive and abridge our selves of the pleasures of sin, and delights of life, &c. Oh, no such word is ever heard to fall from their holy lips: but they rejoyce rather, and infinitely exult and glory in that God, that gave them an heart to do as hath been said, and in those rivers of exquisite and unmixed pleasures, with the which their good hearts are even inebriated u, and (in a sober sence) made drunk again; whiles they continually behold his face, with whom they once walked in the flesh, as a man with his friend. In whose presence is the fulness of joy, and at whose right hand there are pleasures for ever more w. Church. fol 750. f Rev 2. 24, 25. g 2 Pet. 3. 17. h Esay 65. i Gen. 42. 16. m Mat 26. 74. n Mic h. 7. 6, 7. o Exe 6. Ephes. 5. 15. p ἔτι ζοῦνται. 1 Pet. 4. 4. \ To walk with God is a precious praise, though none do it but my self: and to walk with man, with the world, with a town, or parish in wicked ways, is a deadly sin, though millions do it besides. B Babington upon Gen. 6. 8 q 1 King 19. 10. r Rev. 1. 9. * Clouds of witnesses thousands thousands of them, and every of them worth ten thousand of others, as St Chrysost. speaks, Hom. 26. ad Pop. Antioch. s Joh. 15. 19 t 2 Cor. 6. 17 u ἔτι αὐτὸν ὁμιλοῦντες. Joh 2. 10. Hag. 1. 5. w Psal. 16. ult.*

1 Gen. 31. 34
u Ephes. 5. 11.
w Psal. 109. 29
x ἑαυτοὺς καταδικάζουσιν, Tit. 3. 11.
y Iustinus martyr facitur se, confessa Christi-anorum pietate in vita, constantia autem in morte. colligisse veram esse, quam profiterentur, doctrinam.
y 1 Sam. 24. 17
z ἐκσπέντες.
Psal. 2. 15.
a 2 Joh. 8.
b 1 Cor. 10. 11
c his ultimis et pessimis temporibus. Bernard.
d 2 Tim. 3. 1.
e καὶ οὗτοι χαλάρηται.
e Mat. 24. 12.
* it is remarkable that Mr. Fox relates of our Ancestors even in K. H. 8. time. Certes the fervent zeal of those Christian days seemed much superiour to these our times, as appeared by their sitting up all night in reading & hearing, &c. To see their travels, earnest seeking, burning zeals, readings, watchings, sweet assemblies, love, concord, godly living, faithfull marrying with the faithfull, may make us now in these our dayes of free profession to blush for shame. Ant. G. Mon. of the

CHAP. II.

* *Constititio cordis ex sensu
mali instantis.
Pareus in
M. t. 25. Hinc
G. aci. 3. 11. 2.
vocat. 1. ligimentum, eo
quod quasi gelu adstringit Nacianzorat. 7.*

* It being with Christ as
with a chris-tial glass full of clear water which is still pure howsoe-
ver it be shaken. P. B.

* *Aristot.
Ethic. l. 3.
a. 10. 18. 14.*

*Purchas Microcosm:
b. Heb. 5. 7.
c. Nehe. 9. 32.
* Majore formidine & cal-
liditate in illi-
tate a searem
observatis,
quam ipsam de Olympo Jovem.
Sed nec hec
ratione fuitis,
sed metu pra-sentis a presentis & Terre Romae.
Apologus cop.
27.
d. Mat. 8. 25.
e. Mat. 10. 28.
Luc. 12. 5.
f. Ion. 4.
g. Heb. 12.
h. Luc. 10. 27.
i. Psal. 76. 11.
k. Ezech. 11. 2.
l. Psal. 2. 11.
m. Ezech. 1. 1.
n. Ezech. 1. 1.
o. Ezech. 1. 1.
Doll:*

Doctr. II. Of the severall sorts of Feares, and That every faithfull Christian feareth the Lord.

Hitherto of the Duty here performed, as touching the first circumstance, to a Davit of time, noted in the particie Then: The second followes, and that's of person, who they were that thus spake often one to another. And these come here described unto us, under a double notion, first as fearing the Lord, secondly, as thinking upon his Name. As to the first: * Fear (in a generall sence) is nothing else but an affection of the soule shrinking in it self from some imminent evill. Hereof there are three sorts usually reckoned. 1. Naturall. 2. Carnall. 3. Spirituall. The first of these we cannot justly fault, if it do not degenerate into the second: for every thing, by an instinct of uncorrupted Nature, desires the conservation of it self, and feares the contrary. You may see an instance of it in our blessed saviour: who, to manifest himself a true man, subject to like passions with us, yet still without sin, * trembled at the apprehension and approach of Death, which is to nature of all terribles the most terrible, as the Philosopher *: and the king of feares as Iob defines it. a To him, you must needs think, it was so (if ever to any) whose soule suffered the very soule of sufferings, as one expresseth it, * which made him offer up prayers and supplications with strong crying and teares to him that was able to save him from death; and was heard in that he feared. b

Next, there is a carnall feare, and that is of the Creature * more then the Creatour, the great, the mighty, and the terrible God c as Nehemiah styles him. It ariseth partly from want of faith in the power and providence of the Almighty: the Apostles were therefore deaf carnally-fearfull, because deceitful petty-fidians d or small-faiths e: Partly also from want of Spirituall fear, to the which therefore it is usually opposed in holy scripture, as in that of our Saviour. Fear not them that kill the body &c. but fear him which after he hath killed, hath power to cast into hell: yea I say unto you fear him e.

And this latter is that third sort of fear, which being nothing else but an awfull respect to the Divine Majesty, we therefore call Spirituall. 1. from the object God, who is both a Spirit f and the father of Spirits g, the proper object of this and all other affections of mans soule h. Whence it is that by an appellative proper he is styled Fear, by the Psalmist. Yring presents unto Feare i so runs the Original; that is, to him that ought to be feared, as it is usually read and rendered. 2. from the principall efficient and chief Authour of it, and that is Gods holy Spirit, called therefore a spirit of fear k 3. from the blessed effect it hath upon the spirit of a man, for it spiritualizeth and sanctifieth both us and our services l; and is therefore here rightly made the mark of a spirituall-minded man, the constant charter of a true Christian, and a plain distinctive note, whereby to discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that feareth God, and him that feareth him not. What may we learn hence but this?

That every faithfull Christian feareth the Lord, neither is he any true servant of God, that hath not his heart possess and seasoned with the spirituall reverentiaall feare of God.

SECT. I.

The Doctrine cleared, and confirmed by Scripture.

THe truth of which Assertion will soon appear, if we take notice how the holy Scripture 1. conjoynes Gods service and his fear, making them go hand in hand, hand, as individuall friends and companions 2. confounds them and takes them for one and the same thing. 3. gives it ordinarily for a just description of a godly Christian, that he truly feares the Lord.

First, you shall find Gods true service and his holy fear go coupled and handfasted in sundry scriptures. Some few for a tast: Now therefore fear the Lord, saith Iosua in his last farewell to the world, and serve him in sincerity and truth m: intimating that there is no sincere service done to God, where his fear is not found. So the Psalmist, Serve the Lord with fear, and rejoyce before him with reverence n. Fear then, must be one thing in Gods works, and reverence another, whatsoever be the third. Indeed it is the first second and third in Gods true service *. Hence, the Apostle, Let us have grace, saith he, whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear. o As who should say; A fearlesse heart is certainly a gracelesse heart: neither let such a man think that he shall ever receive any wages at Gods hand for such unacceptable work; sith displeasing service is a double dishonour.

m Iosh. 24. 14
n Psal. 2. 11.
* As Demosthenes once said of Elocution in an Orateur.
o Heb. 22. εὐσεβεία, quæ parit εὐλίβειαν.

But secondly, as Gods true fear and service are in some places of scripture conjoynd, so in other some they are confounded and indifferently taken the one for the other as termes convertible. See for this Dent. 6. 13. compared with, Mat. 4. 10. and again Mat. 15. 9. with Esay 29. 13. whereupon Solomon the wife makes this fear of God the Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and last in Gods businesse. The basis and beginning of all he sets it for, in the beginning of his Proverbs p: the end and upshot of all he concludes it, in the close of his Ecclesiastes. Let us hear the end of all, saith he, Feare God, and q keep his commandments, for this is the whole man, r as Broughton (after the vulgar) reads that text.

p Prov. 1 7.
q Eccl. 12. 15.
Hoc est enim totus homo.
Ergo si hoc est omnis homo, absq; hoc nihil est homo. Bern. super Cant. ser. 20.

Lastly, to perswade this, the scripture usually describes a godly person by this property; sets him out by this periphrasis, not only here in the text, but a few verses below chap. 4. 2. But unto you that fear my name (set in opposition to the proud and wicked ver. 1. as these here to those stout rebels ver. 13. 14, 15.) shall the Sun of righteousness arise &c. So elsewhere up and down Gods booke. Men of Israel, saith the Apostle, and ye that fear God give audience r. A close connexion you see: for All that are Israelites indeed, Jews inwardly s do fear God, according to that of Solomon, He that walketh in his uprightness feareth the Lord t. Whence it is pinn'd as a badge upon the sleeve of every faithfull Christian, as of Iob (for instance) in the old Testament, u and Cornelius in the New, that they feared God, and eschewed evill, u for by the fear of the Lord men depart from evill, Pro. 16. 6. The scripture then is expresse for us you see, that every servant of the Lord feares the Lord: Neither need we want Reasons for it whether we look upon this holy fear in its 1. Causes 2. Consequents 3. companions. 4. contraries, the opposites I mean, in either extreames.

r Act. 13. 16.
s Rom. 2 29.
t Prov 14. 2.
u Iob 1. 2.
A. 10. 2.

SECT. 11.

The Doctr. further confirmed by Arguments drawne from the 1. Causes, 2. Consequences, 3. Companions, 4. Contraries to the true fear of God.

FOR the causes, first, the principall efficient cause and authour of this reverentiall fear is God in Christ, by the hand and operation of the Holy Ghost; whose sole work it is to spiritualize that natural affection of Fear, common to all mankind: and (by putting it into a right frame, turning it into a new channel, that it may thence forward run forth-right upon God) to make it the fear of sons, the fear of Gods elect, partakers of the heavenly calling, w & that Covenant of grace, one special claus whereof is this, I will put my fear into their hearts ( 'tis a fruit then of Gods own setting, and taken off the tree of life, for they shal never depart from me, but I will rejoyce over them to do them good, and will plant them in truth with my whole heart, and with my whole soule x. 'Tis a blessing of Gods own right-hand. I will put my fear &c. 1.

Reas. 11

w Heb 3. 1.

x Ier. 32. 40.

is emphaticall, and exclusive. g. d I, and only I. 2. And not a common blessing neither, but such as he will bestow on his own alone, with whom he is in speciall covenant: Thirdly, And this by way of infusion, that all may be of grace: for he will put his fear into their hearts: Fourthly, and for the best end; all this is, that they may never depart from him. For this is a filiall fear, out of ingenuity: and the servant abideth not in the house for ever: but the Son abideth for ever, y faith the naturall Son of God that came out of the bosome of his father, knew all his counsell, and upon whom the spirit of the fear of the Lord rested for his members. Some other subordinate, and lesse principall causes also of this grace in speech I might here mention, as making to our purpose: such as are 1. a lively faith in all the glorious and gracious attributes of God, especially his fatherly compassion and kindness, a which is better then life, b 2. an ardent child-like affection to God as a father, whose displeasure we therefore fear and feel more bitter then death c. But these with some other graces that concur as principles to the constituting of the right fear of God, I passe for hault, and come to the second Reason.

And that is taken from the effects and consequents of this holy fear, and they also are such as suite only with Gods dear children, and are found in none other besides. To instance only in two of them (till we come to the Application:) First, Christian courage, and a confident reliance upon Gods fatherly love and affection for safety and salvation. In the fear of the Lord, faith Solomon, is strong confidence, and his children (for such only fear God, which is the point in proof) have a place of refuge, d what ever storme be up, they have God name to repair unto for shelter. Now the Name of the Lord is a strong tower, the righteous run to it and are safe e: safe, I say, it not from the common destruction, yet surely from the common distraction; those stinging frights, horrible amazements, and woefull perplexities, wherewith the hearts of those that fear not God are miserably pestred, and even eaten up in the day of evill. Thou shalt be mad for the sight of thine eyes that thou shalt see, f faith God to such: And again, they shall be at their wits ends, g nay, at their lives ends for fear, and for looking after those things that are coming upon them. h Nabal for example, whose heart even dyed within him ten dayes before he died upon the apprehension of his late danger: and he became as a stone i. But now 'tis otherwise far with those that fear God, that fear before him. k God is our refuge and our strength, faith the Church, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will we not fear though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the Sea l. See an instance in David, he having made God his fear, could sing a requiem to his soule, m rock it asleepe in a holy security, and not once be afraid for ten thousands of people that had hummed him in and desperately given out, that salvation it self could not save him out of their hands. n Against all which blasphemies and bravadoes of his enemies, he encourageth himself in the Lord his God, and comfortably concludes the Psalm, with, Salvation is of the Lord, and I have devored my self to his fear, o therefore I cannot miscarry so long as he is in safety. If a child have his father by the hand, though he be in the dark, he is not afraid: so is it with us, whiles by faith (the mother of this fear) we sit and see him that is invisible p at our right hand, q to support and save us.

A second effect of Gods holy fear is a carefull thinking upon his name, a reverencing of the commandements r, a conscionable endeavour of doing his whole will, to the obedience whereof this fear doth strongly incline and enable us: For which cause it is, that the Lord having delivered his law in great terror, wiseth that the heart of his people might be alwayes fraught with his fear s; which might be as a domestical chaplaine, a faithfull monitour in their bosomes to quicken them to obedience. And the preacher in this respect compriseth in this one grace alone, all other vertues and duties t because it involves and carryes along with it a religious care of all the commandements though never so harsh and uncouth, even to the denying of a mans self in all his selves. 1. For his naturall self: Isaac was reind in by this religious fear from reversing Jacobs blessing (though naturall affection within, and Esaus roarings without prompted him therunto, but,) he did not, he durst not do it, because he trembled with a great trembling exceedingly u, when now he saw that he had done unwilling y Ioh. 8. 35.

z Eay 11. 2.

a Hof. 3. vlt.
Psal. 130. 4.
b Psal. 63. 3.
c Ecclef. 7. 26.
Ne offendamus
quem diliga-
mus & ne ab
eo separemur.
M. Sentent:
l. 3. dist. 34.
Reaf. 2.
In via Dei d
timore incipitur,
ut ad fortitu-
dinem venia-
tur. Non sicut
in via seculi,
timor debilita-
tem; ita in via,
Dei timor fortitudinem gignit. Greg.
d Pro. 14. 26.
e Pro. 18. 10.
f Deut. 28. 34
g Psal. 107. 27
h Luc. 21. 26.
i απολυχρυσου.
j 1 Sa. 25. 37.
k Eccl. 8. 12.
l Psal. 46. 1, 2.
In pavido fe-
rient ruina.
Hor.
m Psal. 116. 7.
Quid timet ho-minem bemo in sinu dei pos-
tus Aug.
n pf. 3. 2, 5, 6, 8
o Psal. 119. 38.
p Heb. 11. 27.
q Psal. 16. 8.
r Pro. 13. 13.

f Deut. 5. 29.
t Eccl. 12. 15.

u Gen. 27. 33.

nawilling justice. 2. For his carnall self, his own ease, honour, comfort, profit, and other personall respects and conveniences: see it in Jonah, who after he had known the terrour of the Lord w in the heart of the sea, in the belly of the whale, how willing was he on his way to Nineveh? so the prophet Isay after he had teen God in his majesty, was subdued by his fear, to the obedience of his will, that no sooner could the Lord say, whom shall I send? but he replied, here am I, send me y, though before he were wondrous unwilling to so unwelcome an errand. 3. in his spirituall self, his own understanding, judgement, reason, I mean. Abraham was excellent at this: for as in beleeving the promise of a son & waterhouse, he considered not the drynesse of his own body, nor the deadnesse of Sarah's womb: he cared not for that, but silencing his Reason exalted his faith, giving glory to God: & so in parting with him again at Gods appointment he conferred not with flesh and blood (as St. Paul speaks in another case a) but getting up early b (which shewed his willingness on his way) he went an end with the work, and therefore heard from heaven; Now I know that thou fearest me &c. c

w 2 Cor. 5. 11
x Ion. 3. 2.
y Eſay 6. 8.
z Ro. 4. 18, 19

a Gal. 1. 15.
b Gen. 22. 5.
c ver. 12.
d Job. 2. 9.
The Septuagint belies Jobs wife to scold, adding a whole verse of fennel passion: I must now, saith she, goe wander, and have no place to rest in &c.
e Exod. 4. 26.
f Exod. 18. 2.
g Heb. 6. 9.
h Exphora 50.
i Tizias 1. ad typhora.
Scholia: b Pf. 119. 155.
Reaf. 3.
i Eſay 11. 2.
ver. 3.

k Neh. 1. 11.
l 1 Cor. 2. 10.
m Psal. 25. 14.
n Eſay 41. 8

o Gen. 22. 12
p Gen. 18. 19
q Gen. 18. 32
r Prov. 3. 32

s Prov. 1. 7
t Mat. 18. 10
Timor transi-
in charitatem.
Gregor.
u Psal. 85. 10
w Psal. 126. 2

4. Lastly in his second self, wife and kindred: as Job, who retained his integrity, and dyed himself in his wicked wife that bad him curse God and dye d: for he feared God: and so eschewed that evil also. The like we may say of Moses the servant of the Lord, who after he had met God in the Inn, and was surprized with his fear, not only circumcised his son, though to the great discontent of his froward wife, e but also sent her away upon that occasion and trouble (as it is likely) to her fathers house again; who met him at Horeb, and restored him his wife and children. f Thus the fear of God fames a man to an universall self-deniall and makes him willing to be what ever the Lord would have him to be, in every part and point of duty: than which I know not what surer signe can be shewed of a sanctified soule.

Thirdly for the companions of Gods fear, they are such as do accompany salvation g: which is as far from the wicked as they are from seeking Gods statutes h. These are,

First sound judgment and saving knowledge of God and his will, our selves and our duties. Hence they are set so neer together in the prophet. The spirit of knowledge, and of the fear of the Lord i. And in the next verse, This same spirit shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord, to discern of things that be excellent: such as none of the princes of this world ever knew, but God hath revealed them to us (that desire to fear his name with Nehemiah k) by that spirit of his, that searcheth all things, even the deep things of God, causing us (for a largesse) to know the things that are freely given us of God l. And this way it is that the secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will (yet) shew them his Covenant m. Such shall be both of his Court, and his Councill, as Abraham (for instance) betwixt whom and the Almighty, was much mutuall correspondency, and exchange of curtesy. Abraham was the friend of God n, and God was the Fear of Abraham: for I know that thou fearest me, said the oracle, because thou hast not withheld thine only sonne from me o. Now if Abraham withheld not his sonne from God his Feare, shall God withhold his secret from Abraham his friend? Noe: but he shall know Gods mind with the first p when the blind Sodomites shall not see, till they see hell raine down from heaven upon their hides (as a Father speakes) for faile of ten such men as Abraham in five great townships q that feared God, and thought upon his name. For the froward is abomination to the Lord, but his secret is with the righteous r. And the feare of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge: but stoules (for want of this fear) despise wisdom, and instruction s.

A second companion of this holy fear is sweetest complacency, and all dearest delight in God and his wayes. This also is an adjoynt of Gods holy fear, and an indulgence granted only to his sons, and daughters. A good man is like a good Angell t, alwayes looking upon the face of God: and the more he lookes, the more he loves, and the more he loves the more he feares: he loves in fear, and feares in love: that like as in God, mercy and truth meet together u, so in the child of God, love and fear do kill each other. By the first their mouth is filled with laughter, and their hearts with joy w. By the second they are troubled at his

x Job 23. 15
y Psal. 2. 11.
z Gen. 28. 17

a Mat. 28. 8

b 1 Ioh. 4. 18

Omnis timor
supplicamen-
tum habet.

Terul.

c Psal. 112. 1.

d Psal. 110. 3.

Neh. 1. 11.

e Act. 9. 31

* Timor virtu-

tum omnium

custos est.

Hierony.

g Prov. 22. 4

h Iosh. 24. 14

i Psal. 115. 11

k 2 Cor. 7. 11

Fuit Iosephi

vita celum

quoddam luci-

diffinis virtu-

tum stellis ex-

ornatum: erga

Deum quidem

timoris ac pie-

tatis: erga herum &c. Bu-choler: p. 211.

* Ferrum in carere transit

animam eius

Psal. 105.

Sed peccatum

non transit, vel

fanciavit con-

scientiam

eius ib.

Reaf. 4.

l Prov. 14. 2.

m Deut. 29. 19

* Exemplis

tragicis non ca-

ret ulla domus.

n Psal. 36. 1. 2

o Prov. 10. 23

Hec vivunt ho-

mines tanquam

mors nulla se-

quatur &c.

p Eph. 4. 19.

αὐτοὶ ὡς νεκ-

τοί.

q Prov. 28. 13

r Prov. 29. 1.

presence, and when they consider his absence, they are afraid of it x. In respect of both, the Psalmist saith, serve the Lord with feare, and reioyce before him with reverence y. These two concur in the godly in their journey to heaven, as they did in Jacob journeying to Padan Aram. How fearfull is this place z saith he, where yet neverthelesse he saw nothing but blissefull and beatificall visions. Or as they did in the good women in the gospell, who departed from the sepulchre with feare, and great Ioy a. A strange composition of two so different affections: will you know a reason? All other base-borne feare hath paine in it b but this feare, that issues from love, carryes meate in the mouth: for it is not anxious and tormentfull, but delicious, and comfortable. Hence feare and joy are set so close together by the psalmist. Blessed is the man that feareth the Lord, and (at same time) delighteth greatly in his commandments c (a practise proper to Gods free hearted people d) And the churches are said to walke in the feare of god, and in the comfort of the holy ghost e.

And here it might be easie to enumerate and reckon up many more Companions of the feare of God, * such as are. 1. Humility for by humility and the feare of the Lord are riches and honour and life g. 2. Care of sincerity and truth in Gods service: Now therefore feare the Lord saith Joshua, and serve him in sincerity and truth h. 3. Hope in Gods mercy, for, Let them that feare the Lord, trust in the Lord, saith the Psalmist i. 4. Godly sorrow for the least sinne k &c. But it shall suffice, in this hast of time, and croud of matter, to shaddow out unto you the lovely traine of heavenly graces that guard and attend the true feare of God in that on example of Joseph, a man famous for this feare, and noe lesse eminent in the attendants and companions of it: as is well observed by that divine Chronologer, in whose words I will relate it. Josephs life saith he, was, a kind of heaven, gayly bepanpled, and richly stor'd with orient starres of excellent vertues. Towards his good God, he shewed forth all holy feare and piety: toward his loving master, thankfulness and fidelity: toward his immodest mistresse, shamefastnesse and chastity: as touching himself, all godly wisdom and continencie: Toward his father (after this) tender respect and more then Storke-like affection: Toward his brethren, greatest mercy and tender compassion. In adversity, none so patient, * in prosperity, none so provident &c. And all flowing from this fountaine of Gods holy feare, most eminent and exemplary in Joseph, if ever in any, as ye all know that are any whit vers'd in his heart-melting history.

Lastly, look a while upon the feare of God in the Opposite on either hand, and you shall plainly see that none but the truly religious holdeth the meane. It is he that walkes in the middle way, though not without some stumbles in it, and straggling out of it otherwhiles, to the right hand or to the left: which yet he quickly perceives, and assoone recalles and recovers. These extremes are 1. In the defect, a carnal security and senselesnes in sin. 2. In the excesse, an hellish and slavish feare of God, as a judge, or tyrant. The first of these is nothing else but that bold venturousnes, whereby gracelesse and ungodly persons presume to rush desperatly, without fear l or wit, into sins of all sorts: flattering themselves with false hopes of impunity m against all the judgments of God denounced in the word, and executed in the world *, yea though their iniquitie be found to be hatefull n. These the scripture tearmeth fooles, to whom it is a pastime to do mischief o: living as if there were neither heaven nor hell, God nor devill; till (coming at length to that dead and dedolent disposition of such as being past feeling do work all uncleannes with greedinesse, p) they work out to themselves their own damnation; and be made to feele that unsupportable wrath and vengeance, which they would never be drawn to feare or stand in awe of. For, Blessed is the man that feareth alwayes, but he that in a desperate boldnesse or Cyclopicall contempt of the divine Justice, hardneth his heart shall fall into mischief q, yea shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy r. In executing of which dreadfull sentence, though the Lord be slow, yet he is sure, his forbearance is no quittance. But although a sinner, in high contempt of Gods heavy displeasure, do evill an hundred times, and his dayes (through Gods infinite patience) be prolonged, yea surely I know, saith Solomon that it shall be well with them that feare the Lord, which feare before before him ſ . That is, that fear him in his miniſters and deputies, trembling at his judgments, while they hang in the threatnings & melting, as Joſeph u at the terror of his menaces ; nay by the kindneſſe of his mercyes, which diſſolves their good hearts, as weake water doth ſome thin ſubſtances, or as the hot ſun doth the hard ice. An inſtance hereof ye have in that ſolemne meeting at Mizpeh: where Iſrael, which had found the miſery of Gods abſence, is now reſolv'd into teares of contrition and thankfulneſſe, when he was once returned and ſettled in Kiriath-jearim. Then they mett together at Mizpeh and drew water and poured it out before the Lord w. Whether 'twere teares out of their eyes, or water out of their veſſels ( as a ceremony, or pledge of their hearty humiliation ) the difference is little. Sure, it was to teſtify the tenderneſſe of their hearts, which, having hang'd looſe a long time from the Lord, began now *to unite again unto his fear **. It is certaine that the mercies of God draw more teares from his children, then his judgments do from his enemies : who as in proſperity becuſe they have no changes, therefore they fear not God y ſo in advertity their hearts are the more hardned thereby from his fear z ( as in Pharaoh and Ahaz ) till at laſt, by long trading with the devil in the wayes of ſin, they come to loſe, with him, all paſſive power alſo of being wrought upon ; and arrive at that that height of incurable hardneſſe, that neither miniſtry, nor miſery, nor miracle, nor mercy can poſſibly mollify : Which is the greateſt plague that can befall a man out of hell, and the very next ſtep into it.

But the second extreme, standing in as full opposition to that fear of God, we are treating of, is, that slavish and hellish fear and terrour that evill spirits and men conceive of God, whom they look upon only as an implacable sin revenging judge, or tyrant rather, ready to teare the very hell of their hearts in sunder a and to send them packing to their place in hell. Hereupon follows an exultation hatred of God, ( according to that of the Poet, whom men fear they hate ) a desperate running away from God, with Cain, Saul, Ahaziah &c. A secret rising up against God, and an inward desire, that there were no such thing as God, that so they might never be called to an Audit and account of their wicked wayes, and sinfull courtes, as they are sure to be in that dreadfull day. This the Devil and his impes beleeve and therefore tremble c. The Greek word seemes to imply such an excesse of fear as causeth gnashing of teeth like the clashing of armour, or horrible yellings like the roaring of the sea *. The reason of which outrage is rendred by Jerusalem. No sinner, faith he, escapes fear of Gods wrath, and all because he can never possibly shake off Conscience: which ( being Mans spie and Gods overseer ) if it be not desperately feared or sealed up securely with a spirit of slumber against the day of slaughter, doth sing the evill-doer ( betwixt whiles d ) with unquestionable conviction and horreur. And thus it fares ordinarily with a wicked person. But now tis otherwife with the godly, when they are out of temptation ( for then, you must know, it is ego non sum ego with them : they are not themselves, neither can any right judgment, as then, be made of them ) But usually their hearts being purified from an evil conscience e through the blood of sprinkling f cast upon them by the hyssop-bunch of faith g, they have peace with god their reconciled father in Jesus Christ. Whom therefore they love in fear, and fear in love, wishing nothing more then his being. Let the Lord live h, faith David as the principle of their well-being: for it is good for me to draw neere to Jehovah i : Into whose preface they therefore flee, as the doves unto their windowes k. I will come into thine house in the multitude of thy mercies, there's his confidence, and in thy fear will I worship toward thine holy temple, there's his reverence l. Loe this is the guise of a godly person, whiles himself. He feares and loves, feares and hopes, feares and prayes, feares and feasts m, feares and workes, yea workes out his whole salvation with fear and trembling: and all because he knows that 'tis not of himself, but of God ( a most free-agent ) that gives both to will and to worke, and all of his own good pleasure n, as the Apostle there enforceth it.

f Eccles. 8. 12.
t Isa. 66. 2.
u 2 Chr. 34. 27

xx I Sam. 7 6.
In signum expiationis iniqui-
tatum juxta
Iob 11. 16.

R. Solomon di-cit quod huc
fecerunt in sig-
num humiliati-
onis q d sicut
aqua effusa ad
nibi'um valet
ultra. sicut con-
spectu tuo nihil
sumus aut vi-
demur.

x Psal. 86. 11.
y Psal. 55. 19.

216. 65. 17.
π. 90μx 88-36100

Rom. 8.15.
 πνεῦμα θε-
 οῦ.

2 Tim. 1. 7.
a Hol. 13 6.

Quem metuant Oderunt, Enni-
us. Odium timorem spirat.

Text:
b 2 King. 1. 2.
Quem quisq;
edit perisse ex-
petit. Ennius.
c lam. 2. 19.
ερίσσει.

* *egreſt ma-ris agitatiō
Hom: Ilad: ſ.
vide Euſtach:
in locum.*

Nullum maleficium sine formidine. quia
nec sine conscientia sui. Tert.
They have no rest day nor night.

Apoc. 14. 11.
d Rom. 2. 15.
e Heb. 10. 22

f 1 Pet. 1. 2
g Rom 5. 1
h Psal. 18. 44
i Psal. 73. 28
k Eney 69. 8
l Psal. 5. 7
m Jude 12.
n Philip 2.
12. 13.

SECT. III.

Objections and Queries touching the Fear of God, cleared and answered.

Obj. 1. IF any object here that of Saint John, Perfect love casteth out fear o.

1 Joh. 4. 18.

Sol.

Duo sunt timores Dei, servilis & amicalis. Bedain Prov. 1 p Eley 6.2.

Quest.

Ans.

That is, (say we for answer) servile and base fear, which love is perpetually purging upon. For as for filiall and friendly fear, it is never cast out, no not in the state of perfection neither: for the very angels cover their faces and feet before God p, as knowing their distance.

But is the fear of Gods children here purely filiall, without all mixture of that which is servile?

No: nor need it be. For first, servile fear (I mean fear of punishment) is a good legall preparative to filiall, the spirit of bondage to the spirit of Adoption; which it introduceth, as the needle or bristle doth the thread that follows it.

Secondly, as it cannot be utterly cast out whiles we are here, so it is of singular use to a Christian in his way homeward: for being partly flesh, and partly spirit, it is profitable for the unregenerate part (which is a slave and not a sonne) to be contain'd in duty, and restrain'd from sinne by the fear of Gods justice, power and punishments. And hence it is (saith One) that the fear of God is so much urged in Scripture: to shew a difference between mans first integrity (wherein he needed no other motive to duty then love) and the renovation of Gods image in us since the fall; which being but imperfect, and in part onely, therefore hath God purposely fixed in us the affection of fear, and sanctified it in his own, to the restraining of them from sin, and provoking them to duty.

Cum audis quod Dominus tuus dulcis est, attende quid diligas: cum audis quod reus es, attende quid timeas: ut amore & timore Dei excitatus legem ejus custodias. Cass super Psal. 25. Dulcis & reus Dominus.

Si amor Dei te tenere non potest saltem timeat & terreat timor judicii, ignis gehennae, laquei mortis, dolores inferni, ignis urens, vermis corrodens, &c. Hug. l. 3. de anima.

Quest.

How farre forth then may it be lawfull to stand in fear of Gods wrath and judgements?

Ans.

The chief object of godly fear is evil of sin: a just man is one that feareth an oath, Eccl. 9. 2. Gods offence rather then his own distresse: which appears, in that however God spare him yet he will not spare himself, he is a law to himself. q Mar. 10. 28, 29. r Psal. 119. 120. s 2 Chron. 34. 27. t Hab. 3. 16. u Psal. 50. 11.

Divines determine it thus: we may not fear the punishment onely, and not the offence, nor yet the punishment chiefly, and more then the offence: but the punishment must be feared with the offence, the offence being feared first and most. And this is both commanded by the Lord Christ q, and commended unto us in the examples of David r, Josiah s, Habakkuk t, and diverse other saints. And the reason is ready rendred by Moses. Who knoweth the power of thine anger? even according to thy fear, so is thy wrath u: that is, As any man fears thy displeasure more or lesse, so shall he feel it, as some understand that Text.

SECT. III.

Use. 1. Information. They that fear not God are not his: and who these are by their Character out of Psal. 36. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c.

Use. 1.

NOW for Use of this point: Is it so, that every faithfull servant of God, feareth God? hence then in the first place, will follow, as a consecratory, that all such as are destitute of this reverentiall fear of the Almighty, are (notwithstanding all their other commendable parts and properties) to be esteemed no better then gracelesse, and irreligious persons. Hence it is so often made the brand of a sonne of Belial, that there is no fear of God before his eyes: and this is purposely reserved in Scripture (after a large bedroll of other abominations found in mens hearts and and lives) to the last place of all w; to intimate: that the want of Gods fear is the ground of all the forementioned mischiefs; the mother of all the misrule in the world: As in that unjust Judge, (for instance) who was therefore unjust because he fear'd not God, nor regarded man x. And surely the fear of God is not in this place, therefore they will say me, said Abraham of the men of Gerar y. Lo, he could promise himself no good at all of that place and people, where God was not feared.

God was not feared, may some say: what a reason's that? there is no people so barbarous, or person almost so brutish, that feareth not God.

For answer: I confesse there is nothing more naturall then to stand in awe of a Deity. Whence also it is that God in the Greek tongue hath his Name from fear, as some derive it. And the Chaklee Paraphrast sometimes useth the word, Fear or Terrour, for God, because of the fear (confessedly) due to him. Hence Jacob coming from Syria, and being to swear to a Syrian, Iware by the fear of his father Isaac z. But that all fear not the true God, or, 2. that they do not truly fear him, and so are none of his, 'tis more then evident.

First, 'tis certain that all men fear not the true God, but some thing else, which they set up in his room. Who feeth not that some fear idols and devils a, as Pagans: some hee-faints, and shee-faints, as Papagans: some the Queen of heaven b, as the superstitious person, that consults his calendar, and fears nothing more then to fall sick upon an evil day. Some again fear disgrace, as Saul c: danger and displeasure of great Ones, as Pilate; who fear'd, if he released Christ according to his conscience Caesar * should (as indeed afterwards he did) pull his purple over his ears, and kick him off the bench *: some fear losse of goods, as the rich young man, that went away sorrowfull, for nothing more, then that Christ should require such conditions as he was not willing to yeild to d: Some fear losse of liberty, as those that forsook Paul the prisoner, and were ashamed of his chains e: some fear losse of life, making much of a thing of nought f, shrinking in the shoulder when called to carry the crosse of Christ, or to suffer with him, though it be to bee glorified together g. Thus men can make a shift to fear any thing, so what they should fear; God, I mean, the proper object of this, and all other our affections whatsoever. There is (I confesse) a kind of fear of God, abusively * so called; a generall fear, a fear at large, found in the wicked: such as were those mongrell Samaritans, who feared the Lord, and worshipped their own Gods after the manner of the nations h. but this is rather a fright then a fear, a spirit of restraint, a penick terrour, falling effusions upon the foulest hearts, for the safegard of the saints; curbing even the rebellions from outrage, that the Lord God may dwell upon earth i in his servants, and subjects: Which else these hard-hearted Labans, and rough-handed Esaus would never suffer, did not Fear of their father Isaac k bridle them: did he not put his hook into their noses, and his bit into their jaws, turning them back by the way they came out l. This is thought to have been that hornet mentioned by Moses, wherewith the Lord drove out the Hivite, the Canaanite, and the Hittite before the Israelite m: causing them by the furies of their own evil consciences wherewith they were haunted, to fear their own shadows, and to flee at a shaken leaf n, as a sparrow out of Egypt, and as a dove out of the land of Ahur o. Thus Zebul was terrified with the shadow of the mountains p: the Midianites with their own dreams and fancies q: the Syrians with an imaginary noise of charrets and horses r: the Burgundians (about to give their enemies battle) with the sight of long thistles which they thought to be launces: Cardinall Crescentius at his own conceits, and phantasies. For as he was writing to Rome from the Council of Trent, against the Protestants, he thought verily he had seen the devil like a black dog walking in his chamber, and at last couching under his table: which cast the man into such a melancholy dump, that he died of it. This was a terrour from the Lord, but this was not that fear of the Lord here mentioned in the text, and wherewith few are acquainted. For even of those that professe to fear the true God, how very few are there found that do fear him in truth? which is our second accusation, and action laid against most men, and comes now to be proved.

*evile quærit invadere, jugulare, devorare. Vigilant pastores, latrant canes, &c. Lupus venit fremens, redit tremens, lupus tamen est & fremens & tremens. Aug. de verb. Apost. serm. 21. l. Esay 37. 28. m. Exod. 23. 27. 28. n. Lev. 26. 36. o. Hof. 11. 11. p. Judg. 9. 36. q. Judg. 7. 13. r. 2 King. 7. 6. French History. History of the Council of Trent. *Caecilina non mediocriter solebat pertimescere, si quid crepuisset.

w Rom. 1. 18
Mal. 3. 5.
x Luk. 18. 2.
y Gen. 20. 11.

Obiect.

Sol.

Obiect. q. d. d. s.

Timendus, ter-

ribilis: per Metonymia Deus

cui timor debe-

tur. Shindler.

z Gen. 31. 53.

a 1 Cor. 10. 20

Lev. 17. 7.

Seghniim of their horrou,

and terrour

which they caule to men.

b Jer. 44. 17.

c 1 Sam. 15.

30. see Jer.

28. 19.

* Calus Impe-

rator.

* Contra pro-

pria consien-

tis testimoniū,

& oēs sui

enuntiatum,

he delivered

up to death

the Lord of life, & so not only drew up.

on Caesar and his throne the guilt of innocent blood (in which respect

Christ is said

to have been crucified at

Rome, Revel.

11.) but also ran himself at once vpon

Gods and the Emperours

heavy displeasure, & shortly after became his own

deaths-man.

Eutrop. 1. 7.

Euf b. 1. 2 c. 7.

d Mar. 19. 20. 21

e 2 Tim. 4. 16

f Plal. 29. 5

g Rom. 8. 17

* Timor Dei

ἡ δὲ Χρηστὴς

sic appellatus.

Polan. Synt.

h 2 Kin. 17. 33

i Plal. 68. 18

k Gen. 31. 53

Lupus venit ad

And,

And first, for the wicked of the earth, it is most certain, that they have greatest cause to fear of any men (if they knew all :) for the direfull and dreadfull threats of Gods mouth are against them: Sinne lies sculking at the door f of their consciences, like a ban-dog, ready to worry them: the devil stands watching to lay claim to them, and to devour them t: the rage of all the creatures (though they little think of it) is ever arm'd and addrest to seize upon them as traytours and rebels to the highest majesty, and to drag them down into the bottome of hell. In all which respects, the sinners in Sion should be afraid, fearefulnesse should surprize the Hypocrites. Cause enough they have to run away with those desperate words in their mouthes, who among us shall dwell with the devouring fire? who among us shall dwell with everlasting burnings us? Or rather (which indeed were more to be wisht) to grow to that conclusion of the Authour to the Hebrews, Let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence, and godly fear. For our God is a consuming fire w. But how little (alasse) of this reverent fear, (and so consequently of any other saving grace whatsoever, *) there is in the hearts of wicked and unregenerate persons, appears in their practise: and that the Psalmist maketh good both in respect of evill to be avoyded and of good to be performed. Psalm 36 1, 2, 3, 4. For evill first, my minde gives me, saith the Prophet, and I am verily perswaded that there's no fear of God in such a mans heart. ver. 1. But what's the ground of this perswasion? may it not be a rash and uncharitable censure you passe upon him? No saith he: for, first, for evill thoughts, he makes no scruple, no conscience of them, for he holds that thought's free, and therefore layes the raines in the neck; and lets them rove any way, yea even then when his reines should teach him better things, in the night season x. He deviseth mischief, saith he, upon his bed. Pf. 1. 36. 4.

Secondly for his words, as to God they are stout y, so to men they are slipper-y: so that ye cannot tell where to have him, neither how to beleve almost any thing that he speaks: the words of his mouth are iniquity and deceit. ver. 3.

Thirdly for matter of deeds, he abhors not any evill. ver. 3. well he may leave some sin, but he loaths it not: forbear it he may for some politick respects (as fear of the law, shame of the world, and speech of people) but 'tis sure he hates it not in his heart. A man may withdraw himself from some particular sin, give it over, seeme to be divorc'd from it, yet have a monthes minde to it still. As Abashuerosh, when the heat of his passion was over, remembred Vashti and what was decreed against her z, and could have wisht it otherwise: Or as the husband of Michal, who when she was taken from him, yet he came weeping after her as far off a. And this way a man may be as wicked in his fearfull abstaining from sin, as in his furious committing of it. But usually this generation of men that have not the fear of God before their eyes, are so wedded to their wicked courses, that they will at no hand depart from iniquity b, but are wise, and cunning to palliare and plead for that they doe: Yea against all the terrors of the Lord (casting handfulls of hell-fire into their faces in the ministry of his word) which should make them tremble and sin not c, they (contrarily) sin, and tremble not. Yea (which is worst of all, and sets them farthest off from mercy) they please and blesse themselves d in that iniquity of theirs which God and good men desery to be hatefull, Psalm 36. 2. not only not standing in awe of his judgements as they ought, while they hang in the threatenings: but fleshing and flattering themselves, as if the bitterness of death were past e, because sentence is not speedily executed, and for that God forbears for a time to punish f, as waiting their returne g, Lo, this is the disposition of wicked and ungodly people, as touching that which is evill: and this sufficiently shewes them utterly voyd of Gods true fear, whiles they plunge themselves into sins of all sorts with all delight and greedinesse.

Next for the performance of that which is good; it is manifest, saith David, that the wicked person hath no fear of God before his eyes, for he hath left off to do good Psalm 36. 3. he restraines prayer h and other holy duties, saith Eliphaz: he seeth not need to seek the Lord i, saith the Psalmist again: he counts it a burden, a course of no boot or benefit, to be religious, saith our Prophet here above the text k. He is no whit troubled at his own insufficiency or infirmity l, he takes no notice of Gods great judgements abroad the world, he will not declare his works

f Gen. 4. 7.

t 1 Pet. 5. 8

w Esay 33. 14.

x Heb. 12.

z 8. 29.

* Timor Dei est virtus et virtutum custos. Bucholker. Pl. 36. 1, 2, 3, 4 expounded.

Ob.

Sol.

x Psalm 16. 7.

y Malac 3. 13.

z Esh. 2. 1.

a 2 Sam. 3. 16.

b Prov. 3. 7.
Malach. 3. 5.

c Psalm 4. 4.

d Deut. 29.
19, 20.

e 1 Sa. 15. 32.

f Eccle 8. 13.

g 2 Pet. 3. 9.

h Job 15. 4.

i Psa. 34. 9, 10

k Mal. 3. 14, 15

l Job 37. ult.

works m. What should I stand to multiply words in a case so cleare? Leave we these * yokelesse, fearelesse, frontlesse, people to the just judgement of God which will surely seize upon them (if they take not course with him by timely repentance) tearing off the brawniness of their hearts, and washing off the varnish, that is upon the faces of the more refined amongst them with rivers of brimstone n.

As for the better sort of men, be it that backsliding Israel have plaid the harlot, yet why should Judah offend for want of this fear o? And yet (with grief I speak) there is but too great a defect of this holy fear to be discovered in Judah also: Gods own dear children, I mean, many of them at least; as were easy to evince. For How should we all fear God in his name, that we dishallow it not? p fear him in his presence, that we pollute it not q? fear him in his ministers that we discourage them not r? fear him in his people that we offend them not s? fear him in the mysteries, of godlinesse, that we prophane them not: fear him in his promises that we neglect them not t? fear him in the works of his providence, that we slight them not u? How should we be godlyly jealous over our selves and one another, mistrusting the corruption of our own natures w: and for others, fearing lest good men should fall from the simplicity that is in Christ Jesus x, and lest bad men should be hardened, and hindered by us, or ruine themselves when we might help them y? Lay your selves now, every man, to the rule laid before you, and see your own swerving and be humbled. Take the rod into your own hands, and afflict your selves seasonably, with voluntary forrowes for your defects in this duty; lest else he stand over you, and tutoring you to his fear, at every lash let you hear the rod say z, If I be a father, where's my honour? and if a master, where's my fear? a But a word to these wise is sufficient.

m Psal 64.9.
* Sons of Belial.
בל עיל
n Esa. 30. 33.

o Jer. 3. 8.

p Deut. 28. 58
q Jer. 5. 22.
r 2 Cor. 7. 5.
s 1 Cor. 10. 32
t Heb. 4. 1.
u Esay 5. 12.
w 2 Cor. 7. 1.
x 2 Cor. 11. 3.
y Jude 23.

z Micah 6 9.
a Mal. 1. 6.

SECT. 5.

Use 2. Examination, where marks of the true fear of God, in respect 1. of evill both in judgement, and practise. 2. of good toward

1. God, 2. men, both rich and poor, 3. our selves in prosperity and adversity.

b 1 Cor. 11. 28
δυναμις
as a Lapidary
doth his gemmes and Jewels.
Quest.

Ans.
Solus Dei ti- mor est qui
mentes corrigit,
fugat crimina,
innocentiam
servat, & om-
nis boni tribuit
facultatem.
Chrysost ser. de
Joan Baptist.
c Psal 19. 9.
d Rev. 14. 7.
e 2 Thes 2. 10
f Prov. 22. 4
* Ioannes Denckius ha-
reticus sed vir
doctus & de-
missi animi.
resipuit tandem
conversus ab
Oecolampadio,
& p̄d obijt
Basilea. Anno.
1528. Scultet.
Annal.
g Prov. 3. 7.

Secondly, is this fear of God an infallible note of an honest heart? Let a man then examine himself b, and so learne to settle the soundnesse of his gracious estate by securing this to his own soule, that he is a man truly fearing God.

But how may I come to know it, will some say. I answer, enough hath been said to this already in the foregoing discourse. If any yet would have further satisfaction, try your selves carefully by the effects, which this fear will certainly produce, where ever it lodgeth; causing that man diligently to endeavour 1. the shunning of all that's evill, 2. the doing of all that's good.

First this clean fear of God c, (as David fitly stiles it) is of soveraigne and singular use to a man for the casting out of all that's evill, whether in judgement or practise, as fast as it comes to knowledge.

For point of Opinion, first, Fear God, saith the Angell, that had the everlasting Gospell to preach unto them that dwell in the earth (understand it you may of that heroicall Luther, and the rest of the Renowned Reformers of later times) fear God, saith he, and give glory to him d (viz. by abdicating and abjuring your hereticall and erroneous conceits and opinions, and receive the love of the truth that ye may be saved e.) It is the property of this fear to make men humble f:
Now an humble man can never be an heretick, for it is but shewing him his error, and he will quickly yeeld, and subscribe to truth. *

The like we say for matter of practise, The fear of the Lord is to depart from evill g, whether publike, private, or secret. For the first, wherefore now, let the fear of the Lord be upon you (saith Jehosaphat in his charge to his judges, as they

they were going their Circuit) take heed and do it, for there is no iniquity with the Lord our God, nor respect of persons, nor taking of gifts b. And Iob tells us that howtsoever he could easily have borne out his oppressions by his greatnesse, yet he durst not, for he feared God and chewed that evill alto i. Next, as in publike negotiations, and places of iudicature it casts out corruption: so in private commerce, and enterdealing betwixt man and man. Thou shalt not curse the deaf (saith the Lord) why what if I do (might a man reply) he cannot hear me? Thou shalt not lay a stumbling block before the blind, why what if I do; he cannot see me? But thou shalt fear the Lord k (as it followes there) who both heareth thy curses and seeth thy stumbling blocks. Night will convert it self into noone before God, and silence prove a speaking evidence. Earth will cry Guilt guilty l, or if earth do not, heaven will reveal the iniquity m. Yea the very beasts have a verdict to passe upon evill-doers, as the asse upon Balaam n: A bird of the ayre shall carry the voice, and tell the matter o. Or if all these should faile, yet the eyes of the Lord run to and fro beholding the evill and the good p. Neither is he an idle spectator as the Epicures dreamt, but he hath a revenging eye (as the heathen Poet) and hand to q: (as the holy Prophet assure us) the remembrance whereof reyn'd in Ioseph from yeelding to the wicked motion of his wanton mistresse, though he might have committed that folly, and the world have been never the wiser r.

Lastly, it cleanseth also from secret sins, such as the world never comes acquainted with; for such as fear the Lord shall not be visited of evill s. It weeds hypocrysy out of the heart, and pride and arrogancy and every evil way t, let it but in thought: as is to be seen in Iob, who durst not once think (basely) upon a maid, because God, he knew, saw his wayes, and counted sin against m. For this was it that made him restrain wanton looks, and chasten private wickednesse, cleansing himself from all filthinesse of flesh and spirit, to perfecting holinesse in the fear of God x.

Secondly this holy fear, as it frames the heart to a shunning of sin, so it formes it no lesse to the doing of duty: and that 1. toward God, 2. toward men. For God, first, it maketh a man 1. believe him 2. obey him. First, it trembleth, all out as much, at the threats of God, mouth as at the strokes of his hand y, as is to be seen in Habakkuk z. And the scripture noteth expressly of the Patriarch Noah, that moved with fear he believed a, A d the delivered Israel is, posselt with this filiall fear, believed God and his servant Moses b. Thus it frames a mans heart to faith in Gods word c. And so it doth secondly, to the obedience of his will: for they that fear the Lord, will keep his covenant d, yea they will work hard at it e, as afraid to be taken with their tasks undone.

Thus it orders us in point of duty toward God, and no lesse toward men, both ourselves and others.

For others first: this fear of the Lord teacheth both rich, and poor, their severall duties. The rich it teacheth 1. not to brow-beat or oppress their poorer brethren: f. This do and live, saith Ioseph, for I fear God and thats your security: As if he should say, I intend you no hurt, though ye are fallen into my danger; for it stands not with that fear of God that hath taken up my heart. And, ought ye not to have walked in the fear of God g? said Nehemiah, to those mercilesse usurious Israelites, that had engrated upon their brethren.

2. To be hospitable and harbourous, ready to releev the necessitous: such especially as are of the household of faith. This we see in Obadiah h, for the old testament, and Cornelius, for the new: he feared God, saith the text, and he gave much almes i. As on the other side, to him that is afflicted, saith Iob, pity should be shewed from his friend, but he forsaketh the fear of the Almighty k. What cares Nabal the churle though worthy David dye at his doore, so long as he may sit warme within, eating of the fat, and drinking of the sweet. All his Logick is little enough to conclude for himself. Shall I take my bread and my flesh that I have kid'd for my shearers, and give it to men, whom I know not whence they be l? No, why should he, say: but the fear of God would have taught the foole m moe wit.

But Secondly, as it formeth the rich to their duties, so the poorer sort too; whom

b 2 Chr. 19. 7
i Iob 31. 13, 34. k Levit. 19. 14
Deo obsequia
clarent, mata respondent, si-lentium confi-
tentur.
l Gen. 3. 10
m Ier. 20. 27
- Servi ut race-
ant: iumenta lo-
quentur.
n Juvenal.
o 2 Pet. 2. 16
p Eccle. 10. 20
q Prov. 15. 3
r Ps. 136.
s Ier. 17.
t Ier. 17.
u Ier. 17.
v Ier. 17.
w Ier. 17.
x Ier. 17.
y Ier. 17.
z Hab. 3. 16

a Heb. 11. 7.
b Ex. 14. ult.
c Prov. 13. 12
d Ps. 133. 13, 18
e Act. 10. 35

f Gen. 42. 18
g Nehem. 5. 9

h 1 King. 8.
i 12. 14
j Act. 10. 1, 2

k Iob 6. 14
l 1 Sam. 25. 11
m Nabal is his name, and folly is with him

whom it rendreth, 1. Content with their pittance, as knowing, that Better is a little with the fear of the Lord, then great treasure, and trouble therewith m. m Prov. 17. 22
2. Far from envying the rich, sith God hath meted out to each one the portion of his allowance n, with this condition, that where much is given, much shall be required o. Let not thine heart envy sinners, saith Solomon, but ( for an antidote against that evil disease ) be thou in the fear of the Lord all day long p. n Afs 17. 26
o σπουδαιον. s Luke 12. 48
p Prov. 23. 17

Lastly, for our selves ( in what estate soever ) the fear of the Lord will make and keep a man in prosperity, 1. humble, 2. thankfull; as in adversitie, 1. patient. 2. confident.

In prosperity it teacheth: 1. Humility, according to that of the Wise-man; By humility and the fear of the Lord are riches q &c. where you may observe a q Prov. 22. 4 very close connexion of humility and the fear of the Lord, set forth by an elegant asyndeton in the originall: there being no grammaticall copulative set between them; but such a near affinity intimated, as if they were the very same thing, and the one pradicated of the other, as termes convertible. 2. Thankfulness; as appears in the example of Job and David: and may be gathered out of that text in Jeremy: Neither say they in their hearts, Let us now fear the Lord our God, that giveth rain, both the former and latter rain in his season, &c. r. One would r Jer. 5. 24 think, he should rather blame them there, for not saying, Let us praise the Lord our God, &c. but that former includes this latter: for he that truly feareth God, will not fail to be thankfull.

Next, in time of adversity, the fear of God is of no small use and benefit; for 1. It makes men patient, willing to bear Gods hand, and to wait his leisure: to seek remedy onely in Gods wayes, and to accept of it onely upon his termes: Thus those holy women in Peter, being under the crosse of unequall yoke-fellows, might not seek to win their loves by plaited hair, or garish attire, but by a meek and quiet spirit, and by a chaste conversation coupled with fear s. s 1 Pet. 3. 3

Adde hereunto ( in the last place ) that the fear of God keeps men confident in the evil day, holds up their hearts from dejection and disquietment. For it brings a man before God in prayer t, as it did distressed David u, and fainting Habakkuk w; who after he had poured forth his soul before God, with reverence and godly fear, rose up off his knees as confident as might be, that Although the fig-tree shall not blossom, nor fruit be found in the vines; the labour of the olive should fail, and the fields yeeld no meat: the flock should be cut off from the fold, and there be no herd in the stalls: yet I will rejoyce in the Lord, saith he: I will joy in the God of my salvation. The Lord God is my strength, &c. So true is that of Solomon: In the fear of the Lord is strong confidence: and his children have a place of refuge x. x Prov. 14. 26
t Prov. 14. 26
u Psal. 119. 38
w Hab. 3. 16, 17.
x Prov. 14. 26

And this is that fear of God that speaks a man truly religious. Apply your selves now every one to the rule, and search and see in some of you an utter nullity; in other some, a fearfull deficiency of this reverentiall fear of God.

SECT. VI.

Use 3. Exhortation to get and grow in this holy Fear: with six Motives, and three Means tending thereto.

Use. 3.

And for a third Use of the point, learn we all, first, to get; and then to grow in this grace. Let the fear of the Lord be upon you, and do it y. Give y: Chro. 19. 6
all diligence to fashion your hearts to this reverent regard of God: considering the terrour of the Almighty, which we must needly know either as slaves or sons: but better as sons, that in the day of distresse he may spare us, as a man doth his own sonne that serveth him z.

If yet ye look for further Motives to this duty, Consider that the fear of God is 1. But equall and reasonable. 2. Gainfull and profitable. 3. Needfull. 4. Honourable. 5. Acceptable. 6. Comfortable.

'Tis equall, first, for it is our bounden duty, sith he hath so often commanded and required it upon our allegiance a: besides, that it of right appertaineth unto him as a due, though he should never have called for it. Bring presents unto him that ought

z Mal. 3. 17 Motives to the fear of God.
a Psal. 2. 11
psal. 33. 8
prov. 3. 7
Esay 8. 13
Heb. 12. 28

b Psal. 76. 11
c Jer. 10. 7
d Ecclef. 12. 13
e Luke 17. 10

Secondly, 'tis a practise no lesse gainfull then equall (whatever those profane if-creants above the text blasphemed to the contrary.) Profitable it must needs bee, for it hath the promises of both lives. In the life present, he that hath the fear of the Lord shall not be visited of evil e, in generall: Not of the evil of sinne,<sup>e</sup> for the fear of the Lord is to hate that evil f: Nor of pain, for the fear of the Lord is a fountain of life, to escape the snares of death g: Say hee meet with troubles without, or terrours within, yet he that feareth God shall come out of them all h. Thus for evil: And for good, both to us and ours after us. By humility and the fear of the Lord, are riches, and honour, and life i. One would think that were enough: yea, but then here's more then enough: They that fear the Lord shall want no manner of thing that is good k. Ey. but what shall their poor children do when they are gone? Well enough: for their seed shall be mighty upon earth, and their generation blessed, P sal. 112. throughout. Thus for temporalls they are provided for: And for spirituall blessings in heavenly things l, The Lord taketh pleasure in them that fear him m: he will teach such a one in the way that he shall chuse n, guide them he will with his counsell, and afterwards receive them to his glory o. Surely Gods salvation is nigh them that fear him p, saith David, and the covenant of life and of peace was with Levi, because he feared God q, saith Malachy. Lo, thus shall the man be blessed, that feareth the Lord r.

Thirdly, this holy fear is wondrous needfull, for it inciteth and inableth to all Christian duties: Whence it was that the Lord both delivered his Law at first in a fearfull manner f, and afterward, wished that the hearts of his people might be season'd with his fear, that they might keep his commandments alwayes r. Serve the Lord with fear, saith David n: yea, be thou in the fear of the Lord all day long w, saith Solomon. The primitive Christians walked in the fear of the Lord (saith St. Luke x) and it is a spot in your feasts to eat an drink without fear y, saith St. Jude.

Fourthly, 'tis honourable: for (besides that God takes himself highly honoured by it, and therefore calls for it in this Name; If I be a father, where is mine honour; and if a Master, wher's my fear?) we our selves are not a little dignified hereby. The woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised: and though many daughters had done virtuously, yet she excelled them all a. This grace winnes a man a wonderfull deal of respect both from God and men; as it did Job, of whom God himself boasted b: and Abraham, who was a Prince of God to the Heathenish Hittites c.

Fifthly, 'tis a grace very acceptable: for it gives grace and vertue to all other graces and duties; which else are displeasing to the Almighty. For to him will I look, even to him that trembleth at my word d: as to none else, be his sacrifice never so specious or costly. And to shew how highly God esteemeth this fear, you shall find it not seldome set for the whole service of God in holy Scripture, as was said before.

Lastly, it is exceeding comfortable, for it freeth the heart of all base fears; (which vanish out of sight before this, as the lesser lights before the Sun) and fills it with strong confidence and consolations: making the man in whom it is to hold up his head in the greatest hurly-burly, and to walk about the world as a conquerour, void of all fear what man or devil can do unto him c.

You see that this holy fear comes commended unto you by many names: what remains, but that ye set your selves in all good earnest, for the attaining thereunto in a diligent use of the means. These are among others:

Means of getting the fear of God. f Rom. 6. ult.

First, set on serious meditation, and first upon your selves, Reflect, and see, 1. your own miserable condition, by reason of sin imputed to you, sin inherent in you, and sin issuing from you: together with the deserved punishment, all torments here, and tortures hereafter, which are but the just hire of the least sin f. 2. Your utter inability to free your selves either from sin, or punishment. From the former you can no more free your selves, then the blackmore from his skin, or the leopard from

b Psal. 76. 11
c Jer. 10. 7
Eccles. 12. 13
d Luke 17. 10

e Prov. 19.23
f Prov. 8.13
g Prov. 14.27
h Eccle. 8.12

i Prov. 22.4
Esay 33.6
k Pſal. 34
Ob.
Sol.

l Ephes. 1. 3
m Psa. 147. 11
n Psa. 25. 12
o Psa. 73. 24
p
q Mal. 2. 5
r Psa. 128. 4

f Exod 19.
t Deut. 5.29
u Psal. 2.11
w Prov. 23.1
x Acts 9.31
y Jude 12
αποβας.

२ Mal. I. 6

a Pr. 31.25,3

b Job 1.8
c Gen. 23 6

e Psal. 3 throughout.

Means of getting the fear of God.
f Rom. 6. ul

from his spots g : And for the later, there's no power, wit, or any other meanes in our selves or the creature, either to abide or avoyd it. This meditation made Peters converts cry out for fear, Men and brethren what shall we do. o be saved h? Next, busy your thoughts upon God, be thinking upon his name, with those in the text. See him as he stands described 1. in his word. 2. in his works.

The word sets out God for our present purpose, 1. as a God of transcendent excellency and surprisling glory: and thence inferrs a necessity of his fear: Who would not fear thee O king of Nations i &c. saith Jeremy. And thou art more glorious and excellent than the mountains of prey, that is, then the flourishing Assyrians, with all their goodly Monarchy: therefore (as a consecratory) bring presents unto him that ought to be feared k.

2. As omnipresent and omniscient: one that beholdeth and taketh knowledge of all we doe, as much as of any thing in his own heart: for all things consists in him l. And the wayes of a man are before the Lord, he ponderth all his paths m. And will ye not tremble at my presence saith the Lord n. Joseph did, and so kept himself untoucht: and Job did, and so frighted his conscience from sin by this whole some consideration o.

3. As armed with infinite power and might, to reward us if we fear him, and to punish us if we neglect him. Shall servants fear their masters, because the have power over the flesh p, and shall not we fear him that is able to cast body and soule to hell q?

4. As infinitely just, and singularly carefull to punish sin, where ever he finds it; be it in the dearest of his own, nay in his onely son, who being made sin for us r, and found in the shape and stead of sinfull flesh, was made to undergo those dolorous and unconceivable sorrowes, that drew clotted blood t from his body: and were joynt with a temporary desertion to his soule: yet the very paines of hell, which he felt for a season u. Who would not therefore fear before this just and impartiall God? See that sweet song of the triumphant saints, that had overcome the beast by the blood of the lamb. Iust and true a e thy wayes &c. who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorifie thy name w. &c.

5. As abundantly and unpeakeably kind and loving to us in Christ. This property in God thoroughly thought upon will inflame our hearts with his love, and so make us fearfull to displease him as the dutifull spouse her loving husband, or the gracious child his indulgent father. This is to fear God and his goodnesse x, to fear God through delight in his wues y to reioyce in fear z and therefore to fear to offend him with hope, because there is mercy with him a, as the psalmist hath it. Thus meditate upon the attributes of God, set forth in the word. In the world next, you may see God in his workes. And first, those standing miracles, the hanging of the earth upon nothing b, the bounding of sea, that it cannot transgresse his word c: By the word of the Lord were the heavens made: and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth. He gathereth the waters of the sea together as a heap: he liverh up the depth in storehouses. Let all the earth fear the Lord: let all the inhabitants of the world stand in awe of him. For he spake, and it was done, he commanded and it stood fast d &c. Secondly turne your eyes and thoughts upon the judgments of God: and first particular, executed upon others for our warning and learning.

The righteous shall see this and fear e, as David speakes, and as David did too: as himself testifieth, my flesh trembleth for fear of thee, and I am afraid of thy judgments f. When one child is whipt in a schoole, the rest will tremble: so it should be with us, when we see others punished: which because Belshazzar did not g when his father was turn'd a grasing; therefore was he found too light in the balance, and his kingdome given to his neighbour, that was better then he.

2. Premediate upon the generall judgment, and the unconceivable terrour of that dreadfull day, when the heavens shall passe away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat: the earth also, and the workes that are therein shall be burnt up h. Felix (though a pagan) trembled at Pauls discourse of this great day i. The devils when they think of it, shake and shudder: the joynts of their loines are loosed with Belshazzar, and their knees smite one against another k. And can any man think seriously of this last judgment, and not be moved with fear? Fear God saith Solomon, and, as a help hereunto, consider, that God will bring every

i Jer. 10. 7
k Plu 76. 4. 11
l Collos 1. 17
m Prov. 5. 21
n Jer. 5. 24
o Job 31. 1. 2.
p Colos 3. 23.
q Mar 10. 29.
r No man will put his hand into a fiery crucible to fetch gold th n e, because he knowes it will burne him: did we as truly believe and stand the fire of hell &c.
s 2 Cor. 5. 21
t 2 Tim. 8. 2
u Si in vobis
v 2 Tim. 8. 2
w Liurg. Grec.
x Luc 22. 44
y 2 Tim. 8. 2
z Plu 22. 1 &c. a Rev. 15. 4
b H. 3. 5
c Plu 112. 1
d Plu 2. 11
e Plu 120. 4
f Job 26. 7

e Jer. 5. 24
d Plu 33. 6, 7, 8, 9
e Plu 52. 6
f Plu 119. 120
g Dan. 5. 21, 22, 27
D. site justis ammoniti non temere dec. Prodit Herodotus suo tempore con-sp. Nam esse in Agypto statuam
S-na heri-bicum hac inscriptione. equi
ne boday eu-
sodine &c.
h 2 Per 3. 10
i 2 Cor 5. 25
k Dan 5. 6.

l Ecclef. 12. 14 work into judgement, with every secret thing whether it be good or evil l.

And this is the first meanes of getting Gods holy fear, viz. Meditation. The second is like unto it, and that is faithfull and fervent prayer to the father of lights m, for it is a supernaturall gift to fear God as a father. Thus David goes to God for this gift, Unite my heart ( which of it self is wofully divided and scattered up and down upon lying vanities ) to fear thy name n. And Eliphaz gives this as a reason, why men cast off fear, because they restrain prayer o. And it may easily be observed, that to fear God, and to seek God, are often in scripture ( especially p Psal. 34. ) used for one and the same: this being the ready way to that, and indeed the onely way. For, I will yet for this be sought unto by the house of Israel, saith the Lord p concerning the benefits and contents of the new covenant; One clause whereof ( for our encouragement to ply the throne of grace by prayer ) is this, I will give them one heart, and one way, that they may fear me for ever. I will put my fear into their hearts that they shall not depart from me for ever q.

m Jam. 1. 17.

n Psal. 86. 11

o Job 15. 4

p Eze. 36. 37

q Ier. 32. 39, 40

CHAP. IIII.

The Text expounded, and the duty of Christian conference propounded.

Then they, that feared the Lord, spake often one to another. &c.

וְכָכִי Sermonis frequentationem
significat in hac
conjugat.

a Jer. 32. 40
b Mat. 26. 33
Melius semper
animatus quam armatus. Curt.

Doct.

They spake, and they spake often: for that is the import of the Originall word here used: and that's the summ of the service here performed. The circumstances whereof ( so far as they lye in our way at least ) being already dispatcht, we now passe on to the substance in these words, They spake often one to another. Happy soules that thus improv'd their holy meetings in laying out themselves to the best advantage one of another in that generall Apostasy. Gods holy fear had so taken up their good hearts that they could never depart from him, no not in a common defection a. Though all men forsake thee, Lord, yet I'll stick to thee b. So Peter promised ( being better alwayes affectioned then appointed, as one well saith of him: ) but so such only have performed, as with these in the text, having their hearts fraught with Gods fear, and solicitous thinking upon his name, tooke all good occasions of uttering their holy thoughts among themselves ( at least ) not without the inestimable benefit and edification one of another. That which we may hence observe is thus much.

That Christians ( in bad times especially ) should, by godly conference and otherwise as they can, carefully employ, and wisely improve all their best abilities and interests one in another for mutuall confirmation and encouragement.

SECT. I.

Christian conference and mutuall confirmation confirmed by Scripture.

Thus the good people here: they gat together, and spake together: in opposition doubtlesse to those wicked above, that multiplyed to speak mischief ver. 13. seeking to turn Gods glory into shame, and not knowing that God hath set up, yea and set apart him that is godly for himself c: the Lord will hear him when he calles c, nay, he will harken and hear and a booke of remembrance was written before

c Psal. 4. 2, 3.

before him &c. as these ancient Christians aver'd by way of reply to these wicked blasphemers, as some will have it. Thus they here combin'd together for mutual strengthening: and thus, before them, Abraham and Melchisedech d, Moses and Aaron e, Jethro and Moses f, Samuel and David g, David and Jonathan h, Elijah and Elisa i; they were going on and talking, when the chariot of heaven came to divide them. Surely had not that conference been needfull and divine (saith a right Reverend Writer of our Church) it had given way to meditation; and Elijah had been taken up rather praying than talking. But he knew best what was fittest to be done, and happy is that servant whom his master when he cometh shall finde to doing k. And thus the master himself (in whose one example is a globe of proofes, a cloud of witnesses l.) He therefore (as himself was confirm'd by Moses and Elias, who appeared unto him in the mount, and talked with him of his decease m, so) what paines tooke he with his disciples for their strengthening and settling? But especially with Peter; forewarning him, first, of his future fall n, calling him afterwards out of it by the cock, but more by his lookes: confirming him, after it, partly by his message to him by Mary Magdalen, Go tell my disciples and Peter p &c. partly by his praye: for him to his father that his faith faild not q: and partly by his threefold charge to him, feed my sheep, feed my lambs r, (so assuring him that his sin was pardoned by his ministry restored:) And when thou art converted strengthen thy brethren s: which accordingly he performed to purpose, even to his dying day. Hear him else, I will not be negligent to put you alwayes in remembrance. Nay, that's not enough: Yea I think u met so long as I am in this tabernacle to rouse you up t (so the Greek word signifieth) by putting you in remembrance of these things, though ye know them and be established in the present truth. For (as good as they were) they might need sometimes with the wife vi gins u: and to have need of rowzing: as Peter himself had at Antioch; where he was justly taken up for halting by St. Paul x: and as Paul himself might need to be served by Peter, or a far meaner man: for I long to see you, (saith he to his Romans) that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift, to the end ye may be established. That is, that I may be comforted together with you by the mutual faith both of you and me y. So that, there is, we see, no depth of knowledge, height of holinesse, degree of grace, or measure of zeale, but may be blessedly increased, and enlarged by conference with other christians: And that shall be one Reason of the point (in its proper place) if we shall first (by your patience) begin from him who is the beginning and end of all our endeavours in this worke of his. Whether then we looke to God or men, our selves or others, the good or the bad, we shall see sufficient reason to confirme the point, and to enforce the duty.

SECT. II.

Reasons of the Point. 1. from God, commanding, rewarding. 2. from men, and 1. our selves shall be hereby sealed, secured. 2. others. 1. Good men. Who shall be 1. curbed from sin, 2. quickened to duty. 2. Bad men. Who shall be 1. confuted. 2. defeated.

FOR God, first, he both requires it, and requites it: bids it be done, and then blesteth it in the deed.

First, I say, he commands it; and therefore we should do it. This is a powerfull kinde of reasoning used by the great doctour of the Gentiles: In every thing give thanks: And why? for this is the will of God in Christ Iesus & that ye be thankfull: and so 'tis also that ye be, this way, usefull and profitable one to another. Not pleasing your selves, but every one pleasing his neighbour for his good to edification a: not forsaking the assemblies of the saints as the manner of some is, ( which also is the high roade-way to final impenitency, to utter Apostacy, nay to the unpardonable sin b ) but exhorting one another daily, yea considering, and studying one another, to wheate on to love and good works. Not making our selves our

Tre melius Polanus alij.
 d Gen 14. 19.
 e Exod. 4. 14.
 15. 16
 f Exod. 18. 19
 g 1 Sa. 19. 18
 h 1 Sa 32. 16
 i 2 King 2. 11
 k Matt. 24. 46
 l Heb. 12. 1
 m Luc 9. 31
 n Mar. 26. 34
 p amonius
 pramunius.
 o Luc 22. 61
 p Mark 16. 7
 q Luc 22. 32
 r Ioh. 21. 15
 s Luc. 22. 32
 Neim enim ex Apollolis graviorem senten-tiam contra Apollatas fert.
 2 Pet. 2. 12
 illa epylla
 scripta est con-
 firmandis fratribus Par.
 12 Pet. 1. 12. 13
 διασησιν.
 u Mat. 25. 5
 ἐνὸς ἑαυ.
 Quandoque bo-
 nas dormitat.
 x Gal. 2. 10
 y Ro. 1. 11, 12
 Αἰχμη-
 ἀπὸ πύτων
 καὶ τῶδε
 ποιεῖ Ὀδύ.
 Nazianz.

Reas. 1.
 α 1 Thes. 5. 18
 a Rom. 15. 1, 2
 ἐπιθυμῶν
 γὴν ἐαυτῶν.
 b Heb. 10. 23, 24, 25
 κτλ. ὅτι μὲν
 εἰς παροῦσιν
 μοῖ.

c Philip. 2. 4
 * Man is Natures good fellow ἑαυτοῦ
πολιτευ.
 Arist.
 d 1 Pet. 4. 10
 e 1 Cor. 12. 7

owne mark only e, but looking and ayming at, every man, the things of another, as being his brothers keeper. Not living to our selves, or being all for our selves * (as wild beaſts who delight to lye alone in their dens; or as ſwine, ſtyed up till ready for the knife) but as every man hath received the gift, ſo miniſtring the ſame one to another, as good ſtewards of the manifold grace of God d. No man is either born or born again for himſelf. The maniſtation of the ſpirit is given to every man to profit withall e. What ſhould I heap up more teſtimonies in a truth to clear? God, you ſee, hath plainly and plentifully reveal'd his will, that ſoveraigne Rule, and moſt ſufficient Reaſon that ſwayes moſt with a Chriſtian. So Paul preſſeth it, and to David held it (every where in his psalmes) and hath therefore this teſtimony that he fulfill'd all (not the will only, but the) wills of God f though never ſo danger-full or difficult. The Rechabites were rigid obſervers of their fathers command: g, and were well rewarded for it. And ſhall not we much more of this command of God? eſpecially, ſith in doing thereof is ſo great reward h: which is the ſecond branch of this firſt Reaſon from God, who as he commands mutuall confirmation, ſo he rewards it too, and that, many wayes.

f Act. 13. 22
ἡρώδης
 g Jer. 35. 2,
 3 &c. h Pſal. 19. 11

Reaf. 2.
Donorum incrementum accipiunt qui conceſſis prioribus fideliter utuntur Mal- colm: in Act. 5
 i Luc. 24
 k Mat. 18. 20.

For 1. he liſtens and layes his eare to their ſweet words, as loth to loſe any part of that precious language. He barkened and heard, ſaith the text. 2. He bookes them up, and writes them down in his register, as matters of mark. 3. He adds to their ſtock of grace, which they husband ſo well, cauſing it to grow in the uſe, as once the loaves did in Chriſt hands, or the oyle in the widowes cruſe. 4. He ſecretly and ſweetly comforteth their hearts, himſelf making one among them (as our Saviour dealt with thoſe two travelling to Emaus) according to his promiſe, where but two or three are gathered together in his name (and fear to do him ſervice, and to help one another toward heaven) there is he in the miſt of them k: to water and proſper their holy endeavours that way with the dewes of many ſweet and glorious reſreſhings: a very foretaſt unto them of that life eternall. Where 5. the reward ſhall be according to their work in this kinde. He that hath wiſed others ſhall ſhine as the brightneſſe of the firmament: and he that hath turn'd many to righteousneſſe, as the ſtars for ever and ever l. He that with his two talents hath (by trading with others gain'd) five, ſhall be made ruler over five cities. And he that hath gain'd ten, ſhall be ruler over ten m. Beſides (6) a free largeſſe of his lords joy to boot: Enter thou, good ſervant, into thy maſters joy n. A joy more fit for the Maſter then for the ſervant: and yet behold ſuch a maſter do we ſerve (when we ſerve one another in love o,) as will reward his ſervants with ſuch a joy. And thus ſtands the firſt Reaſon for a frequency of chriſtian conference, taken from God, who both indispensably requires it, and abundantly rewards it.

l Dan. 12. 3.
 m Luc. 19. 16, 17

n Mat. 25. 21
 o Gal. 5. 13

A ſecond followes taken from our ſelves: And ſo we ſhould give all diligence to this duty of mutuall confirmation and encouragements: if but for our own ſakes, who ſhall hereby be 1. ſcaled up and ſetled in all good aſſurance of our gracious eſtate for preſent: 2. ſecured, and well enabled to proceed and profit therein for the future.

Reaf. 3.

For the firſt: the text, you ſee, makes it a mark of men truly religious, to be often ſpeaking one to another: for a ſincerity is the life of religion, ſo ſociety is the life of ſincerity. And therefore no ſooner did Ephraim acknowledge their offences, and ſeek Gods face, but in the next chapter, firſt verſe, they call upon each other, Come let us return to the Lord p &c. And thoſe three thouſand ſoules Act. 2. were no ſooner added to the church, but they (to give prooffe thereof) preſently made conſcience aſwell of chriſtian ſociety, as of hearing and praying and breaking of bread q: which ſome underſtand, of receiving the Lords ſupper. And the Philippians ſo ſoon as ever they were converted to Chriſt, held a fruitfull fellowſhip in the goſpel from the firſt day untill now. Which made St. Paul confident of this very thing, that God had both begun a good worke in them (which was the firſt branch of this ſecond reaſon) and would alſo finiſh it to the day of Chriſt r: And that's the ſecond.

p Hof. 5. ult.
 & 6. 1

q Act. 2. 41, 42

r Phil. 1. 5, 6.
 Reaf. 4.
 f Prov. 10. 27

This ſpeaking often each man to his neighbour, as it comfortably aſſures and ſeals us up for preſent, that we are of thoſe righteous whoſe lips feed many f (even as many many as they can opportunely r and orderly u extend themselves to ) to it effectually secureth and feteleth us for the future : and is of excellent use and avail for our proceeding, and proficing in the Christian course. For 1. there is a secret tye to constancy in the communion of saints : But woe be to him that is alone x. He is not likely long to hold fast the profession of his faith, without wavering or warping, that doth not consider himself and others, to provoke to love and good works y. He that forsaketh the assembling of our selves together (as the Apostle speaketh) is not farr from inward or outward Apostacy z. Against which woefull evill, exhortation is there fitly prescribed as a precious preservative. For indeed (and thats a second settlement) he that hath exhorted another to duty, hath after a sort ingag'd himself to the performance thereof : and laid a new tye upon his own conscience to perseverance therein ; lest haply he hear, Physician heal thy self a. or, Then that teachest another teachest thou not thy self ? b Besides, thirdly, the promise of increase made to this spirituall, no lesse then to that other corporall almes ; that he that soweth bountifullly shall reap bountifullly c. And the liberall man devieth liberall things, and by liberall things he shall stand d. And to him that hath (nearly for use and increate) shall be given, and he shall abound e. Whereas, from him that hath not (in manner aforesaid) shall be taken away even that he seemed to have, with the slothfull servant he shall surely come to poverty, for withholding that which was meet with Solomons sluggard : when he that scattereth increateth f : He shall have his arme clean dryed up, and his eyes utterly darkened with those Idol-shepheards g in Zachary that had eyes, and saw not, hands, and handled not, the law, I mean which they ought to have seen into, and handled h : dividing it aright as St. Paul speaketh i and as good stewards of the manifold grace of God received, distributing to every man his just measure of fit meate in due season k. So that it is a high point of spirituall thirst to be much in holy conference and calling upon others to duty : which they that do often, are as gardens whose spices flow out l a. liberall house-keepers, the doies of whose lips are a wayes open to the feeding of of many m : their path is as the morning light that shines more and more to the perfect day n, they shall never be of those that draw back to perdition : but of them that beleeve to the salvation of the soule o. And thats a second reason drawn from our selves.

The third followeth respecting others, and Fitst the better sort shall be hereby r. curb'd, and cal'd back from sin : z. quickened and confirm'd in duty. Next, the worser sort of people shall be hereby partly confuted, partly defeated.

For the first of these : This mutuall encouragement in well doing, this christian conference, and grave advise, this turning of a sinner from the error of his way, may (if God be so pleas'd) save a soule from death, and hinder or cover a multitude of sins p. Now sin is an evill to mischievous, to murderous to mankinde, that all sorts should set against it, and do their utmost to club it down where ever they meete with it. As grace (o' rother side) is so amiable to profitable, that every one should strive by word or deed to propagate and further it wheresoever, and whereinssoever he is able. A maine help to both which is godly conference, and christian exhortation.

And z. for recovering others out of their revolts, and relapses, who can tell how far David would have run on in the revenge of a private injury, had he not been timely taken off and disarm'd by a discreet Abigail ? Doth he not soone after blesse God for her, blesse her for her counsell, and her counsell for his restraint from that bloody designe q? And another time when he had grievously and grievously over-shot himself in the matter of Uriah, did not the Prophet Nathan joynt, and restore him againe r after a long relapse, by a private admonition s ? So forcible are right words, t saith Iob : And a word upon his wheel's, saith Solomon is like apples of Gold with pictures of Silver u. Nathans private discourse (to God would have it to shew his liberty of working by what ordinances he best pleaseth) was at that time more effectual with David, then any or all the lectures of the law, or dayly services of the Temple. And the words of Naamans servants greater in operation then the words of that great Prophet Elisha x. Iunius professeth of himself that being strongly tempted to Atheisme and prevail'd with, the very first thing that helped him out, was the talking with a country-man of his

r Gal. 6. 10
u 1 Cor. 14. 40
x Eccles. 4. 10
y Heb. 10.
z 23, 24
z ib &
Heb 3. 12, 13

a Luc. 4 23
b Rom 2
c 2 Cor. 9. 6
d Isa. 32 8
e Mat. 25 29
f Prov 11 24
g Zach 11. 17
h Ier. 2 8
i 1 Tim 2. 15
k Luc. 12 42
l 1 Tim 2. 15
m Luc. 12 42
n 1 Tim 2. 15
o Heb. 10. ult.
Real. 5.

p Iam. 5. ult.

q 1 Sa. 25. 23
r Gal 6. 1
s 2 Sa. 12. 13
t Job 6. 25
u Prov. 25 11
v 1 Kings 17
x 2 King. 5 13
In via.

B. Ridly was converted by Bertrams book of the Sacrament : and confir'm'd by conference with Cranmer, & Pet. Martyr Aſſan! Moni of the church. lb.

not far from Florence, and his manner of expreſſing himſelf. And, I was an obſtinate paſt (ſaith Latimer) as any was in England. Inſomuch that when I ſhould be made Batchelour of Divinity, my whole oration went againſt Philip Melancthon and his opinions. Eitney (afterwards Martyr) heard me at that time, and perceived that I was zealous without knowledge : and came to me afterwards into my ſtudy, and deſired me, for Gods ſake, to hear his confeſſion. I did ſo, and to ſay the truth, I learn'd more by his confeſſion, then afore in many years. So from that time forward, I began to ſmell the word of God, and forſake the ſchoole-doctours, and ſuch like ſopperies. I need not repeat here, how thoſe two godly biſhops Ridly and Farrar were both taken off from their evill purpoſes and promiſes, the one of going to maſſe, and the other of receiving the Eucharift in one kinde only, by the ſweet and reaſonable diſſwaſion of bleſſed Bradford, their fellow-prifoner.

y Eccl. 12. 11
z Heb. 12. 13.

a Luc. 24. 25.
b Heb. 5. 11.
c Prov. 27. 17.
d 1 Theſ. 5. 14
e 2 Tim. 1. 6.
f Cant. 1. 4.
g Cant. 5. 9.

b Cant. 6. 1.

¶ Pf. 45. 1. & ult.
Reaf. 6.
Contra ſycophanta morſum
non eſt remedi-
um Seneca.
k Rev. 12. 4.
l Mat. 24. 24
m 2 Pet. 3. 17
n Ioh. 8. 44
o 1 Sam. 5.
p Hab. 1. 13

p Mat. 23. 15
q 1 Pet. 5. 8
r Job 1. 7
Pecora fratris
tui errantia
juber ut redu-
cas fratri tuo,
nedum ipſum
ſibi. Terent.

Neither is this chriſtian conference more available for the curbing of ſome from committing of ſin, then for quickening of others, to the doing of duty. The words of the wiſe are not only like nailes y or ſhepherds-piſſes (whereby they uſed to faſten their ſheep-fold to the ground) to rectifie and reſtrain from ſin, to hold up the hands that hang down, and the feeble knees, left that which is lame be turned out of the way z : but alſo like goads to prick forward thoſe that are ſlow of heart a : like whetſtones, to edge and eneaſer them that be dull of hearing b, (for as iron ſharpeneth iron, ſo doth the face of a man his friend c.) like cordials, to fetch againe thoſe that are feeble minded d : laſtly like bellowes, to blow up that ſparke e of the ſpirit in another mans breſt into a lively flame, that elſe, like a dull-ſea-coale fire (if it be not now and then blowne or ſtir'd up, though there be no want of fuel, yet) will of it ſelf at length dye, and go out. We will remember thy loves more then wine, ſaith the ſpoule, therefore the Virgins love thee f. This fruit commeth upon the remembring and mentioning Chriſts loves, that his Saints are confirmed and increaſed in it. Thoſe daughters of Ieruſalem that at firſt wondred g why the Church ſhould make ſuch ado about Chriſt; when they had converſed with her awhile, and heard her ſpeake with ſuch a deal of admiration and affection, they are inflamed, and induced to ſeek Chriſt with her h. God uſually fines and files the tongues of his upright ones to be trumpetters of his glory and beauty. In ſetting forth whereof, they have words at will, their tongues never linn, but become as the pen of a ready writer, in ſpeaking forth the things they have made concerning the king, till ſuch time as Gods people accord together to praiſe him for ever and ever. i Laſtly, bad men ſhall be hereby 1. confuted, the mouths of ſuch ſhall be ſtopt as are ever complaining of, and accuſing Chriſtian meetings to be not for the better, but for the worſe : ſcarce to any other purpoſe, but to detract, deſame, ſlander, cenſure &c. Or if ſuch mouthes will not be ſhut, yet the conſciences of chriſtians may rejoyce in their contrary innocency, and not be deſected by ſuch falſe testimony. 2. they ſhall be defeated and diſappointed hereby of their devilish purpoſes and practiſes of caſting down ſtarrs from heaven, k and deceiving if it were poſſible the very elect l. So far forth as to be led away by the error of the wicked, and ſo to fall from their owne ſtedfaſtnes m. All ungodly perſons (and they have it by kinde too from their father the devill n) are ſtrangely ambitious of ſending the plague to their neighbours with the Ekronites o, of drawing others into partnership of their condemnation, of devouring the men more righteous then themſelves p. They compaſſe ſea and land, ſaith our Lord, to make a Proſelyte : which when they have done, they make him two-fold more the childe of hell then themſelves p. The devill alſo is a buſie walker q, a great compaſſer r ſeeking whom he may devour.

And is it not good reaſon that we ſhould walke as faſt, and compaſſe our weak brethren round, ſeeking whom we may deliver from the devill and his instruments : who like a wall-nut-tree roote labour to imbitter all the rootes that are about them.

SECT.

SECT. III.

Use. 1. Reproof of idle and evil speakers together.

Use.

Now for Application: First, take notice with me, by this point, what cause we have all to cry out with David, Help Lord, for the godly man ceaseth, for the faithfull fail from among the children of men. They speak indeed, and speak often, but (alasse) 'tis vanity they speak every man to his neighbour, with flattering lips and with a double heart do they speak f. How much better were it for such to keep silence then so to vent themselves, as most men do in their carnall conventicles, and good-fellow-meetings: nay in their trading and trafficking, and ordinary commerce and inter-dealing? Wherein, what shall a man hear from them, the whole day throughout, but words, at the best, waste and idle; but, for the worst part, grossly wicked and evil; vile and venomous speeches, rotten and stinking communication; men bringing up their excrements as it were by a peristaltick motion (as Physicians call it, in the disease they terme ileus coli) throw the dung-port u of their foul mouthes, to the annoying of some, and corrupting of others. For evil words corrupt good manners x. Thus it is with the more rude and outrageous. And for the civiller sort, of those that are not yet sanctified, the plague of the serpent lies fore upon them, always to be feeding upon dust y, talking of trash altogether. They are of the earth, they speak of the earth, and the earth hears them z. Amidst all which, let a man seek to charme their tongues, interrupting and bespeaking them, as once the Prophet, with O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the Lord a. Ye that are earth by creation, earth by corruption, earth by resolution (for dust thou art, and to dust thou shalt returne b) Hear and give ear, be not proud, for the Lord hath spoken it. Give glory to the Lord your God &c. they turn the deaf ear with the perverse adder, to such wholesome enchantments a, and grow as sick of such a one straight, as the Gergesites were of our Saviour c. Good conference they count plain babbling, as the Athenians esteemed Pauls preaching f: they find no more relish therein then in the white of an egge, or a dry chip. Nay, they hold it the onely marre-mirth (as one speaks) able to damp all the jollity, and to cast the whole company into dumps of Melancholy. Which to prevent, they do their utmost to drown the shrieks of their awakened consciences with a louder volley of the language of hell: pouring out themselves in a great deal of froth and filth, refuse, and rotten speeches g, base and bedlam talk, oaths, and blasphemies, scoffes and scurrilities against the power of godlinesse, and professors of Religion. Lo this is all that many men do toward the practise of the point in hand. Instead of strengthening the hands and hearts of Gods people in well-doing, as good Shechaniah did Ezra's; Arise, saith he, for this matter belongeth unto thee, we also will be with thee, be of good courage, and do it g, they do their utmost to hinder and discourage them: as those spies of old, did the people; as Elymas the force-rer did the Deputy, and as those mercenary prophets did the Incomparable Nehemiah. For they all made us afraid, saying, Their hands shall be weakened from the work, that it be not done h. To such, I say no more, but onely admonish them to remember what a bitter curse Nehemiah in the spirit of prophecy wished to such back-friends; Hear, O our God, for we are despised, and cover not their iniquity; neither let their sin be blotted out from before thee i. A fearfull execration, a heavy curse: which who so dreads not, but professing himself an Israelite, dare yet expresse himself in the broad dialect of Ashdod k, it were much to be wished that there were some good Nehemiah found to smite him, and pluck off his hair, till he learn better language. Howsoever, let such know, that their tongues be wray them what countrey men they are l. Certainly he cannot be of the Commonwealth of Israel, that speaks familiarly the language of hell. Stinking breath argues corrupt inwards: so doth unfavoury speech a rotten heart. If the discourse be naught, the religion is vain, saith St. Jame m: and they want the character of a true Christian, according to our text, that speak not of good things, and that speak not often of them, one to another

SP. 12. 1, 2, 3
Sizā d v d g Xen n telero-
va sigis a.
yeu. Pythag.
Inter mille secularium ser-
monum talia,
vix centum denarios poteris
invenire spiri-
tualium verbo-
rum imo nec
decem q idem
obolos. Cassiod.
in cap. 1. Mar.
† Ephes. 4. 29
ἀλογος ὁ ἀ-
πὸ τοῦ στόματος.
† iurefo.
u Nch. 3. 13
x 1 C. 15. 33
They are the Devils drivell.
y Gen. 3. 15
z 1 Joh. 4. 5 & 3. 21.
ἐκ τῆς γῆς ὅτι
terram redoleat.
Hexa terreus
est h. asin terra est. August.
a Jer. 22. 29
b Gen. 3. 9
c Jer. 13. 15, 16
d Plak. 2. 5
e Mar. 8
f Acts. 17. 18
ὁ ἀπὸ τοῦ στόματος Metaph. ab
animalis que garritu perpe-
tuo sunt mo-
lesti.
* Cypranus notavit inter
omnes partes
divinis illius
de quo habetur
parabola, Luk.
16. 24. os &
linguam perpe-
ni acerbissima
tormenta, quia
plus lingua, &
ore peccaverat.
Epist. l. 1. ep. 3
g Ezz. 10. 4
h Nehem. 6. 8
i Neh. 4. 5
k Neh. 13. 23, 25. l Mar. 26. 73
m Jam. 1. 26

SECT.

SECT. III.

Use. 2.

n 1 Thes. 2. 13

* We must

both ἐν ἀγά-

πῶς ἀλλ' ἐν φόβῳ,

ἐν ἀληθείᾳ

ἀγαπᾶν.

Ephes. 4. 15

1 Joh. 3. 18

* Insuljus di-

catur sermo qui vel nocet, vel

minimè pro-

dest. Ep.

Savish Colos.

* ἀλλ' ἐν φόβῳ

ἀγαπᾶν τὸ

ἀλλ' ἐν φόβῳ.

De Alcibiade

Plutarch.

Nunquam de-sunt Domini-

nes qui non quid sed quan-

tum dicant pon-

derare consueverunt. Hiero.

in Apolger ad

Domionem.

* μὴ τινὰ εἶ-

θε Eccles. 10. 14

Sic Ov. d. de

Batio (unde

κατὰ λόγον)

montibus, in-

quit, erant et erant in mon-

tibus illis. Cui

Mercurius par

pare referens.

At mihi persi-

de prodixit? me

mihiprodixit? ait

* ἀποκατεν-

τες.

Socr. ap. Plat.

p 2 Pet. 2. 18

q 1 Tim. 1. 7

1 Iudg. 12. 6

* Jacob must

name himself

Esau with the

voyce of Jacob. Tis hard

if our tongue

do not beweay us what we are, in despite of our habit D. Hall.

* Τὸ ἀκούειν

παντὰ καὶ λυμεῖν. Iſocrat.

f Act. 26. 25

1 Mark 7. 34

1 Pf 37. 30, 31

x Matt. 12. 35

y 1 Cor. 1. 5

U. 2. Complaint against the better sort, too too barren, and backward to holy Conference.

Which if it be so, how may we (for a second Use) justly complain of a double defect, found in some of the more forwardly: who as they meet not so often as they might for mutuall edification, (Satan hindring them *) so when they do, became either unprofitable, or idle in this work of the Lord, to what they might be, were they but as they should. 1. Unprofitable they prove to one another, whiles the precious time of their converse is squandred out and wasted in speculative curiosities, nice and impertinent questions, some ceremoniall unseasonable controversies, not tending to edification, but contention rather, novelties, some more remarkable accidents and affairs abroad, other mens matters and infirmities, which are brought forth upon the stage, either untruely * or at least untimely, and not in an ordinance, as one speaks. These are the canker worms that eat out the heart of godly and profitable conference: these are those frosts that nip better speeches in the bud: these are those leaner kine that devour the fat, and leave no room nor time for mutuall edification, to the scandall of the weak, and scorn of the wicked.

A second sort here justly met with, are such as are idle and uselesse, backward and barren in godly speeches when they light into good company: dumb and dull Christians, that either say nothing there, or as much as nothing *. I know there are a sort of such as are over-talkative, speaking much, but saying little *. A fool also (quoth the Wise-man) is full of words, prodigall and profuse, ingrossing all the talk, as if himself were the onely speaker. Which tedious and troublous custome of his is there elegantly set forth by way of imitation * of his vain tautologies. A man cannot tell what shall be: and what shall be after him who can tell o? Here's a great deal of small talk, you see, to as little purpose as may be. And such babblers are to be found, not a few; bunglers ye may better call them; for so indeed they prove themselves in the issue: dancing in the air, * like light Meteors that want a sufficient Orb wherein to move: speaking great swelling words of vanity p: or (if they stumble upon a better subject, the high points of religion) not knowing what they speak, nor whereof they affirm q, but doing all by rote, as Socrates taught his scholars, and betraying themselves ever and anon, by their lisping Sibboleth r, to be Ephraimites and not Gileadites: counterfeit * or, at best, new converts, rank hypocrites, or else but indiscreet and unexperienced Christians. For as ye may discern a lame man by the unevenness of his legs: so ye may a lame Christian (many times) by his unequall discourse in divine matters. For he usually exceeds, and speaks more then his part comes to, and then he is able well to weild; or else his words agree not together, his sentences are senselesse, and unsuitable: in a word, he talks like a bungler. But this onely by the by, and as in a digression. We were speaking erewhile to the other extreme, and finding fault with those, rather, that speak not when they should, then that speak when they should not. I would not bee thought to inveigh against forwardlinesse in savoury discourse, so it be seasonable * and sober s. No: my quarrell is rather to such as having both opportunity and ability thereunto, are over-shie and shamefast, or otherwise averse and awkward to this godly conference: slipping or slighting those many fair occasions and opportunities of doing and receiving good that way, that God even thrusts into their hands. It is true, that every man is naturally possest with a dumb and deaf devil, till Christ say to his soul, Epphata be opened t. But what, I marvell, should hinder the righteous from opening his mouth with wisdom, when once the Law of God is in his heart u? Should not a good tree bring forth good fruit? and a good man out of the good treasure of his heart bring forth good things x? Should we not, as the Corinthians, abound in all speech, and in all wisdom y? Should we not, with with the beleevving Romans, be filled with all knowledge and goodnesse, able and ready to admonish z. and comfort one another in love? The blessed Virgin could not conceal the comfort she had conceived upon the conception of her Saviour; nor rest, till she had imparted it to her cousin Elizabeth a. The Apostles could not but speak the things they had heard and seen b, they must do it. And Saint Paul was so constrained by the love of Christ c shed abroad in his soul, that he could do no lesse then perswade other men to the like Christian course of life: yea he had almost perswaded Agrippa also to be a Christian d. Holy Bradford reckoned that hour lost wherein he had not done some good to other, by tongue, hand, or pen. And how comes it then (beloved brethren) that such a fore deadnesse, and dump of zeal and heavenly mindednesse doth haunt the hearts even of Gods hidden ones e in these unhappy dayes of security and forme, that ye cannot finde your tongues in Christian company, nor have a word (hardly) to utter there to any good purpose? Is it because ye need not learn, or be confirmed in the present truth, that ye are so still? is there nothing yet lacking to your faith or growth f, that ye are so tongue-tied? God I am sure hath commanded another thing: Thus shall ye say every one to his neighbour, and every one to his brother; what hath the Lord answered, and what hath he spoken g? And again, They shall stand in the wayes, and enquire for the old way h, &c. If a passenger know not his way, yet we say, he hath a tongue in his head; and he may seek direction; and so he will if he be his own worthy. Why then do not we, that are travellers toward heaven, use our tongues when we meet with company, asking of one another the way to Zion with our faces thitherward, going and weeping, and seeking the Lord, and saying, Come and let us joyn our selves unto the Lord in a perpetuall covenant that shall never be forgotten i. Is it fit to say to God with those in Job, Depart from us, for we desire not the knowledge of thy wayes k? or if we do desire, are we too good to ask, with the Eunuch l, to seek with the Church in the Canticles m, to knock at the door of their lips for a spirituall alms, who as liberall house-keepers feed many n? Is it stiffnesse in us, that we will not be beholding; or bashfulnessse, that we would not be thought too forth-putting? or is it not dulnesse rather, and disaffection, that we receive no more good, and iron-boweld selfishnesse that we do no more good? looking upon our own things onely with Cain, as if we were not our brothers keepers o: bearing fruit to our selves onely with Ephraim p, as if the Lord would be content with such empty vines: living and lording it, as if our lips were our own q, and we not bound to serve one another in love r; yea, and though free from all, yet to make our selves servants to all, that we might edifie some s. I doubt not but dumb Christians are as well to be disliked and censur'd as dumb Ministers. The manifestation of the spirit is given to preste withall t: and the Philipians were all partakers, or fellow-partners of St. Pauls grace u; which he else-where calls, the gift bestowed on us for many x. Why should any of us then hide his candle under a bushell? thrust his hand into his bosom? dig his talent into the earth? shall it not be taken from us unlesse we improve it for common benefit? and our selves be laid by as broken vessels, whereof there is no further use? How many have wee known in our little experience, that once flourished like green bay-trees, and yeelded much refreshing, like Jonas his Gourd; who yet ceasing afterwards from Christian exhortation, have been blasted as forward buds with untimely frosts, and withered, as Jonas his Gourd smitten with the worm? How is the door of their lips (as one justly complains) that whilome was wont to open with the law of grace y, now lockt up from good words, or moves as a door on rusty hinges, with murmuring and complaining, and speeches tending rather to the perverting of the hearers, then godly edifying? Oh look upon the fields of these slothfull persons, and when ye see them all grown over with thistles and nettles, for want of manuring, receive Instruction z. And that's a third Use.

z Rom. 15. 14

a Luk 1. 35,

b Acts 4. 20

c Cor. 5. 14

d Act. 26. 28

For.

e Psal. 83. 3

f 1 Thes. 3. 10

g Jer 23. 25

h Jer. 6. 16

i Jer 50. 4, 5

k Job 21. 14

l Acts 8. 34

m Cant. 3. 1

n Prov. 10. 21

o Gen. 4. 9

p Hos. 10. 1

q Psal. 12

r Gal. 5. 13

s 1 Cor. 9. 19

t 11 Cor. 12. 7

u Philip. 1. 7

x 2 Cor. 1. 11

y Prov. 31. 25

z Prov. 24. 30

31, 32

SECT. V.

Use. 3.

a Ephes. 4. 29

b 1 Cor. 12. 31

c Rom. 15. 2

d 1 Tim. 6. 18

e Gal. 6. 2

f Joh. 13. 33,

34.

Post consolationem

quas ei co-

gitatio divina

rum promissio-

num, &amp; invo-

catio adfere-

bant, dicebat

se non habere

aliam levationem nisi in,

nisi collata

optimorum fia-

trum, &amp; ali-

rum bonorum

ac doctissimo-

rum virorum.

De Georgio

Principe An-

baltino Mel-

chior in vita.

g Psal. 123. ult.

Nescitis negli-

gentes corrigen-

dis vestris, ad

curam vestram

quoquo modo

pertinentibus,

monendo, do-

cendo, hortando,

terrendo, Aug.

de verb. dom.

ser. 18.

b Psal. 89. 7

i Esay 62. 4

k Psal. 116. 3

l Psal. 101. 6

m Psal. 119. 63

n Ephes. 4. 16

Ob.

Sol.

*As in Cræsus
his sonne in Heraclor.*Ἀρχὴν μὴ
καταίνε τὸν Κροῖσσον.

o 1 King. 3. 17

p Ecclef. 12. 9,

10, 11.

Use 3. Exhortation to be forward and free to godly Discourse.

INstruction, I say, and that in the Apostles words: Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouths, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace to the hearers a. Covet after spirituall gifts, but chiefly that ye may edifie b. Let no man please himself, but please every one his neighbour for his good to edification c, being ready to distribute, willing to communicate d, and exchange common comforts, sweetest soul-secrets, spirituall consolations, and consultations with whatsoever Christians. Bear ye one anothers burdens, saith St. Paul, and so fulfill the law of Christ. What is that law? hear it from his own mouth. Little children, yet a little while I am with you: ye shall seek me, and as I said unto the Jews, whither I go, ye cannot come, so now I say unto you. A new commandment give I unto you, that ye love one another as I have loved you, &c f. In which speech of his, our Saviour shews, that whereas they might be grieved at the losse of his bodily presence, he had prescribed them a course for the supply of that comfort; to wit, as loving friends and fellow-members, to sort together, side together, live together, love together, and by all means possible to delight themselves in a fruitfull fellowship one with another: than the which I know not whether there be any thing in the whole earth more comfortable and glorious. Sure it is, if there be any heaven upon earth, next unto communion with God, it is in the communion of Saints; which differs onely in degrees from heaven: for there the Lord commands his blessing, saith David, and life for evermore g. Away then with that sinfull retirednesse affected by some, that neglect of profitable and comfortable fellowship with our brethren. Did Christ leave heaven to converse with us, and shall we stie up our selves, and live reclused? Did he, at his return to heaven, lay this last charge upon us, the very night afore his death, to love one another, as he loved us, and do we neglect it? He dwells still (by the presence of his grace) in the assemblies of his Saints h; yea there he hath a delight to dwell. Why should not we account it our happinesse, yea our heaven, that we may have leave to dwell where the God of heaven and author of all happinesse loves to dwell? The Church is called by Christ, Chephsibah i. And the Saints were David's chephsibam k, his darlings; His eyes were upon the faithfull in the land, that they might dwell with him l, and he with them: and although a king, yet he held it no disparagement to be companion to all them that feared God, and kept his statutes m, though never so mean in the worlds eye and esteem. Hence his thirst in the trade of godlinesse; it being a course of incredible profit. For, when the mysticall body of Christ is so fitly joyn'd together and compacted, that every joyn't makes a supply, then there is a blessed increase of the whole body, unto the edifying of it self in love n. As on the other side, it is no better then a sinfull shamefastnesse, or blancht-pride, when Christians are so retired, or reserved; chusing rather to remain needy, then to discover their poverty; and like foolish and beggerly shop-keepers, content themselves with a vain shew, and a few painted papers stuff with straw or tags, rather then they will use any spirituall trading with others, or lose the name and opinion of wealthy men, by taking up such wares as they want.

Oh but I am so barren of matter, and unprovided of fit words, when I come into good company, that I am even ashamed to shew my head amongst them, and exceedingly to seek.

To seek are you? of what? surely of affection rather then of expression; of hearts rather then words. For love makes eloquence *: as you may see in the true mother of the child in controversie: who though a harlot, and of mean rank and breeding, yet how doth she pour forth her self in a flood of rhetoricall expressions in pleading for her child before the king o, though a man of great majesty, and a master of speech p: and all because she loved it, it is the property of love to frame a mans tongue to a ready and easie discourse of the thing beloved: as the scholler

scholler of his books, the huntsman of his hounds, &c. and so the Saints of their God, and the things of his kingdome: as is well to be seen in the Church in the Canticles, whose heart being inflamed with the love of Christ, her tongue was as the pen of a ready Writer: it ranne with great facility and skill while she spake of the things which she had made of the king q. Let the blame therefore rest where it should (hardly) and learn here to fault your disaffection to goodnesse, in case you prove barren and unfruitfull in godly conference.

SECT. VI.

Helps to an holy dexterity this way. How to 1. get it. 2. Use it.

BUT what's to be done when I finde my selfe dull and indisposed to this duty? Quest.

First complain of it to God, and entreat him to open thy lips, that thy mouth may shew forth his praise. Answ. Complain of it also to others, where thou comest. For this, at least, will follow; that thou shalt hereby minister occasion of godly conference, to your mutuall kindling, and quickning. When Silas and Timotheus came, Paul burn'd in spirit r, who before perhaps, was not altogether so forwardly. You see how one stick kindleth another, if laid together: nay take me two flint-stones and smite them together, and although both be naturally cold, yet by mutuall collision, fire will be expressed So 'twill be here between Christian and Christian. Let them be never so dry and dull to this duty, if they but begin once to bewail, betwixt themselves, their present indisposednesse, way will be made to a better temper. For as when wicked men are mute and all amort (as they say) one evil word sets abroad many: so will one good word draw on another among the godly, to the singular advantage of the whole company.

Secondly, make use of all Gods means for the greatning of this gift, the want whereof ye so much bewail; labouring to abound, with the Corinthians, in knowledge, faith, and utterance s: being full of all goodnesse with the Romans, able to admonish one another t, or as these ancient beleivers in the text, to be often speaking one to another by heavenly counsell, confirmation in grace, and spirituall encouragement. For this purpose;

1. Let the word of Christ dwell richly in you, in all wisdom, this will enable you to teach and admonish one another in Psalms and hymns, u &c. For there is edification also in the appointing of fit Psalmes x. The holy Scriptures are therefore called the word, among other reasons, because they should be the matter and boundary of our words. If any speak (saith St. Peter) let him speak as the Oracles of God y. And whatever ye do in word or deed, (saith St. Paul, after he had laid down this rule in speech) do all in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, and according to his word dwelling richly in you z. They are also called chieftains, or leaders a, and Lords of collections b (according to some) because they are as Leaders, and Lords Paramount above all other words and writings of men that ever were collected into volumes. Hence the Prophet sends us to the law and to the testimonies c (those sound words d that have a healing property in them above all filed phrases, and humane expressions) assuring us, that if any speak not according to this word, it because there is no light in them. This David knew, and therefore, By the words of thy lips, saith he (which I have well digested, and by long practise made my proper language) I have kept me from the path of the destroyer, and am fully purposed that my mouth shall not transgresse e, or passe the bounds; to wit, of Gods holy word, which he had set up for a Directory of all his speeches, both for matter, end, and measure. So of the godly woman it is said in the Proverbs, that the law of grace is upon her tongue f, that is, she was so well versed in the holy Scriptures, that she had there-hence gathered and gotten an ability of speaking with profit and power in the things of Gods kingdome.

2. Pray for the gift of utterance, and beg the prayers of others for you. as Paul doth often with greatest earnestnesse of intreaty g: and yet hee was a man passing well-spoken, and able to deliver himself in as good termes as another: but what u Colof. 3.15

x 1 Cor. 14.26
y 1 Pet. 4
z Col. 3.15,17
a Prov. 8.6
בְּיָדֵינוּ
b Ecclef. 12.11 כְּעֵלִי
c Elay 8.20
d 2 Tim. 1.13
וְיִשְׁמְרוּתֵינוּ.
Sana litera
hominum animos imbueret solent hac arte
sapienter loquendi.
Nam in verbo
sal ille reconditur, quo ser-
mones condi-
endi. Unde A-postoli verbo
divino instructi
di unius sal
Terre, &c.
Episcop. Sari. b in Coloss
e Psal. 17.4
f Prov 31.26
g Ephes. 6.19
Colof. 4.3

b Exod. 4.11

i Prov. 15.1

k Job 32.18, 19.

l Pl. 51. 14, 15

m Colof. 4.6

n Job 6.25

o Acts 25.25

p Colof. 4.6

q Prov. 15.23

r 2 Tim. 1.13

s 1 Cor. 12.8

t Joh. 6.68

u Cant. 5.15

* Not like a curst cow, that will not give down her milk; but opening our mouths for mutuall edification.

x Plal. 45.1

* Let your speech bee with grace that ye may know how to answer, &c. Colof. 4.6. so that by speaking well, we learn to speak well.

y Mat. 13.52

* πῶς ἀπο-
δοξῆς αὐτοῦ.

1 Tim. 1.15

z Colof. 4.6

Non quod semper loquendum sit; est enim tempus tacendi: sed quod cum loquimur, semper curandum ut loquamur prout oportet.

Daven.

a Prov. 10.19

Κεῖνότες, d

Luciano q

Aristoph. di-

cuntur stulti,

quod aperto hi-

anteq, ore esse,

plerumque stul-

ticia sit argu-

mentum. Pasor.

in παῖσι.

b Mat. 12.35

what of that? he saw sufficient cause to send to heaven for utterance and boldnesse of speech, and to use all the help he could make for that purpose: For who hath made mans mouth---? have not I the Lord h? There may be such and such preparations in the heart of a man, but, (when all's done) the answer of the tongue is from the Lord i. Let a man be as eloquent as Aaron, as powerfull in the Scriptures as Apolos, as full of matter as Elihu, who was ready to burst for want of vent k, yet unlesse God open his lips, his mouth can never speak to his praise. This David came to see and acknowledge upon second thoughts, Psal. 51. For having promised that his tongue should sing of Gods righteoufnesse, he retracts, as it were, and corrects what he had spoken in the next verse. Not as one that repented of his promise, but as one that had promised more of himself then he was able to performe, and therefore subjoyns, Lord open thou my lips, and then my mouth l, &c. The reason we speak no better to men, is because we speak no oftner to God, to teach us to speak as we ought, knowing how to answer every man m.

3. Lastly, practise much this duty of holy conference: run into the company of Gods people, that speak the language of Canaan naturally and familiarly; and there imitate such as are most expert, and best gifted that way. Accustome your selves also to speak there (as you have occasion, right words n, sober words o, savoury words p, seasonable words q, wholesome words r, the words of grace and of wisdom s, the words of eternall life t; finally all such words as issue from those inward graces, (that good treasure, as our Saviour calls it) of knowledge, faith, love, joy, zeal, desire, sorrow for sin, &c. and advance those main ends, Gods glory, the salvation of others, and our own safety. Not barrelling and hoording up our gifts, as rich cormorants do their corn: nor yet so close and curious of our words, as to say no more in company then what may breed applause and admiration of our worth and wisdom, as proud self-seekers: but as good house-keepers, having that honey and milk of good matter under our lips u, that we may plentifully pour forth to the feeding of many *. Certainly the gifts of such shall not perish in the use as temporall commodities do u, or be the worse for wearing, but the better, and brighter, as the widows oyl, or plow mans coulter. It is use that makes masteries in any skill, and so in this. If your tongue shall ever be as the pen of a ready writer x, inure it much to Christian communication *. It is practise (and not precepts so much) that makes a good scribe: and although a man be at first but a bungler at it, yet by use and exercise he will attain to write both fairly and swiftly too, after a time. So here. I conclude this second direction with that of our Saviour. Wherefore, let every Scribe that is instructed to the kingdome of heaven be like unto a good householder that bringeth forth out of his treasure (as need requires) both new and old y.

Thirdly, labour and learn the well-using, and wise ordering that ability of discourse and utterance you have attain'd unto. A work of no lesse pains then profit; hard, I confesse, but highly concerning all that would give up a comfortable account of the talents they have been entrusted with. And here (that I may haften) precious and worthy of all acceptation * is that counsell of St. Paul. Let your speech be alway with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how to answer every man z. In which text there is not a word but hath its weight, not a syllable, but its substance.

First, Let your speech, saith he, be with grace, and alway so. Not that we must be alway speaking, for in the multitude of words wanteth not sinne: but hee that refraineth his lips is wise a. To lay on more words upon any businesse (though never so good) then the matter requires, argues impotency of mind, excess of affection, or pride in speaking. Be not therefore ever speaking (for an open mouth is a purgatory to the master) but ever when ye do speak, let your speech be with grace. And so it is: 1. When it proceeds from a habit of heavenly-mindednesse, from a principle of grace, a good treasure within b. 2. When for manner, it is delivered with a grace: whiles we do not turn over these discourses lightly and profanely, as news or table-talk, but with such reverence and affection, as may shew, we are inwardly touched with the majesty of Gods truth; and that we speak not by rote, but experience; as having felt the power of that we speak upon our

our own hearts and consciences. My heart is inditing (or frying) a good matter. I speak of the thing I have made touching the king c. 3. And chiefly, when the matter of our discourse is good, and such as ministreth grace, (not vile) to the hearers d. Not but that it may be lawfull for us to confer of morall and civill businessse also, betwixt whiles: but this must be done, 1. More sparingly, as chiefly minding that One thing necessary e, and most expert in our own Countrey dialect. 2. Lesse affectionately; wee may not shew that earnestnesse, life, and comfort here as in speaking of the things above. Not jesting, or foolish talking f, (think the same of other lesse necessary * discourses) but rather giving of thanks. There's a great deal of force lies in that word (rather.) 3. In communing of these common and ordinary things, wee should shew the inward grace and sanctification of our hearts: soaring on high (many times) in a low matter; and still keeping our souls upon the wing. As St. Paul, who writing to Philemon of so mean and abject an object, as a poor vassall and bond-slave, presently mounteth up into the very heavens, and sets a grace, a glosse upon base matters by his holy character of gracious speech. Our civil conversation, also (and communication too) should be in heaven g. Lastly, our speech is with grace, when for the effect, it renders us gracious and acceptable in the ears of God and his people; and makes his remembrance of us sweet and precious when absent, for the good fruit reapt and received by our company and conference, when present.

c Psal. 45. 1
שָׁחַ וּנְדָה וּנְדָה וּנְדָה
satiago.
d Eph. 4. 29
e Luk. 10. 42
f Ephes. 5. 4 * Ταῖς ἀνὴ-
κοντα.
That do not so mainly conduce to
the chief end.
Σωκεῖ τις
παύσαν ὁδὸν ἡττοῦ ἐλευστέ
καὶ τοῖς συνδιατέλουσιν
αὐτοῦ. Xenoph.
lib. 4. de discip.
Et fac Socras
g Philip. 3. 20
πολίτευμα
ἡμῶν.

Sicut rota quæ in terra voluitur, parte imâ & minimâ eam tangit, cætera exstat, & est in alto: Sic nos oportet decurrere per hac humilia, optimâ parte altos, & elevatos. Lips. in Epistol.

Secondly, let your speech be seasoned with salt, saith the Apostle: * he meaneth it not of salt jeasts, close squibs (the fume and froth of wit, as One calls them) scurrilous and bitter frumps, scornfull and spitefull taunts and abuses, impeaching the credit and comfort of our neighbours: This is not that the Apostle here intends; but, 1. The salt of mortification, that dries up, and drives out by degrees, that superfluous and sinfull humour in evil words, that easily corrupts good manners h; and sets such a blur upon the hearts both of speaker and hearers, as nothing can fetch out again but the blood of Christ. 2. The salt of discretion, teaching to observe all due circumstances; as when, where, and before whom we speak. So shall we in profiting others reap the fruit of it in our own hearts: for, as Solomon saith, A man hath joy by the answer of his mouth: and a word spoken in due season how good is it i? Good it is to the speaker, and good also to the hearers, every way profitable, and precious, even as apples of gold in pictures of silver.

Satagunt. Episcop. Sarisb. in locum. i Prov. 15. 23. k Prov. 22. 11. D. Staupicius ad Lutherum Augusta Card. comparentem dixit, memor esto, frater, te ista in nomine Dom. nostri Jesu Christi incepisse. Quod verbum non quasi à Staupicio, sed per eum dictum accepit memorique animo semper tenuit.

Thirdly, the end of this Apostolicall precept followes, and that is, that ye may know; and, how to answer every man. There is a Science, an Art of spirituall speech, of holy Rhetorick, which every Christian is bound to look into: studying well to answer before we speak l, keeping us carefully within our line m, both of our callings, and the measure of the knowledge and grace that God hath given us; being content to learn daily, as well how to speak, as how to live; especially since we are bound to be examples to others, not onely in faith and conversation, but also in words, and communication n: The skill whereof is no where else to be learn'd but in Christs school. For though Reason yeeld us concepts, and Nature a tongue, yet it is God alone that can give us to speak with the tongue of the learned, to minister a word in season: that is, to time a word o, (as Esay phraseth it) and to set it upon the wheels p, (as Solomon) that it may run right upon the proper object; whiles we know, first, and know how, next, to answer every man, whether he be weaker or stronger then our selves. For one kind of answer will not serve to all sorts of men, but discretion is to be used here, as much as in any thing. * Every good man is not capable of every good speech, nor any man at all times alike. Some weaker Christians, as they cannot bear all exercises of religion q, so neither all kinds of discourses of religion. The Hebrews (such was their unskilfulness in the word of righteousness) had need of milk, and not of strong meat r. Him

Downam.
Tenuissimus
ingenij fructus
jocari Cicero.
Linguam habes, non ut alius
salubris tuis
mordeas, sed
ut Deo gratus
agas. Chrysost.
h 1 Cor. 15 Sunt qui non salem in se ha-
bent, sed tabe, puredinem &
pestem, quam
aliis afflare
coram Cajetano
l Prov. 15. 2
m 2 Cor. 10. 13
n 1 Tim. 4. 12
πῶς ἐν λό-
γῳ, a stamp
for speech.
o Elay 50. 4
לִשְׁוֹן הַרְבֵּה
p Prov. 25. 11
* Quod de So-lomone scribi-
tur id ad omnes
pios suo gradu
extendi potest.
Quasvis ver-
ba utilia, &
sermões rectissima conscripsit. Eccles.
12. 12. Episcop.
Sarisb in Col.
q Mat. 9. 15, 16
r Heb. 5. 11, 12
that

f Rom. 14. 1 that is weak in faith, faith Paul, receive you, but not to doubtful disputations f. Holy Job a Job. 13. 5 wisheth that his friends would hold their peace, that it might be imputed to them for h Job. 6. 14. wisdom t: because they spoke many good things, but besides the purpose, and z Zac. 1. 13. his present necessity. For to him that is in misery pity should be shewed from his y Prov. 16. 24 friend u. To such we must give good words and comfortable x pleasant words, such as z Job. 23. 12 may be sweetnesse to the soul, and health to the bones y, and more esteemed then a 1 Thel. 5. necessary food z &c. comfort the feeble minded, support the weak be patient toward 14. 11 all men: addresse your selves wisely to each mans necessities, and state of soul, and so comfort your selves together, and edifie one another (faith the Apostle to his Thessalonians) even as also ye do a.

And as for such as are better then our selves, and beyond us in gifts and abilities. 1. As at feasts and publike meetings, we give the first place to the more honourable, so yeeld to such prioritie of speech as Elihu b, laying our hands upon our mouths (though top-full of matter, as he) till our turns come, which they that do not, but interrupt and disturb their betters by their talkativeness, as they bewray their own indiscretion, so they do no small wrong to the whole company, being herein at least, worse then the foolish Virgins (faith one) who desired not to put out the lights of the wise, but onely to share with them c. 2. Be sure to put the abler sort of Christians upon such discourses as are most proper, and wherein they are most excellent, observing well their singularity of gifts, and specialty of endowments, wherewith God hath graced them, and accordingly framing your questions, and casting forth the occasions. Many a good discourse lies buried in the breasts of abler Christians, and all because the well is deep (as the said) and there wants a bucket d. Some Christians you shall finde more dexterous and sufficient at discussing of controversies, some in resolving of cases, some in expounding scriptures, some in comforting of consciences, some in discerning and discovering the devils depth, and fetches, some in one thing, some in another, whensoever you come into the company of such, know that there is a price put into your hands e, and see that ye neglect it not.

3. Be still getting, and gathering from such: exact of your selves a sensible addition to your talents by treading with these spiritual Merchants; who having found the pearl of price themselves, do daily cast pearls before others, in their gracious speeches f, if we have but grace to pick them up. This were the way to be able to answer every man for their spiritual use and benefit. Up therfore and be doing as ye have any opportunitie. Be still sucking from the wiser sort of godly people, as the bee from the flower, she will not off, ye know, till she have got somewhat out of it) storing up in your lives that which may help in time of spending. Suffer we should the word of exhortation g from those that come short of us: so did Moses from Jethro, David from Abigail, Job from the meanst of his servants, h being ready to learn of any body i, as knowing we have cause to say with Agur, surely I am more brutish then any man, and have not the understanding of a man k &c. But from those that excel us we should covet it, drawing and draining from them that milk, and honey that lies under their tongues l. Counsel in the heart of a man, is like deep water: but a man of understanding will draw it out. And the more he draws, the more he addes to his own skill, and the others store: it being here as with wells and fountains, which are bettered by drawing, as Basil long since observed* and is found true by experience &c.

c Mat. 25. 8

d Job. 4. 11
e Pro. 17. 6
f Math. 7. 6
Qua circumvolans agilis
rhyma?
Hor. apist. g Heb. 13. 22.
ἀνέχεσθαι. h Job. 31. 13
i Act. 18. 26.
k Prov. 30. 2
l Cant. 5. 15
m Prov. 20. 5.
ἀνέχεσθαι.
naí γὰρ τὸ.
φρίσσει, φανὶν
αὐτὸ μέγα.
Βελτίον γινέ-
σθαι.
Basil. epist. 81. ad Enstathium.
Salient aqua-
rum fonti un-
das si tollas, nec
exhaustur, nec
extenuatur, sed
dulcescit. Sci-
entia, docendi
officio, dulcedi-
nem sentiat,
non sentiat mi-
nuatur.

CHAP. V.

Doctr. IIII. The text further expounded : and withal the Doctrine of Gods gracious acceptance of our upright performances propounded.

Then they that feared the Lord, spake often one to another : and the Lord hearkned and heard it &c.

Here begins the second general part of our Text, and that's Gods part. They had done their best endeavour amidst an ungodly nation, for they feared the Lord : and gave very good proof of it, whiles they both thought upon his name for their own support and comfort, and spake good of his name, for the confutation of the bad, and confirmation of the better sort of people. Thus did these good soules busie and bestir themselves, both within doors and without, at home and abroad : among their foes on the one hand, and their friends on the other. But what does God in the mean while ? Verily no man serveth God for nought, as those wicked would needs have it : being (therein at least beyond their father the devil, in lies and blasphemies a. Gods retributions are bountiful witnesses, the words following, the Lord hearkened and heard &c. He heard not onely but hearkened and heard, which is the gesture and behaviour of a very heedful hearer *, one that is much taken with the discourse : according to that of the Prophet, The eyes of them that see shall not be dim; and the ears of them that hear shall hearken b. Tis somewhat to hear, but more to hearken and hear for it imports not attention onely but affection too; whether of grief or delight, as the matter calls for. It was not then a little or light regard the Lord had to his people here, when they thus gat together, and spake together of him and his name : but it appears that he took special notice of it, (for he heard) and singular content in it, (for he hearkened and heard) which is a degree beyond the former, in short, he was much affected and delighted with their godly speeches, and other religious performances : and therefore earnestly listened, and laid his ear close to their gracious lips, as loth to lose any particle of that precious language : what may we hence observe but this?

a Job. 1. 9.

* gestus diligentis auscultantis. Shindler: in פשטא b Esay. 32. 3

That the Lord is very much taken, and marvelously well-pleased with the godly conferences and other holy performances of his faithful people. Doctr.

SECT. I.

The doctrine confirmed by Scripture.

This to assure us of, it is, that the Lord every where almost in holy scripture, 1. So commands and calls for service from us : and that upon tears of greatest encouragement. For, thus saith the Lord, the holy one of Israel, and his maker, Ask me things to come concerning my sons ; and concerning the work of my hands command ye me c 2. So seekes and sues for it, as a man would do for some matter of price and good account. The father seekes after such, saith our Saviour, to worship him, as worship him in spirit and in truth. It was death to sollicite the Persian kings uncalled : for God is so pleased with our accessse, that he sollicitis suitours 3. That he so indents and bargains with us for service in lue of his love, in exchange of his blessings. Call upon me in the time of trouble, and I will hear thee. and thou on the other side shalt glorifie me. This the people of God (knowing his minde) do not restipulate, and ingage themselves unto by covenant on their part: as Jacob in that vow of his, upon the way to Padan-Aram, if God saith he, will

c Esay. 45. 11
d John 4. 23.
faciem & stimulum addat cultoribus Dei, quod se à Deo expetisciant, et esse in delicijs. Cart. e Psal. 50. 15

- be with me and keep me &c. Then shall the Lord be my God, and I will build him f Gen. 28. 20 an house, and pay him tith of all f. So David in his penitential, Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation, then will I teach transgressors thy way. Deliver me from bloodguiltinesse, so shall my tongue sing aloud of thy righteousness g 4. Hence it is, that g Psal. 51. 14. the Lord so chides and blames his people for doing him no more, no better service. Why do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labour for that which profiteth not? hearken diligently unto me h &c. And again, why will ye not come unto me that ye may have life? And hitherto ye have asked nothing in my name: ask and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full k 5. Lastly he signifieth and sealeth up his good account, and dear acceptance of our service, when he can come by it, by the abundant content and complacency he takes therein. He delighteth not in the strength of an horse, he takes not pleasure in the legs of a man:
 the Lord takes pleasure in them that fear him, in them that hope in his mercy l See this in two or three powerful expressions, and love-breathing passages in that song of songs. O my dove that art in the clefts of the rocks, in the secret places of the staires
 (1. thou that art hid and laid up as a jewel of price, in the golden cabinet of my gracious providence, and so set safe out of the gunshot of hels power and policy) i Psal. 147. 10. Shew me thy fight (1. Appear often before me in holy duties) let me hear thy voice (viz) lift up in prayer, godly conference &c.) for thy voice is sweet and thy countenance comely m (so it seemed to him that had made it so by his comeliness put upon her: and also accepting her for such, all wants and weaknesses notwithstanding.) So in another place, Thou hast ravished my heart, my sister, my spouse, thou hast ravished my heart with one of thine eyes, (that single eye of thine lift up in praier, and heavenly contemplation) with one chaine of thy neck n, (thy profession and practise of my lawes and ordinances: which is as an ornament of grace to thy head, and chaines about thy neck o.) Loe here the Lord Christ himself, that was not moved one whit with the proffer of the whole world, and all its glory p, is yet lost in love to a sanctified soule: his heart wounded and wonne by her religious deportments. So verse 11. of that same chapter, Thy lips, O my spouse, saith he, drop as the hony-comb, hony and milk are under thy tongue q. Behold how sweet to Christs palat are the gracious words of his people: sweeter then any hony to his mouth r. Nay he eateth not only of their hony, but of their hony-combe too, and drinckes not of their wine alone, but of their milk also; takes content not only in their more excellent, and more exquisite performances, but in their meaner services too; he not only bottles up their teares, and bookes up their praers s and fruitfull conferences, but harkens even to the sighs of his prisoners t, nay to their breathing u also and their chattering; as of Hozekiah, who was so opprest with grief and extremitie, that he could not speak but chatter x only, when he came to pray; and yet the Lord took such delight in that he did, (weake though it were) as he presently bad Isaiah (before he was yet gone out into the middle of the court) turne again with a quite contrary message: Yea and yeelded him more then he asked; full fifteen yeares y, which we commonly call two mens lives, with advantage. He asked of thee life, saith the Psalmist, and thou gavest it him, even length of dayes for ever and ever z.

SECT. II.

The Doctrine confirmed by reasons from God the father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

Reas. 1.

NOW the reason of this so gracious disposition and dealing of the Lord, with his faithfull people respects either him, or them.

The first Reason from God hath a threefold prospect: for it lookes 1. toward the Father, 2. toward the Son, 3. toward the Holy Ghost.

For the Father first: It must be considered, that originally by his mercy moves him hereunto, without the least concurrence or contribution of any worth

worth or desert at all in the creatures. He takes pleasure in the saints and their sacrifices, only for the good pleasures sake of his own will. Of his own will begat he us by the word of truth, that we should be a kinde of first-fruits of the creatures a. And of the same his own will, doth he take delight in the duty we do him, being thus begotten: that like as naturall parents delight to hear their own little ones prattle, or do some small chare, and think it fine and handsome, when others think it foolish and troublesome. So it is between God and his deare children. Any good thing from them is very good, takes wonderfully with him; and although it were easie for his pure eyes b to finde out many flaws in their best workes (as good Nehemiah well saw, and therefore craved pardon c to oit of his zealous reformatiōs) yet he seeth no sin in Jacob d. Or if he do (as indeed he doth) yet he s pares them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him e. This is God the father.

Secondly, it is for God the Sons sake; and by meanes of his merits and mediation, that our services (simple as they are) finde any grace or favour with the Almighty: whilst our wants go cover'd with Christs intercession: and our suites and services are followed in heaven by his advocat. on f. Look what ever holy duty we performe, the Lord Jesus (the mediator of the new Covenant,) not only presents it to his father, but refines it first and perfumes it with his odours g. And hence it is that God smells a sweet savour of rest and peace from our sacrifices, which else would stinck worse in his nostrils, then the onions and gailick of the Egyptian flesh-pots. Hence that of the Apostle, By him let us offer the sacrifice of praise (and so any other spirituall service, that shall finde acceptance) to God continually h. And, by him we have access, by one spirit, unto the father i. This was shadowed out (of old) by the door of the tabernacle: which as it never was or any hard or debarring matter, but of a veile easily penetrable; so at the passion of our saviour, it did (of its own accord) rend in sunder; to shew our easie access unto, and high acceptance with God in any holy duty, through Christ the peace-maker k. This also was not obscurely typified by the high Priests plate, wherein was fairly engraven, Holiness to the Lord: which was to be upon his forehead, the forefront of his miter, that he might beare the iniquitie of the offerings, which the children of Israel should offer in all their holy offerings, and it should be alway in his forehead to make them acceptable before the Lord l.

But thirdly, as it is by the mercy of the father and the merit of the son, so is it also by the hand of the holy ghost upon them, that God is so greatly plated with the suites and services of his people, the Apostle instant in one religious duty: we may safely extend it to all the rest. Likewise, saith he, the spirit helpeth our infirmities m, he sets his shoulder to the work together with us, as the word there imports. For we (filly soules) know not what we should pray for as we ought, we neither know what for the matter, nor as we ought for the manner. But the spirit it self (against all the roarings and repinings of the flesh) maketh loud and shrill intercessions for us in this case with groanings which cannot be uttered n: and that thus.

1. He lets us see our want of God, which nature studiously covereth.
2. He lets before us the excellency and worth of finding favour with God; the thought whereof never entereth the naturall mans heart n.
3. He stirreth up and kindleth in us strong affections in prayer, dictating words and expressions answerable to those affections.

In short, he workes all our workes in us o, as the prophet saith: for we cannot so much as suspirare, unless he do first inspirare, breath out a sigh for sin, except the spirit do first breath it into us. Much lesse can we make an effectuall and comfortable prayer, or do any thing else, that's truly good without him. Sith prayer (think the same still of any other holy duty) is the breath of the spirit, the pulse of the spirit: without whom, what is prayer else but an empty ring, a tinkling cymball? Pray (saith St. Iude) in the holy ghost. And then he that searcheth the heart, will easily know the minde of the spirit, that he intercedeth for us according to God q, or worthy of God, and to his greatest liking. Such another phrase the Apostle hath of Godly sorrow. 2 Cor. 7.

a Jam. 1. 18.

b Habac. 1. 13.

c Nhe. 13. 2.

d Num. 23. 21.

e Mal. 3. 17.

f 1 Joh. 2. 1.

g Rev. 5. 8.

h Heb. 13. 15.

i Eph. 2. 18.

k Eph. 2. 14.

l Exo. 28. 36, 38.

m Rom 8. 26. συναπταμεναι.

* Excitat vehementem desiderium liberationis, accendit quoque alios affectus animi, ut gaudium et amorem, adeo ut ardeant supra modum et naturam communem longe exsuperent. Rolloc. n 1 Cor. 2. 9. o Els. 26. 12. Quoties video te suspirare, non dubito spiritum aspirantem. ypran. p Iude 20. see 1 Cor 14. 15. Eph 5. 18. q Rom. 8. 27. κατα δόξαν.

*

Q q q 3

Where

r 2 Cor. 7. 10. where he calleth it, A sorrow according to God γ, that is a spiritual god-like sorrow, and such as issueth from the spirit of God. For the wind must blow ere the waters flow δ saith the Prophet. And it is the fire of the spirit (saith a Divine) in our hearts (as in a still) that sendeth up those dewes of repenting tears into our heads, that drop forth of our eyes. Think the like of christian watchfulness: Even Peter, James, and John, (those pillars ε, ) will be ready to sleep and buckle; yea and that in the houre of temptation η too, if the spirit do not quicken them, and as it were hold up with forks their heavy eye-lids. And for reading of the Scriptures, look how the Philistines could never understand Sampsons riddle, till they plow'd with Sampsons heifer κ, so neither can we conceive or relish the deep things of God without the ayde and assistance of the spirit of God γ. As on the other side: With this holy spirit, and by it, we are sanctified unto obedience, and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus ζ, purified in obeying the truth unto unfained love of the brethren α, quickened unto all goodnesse, righteousness and truth β, caused to keep Gods commandments ε, himself setting us to work η, working all our works for us δ, sanctifying all the works of our hands, yea sanctifying the offering up both of our selves and our services to God, as the Altar sanctifies the gift ε, and opening us a welcome accessse to to God in all our performances ς, who as he knowes the meaning and minde of his spirit γ, so he cannot but accept that sacrifice that is kuddled by the fire of his own spirit, upon the true Altar Christ, his own son. This is the first Reason taken from the three persons in the Godhead.

SECT. III.

The Doctrine further confirmed by reasons from the Saints.

Colof. 3. 12

THe next respecteth the saints themselves, whose persons, si ft, are elect, holy, and beloved: whose performances in the second place have a true and real goodnesse in them, and are therefore dearly accepted, and highly accounted of in the sight of God.

Ref. 2.

h Deut.7.7

¶ Eph. 1.4

Exh. 2.10

¶ Ezek. 16.6

m Eph. 3 26

* Num. 17-8

02 Sam 24.18

1 Cor. 4.7

q 2 Sa. 24. 23

† Zach. 9.7

1 I Chro. 7.17

† 2 Sam. 17. 25

¶ 2 Pet. 1.4

For the first, It cannot be denied but that by nature all are alike hateful to the Almighty; Neither is it for any goodnesse he discerns in one more then another, that he puts any difference. He loves his people merely because he loves them b, the ground of his love being only in himself. He adopts them according to the good-pleasure of his will i, without the least defect in himself, or defect in the creature. It is otherwise with us then it was with those maids in Abraham's time: they were first perfumed and purified afore he chose one for himself k. God found us in our blood when he said unto us live l: and Christ gave himself for his people that he might sanctifie and present them to himself a glorious church m. What was Aarons rod better then the rest, that it alone should bud, and the rest lye dry by it n? every name was alike written in their rod: there is no difference in the letters, nor in the wood: It is Gods choise that made the distinction. So, what was the floore of a Jebusite to the Lord above all other soles to build an Altar on after the raging plague in Dauids time o? As in places, so in persons God maketh men to differ p, and that is ever worthiest that he pleaseth to accept. Araunah a Jebusite by nature, but made a Profelyte by grace, giveth his freehold as a King to the King q. This deed of his, or rather this work of Gods free grace, is long after remembered by the prophet (as some not improbably interpret him.) Eckron shall be as the Jebusite r, That is, say they, the barbarous people of Palestina shall be as the famous Araunah: by kindred indeed a Jebusite, but by Gods gracious acceptation and adoption an Israelite. Like as (elsewhere) Jether that was by his country an Ismaelite s, is for his faith and religion called an Israelite t. So then to summe up this reason; albeit by nature there's never a better of us; but all are in the same hateful and wofull condition: all cut out of the same cloth, as it were (the sheers only going between:) Yet when grace once comes and sets a difference, when that divine nature u (as St. Peter calleth it) it) is transfused into a man, and he begins to be like unto God in some truth of resemblance, the Lord cannot chuse but love and delight in his own image, where ever he meets with it. Now the persons of such being once in acceptation through Christ ( Gods beloved one x ) their sacrifices cannot but be well accepted also. Thus the Lord had respect to Abel and his offering, to Noah and his burnt-sacrifice, to Abraham and his intercession for Sodom, to Iobs request for his friends, to Dauids for his people, to Pauls for those in the ship. Will you know a reason? Abel was a righteous person y, Noah his favourite z, Abraham his friend, Iob his servant a. David his corculum b or darling, Paul his elect vessell c, Hence their high acceptance in the court of heaven: and hence that singular delight and complacency that God took in their services. For, though the sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the Lord, yet the prayer of the upright is his delight d. The blood of a swine is as well coloured and as fair, to see to, as the blood of a sheep: but the former was an abomination to the Almighty, and present death to the party that brought it: when the later might with good leave and liking be powred about his Altar, and the sacrificer depart ( with the publican ) justified and accepted.

And that's the second thing we were speaking to; respecting the services of Gods people: in all which there is something of Gods, and something of their own. This later God graciously overlooks, taking notice only of his own part in that we do, and hence our acceptance. If this be not plain enough, take it thus: The Lord leadeth his people by his spirit into good works by governing the habits of grace infused, and producing therehence acts of grace: which though mixed with corruption as from us ( for who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean e saith Iob ? ) Yet are they good before God, who winks at the imperfections; and have a true goodnesse in them, being therefore denominated and called from the better part, good works f, good fruites g, fruits of the Spirit h, who exerciseth our faith, hope, love, zeal, fear of God, humility, and other graces in producing them. Whence it is, that passing by infirmities in the manner, God looks upon all our religious performances as fruits of the vine i, whereupon he is pleased to feed heartily: the Church her self (as knowing like another Rebecca such savoury meat as he best loved ) inviting him thereunto; Let my beloved come into his garden and eat his pleasant fruits k: which accordingly he did, as followeth in the next chapter l.

SECT. III.

Use 1. Its otherwise with the wicked. Their persons are hated, their performances rejected, and why.

FOr Use of this point : God gives diligent heed to, and takes great pleasure in the religious performances of his faithfull people: this, as it must needs be marvellous comfortable to the saints, so it cannot but be exceeding terrible to the wicked and unregenerate ; with whom ( alafs ) it is farr otherwise, if they mark it : For they are all Curfed with a curse, even with Gains curse, the Lord had no respect to his sacrifice m, with Sauls curse, whom the Lord would not answer neither by dreames, nor by Urim, nor by prophets n : with Moabs curse, he shall come to his Sanctuary to pray, faith the Prophet, but shall not prevail o : with the curse of Dauids enemies, who cryed out, but there was none to save them. Tea, to the Lord but he answered them not p. Or if he do hear them ( as he did sometime that Non-such Ahab q : nay the devill himself r ) yet it is for no other end, then that he may come upon them the more justly, and consume them after he hath done them good s : their preservation is no better then a reservation to some further mischief.

But usually the Lord frownes upon such, and turnes the deaf ear unto them : and worthily, for these three causes among many. First they cannot present him with any service truly good and acceptable so long as they are out of Christ : All their

x Eph. I 6
ὁ ἡγαπημέ-
νῳ.

y Heb. 11.4
z Gen. 6.8
a Job. 1.8
b 1 Sam. 13.14
c Act. 9.15
d Prov. 15.8
Psal 4.3.

e Iob 14.4
Denominatio
fit à portioni.
f 2 Tim. 2.21
g Mat. 12.33
h Gal. 5.22
i Esay 5.4
k Cant. 4. ult.
l Cant. 5.1

Use, I.

m Gen.4.5
n 1 Sam.28.6
o Isa.16.12.

p Psal. 18. 41.
q 1 Kin. 21. 29
r Matt. 8. 32
s Iosh. 24. 20

† Heb. 11.6 3

u Prov. 21. 4.
 x Prov. 15. 8
 y Zach. 22. 10

z Psal. 4. 5.
 a Num. 23. 10
 b Psal. 28. 9
 c Matt. 12. 34
 d Mat. 7. 22. 23
 e Mat. 12. 35.
 f Hof. 10. 1
 g Cant. 5. 1
 Spira cried earnestly for grace, for a drop, because he could not bee saved without it. He said he saw no excellency in it, he desired it not for it self, and therefore thought his prayers
 should not be heard
 b Job 27. 10

i Psal. 26. 6

k Hof. 7. 14
 l EJay 51. 20

m 1 Sam. 13. 8

* Si tu me no-
 lis, ille rogat.
 n 2 King. 6. 33

o 1 Sam. 28. 7
 p 2 King. 1. 2
 q Judg. 10. 6
 r Ezck. 14. 3

their actions naturall, civill, recreative, religious, are abomination. Not the plowing u onely, but the prayer of the wicked is sinne x, saith Solomon. Pray they cannot indeed, (to speak properly) because they want the spirit of prayer: that spirit of grace and of deprecation y. Say they may, (with those many in the Psalm) Who will shew us any good? but pray they cannot, as there, Lord lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon us z. With they may with Balaam, the Soothsayer, O let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end bee like unto his a. But 'tis a David onely that can pray in like case; Lord take not away my soul with sinners, nor my life with bloody men b. The same we may say concerning Christian conference, or any other holy duty whatsoever. How can ye which are evil speak good things, saith our Saviour to the Pharisees c? Speak they may, (no doubt) and speak they do many times, more then their part comes to, or then they have any thank for. Yea good things they may speak, materially good I mean, and to the great good of the hearers, as those that prophesied in Christs Name, and yet were shut out of heaven d. But for no good to themselves at all, because they fail still in the good they do, either quoad fontem, or quoad finem. Either they bring not forth those good things out of the good treasure of their hearts e, they want a good principle of grace within, or else they have not right aims and intentions in the good they do. They bring forth fruit to themselves with Ephraim f, when the Church (o' tother side) keeps her fruit for her beloved g. I hey seek more the applause of men, then Gods approof in their religious discour- ses; and the relief of their necessities, more then the setting forth of Gods glory in their prayers and other services. which they performe to God more out of car- nall self love then any true delight in the duty. Will he delight himself (saith Job of the hypocrite) in the Almighty? will he alwayes call upon God h?

And that's a second reason why God rejects their services: which as they are not right and reall, so neither are they constant and continuall. In an extremity, haply, or when they have not whither else to turne themselves, then God shall hear of them, then they runne with Job to the horns of Gods Altar, which in prosperity they seldom or never compassed i. Then they catch at Gods good- nesse, as a drowning man at a little twig, which while safe upon the shore, he never lookt after: then they cry and roar for mercy, which till then they despised, as a prisoner at the barre, or as a pig that's to be stickt. But all to no purpose; the justice of God so ordering of it, and not without their own desert procuring it. For to seek God in extremity onely, is no proof of a mans piety, no triall of his true affection: but favours strongly of self love and hypocrisie. Let a dog be tied up short, and when he is hungerbit he will howl, and be heard all the house over. And verily such service, done at such times, and by such persons, God no more regards then a man would do the howling of a dog. They howl upon their beds for corn and wine, saith Hosea k, they roar as bulls that are baited l, saith EJay; and God must come quickly to their help, or else he comes too late; for they will try another course.

And that's the third defect God findes in the pretended services of un sanctified persons; they are impatient of delays with Saul m, they cannot stay, they cannot wait, they will not be deferr'd. If God come not the sooner, they betake themselves to their own shifts, and seek to help themselves another way: like the Chinois that whip their Gods when they answer them not; or that resolute Ruffus, that painted God upon the one side of his shield, and the devil on the other, with this inscription: If thou wilt not have me, here's one will be glad of me *: or that desperate King of Israel: Behold, saith he, this evil is from the Lord, and what should I wait for the Lord any longer n? Lo this is the guise and disposition of a godlesse person; He seemeth to serve God sometimes, but indeed it is to serve himself upon God: who, if he will not be at his beck, and come at his whistle, away to the Witch of Endor with Saul o, to the god of Ekron with Abaziah p, to Baalim and Astaroth, with the revolted Israelites q. And therefore the Lord either answers them not at all, makes no reckoning of their devoti- ons, or shapes them an answer according to the Idols of their hearts r; as hee did those ancient Idolaters. Ye have forsaken me, saith the Lord, and yet up other Gods: wherefore (take it for an answer) I will deliver you no more. Go and cry

unto

unto the gods which ye have chosen, let them deliver you in the time of your tribulation f. As for me, I will go and return to my place t, and we be unto you when I depart from you u. Oh when it is come to that once, that Gods soul shall take no pleasure in a man, that x Gods soul shall depart or be disoymed from him y, that not his senses onely shall be offended z, but his very soul shall hate his new moones, and appointed feasts, when he shall go to seek the Lord with his sacrifices, and shall not finde him a; I know not whether there can befall a man a more hard and horrid condition upon earth. Oh therefore the madnesse and misery both of these wicked and wretched men and women, that are out of Christ! would God their eyes were once opened, that they might see their rueful plight and estate, and at length discern that direful dilemma that sin and the Devil hath driven them to. Do good duties they must, or be damned for their neglect: and yet they are damned also for doing them, because they do them no better; that I say not double-damned, and that for this very offence, if they had done no more: sixth displeasing service is a double dishonour to God, because we displease him in that, wherein he specially looketh to be pleased. How then may we run by this first use with terrors into the eyes and ears of unregenerate persons? but all to no purpose, (no though we could cast handfuls of hell-fire into their faces) except God please to break up their hearts, and pierce their inwards. Rebecca may cook the venison, but 'tis Isaac must give the blessing, we may cry out upon them with all our might, and forewarn them to flee from the wrath to come b, but unlesse God speak withall to their consciences, and (thrusting his holy hand into their bosomes) pluck off the forskin of their hard and brawny hearts, nothing will work or take impression, till out of the bottom of hell they roar and bewail their own madnesse with desperate and bootlesse teares.

f Judg. 10. 13.
t 14.
u Hof. 5. 15
x Hof. 9. 12
y Heb. 10. 38
z Jer. 6. 8
a Isai. 1. 11, 12. 14
b Hof. 5. 6

b Math. 3. 7

SECT. V.

Use 2. admonition. Let the wicked break off their sins, that they lose not their services.

VHigh to prevent, come we now to a second use of Exhortation. And this we addresse unto two sorts of men. 1. To all unregenerate and wicked people. 2. To those truly religious, that are thus highly accepted and favoured (with Daniel c) in the court of heaven.

Vse. 2.

c Dan. 9. 23.

To the wicked, first, God saith what hast thou to do to declare my statutes, or that thou shouldest take my covenant in thy mouth? so long as thou hatest instruction, and castest my words behinde thee d? even the sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination, saith Solomon, how much more when he bringeth it with an evil heart e. As who should say; though such a man have never so good a meaning to serve God in his sacrifice, yet he doth worse then lose his labour, when he doth his best, for he committeth that which is abomination before the Lord: and so in seeking to shun hell, he doth but take pains to go to hell. And to the same purpose another Prophet, He that killeth an ox, saith he, (unlesse withall he kill his corruptions) is as well-pleasing to God as if he slew a man. He that sacrificeth a lamb (unlesse he sacrifice his lusts too) is as if he cut off a dogs neck, he that offereth an oblation (unlesse he present also his body a living oblation, holy, acceptable to God f) is as if he offered swines blood: he that burneth incense (if it stink of the hand that burneth it) is as if he blessed an idol g. Even your incense is abomination g saith the Lord to those sacrificing Sodomites h. Lo there, that precious perfume made up with so many sweet spices, and fragrant odours, stinck odiously in Gods nostrils, he could not abide the scent of it. Nay, not his smelling faculty onely is offended by the sinful mans services, but the rest of his senses also: For his taste, their burnt-offerings of rams, and fat of lambs, he could not relish i, they delighted him not, but were sowre to his palate. For his feeling, their new moons and appointed feasts, were a burden to him, he was weary to bear them. And for his sight, he tells them, though they spread forth their hands, he will hide his eyes. And for his hearing, when they

d Psal. 50. 16.
e Prov. 21. 27.

f Rom. 12. 1
g Isai. 66. 3.
h Isai. 1. 13.
i Isai. 5. 10.

* B N Auzym
e B N w p d o
i ver. 11.

make

15. make many prayers he will not hear. And for their whole service, he demands
 16. who required this at your hands to tread in my courts? As if he should say, it were 12. fitter, a fair deal for you to be in your shops, or in the alehouse, or any where else then here, unlesse ye were better. This is the gate of the Lord, the righteous shall enter into it k. As for others, thus saith the Lord, will ye steal, and commit adultery, and swear, and then come and stand (goodly) before me in this house? Do ye think to expiate your sins by your prayers, and set off with God by your good deeds for your bad? No, that's not the way to get in with God, and to be enfeofed, into his favour. But what is? may some say. Wash you, make you clean, put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes, ease to do evil, learn to do well &c. Come now and let us reason together as friends, when this is once well done to purpose, saith the Lord. For then, though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow m &c.
 as till then, it boots not to bow your selves before the most high with thousands of rams, or ten thousand rivers of oyl: no not to offer your first borne for your transgression, the fruit of your bodies for the sins of your souls n. Away therefore will the love and liking of every lust, cast away all your transgressions, throw all your sins out of service, your beloved sin especially; be it as an hand for profit, off with it, be it as an eye for pleasure, out with it: be it what it will, and never so neer or natural to us, if a sin, say of it as Haman did of Mordecai, what availeth me any thing, if he yet live? All that are Christs (and none but such may appear before God in holy duties) have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts o. David would not presume to compasse Gods altar, till he had washed his hands in innocency p, nor could he conclude that God would shew him mercy or receive his prayer, till he had brought his heart to an utter disregard of whatsoever iniquity q. The lepers lips were to be covered according to the law, and our Saviour would not admit of a fair word from a foul mouth r. The lip of excellency saith Solomon, becometh not a fool s: and the best dish (though never so well cookt) is extreemly loathed, if presented by a leper, or brought to table by a nasty slob: so is any holy duty (whether of piety or charity) displeasing to the Almighty, if performed by one that is yet in his pure naturals, a stranger to the power of grace, and unacquainted with the daily practise of mortification. Hence that of Saint James, Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you t.
- Oh but we dare not come near the Lord, neither can we serve him, for he is an holy God, he is a jealous God, he will not forgive our transgressions, nor our finnes u.
- No, be sure of that; except ye confesse and forsake them x. Therefore wash your hands, ye sinners, saith the Apostle there, (neither so onely for Pilate washed his hands, as if all the guilt had stuck in his fingers ends) but cleanse your hearts ye double minded.
- Yea, but how must that be done? for, though thou wash thee with nitre, and take thee much sope, yet thy iniquity is marked before me, saith the Lord God y. Afflict your selves, saith the Apostle: or, as the word there signifies, be miserable: you are so, but see your selves such, and be sensible, even unto godly sorrow, and the tears of true repentance: weep, saith he, or if ye cannot do that (as some constitutions are naturally dry, and do not yeeld tears, and some sorrow is bigger then tears, and above them) yet mourn at least: and that ye may not mourn a little, for so great sins as ye are guilty of, let your laughter be turned into mourning, and your joy into heavineffe. Use al good means to work your hearts to a thorough humiliation: turning al the streams of your affections into this one channel, that serves to drive the mil for the grinding of the heart. Thus humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up, yea, thou shalt lift up thy face unto God, and have delight in the Almighty. Then shalt make thy prayer unto him, and he shall hear thee and thou shalt pay thy vows z. He shal remember all thine offerings, and accept thy burnt sacrifice. He shal grant thee according to thine own heart, and fulfil all thy counsel. a In the time of the Levitical service, there were two severall altars; one without the tabernacle, to slay the beasts on: and another within, to offer incense upon. To teach us, that if we would be the temples, and tabernacles of the living God, and have him pleased with our sacrifices of righteounesse, with our offerings and whole burnt-offerings b, we must slay our bullocks, on the outer altar, mortifie our beastly sins, I mean, that raig

k Psal. 118. 20
 l Jer. 7. 10. 11

m Isai. 16. 17, 18. n Micah. 6. 7.

o Gal. 5. 24.
 p Psal. 26. 6
 q Psal. 66. 16.
 Oς κς θεοίς
 σπ εσεί-
 δηται μαλα
 τ' χυον ελυσ. Achilles Homericus.
 r Mar. 1. 25.
 s Prov. 17. 7.

t Iam. 4. 8. 9, 10. expounded
 ob.
 u Josh. 24. 19
 Sol.
 z Prov. 28. 13

Ob.
 y Jer. 2. 22.
 Sol.
 παλαιω-
 σήσατε miseri εστοι. Par.
 παρα τῷ
 παλαειν τὸν
 πόρον. Pas.
 Outaleves: &c.

z Job. 22. 26, 27.

a Psal. 20. 3, 4,

b Psal. 51. vlt.

raigne in the outward man; the deeds of the body, by the spirit c, before we kinde our incense of devotion in the inward man. So shall God smell a sweet savour of rest from us, and we (interchangably) of life and peace from him. But thus much be spoken to them.

SECT. VI.

Use 3. Exhortation to the best, to be humbled for their 1. not prizing their priviledge. 2. not praising God for it. 3. not improving it to the utmost.

NExt, to all such as are already in favour with God, and can tell as much by his good acceptance of their services; mine exhortation from this point is double.

First, to reflect, with Pharaohs butler, and calling to minde their sins this day be humbled for a threefold evill.

First, for not prizing this priviledge to the worth, of having Gods eye alwayes upon us, his care open unto us, his presence with us, his providence over us, the good-will of him that dwelt in the bush round about us d, his goodnesse and mercy to follow us all the dayes of our lives, we dwelling in the house of the Lord for ever e.

d Deut. 33. 16
e Psal. 23. ult.

Secondly, for not praising God as we ought, for this inestimable benefit. So David held it and celebrated it often. Blessed be God, saith he, which hath heard the voice of my supplication f. Blessed be God which hath not turned away my prayer nor his mercy from me g. Who am I? and what is my people that we should offer so willingly after this sort? Now therefore O our God, we thank thee and praise thy glorious Name. h. &c. O look upon this thankfull man, and chide your selves soundly for your unthankfulness; or at least, for your few and feeble pray- ses, for so many services well taken at your hands. Hath God enlarged himself to us, and are we thus straitened in our own bowels i? Hath God harkened to Hezekiah's chattering, and shall he not render according to what he had received k, especially having vowed better things, so deeply as he did l? 'Tis possible then ye see, that the best should forget themselves in this kinde: and twenty to one, but we have also. Oh see it by your selves, and be humbled for this shamefull unthankfulness.

f Psal. 28. 6
g Psal. 66. ult.
h 1 Chro. 29. 13, 14.

i 2 Chr. 6. 12
k 2 Chr. 32. 25
l El. 38. 19, 20

Thirdly, for not improving this indulgence, by making our best of it: falling into that sin by supine negligence, that Ahaz did of stubborn wilfulness. Ask thee a signe, saith the Prophet, of the Lord thy God, Ask it either in the depth or height above m. Here was a fair offer to a gracelesse caitiff, that where sinabounded grace might superabound: But Ahaz said, I will not ask, neither will I try the Lord: as if he should have said: It's ask no askes, I know a trick worth two of that: let God keep his signes to himself: I crave no such eurtsey at his hands &c. This is that Ahaz, a stiff Stigmatick, an unworthy churl, a prophane bedlam. Now as in water face answereth to face, so doth the heart of a man to a man n. 'Tis certain, ther's none of us but have within, that which may send forth as great a wickednesse as his: and 'tis well if the best of us have not coasted upon his unkind usage of his God, by rejecting his sweet offers, or at least by not making often triall of his gracious acceptance after manifold experience; Oh how should we abound in Gods work o, yea abound more and more p, as the Apostle would have it: sith he harkens and heareth, and ever looketh upon our labour of love with an eye of delight: so that if we would but do him eye-service, it were sufficient. How should we be dayly and hourly serving such a Master that giveth such large encouragement, by his both assistance and acceptance! how should we be continually sowing more good performances into his bosome, the fruit whereof we should be sure to reap in our greatest need? for as sin lies at our door to do us hurt q: so doth every christian service lye at Gods door to do us good. It is certain

m El. 7. 11. 12
Expounded.

n Prov. 27. 19
As there were many Marij. in one Cassus so there are many Cains and Ahaz's in the best of us all.
o 2 Cor. 9. 8
p 1 Cor. 15. ult.
q 1 Theff. 4. 1
r Gen. 4. 7

1 Josu. 15. 17

2 Sam. 13. 4
1 Neh. 2. 2

certain, that he is so farr taken with them, that of his kingly munificence he bids us ask what we will, and it shall be given us r. And surely he is deservedly miserable, that will not make himself happy by asking a better condition. Oh that ever any beloved Esther, any faithfull soul, I mean, should sit feasting and banquetting with God, her Ahasuerosh, in the ordinances of life, feeding on the fat, and drinking of the sweet; and not bethinke her selfe then, what suites she hath to commence, what boones to beg, what Hamans to hang up, what Mordecaies to preffer; what grace, I mean, to get, what corruption to quell, what friend to speak for, what child to prefer &c. How should she be sure of her request, even to the whole of Gods kingdome? why art thou thus lean from day to day, said Jonadab to Amnon, Art not thou the kings son /? and so maist have any thing for asking? why is thy countenance sad, sith thou art not sick t, said the king to Nehemiah? How sensible (saith a great Divine thereupon) do we think the father of mercies is of all our pensive thoughts, when a heathen master is so tender of a servants grief? How ready should our tongues be to lay open our cales and cares to the God of all comfort, when we see Nehemiah again so quick in the expression of his grief to an uncertain eare? That we have come off so heavily with our good God, and done so little heretofore in his work, upon so great encouragement, let it heartily humble us.

SECT. VII.

Use 4. Exhortation to the Saints 1. To admire this mercy:
Helpes thereunto respecting God, and themselves.

And for the future (that I may speak forward) here is a threefold duty to be commended from the point in hand to your christian care and practise.

Use. 4.

a Isa. 62. 5

b Heb. 11. 13.

c Rom. 8. 16.

vol.

y Zeph. 3. 17

First, doth the Lord of heaven and earth so abase himself as to take the least notice of our poor performances; Yea as the bridegroom is glad of the bride, doth our God so rejoyce over us u? doth he delight to see our faces, to hear our voyces, to smell our odours, to taste our fruits, to be handled and embraced x by our faith? Is he so farr taken by the poor things that passe from us, that he rests in his love, and will seek no further? Yea that he joyes over us with singing y? Oh how should the due apprehension of this dear love of his ravish and affect our hearts with deepest admiration? and how should we even stand amazed at the never-enough-adored depth of his love unto us in this behalf?

z Psa. 77. 17

a Job 33. 12

b Psa. 95. 3

c Psa. 145. 3

d Psa. 106. 1

e Psa. 108. 9

f Phil. 1. 23

g Mar. 19. 17

h Psa. 135. 2

i Esa. 40. 15, 16

To help you herein, the wonder will appear the greater, if we first look up to God, and there see 1. what he is. 2. how little either need he hath of us, or gain he makes of our services: and then, secondly, look down again to our selves, and consider 1. who we are, 2. what are our best works in themselves. For God, first, he is the high and mighty Monarch of heaven and earth, of transcendent perfection and excellency, even above all degrees of comparison: for he is great z, greater a, greatest of all b, greatnesse it self c. Again, he is good d, better e, best f, goodnesse it self g. So that if men should attempt to serve God, and do sacrifice to him according to his excellent greatnesse h and goodnesse, all the wood of Lebanon would not serve to burn, nor all the beasts that be in it suffice for sacrifice i: Yea little enough would all the wood in the world be, and all the cattle therein to make up but some one sacrifice.

Next, see how little this mighty and All-sufficient God, either needs us, or gets by us.

For the first, hear what he saith Psal. 50. from the seventh to the sixteenth. Hear O my people, and I will speak, O Israel, and I will testify against thee: I am God, even thy God. I will not reprove thee for thy sacrifices, or thy burnt offerings &c. For every beast of the forrest is mine, and the cattel upon a thousand hills &c. Call upon me in the day of trouble: I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorifie me.

me k. Lo this is all he looks for at our hands. Not but that he could well enough be without that too, sith his glory (being eternall and infinite as himself) is no way capable of any our addition or detraction. For, as the Sunne would shine, though all the world were blinde: So should God be glorified, though we were all condemned; Yea he could glorifie his justice by our eternall damnation: There's all the need he hath of us. And for matter of profit, If thou be wise, thou art wise for thy self l, saith Solomon, what shall the Lord gain by it? And if thou be righteous, what givest thou to him, saith Elihu, and what receiveth he at thy hands m? And yet we see how highly he esteems, and how greatly he respects that little Nothing of our endeavours of doing him the least service, and bringing honour to his Name.

k Psal. 50. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11,
12, &c.

l Prov. 9. 12
m Job 37. 5

Secondly, take notice what we are? and what the best of our works? To the first, Abraham answereth, I am but dust and ashes n, then when he stood before the Lord to mediate for Sodom. Jacob answereth, I am lesse then the least of thy loving-kindnesses o, then when he wrestled with excellent wrestlings, and prevailed with God p. David answers, I am a worm and no man q. Esay answers, I am a man of polluted lips r. Peter answers, Depart from me, for I am a sinfull man, or a man a sinner s; that is, a very mixture and hodgepodge of dirt and sinne: for ever since the fall, whole evil is in man, and whole man is evil. Lastly, the whole Church answers, It is the Lords mercy that we are not consumed t, that hee plungeth us not in the ditch, and that our own clothes abhor us not u. Especially since all our righteousnesses (which is an answer to that second demand, what are the best of our works?) are but as filthy clouts x, such as a man would be afraid to touch, and asham'd to take up. The best we can present God withall passeth from us no otherwise, then as pure water thorow a muddy sink, or sweet wine thorow a sowre cask. See it in Jonas's prayer, or rather brawl y. Jobs request, or rather curse z. Sarah's heat and hast to send for God by a post to arbitrate a. Moses his carnall expostulation, his former tergiversation, and at last cast (when he had nothing else to reply) his flat and peremptory refusall to go upon Gods errand to the King of Egypt b. The conscience of which weaknesse, or rather wickednesse in himself, drives holy David so often to pray for his prayers c: and good Nehemiah, to crave pardon for his best performances d. In any of which if the Holy Ghost had not his hand, there would not be (as from us) the least goodnesse; no, not so much as truth and uprightnesse: without which the Lord Jesus would never present them for us to his Father: nor the Father once vouchsafe to look upon, or hearken after such refuse stuffe; which yet he doth; such is the delight he taketh in the exercise of his own graces, in the fruits of his own Spirit. And this is that that may just y drive us into a deep extacie of admiration at his incomparable love, and more then fatherly affection.

n Gen. 18. 27
o Gen. 32. 10
p Gen. 30. 8
q Psal. 22. 6
r Esay 6. 5
s Luk. 5. 8
t viñe á μαγε-
τωλδς εϊμι
u Esay. 3. 22
u Job 9. 31
x Esay 64. 6

y Jon. 4. 1
z Job 6. 8, 9
a Gen. 16. 5

b Exod. 4. 1, 13. & 5. 22, 23
c Psal. 119.
169, 170
d Nehem. 13.
2, &c.
Horreo quie-
quid de meo
est, ut sim we-us, Bern.

SECT. VIII.

2. To retain it, and if lost, to recover it, and how. With answer to some Queries and Objections made by a misgiving heart.

SEcondly, you that are posselt of this priviledge, to be ever at Gods elbow, as his favourites, and to have the royalty of the kings ear; as you must admire at this mercy, so labour and learn (in the next place) how to retain and keep your selves in this love of God e, as Saint Jude exhorteth. And that is done by keeping close and constant communion with this God All-sufficient, walking before him continually, as Abraham, and being upright f. The Lord is with you, (saith that Prophet in the Chronicles) while ye be with him g. He is with you in mercy, so long as ye are with him in duty. If ye seek him, he will be found of you: but if ye forsake him, he will forsake you. The Lord is not so fond of his own children, but if they forget him, he may and sometimes doth forsake them in part h, without breach of covenant. If they prove unconstant and start aside from their station, he can quickly (and doth otherwhiles) withdraw his grace to their thinking, and the powerfull operation thereof in very deed (for a time at least:) as in David relapied, and e Jude 21.

f Gen. 17. 1
g 2 Chro. 15. 2

h Psal. 119. 8

R r r

for

for a while deserted. He also seemes to frown upon their suites, and shuts out their prayers: fight against them with his own hand, meers them, as the angell did Balaam with a naked sword in his hand, as if he meant to dispatch them out of hand, and send them packing to hell. Thus it fared sometime with David, I thought upon God (saith he) and was troubled: with Ethan, thou compassst me about with terrors: with Jeremy, I shout and he shuts out my prayer. God turnes his back upon his Abolom, his Iosephs, when they grow proud, presumptuous, secure, slothfull: nay he turnes them into Bedlam, when he findes them frantick; and to all other their afflictions adds this, that he will not once come at them, call they never so long, never so loud after him. At such a time, he seemes to have lesse good remembrance of his deare children, then the Ostrich of her egges, which she leaves loose in the sand: or than the sea-monster of her young, which refuseth not, (though cruell enough,) to draw forth her breasts unto them. He puts his Sion sometimes to that sorrowfull complaint; the Lord hath forsaken me, my Lord hath forgotten me, yea to that desperate conclusion of the church in the Lamentations. First, she prayes, Turne thou us unto thee, O Lord, and we shall be turned: renew our dayes as of old. But as if she had lost her labour in such a bootelesse suite, she subjoyne this for a perclose of all, But thou hast utterly rejected us, thou art very wroth with us.

Now in such a pittifull strait, in such a forelorne condition as this, what can a poore soule do for the regayning of his God more then 1. make mone. 2. make out in the use of the meanes, and then 3. wait his return with patience.

First, you must bewaile the want of Gods gracious prefence and acceptance: make like moane as Ruben for Ioseph, as David for his Abolom, as Rachel for her children: Sing no new song till thou hast recovered him. Do in this case of spirituall desertion, as Mephiboseth in the absence and exile of his Sovereigne, he neither dressed his feet, nor trimmed his beard, nor washed his clothes from the day the King departed, untill the day he came againe in peace.

Secondly, set up a loud cry after him, as Jacob after his Ioseph, Elisba after Eliab, Micah after his lost gods. Say with Abolom, when out of favour, Let me see the Kings face, and if there be iniquity in me, let me die. Returne, O Lord: How long? and let it repent thee concerning thy servant. I had rather be thy door-keeper, then of Sathans privie-chamber. O Lord, other lords besides thee have had dominion over us: but by thee only will we make mention of thy Name. Encline thine eares: O Lord, and hear, open thine eyes, O Lord and see. O Lord hear, O Lord forgive, O Lord hearken and do, defer not for thine own sake, O my God &c.

And then thirdly, if God please to hold off longer, refuse not to wait his leisure, sustayning your selves, in the meane, with those two cordiall places: who is among you that feareth the Lord, that obeyeth the voice of his servant, though he walketh in darknesse and have no light, let him trust in the name of the Lord, and stay upon his God. Again, since the beginning of the world men have not heard, nor perceived by the care, neither hath the eye seen, O God, besides thee what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him. In which waiting estate shouldst thou be taken away by death (which seldome falles out, saith one) if thy heart be still set against sin, and linger after the light of Gods countenance, thou shalt be certainly saved, because the spirit of truth saith, blessed are all they that wait for him.

Thirdly, let such as have part and portion in this glorious priviledge, of having open access and all assured acceptance, with the most high in all their holy performances; learn to improve this happy opportunitie, by apprehending, and making all best use of it for their everlasting advantage. Is any among you afflicted? saith St. James, Let him pray. Is any merry? Let him sing psalmes. Feare we any evill? want we any good? In nothing be carefull, but in all things by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, let your request be made known to God. Note, that he bids us come with supplication and thanksgiving at once; as intimating, that we need not once doubt of good speed, but have our thanks ready in our hand, as sure of a gracious answer to our prayers. After which, the peace of God which passeth all understanding, shall guard your hearts, set them in as much safety, as if they were in a tower of brasse, or town of war. Thus Esther, after she had been with God, took boldnesse to go to the king (uncalled for) without fear of death k. And thus our Saviour, though at first afraid, yet when he had conferred with his father by prayer, arise, let us go, saith he, behold, he is at hand that betrays me l. He went forth to meet his aduery, and as it were to seek him: for he was heard in that he feared m. Again, want we any good? 'tis no more but run to God for it; who takes it in high scorn we should seek to any other. If any man want wisdom, and by consequence any good thing else let him ask it of God n.

Oh but my deserts are nothing.

They are as much as he looks for, he gives unto all men, not sels, or payes them for wages.

I know, his reward is with him to give unto every man according to his works; and then my share will be a very smal, or nothing rather.

Nay, he gives liberally, saith the apostle, not as befits us to receive, but as becomes him to give. Now no small things can fall from so great a hand as his.

Yea, to such and such he will give, and liberally.

Nay, to all men without exception, can they but name the name of the Lord Jesus in prayer, and do their good will to depart from iniquity, they shall be saved.

Oh but I have these and these discouragements. My sins presse me down, that I cannot look up, and prick me in the foot that I cannot come neer.

Fear not for this: God upbraides no man; neither with former faults, or present failings, if heartily disclaimed, and soundly set against. The Publican departed Gods presence never awhit the lesse justified for his former extortions, because truly humbled q. Take heart therefore upon all occasions, to go boldly unto the throne of Gods grace in full assurance of finding him facile to stretch out his golden scepter, upon the first sight of us, as we appear in his Christ, in whom he is abundantly well pleased f. Look what Zedekiah spake faintly and flatteringly to his Princes, you know that the king can denie you nothing t: and what the Heathens falsely report of some of their Princes, that never any departed pensive out of their presence the same is most true of our God. Never came any unto him aright in his ordinances, but he received thus much comfort and encouragement at least, that he would come again. Noah's dove brought an olive leaf in her mouth at first, and that was encouragement to send out a second time, and a third also, and then better tidings. So though the Lord hold his people off at first, and seem to slight them, yet his heart is still toward them, and his hand is still under them, there is a secret supporting grace, upholding the Saints in their greatest desertions. God hears sometimes when he seems to do nothing lesse: and loves entirely where he makes shew to hate extreemly; as David dealt with his Absalom, and as the son of David with the woman of Canaan.

But how shall I know that God hearkens and hears, when he seems to neglect, and suspends his answer? well enough: and 1. By a cast of his countenance. 2. By the verdict of thine own conscience.

First, you may guesse at Gods good minde and meaning towards you by a smile of his face, by a cast of his countenance: as a petitioner may read in the kings looks, while his petition is in reading, what the successe shall be. If the king smile upon it and look cheerfully, he is made, as if the king frown, and bend his brows upon it, he is dashed. Just so it is between God and his people in performance of religious duties. The eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, as well as his ears open to their cries u. As, o' to'ther side the face of the Lord (as well as his heart) is against them that do evil, as the Psalmist there opposeth them. A good man gathers by Gods countenance cast upon him in his service, how he shall speed. And this is his privilege, to be admitted into Gods presence-chamber, when the wicked stand without doors amongst dogs, and devils x. For an hypocrite shall not come before him y, saith Job, but the upright shall dwell in his presence z, saith David. The wicked man stands at the gate like a vagrant, but comes not into the house, to see whether the master be preparing for him an almes, or a cudgel, whereas a good man, like a good Angel, stands alwayes before the face of God, who doth not hide his face from him, but when he cries unto him he hears a.

Secondly consult thine own sanctified conscience, for thy better satisfaction and resolution

k Est. 4. 16
l Math. 26. 46
m Heb. 5. 7
n Jam. 1. 5
expounded

ob.
fol.
ob.
fol.

o 2 Tim. 2. 19
p Psal. 40. 12
fol.

q Luk. 18. 14
r Heb. 4. ult
s Mar. 3. ult
t Jer. 38. 5
Hence their file.

u Psal. 34. 15
v Job 13. 16
w Psal. 140. 13

x Psal. 124. 8
y Job 13. 16
z Psal. 140. 13

a Psal. 124. 8
b Psal. 124. 8
c Psal. 124. 8

d Psal. 124. 8
e Psal. 124. 8
f Psal. 124. 8

g Psal. 124. 8
h Psal. 124. 8
i Psal. 124. 8

j Psal. 124. 8
k Psal. 124. 8
l Psal. 124. 8

m Psal. 124. 8
n Psal. 124. 8
o Psal. 124. 8

p Psal. 124. 8
q Psal. 124. 8
r Psal. 124. 8

s Psal. 124. 8
t Psal. 124. 8
u Psal. 124. 8

v Psal. 124. 8
w Psal. 124. 8
x Psal. 124. 8

y Psal. 124. 8
z Psal. 124. 8
a Psal. 124. 8

b Psal. 124. 8
c Psal. 124. 8
d Psal. 124. 8

e Psal. 124. 8
f Psal. 124. 8
g Psal. 124. 8

h Psal. 124. 8
i Psal. 124. 8
j Psal. 124. 8

k Psal. 124. 8
l Psal. 124. 8
m Psal. 124. 8

n Psal. 124. 8
o Psal. 124. 8
p Psal. 124. 8

q Psal. 124. 8
r Psal. 124. 8
s Psal. 124. 8

t Psal. 124. 8
u Psal. 124. 8
v Psal. 124. 8

w Psal. 124. 8
x Psal. 124. 8
y Psal. 124. 8

z Psal. 124. 8
a Psal. 124. 8
b Psal. 124. 8

c Psal. 124. 8
d Psal. 124. 8
e Psal. 124. 8

b Exod. 7. 1
c Joh. 4. 29.

d Rom. 8. 27.
e Rom. 8. 16.

weemf.

f 1 Joh. 3. 21, 22.

resolution in this case. Conscience is Gods spie, and mans over-seer, excusing, or accusing, cheering or checking in Gods stead, as there is occasion. It may fity be called our God in the sence that Moses was Pharaohs b. Come, see a thing that tells all that ever we have done c, nay, all that ever God doth (as touching our salvation :) being enlightened and sanctified, by the holy Ghost. For as God knows the meaning of his spirit d, so doth the spirit know the meaning of God. Now this spirit witnesseth together with our spirits e. Nay it disdaineth not for our comfort, to give in evidence at the bar of our consciences, that we are Gods children, and our services good in his sight: refreshing our hearts, after holy actions, with a secret content, with a hidden approbation. Now therefore as the High priest of the old Testament might read Gods minde in his Urim and Thummim born upon his brest, though he heard no voice, though he saw no shape: so may a christian inform himself from within, what the Lord thinks of him and his works, he need but reflect upon his own conscience (if not bemisted or abused by Satans temptations) and it will do him to know what his acceptation is in heaven. If our hearts condemn us not, saith Saint John, then have we confidence toward God. And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him f either in the same kinde we ask, or a better. By a clearing chearing conscience God testifies (as once by fire from heaven) that he is well pleased with our sacrifices, &c.

CHAP. VI.

Doctr. V. God perfectly remembreth, and plentifully requiteth all our labours of love to him and his.

And there was a book of remembrance written before him for them that feared the Lord &c.

Oblivio enim
in Deum non cadit. Parabolicè hæc dicta sunt, &
pro humano
capite. Pol.
a Psal. 77. 9
b Esay. 49. 14
c Gen. 41. 51.
d Rom. 11. 1
e Esay. 49. 15
f Rom. 1. 31
g Esay. 49. 15
h Heb. 6. 10.
i Est. 6. 3
So Tamerlane
had alwayes
by him a catalogue of the names and good deserts
of his servants
which he daily perused.
Kno. Tu r. bist.
p. 227.
j Mal. 3. 13, 14
15.

A Figurative speech, and framed to our capacity: for it befalls not God to be forgetful, or to stand in need of a remembrancer. It was in a distemper, you may be sure, that David asked, Hast thou forgotten to be merciful a? and that Zion said, The Lord hath forsaken me, my God hath forgotten me b. The Butler may forget Ioseph, and Ioseph his former toyl, and fathers house c, but God cannot forget his people, whom he hath chosen d. Can a woman forget her sucking child e? possibly she may: some tigresses have proved unnatural to their own birth, and bowels f, but so cannot God. He is not unjust to forget your labour of love g: or if he should (as I abhor to imagine) behold there is a book of remembrance written before him, for them that fear the Lord, and that think upon his name. A borrowed speech (for our better apprehension) from kings and great personages: who use, for memories sake, to keep a catalogue, a calendar of such as whom they minde to reward for some special service: as Ahasuerus did Mordecai, when he had read his name in the roll of those that had deserved well of the king h. Those stout rebels above my text, were grown so bold and bedlam, as to give out, that Gods service was nothing worth: and that it was a course of no profit, to keep his ordinances i. The contrary whereunto is here vouched, and the truth vindicated. God, (saith our prophet) both hearkened and heard the holy language of his people, and so sealed up his dear respect unto them for present: and also caused a book of remembrance to be written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name, and so settled it in his heart to requite them for the future. That like as in the work of creation there went with Gods dicit, his benedixit, and with his ordinavit his ornavit, so in the administration of all things (especially in that which is special and proper, to the elect) with his remembrance, there goes a recompence, and with his regard regard a reward. Note hence, That God doth perfectly remember, that he may Doctr. plentifully requite all the good services done him by his saints and people.

SECT. I.

The truth confirmed by Scripture.

HE not only harkened and heard what good things passed between them here, but registred up and ingrossed the same in his book of remembrance: called elsewhere the book, by a specialty k, the writing of the house of Israel l, the writing to life in Jerusalem m, the book of life n, the book of life of the Lamb o, wherein he records, and where-out he will relate, at last day, all the good works of his children p, not once mentioning their sins and infirmities, which he hath promised to remember no more q. Our labour of love he will not forget, but be ever mindfull of his covenant r. The Lord hath been mindfull of us saith the Church (and as an effect thereof) he will blesse us; He will blesse the house of Israel, He will blesse the house of Aaron: He will blesse them that fear the Lord both small and great s. Cornelius for instance, he feared God with all his household, and he made good proof thereof, for he gave much almes to the people, and pray'd to God alway: and therefore both his prayers, and his almes came up for a memoriall before God t. Thus God remembered his Noah u, Abraham x, Rachel y, Joseph z, whose fetters he changed into a chain of gold, his rags into fine linnen, his stocks into a charret, his goal into a palace, Potiphars captive into his Masters Lord, the noyse of his chains into Abrech; and all becaufe he remembered his Creatour in the dayes of his youth a, and thereby kept himself pure from the great Transgression b.

k Dan. 12. 1
l Ezek 13. 9
m Isa. 4. 3
n Philip. 4. 3
o Rev. 21. 27
p Mat. 25.
q Heb. 8.
r Psal. 115. 5
s Psal. 115. 11 12
t A Ct. 10. 1, 2, 4
u Gen. 8. 1
x Gen. 19. 20
y Gen. 30. 22
z Psal. 105. 20
a Ecclef. 12. 1
b Psal. 19. 13

SECT. II.

The truth confirmed by six Reasons.

THE ground of which gracious dealing in God is first his incomprehensible wisdom, and fore-knowledge. The Lord hath the Idea, the perfect plat-forme and patern within himself, of all persons and things, together with the severall occurrences of either. Hence it is that he knowes all things Simul & semel, together and at once; not successively or by discourse, collecting one thing from another, as we do; but in one simple and eternall act knowing and comprehending all things. He need but reflect upon himself, and there he seeth all things before him as in a glasse. So that to speak properly, there is neither foreknowledge nor remembrance in the Almighty; all things both past and future being ever present with him. Thine eyes did see my substance yet being imperfect, and in thy book were all my members written, which in continuance were fashioned, when as yet there was none of them c. In this fore-knowledge of God (so we call it for teaching sake) as in a book are recorded the persons, birth, quality and death of every man and woman; together with their severall deeds and practises, that they may receive according to what they have done in the flesh whether good or evil d.

Reas. 1.

And this is our first ground of this point. Known to the Lord are all his works from the beginning e. The Lord knoweth them that be his f, Yea he knowes the whole way of the righteous g. And this his knowledge of them and their good works is a knowledge of singular approbation, yea of infinite delight and complacency, which makes him wait to shew them mercy h. He remembereth, saith the Psalmist, when he writes up the people, when he makes up his jewels i, that such a man was born k there: and that being born by a second birth, and having followed him in c Pl. 139. 16

d 2 Cor. 5
e A Ct. 15. 18
f 2 Tim. 2. 19
g Psal. 1. ult.
h Eccl. 30. 18
i Mal. 3. 17
k Psal. 87. 5, 6

1 Mat. 19. 28
m 2 Ich. 8.

Reaf. 2.

the regeneration 1, they shall not lose the things they have wrought, but receive a full reward m.

Secondly, God is just and faithfull, hence his remembrances and remunerations of his peoples service. Not of duty (I must tell you) but of mercy: it being a mercy in God even to reward men according to their works n, were they better then they be, or can be.

n Psal. 62. 12

To thee, O Lord, belongeth mercy: for thou rewardest every one according to his works n. But this by the way. We were drawing a second reason for the point from Gods justice and faithfulness. And this we borrow from the Apostle Heb. 6. 10. God, saith he, is not unrighteous to forget your works, and labour of love which ye have shew'd toward his name, in that ye have ministered to the saints and do also minister o.

o Heb. 6. 10

p 1 Ioh. 1. 9.
Posset aliqui
justus esse De-us, &c. sed
quia se verbo
suo nobis con-
strinxit, justus censeri non vult
nisi ignoscat
Calvin: in
locum.
q 2 Thef. 1. 6, 7
r Rom. 11. 35
s 2 Tim. 2. 13
t Tit. 1. 2
u Eph. 1. 13

For the better understanding of which argument, it must be premised, that there is a double Justice of God; one of Equity (which is the giving of every man his own, as ye all know) and another of fidelity, according to that of St. Iohn, If we confesse our sinns, he is faithfull and just to forgive us our sinns p. And in this sence, as it is a righteous thing with God to recompence tribulation to them that trouble you (which is the justice of Equity) so, to you that are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Iesus shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that beleve q, which is the justice of fidelity, for faithfull is he that hath promised who also will do it. Take it thus: God having made himself our voluntary debter, not by receiving any thing from us (for who hath given unto him first and he shall be recompensed r? not one) but by promising all good things unto us; what ever unworthineffe be found in us, Yet he abides faithfull, he cannot deny himself s: nor forget to crown his own graces in us with that life eternall, which God that cannot lie, promised before the world began t. He hath, of his own accord, smitten a covenant with us of mercy, and given us his band for our security: nay his oath, nay his seal, both the privy seal of his spirit u and the broad seal of the sacraments x, That by so many immutable things, wherein it is impossible that God should lye, we might have strong consolation, which have our refuge to hold fast the hope that is set before us y.

x Rom. 4. 11.
y Heb. 6. 18.
Reaf. 3.
z Rom. 10. 12
a Iob 1. 9.

Thirdly God is gracious and bountifull, as well as righteous and faithfull. He is rich in mercy to all that call upon him z, or do him any other businesse. Doth Iob serve God for nought a? No, nor any man living: he is a large paymaster. Who is there even among you that would shut the doors for nought? neither do ye kindle a fire upon mine altar for nought b. David indeed would serve him on free-cost c: but did the Lord dye in his debt? nay did he not pay him his charges ere the Sun went down the same day with usury? At another time David had but a purpose to build God an house, and God promised thereupon to build him an house for ever d: Again, he had but a purpose of confessing his sinns, and before he could do it, the Lord forgave him the iniquity of his sin e. The Apostle tells us, that a poor servant, if in serving his master according to the flesh, he do withall serve the Lord Christ, doing it heartily as to the Lord, and not as to men, let him know, saith he, that of the Lord he shall receive the reward of inheritance f. He meets, it may be, with a hard master that both belly-beats him, and back-beats him too; gives him very hard work and little or no wages; but Christ will do all. Not wages only shall he receive as a servant, but inheritance as a son. Nay, the poor begger that gives but a cup of cold water, with desire of doing more, if he had wherewithall; Verily I say unto you, saith our Saviour, he shall not lose his reward g. Saul when he went to enquire about the Ases, had but five-pence in his purse to give the Seer h: the Seer after much good cheer gives him the kingdom. Such is Gods dealing with us: he liberally rewards the small offerings of his weak servants, when he perceives them proceed from great love. How often doth he send away his poor Oratours, as Boaz did Ruth with their bosome full of blessings i, as David did Mephibosheth, with a royal renew k: as Solomon did the Queen of Sheba with what soever heart can wish l: or as Caleb did his daughter Achsah m with upper and nether springs, a confluence of spirituall comforts: temporall contentments, and all of the riches of his grace doth he thus give us all things richly to enjoy n?

b Mal. 1. 10
c 2 Sa. 24. 24

d 2 Sa. 7. 2, 16
e Psal. 32. 5

f Coloss. 4. 24

g Mat. 10. 42
h 1 Sam. 9. 8.

i Ruth. 3. 15
k 2 Sam. 9. 7
l 1 King. 10. 13
m Iudg. 1. 15
n 1 Tim. 6. 17
Reaf. 4.

Fourthly, God is wondrous tender and chary of his own glory, seeking the setting setting forth thereof mainly, (and indeed only) in all his works. Now the glory of God is no way more advanced and enlarged then by keeping open house, as it were: giving all best entertainment and encouragement to those that frequent him:

 not forgetting the labour of love that is shewed to his Name. For this is it, that will draw in much company about him, and make men very obsequious and observant, when they see for certain that there is a reward for the righteous o; yea, steadfast, and unmoveable, alwayes abounding in the work of the Lord, as knowing that their labour is not in vain in the Lord p. Praise waiteth for thee, O God, in Sion; and unto thee shall the vow be performed q. But how comes it about that men are so officious and forwardly, as to stand waiting at the posts of the gates of Wisdom, with free offer of their best devotions and services? It followes there;
O thou that hearest prayers, unto thee shall all flesh come. As who should say, It is for no marvell, though men come thick about thee; and thou have followers good store: for a little entreatey serves turne for the obtaining of great suits, of all sorts, and mercies without measure: And it is seldom seen, that a good house-keeper wants company; 'tis pitty he should.

Fifthly, God rewards even wicked men that do his will, though against their own will, and beside their own intentions: as he did Nebuchadnezzar, (his involuntary and unwitting servant) to whom he gave Egypt in way of wages, or military pay, for the long labour, and hard pains he had taken in the siege of Tyrus r: Howbeit he thought not so, but imagined to destroy, and cut off not a few nations s. Likewise those that serve him out of servile respects, and sinfull self-love, he rewards out of the abundance of his bounty; as Ahab, to whom he required a temporary repentance with a temporall deliverance. Nay, those men of Gods hand t, that do him no service at all, but walk upon the face of the earth with hearts full of hell, and faces set against heaven, he not onely commands his Sonne to shine, and his raine to fall upon them u, but further fills their bellies with his hid treasure, and gives them more then heart can wish x: their prosperous successe doth oft-times exceed the conceits of their minds. And shall he forget his entire friends, that thus remembreth to requite his profest enemies? Never was Prince so served in his greatest pomp, as the rebellious Israelites in the wilderness: how good shall we finde him then to those that please him?

Reas. 5.
r Ezek 29. 18
s Ezech 10. 7
t Psal 117. 14
u Mat. 5. 45
x Psal 73. 7

Laftly, godly people themfelves, may honeft Heathens are carefull to requite ſuch as are diligent about them, and dutifull toward them. What honour hath been done to Mordecai, faith Abafueroſh, for this ? Surely Mordecai did but his duty : he had hainouſly finned if he had not revealed that wicked treachery : yet Abafueroſh takes thought for his remuneration. And ſhall not God much more remember to recompence the weak obedience of us, though (at beſt) his unprofitable ſervants. So Reuel, the Prince of Midian, requiteth Moſes, for aſſiſting his wronged daughters, againſt their rude countrey-men, that fought to drive them from the water that themſelves had drawn. Shall a courteous Heathen ſo bountifully reward the watering of ſheep, and ſhall not our God be as forward to recompence, be it but a cup of cold water given to a diſciple ? If the king of Sodom could find in his heart to leave the goods to Abraham, as a penſion for his pains in the purſuit of the four kings, whom he overtook and diſcomfited : what marvell though the king of heaven appear unto him ſhortly after in a viſion, and ſay, I am thy ſhield, and thine exceeding great reward.

SECT. III.

Use 1. Confutation of the contrary minded, that say, or conceive at least; that its in vain to serve the Lord.

THis then serves, first, to confute and convince of singular impudency, and falshood all those profane Atheists above the Text, together with the whole rabble of their wretched heirs and successours, abroad the world at this very day;
that hold it to be a vain thing to serve God, a practise of no profit at all to be religious. This corrupt opinion of God and his works is an old canker'd sore, that lies lies festring in all mens hearts, and doth blister out upon the tongues of good men sometimes, of bad men more frequently. Certainly, saith David, I have cleansed my heart in vain, I have washed my hands in innocency, or to very small avail c. This was his speech in a passion, for the which he found a time soon after to beseech and be-beast d himself well-favouredly, when he was come to himself, and the distemper a little over. And good reason he should; for beside the dishonour done to God hereby, in bringing up (as those spies) an ill report of Gods service, he saw that in so saying, he had offended against the whole generation of Gods children e: from henceforth therefore he laid his hand upon his mouth. Once he had spoken, but he would not answer, yea twice, but he would proceed no further f. With the wicked it is more ordinary. Their words are stout against the Lord g, (saith our Prophet) they stick not to give him out for a hard man, a slack pay-master, reaping where he sowed not, and gathering where he strawed not h. Hear them awhile in their own language. What is the Almighty, say they, that we should serve him? and what profit should we have if we should pray unto him i? What profit is it that we have kept his Commandements, and that we have walked humbly before the Lord of Hosts k? Wherefore have we fasted, say they, and thou seest it not? Wherefore have we afflicted our souls, and thou takest no knowledge l? Lo these many yeers do I serve thee, said that self-justiciary to his heavenly Father, neither transgressed I at any time thy commandment: and yet thou never gavest me a kid, that I might make merry with my friends m. Thus these Malecontents of old: and to the same purpose in effect many now-adayes, that think and speak basely of Gods service, as if godlinesse were not gain, but rather gain godlinesse n, heaven a name, and not worth looking after: but the onely happinesse to have and to hold. As appears when they spare not to foam out their filthy froth, and say: What get these forward fellows by gadding to sermons, reading so much, praying so oft, being so precise and conscientious? Philosophandum sed parvis: 'tis good to be godly, but withall to be wise: zealous, but with discretion: we cannot live (beleeve me) by hearing of sermons: religion will not buy food and raiment: we have our hands full of work, and our houses full of children; and should we spend half an hour or lesse in a morning, and as much at evening in prayer and devotion, all would run to wreck, and our families be but ill provided for. Is there not such language as this, heard in some mens hearts, nay houses otherwhiles? Conceive they not as dishonourably, and as disdainfully of Gods best and busiest servants, as Pharaoh did sometimes of the Israelitish sacrificers. They are idle, they are idle, said he, let them get them to their tasks o. Moses speaks of devotion, Pharaoh of idlenesse: Moses talks of sacrifice, Pharaoh of work. Any thing seems dewwork to a carnall minde saving Gods service. He cries out of any time or pains laid out that way, as Judas once of the Spikenard: To what end is this wast p? As Seneca did of the Jewes weekly Sabbaths; that they lost the seventh part of their times: Or, as Jeroboam did of Gods publike worship at Jerusalem, he perswaded the people that it was too much labour to repair to the Temple, they should take a shorter cut to the golden calves at Beth-aven q. Of this sort are such as send in their excuse, when invited to the ordinances; and say with those recusant guests in the Gospel, We have oxen and farms r and other fish to fry, we cannot intend it, and they were fools if they should. Tell them of the unlawfulness of their lying, cogging, over-reaching, cozening, usury, they'll answer you straight: What would ye have us to do? we are neither Saints nor Angels: we must do as the world does, or else look to be undone for ever. Plain-dealing indeed is a jewel: but (would ye should know) he that useth it, shall die a begger. Presse them to works of mercy, and liberality to Gods poor; alas, say they, we are poor men our selves, and have many to care for. A man cannot tell what shall come after him, and what shall come after him who can tell s? O fools, and slow of heart to beleeve all that the Prophets have afore-time spoken t. Hath not God said, The liberall man deviseth liberall things, and by liberall things he shall stand u, not fall, or come to ruine. That he is able to restore any Amaziah more then the one hundred talents come to x, lost or rather laid out for Gods sake, and in his service? that whosoever forsaketh all, and follows Christ shall receive a hundred-fold here, and heaven hereafter y. Ruth for instance; she (whiles Orphab wants bread in her own countrey) is grown a great great Lady in Bethlehem; and advanced to be great-grandmother to the King of Israel, nay to Christ the heire of all. But the ground of this perversnes and misjudgment made by men of Gods work, and his wages is, that damned infidelitie that is rooted in our natures: causing that we dare not rely upon God, nor trust his bare word without a pawne; but think 'tis best every man to shift for one: that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush (as the prodigall, that called for his portion here; and that carnall Cardinall that would not part with his part in Paris, for his part in Paradise) that wherever we see God 'tis best trusting to our selves: which what is it better then to give God the lie, to charge falshood upon the Almighty? should some man promise me an hundred pound, doing some small chare for him, though I told him not plainly, he did but seek to gull me with words, yet if I should go my way from him, turn againe and laugh in his face, and never make use of his offer, or triall of his curtesie, I should, in effect, say as much as all that comes to. Think the same of such as reject Gods just precepts, and despise his large promises, slighting his work, and slanderer his wages, what do they lesse then put the lie upon him in grossest manner? then the which I know not what greater indignitie can be offered to the God of truth: Whereat though he seemes to wink for a season, and they conceive basely and absurdly of him thereupon, as if he were altogether such a one as themselves, yet he will shortly reprove them, and set their sins in order before their eyes, as they stand recorded in the roll of remembrance. For as there is a book of remembrance written before him, for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his Name; so no lesse for them that despised the Lord, and set light by his Name. That therein (as in a table) they may run and read their own destiny written faire, and so returne and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God, and him that serveth him not.

Cardinall Burbon.

Plal 50.22

SECT. II. III.

Use 2. The wicked shall be surely and severely punished.

And that's a second use of this point, and 'tis for terrour to all gracelesse and profane persons, that serve not God but Mammon, not the Lord Christ, but their own bellies a, that forsake their Maker, and pursue after lying vanities b, that say, after all, The Lord hath forsaken the earth, he will neither do good nor evil c. He hath said in his heart, (quoth David of the Atheist) God hath forgotten, he hideth his face, he will never see it d. And again by way of complaint. Lord, how long shall the wicked, how long shall the wicked triumph? How long shall they bluster and speake hard things? and all the workers of iniquitie boast themselves. They break in pieces thy people &c. Yet they say, the Lord shall not see, neither shall the God of Jacob regard it e. They hide God from themselves, and then think themselves hid from God *. Whose folly we can better revince then in the following words. Vnderstand ye bruiteish among the people, and ye fooles, when will ye be wise? He that planted the eare shall not he hear? He that formed the eye, shall he not see? He that chastiseth the heathen, shall not he correct? He that teacheth man knowledge, shall not he know? Yea, the Lord knoweth the thoughts of man, that they are vanity. He knowes them, and ponders them: he records and writes them down particularly in his book of remembrance. The sin of Iudah is written with a pen of iron, and with the point of a diamond f. Bebold it is written before me, and I will recompence it into their bosomes g saith the God of recompence h. And as he writes up their actions for future vengeance, so (as men do their chief evidences, which they are most carefull to keep safe) God is said to lay up these records in store with him, and to keep them seal'd up among his treasures i. And for what end doth he this? but that he may produce them as so many swift witnesses against the workers of iniquity in that day. Her finnes have reached to heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities: Reward her therefore even as she hath Rewarded you, and double unto her double, according to her

Use 2.
a Rom. 16. 18
b Jon. 2. 8
c Ezek. 9. 9
d Zeph. 1. 12
e Plal. 10. 11
f Plal. 94. 3
g Eccl.
* Struthiocamelus cum delitescendum est, solum caput penitus in condenso loco seu frutice occultat, reliquum corpus in aper to relinquit.
Ita dum in capitale secutus est, nudus quomaior est, caput totus cum capite. Plin. l. 10. cap. 1.
Impiorum dissimulatio et facta similiter in Dei commentariis referuntur &c.
Gualth. in textum.
f Jer. 17. 1
g Ely 65. 6
h Jer. 51. 56
i Deut. 32. 34
her k Mal. 3. 5

1 Rev. 18. 5, 6
Jacob Revetus
in hist. Pontific
p. 177.

Lento gradu, ad
vindictam sui,
divina procedit
ira, et ardentem
que supplicij
gravitate compensat. De Dionyso Val. Max.
lib. 1. cap. 2.
ὁ γοτὸν ἄνθρω-
πον.

m Mat. 24. 51

Luk. 12. 46.

n Psal. 37. 35.

exarientur, sed

exurentur.

o Rev. 14. 18,

19.

her works, said that mighty angel concerning Babylon l. And the same saith the mighty God concerning all impenitent persons, well they may shuffle for a season, and shift from side to side (as Balaams asse before the punishing Angel) but surely their sin will finde them out, and ring them such a heavey peal, as Pope Innocent the fourth heard once from heaven, and was found dead the next day in his nest, Veni miser in iudicium, come thou wretch and receive thy judgment. What though the Lord defer the execution of his sentence: The master of that evil servant shall come in a day when he looks not for him, and at an houre when he thinkes not, and shall cut him in twain, rend his soul from his body, and appoint him his portion with unbelievers m. What though they flourish awhile here, and spread themselves like a green bay tree n, it is that they may be cut off for ever. What is fairer then the corn-field a little before harvest? then the vineyard, a little before the vintage? Thrust in thy sickle, and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth, for her grapes are fully ripe, and cast it into the great wine-press of the wrath of God.

SECT. V.

Use, Let them therefore hasten out of the Devils danger, and get into Gods service. How that may be done

KNowing therefore the terrour of the Lord, we perswade men p; And oh that we could perswade all unregenerate persons, first, by this point, to do as Saint Peter adviseth all in their case, Repent ye, saith he, and be converted that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord q: Blotted out, I say, and first out of Gods book of remembrance, where they stand written with a pen of iron, and with the point of a diamond r: Secondly, out of the book of their own consciences, where they stand recorded for future time, as ye may see in Josephs brethren. Their own hearts condemned them, and called them miscreants, twenty years after the fact committed s. their consciences also bearing witness, as saith the Apostle, and their thoughts between themselves, accusing one another t. Where it is remarkable that the Syriack translatour useth a word for conscience that signifieth a written or painted thing. For the conscience now is as a table wherein are many things painted, which sort of writing is fitly compared to that we write with the juice of an onion or lemmon, hold it to the fire, and it is legible. So when the conscience is once put to the fire of Gods wrath, all will out, and old sins come to a new reckoning. The onely way to sponge out this writing, is by weeping upon it repentant tears, that God may wash us throughly with the blood of his Son. For if we confesse our sins against our selves with David u, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins x; and to crosse out of his debt-book the black lines of our sins, and arrerages, with those red lines of his sons blood. I even, I am he that bloteth out thy transgressions for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins y. And again, I will be merciful to their unrighteousnesses, and their sins will I remember no more z. Lo, if we but remember our misdoings, he will forget them: if we reveale them with shame and sorrow, he will cover them a, if we but see them to confession, we shall never see them to our confusion, if we but acknowledge the debt, he will cancel the bond, blot out the hand-writing that was against us b, and cast all our sins behinde him c, (as off-cast evidences that are past date) into the depth of the sea: so that we shall never see them again, otherwise then the Israelites saw their enemies, the Egyptians, dead upon the shoare.

2 Next, doth the Lord so remember to requite the services of his people? is there such a lively remembrance, and ample recompence preparing for them (how should this fire up the affections of all unregenerate persons, to hire themselves out to God for servants d, to swear with David e, to vow with Ioshua f to serve Iehovah; renouncing the devils drudgery, to whom they have hithereo damned themselves voluntary slaves, to their inestimable disadvantage. It is a point (I wot well) they will not hear of, that the devil is their good Lord, that he sets them awork, and

Vse. 3.

p 2 Cor. 5. 11.

q A. 3. 19.

r Jer 17. 1.

s Gen. 42. 21.

t Rom. 2. 15.

u Psal. 119. 136.

x Psal. 119. 136.

y Psal. 119. 136.

z Psal. 119. 136.

a Psal. 119. 136.

b Psal. 119. 136.

c Psal. 119. 136.

d Psal. 119. 136.

e Psal. 119. 136.

f Psal. 119. 136.

g Psal. 119. 136.

h Psal. 119. 136.

i Psal. 119. 136.

j Psal. 119. 136.

k Psal. 119. 136.

l Psal. 119. 136.

m Psal. 119. 136.

n Psal. 119. 136.

o Psal. 119. 136.

p Psal. 119. 136.

q Psal. 119. 136.

r Psal. 119. 136.

s Psal. 119. 136.

t Psal. 119. 136.

u Psal. 119. 136.

x Psal. 119. 136.

y Psal. 119. 136.

z Psal. 119. 136.

a Psal. 119. 136.

b Psal. 119. 136.

c Psal. 119. 136.

d Psal. 119. 136.

e Psal. 119. 136.

f Psal. 119. 136.

g Psal. 119. 136.

h Psal. 119. 136.

i Psal. 119. 136.

j Psal. 119. 136.

k Psal. 119. 136.

l Psal. 119. 136.

m Psal. 119. 136.

n Psal. 119. 136.

o Psal. 119. 136.

p Psal. 119. 136.

q Psal. 119. 136.

r Psal. 119. 136.

s Psal. 119. 136.

t Psal. 119. 136.

u Psal. 119. 136.

x Psal. 119. 136.

y Psal. 119. 136.

z Psal. 119. 136.

a Psal. 119. 136.

b Psal. 119. 136.

c Psal. 119. 136.

d Psal. 119. 136.

e Psal. 119. 136.

f Psal. 119. 136.

g Psal. 119. 136.

h Psal. 119. 136.

i Psal. 119. 136.

j Psal. 119. 136.

k Psal. 119. 136.

l Psal. 119. 136.

m Psal. 119. 136.

n Psal. 119. 136.

o Psal. 119. 136.

p Psal. 119. 136.

q Psal. 119. 136.

r Psal. 119. 136.

s Psal. 119. 136.

t Psal. 119. 136.

u Psal. 119. 136.

x Psal. 119. 136.

y Psal. 119. 136.

z Psal. 119. 136.

a Psal. 119. 136.

b Psal. 119. 136.

c Psal. 119. 136.

d Psal. 119. 136.

e Psal. 119. 136.

f Psal. 119. 136.

g Psal. 119. 136.

h Psal. 119. 136.

i Psal. 119. 136.

j Psal. 119. 136.

k Psal. 119. 136.

l Psal. 119. 136.

m Psal. 119. 136.

n Psal. 119. 136.

o Psal. 119. 136.

p Psal. 119. 136.

q Psal. 119. 136.

r Psal. 119. 136.

s Psal. 119. 136.

t Psal. 119. 136.

u Psal. 119. 136.

x Psal. 119. 136.

y Psal. 119. 136.

z Psal. 119. 136.

a Psal. 119. 136.

b Psal. 119. 136.

c Psal. 119. 136.

d Psal. 119. 136.

e Psal. 119. 136.

f Psal. 119. 136.

g Psal. 119. 136.

h Psal. 119. 136.

i Psal. 119. 136.

j Psal. 119. 136.

k Psal. 119. 136.

l Psal. 119. 136.

m Psal. 119. 136.

n Psal. 119. 136.

o Psal. 119. 136.

p Psal. 119. 136.

q Psal. 119. 136.

r Psal. 119. 136.

s Psal. 119. 136.

t Psal. 119. 136.

u Psal. 119. 136.

x Psal. 119. 136.

y Psal. 119. 136.

z Psal. 119. 136.

a Psal. 119. 136.

b Psal. 119. 136.

c Psal. 119. 136.

d Psal. 119. 136.

e Psal. 119. 136.

f Psal. 119. 136.

g Psal. 119. 136.

h Psal. 119. 136.

i Psal. 119. 136.

j Psal. 119. 136.

k Psal. 119. 136.

l Psal. 119. 136.

m Psal. 119. 136.

n Psal. 119. 136.

o Psal. 119. 136.

p Psal. 119. 136.

q Psal. 119. 136.

r Psal. 119. 136.

s Psal. 119. 136.

t Psal. 119. 136.

u Psal. 119. 136.

x Psal. 119. 136.

y Psal. 119. 136.

z Psal. 119. 136.

a Psal. 119. 136.

b Psal. 119. 136.

c Psal. 119. 136.

d Psal. 119. 136.

e Psal. 119. 136.

f Psal. 119. 136.

g Psal. 119. 136.

h Psal. 119. 136.

i Psal. 119. 136.

j Psal. 119. 136.

k Psal. 119. 136.

l Psal. 119. 136.

m Psal. 119. 136.

n Psal. 119. 136.

o Psal. 119. 136.

p Psal. 119. 136.

q Psal. 119. 136.

r Psal. 119. 136.

s Psal. 119. 136.

t Psal. 119. 136.

u Psal. 119. 136.

x Psal. 119. 136.

y Psal. 119. 136.

z Psal. 119. 136.

a Psal. 119. 136.

b Psal. 119. 136.

c Psal. 119. 136.

d Psal. 119. 136.

e Psal. 119. 136.

f Psal. 119. 136.

g Psal. 119. 136.

h Psal. 119. 136.

i Psal. 119. 136.

j Psal. 119. 136.

k Psal. 119. 136.

l Psal. 119. 136.

m Psal. 119. 136.

n Psal. 119. 136.

o Psal. 119. 136.

p Psal. 119. 136.

q Psal. 119. 136.

r Psal. 119. 136.

s Psal. 119. 136.

t Psal. 119. 136.

u Psal. 119. 136.

x Psal. 119. 136.

y Psal. 119. 136.

z Psal. 119. 136.

a Psal. 119. 136.

b Psal. 119. 136.

c Psal. 119. 136.

d Psal. 119. 136.

e Psal. 119. 136.

f Psal. 119. 136.

g Psal. 119. 136.

h Psal. 119. 136.

i Psal. 119. 136.

and will pay them their wages. You know how ill the Jews took it to be told as much by our Saviour Christ g. But that it is no better with them, the scripture is clear, and the joynt testimony of all Gods redeemed ones concurrent : for we our selves also (even I Paul, and thou Titus) were sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving diverse lusts and pleasures h, hampered and enwrapt in the invisable chaines of the kingdom of darknesse, being taken alive captive by the devil at his pleasure i, hurried about by him as Bazaer in his iron cage : toiled out of all true comfort, as Samson at his mill : opprest with unreasonable tasks, and insupportable burdens, as Israel in the iron-furnace : this is their work. And for wages, they are exposed to a world of plagues and curses, armies and changes of sorrows, and calamities here, their whole life being but one continuat vexation k, besides the fear of death (that upshot and center of evils to evil men) making them subject to bondage all their life time l. And worthily : for terrours take hold of them (then) as waters, they make them afraid on every side m. Trouble and anguish make them afraid they shall prevail against them; as a king ready to the battle n. Death seizeth upon them, as a mercilesse officer o, takes them by the throat as that cruel servant in the Gospel : feedeth upon their flesh, as a greedy lion p, stings them to the soul as a fiery serpent q, gripes them to the quick as a bear robbed of her whelps : comes upon them with a firma Ejectione as an inexorable Landlord : carries them away as Gods executioner, yea as the messenger and forrunner of the second death, where the worm never dieth, where the fire never goes out r : where they seek death but finde it not, yea desire it, but it fleeth from them s. It is reported of Roger somtimes Bishop of Salisbury (the second man from king Steven) that he was so tortured in prison with hunger and other calamities usually accompanying people in that case, ut vivere noluerit, mori nescierit, live he would not, die he could not. How much more true (think we) is this of all those that are thrust into that outer-darknesse, that darknesse beyond a darknesse (as the word seems to import) that utmost dungeon of the damned, where there is nothing but weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth. Weeping for extremity of heat, and gnashing of teeth for extremity of cold. Weeping is the expression of sorrow, and sorrow cools the heart; and cold makes the teeth to chatter. Thus those miserable creatures do, at some time, freez and fry, weep and gnash, live and die, a dying life, a living death, not for a time, or times, or half a time t (oh happy they, if ever they might hope an end ! ) but ever and ever, and beyond all time, throughout all eternity. Oh consider this, all ye that forget God, lest he tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver you u. Save your selves from this tormenting Tophet, and be forewarned to flee from the wrath to come. See what miserable slaves ye are to Satan (being altogether as much in his power and clutches as he that goes gyved is in the gaolers : or he that goes up the ladder piniond and hoodwinkt in the hangmans) and for how little good advantage ye lay forth your selves, and toyl out your lives in wearisome wickednesse. Do but summon the sobriety of your senses afore your own judgments, and see what uncessant pains ye are at, and all to go to hell ; whiles you do wickedly with both hands earnestly y, working hard at the works of the flesh, but putting your gets into a bottomlesse bag z. Nay that's not all : for he that soweth the winde shall reap the whirlwinde a, saith Solomon, that is, he that soweth the wind of sin and vanity, shall reap the whirlwinde of vengeance and misery. And he that soweth to his flesh, shall of the flesh reap that corruption, that is contradictinguisht to life everlasting b : for the wages of sin is death c, temporal, spiritual and eternal. And is it nothing to lose an immortal soul ? to purchase an everliving death ? hear then set thy self in good earnest to see and sigh under Satans servitude : be sensible of his yoke, as galling thy neck, and let it make thee cry out, O wretched man that I am who shall deliver me from this unsufferable servitude ! Behold, I am more miserable then Samson at the mill : for he had hope in his death, d but what hope have I, When God shall take away my soul e : I am more miserable then Zedekiah in cold irons; for though he lost his eyes, yet he escaped with his life : but I, alas, am am dead while alive f, a very living ghost, a walking sepulchre of my self. I am more miserable, then Jeremy in the dungeon : for he found friends, and means of enlargement : but to which of the Saints shall I turn my self g, or where shall I finde help or rescue in heaven or earth ? I am more wretched then Israel in Egypt : for if they

g Ioh. 8. 44

h Tit. 2. 3

i 2 Tim. 2. 25

κωχέσμενοι.

k Ecclef. 2. 17

l Heb. 2. 15

m Job. 27. 20

n & 18. 19

o Job. 15. 23;

24

p Psal. 55. 15

q Psal. 49. 14

r 1 Cor. 15. 55

s Mar. 9. 44.

t Rev. 9. 6

Nubrigenfis.

σκότος

ἐξ ὧτων.

u Rev. 12. 14. 1

v Psal. 50. 22

w A&T. 26 18

* Jer. 9. 5

Psal. 55. 10

y Mic. 7. 3.

z Hag. 1. 6. 1

a Prov. 22. 8

b Hof. 10. 12

c Gal. 6. 8.

d Rom. 6. ult.

Sursum cursum

nostrum diri-

gamus, & mi-

nantem immi-

nentem & ex-

terminantem

mortem atten-

damus, ne fi-

mul cum cor-

poris fractura,

anime iactu-

ram faciamus.

d Prov. 14. 32

e Job. 27. 8

f 1 Tim. 5. 6

g Job. 5. 1.

Consideret his quilibet quam
fada sit servi-
tas, servine
principi immo
tyranno diabolo
qui subditos di-
bit infandis di-ceat modis.

Bucer.

h Ioh. 8. 36.

i Isa. 26. 13.

k Cant. 1. 3

l Psal. 51. 12

m 2 Cor. 3. 17

n Psal. 74. 19

o Ps. 84. 10, 11

p Prov. 8. 34

* Quidam ad omnia via & vita huius exercitia non solum ambulat
sed & currunt
imò potius vo-lant Bern.

Serm. 3. de

Afc. Dom.

q 1 Sam. 17.

24. 25

r Mat. 19. 16

Turpe est impi-

os diabolo tam

strenue servire,

nos Christo pro

sanguinis pretio

nihil rependere

Cyprian: lib. de

oper. et. elemos.

f Rom. 2. 10

i 1 Tim. 6. 6

in purgatione

gloriam est in pietate.

1 Tim. 4. 8

they performed their tasks, they escaped the lash : but I, after all my best services done to the devill, am laden with stripes, and shall be scourged with scorpions *. Thus make moan to thy self, first : and then make out to Christ, next, for manumission and enlargement : for if the son set you free, you shall be free indeed h.

Cry to the Lord Christ in the words of the ancient Church, O Lord, other Lords besides thee have had dominion over us, but we will remember thee only and thy name i. Thy name is as an ointment poured out, therefore the Virgins love thee k. O pour upon my dry soul of that precious ointment, and stablish me with thy free spirit l, for where thy spirit is, there is liberty m, from both the commanding and the condemning power of sin and Satan. O deliver not the soul of thy turtle dove to these wicked ones n : in thy righteousness rid me and set me free. For a day in thy courts is better then a thousand other-where. I had rather be a doer-keeper in the house of my God o, then to be Satans chief-favourite, or one of the privy chamber : For the Lord God is a Sun and a shield : the Lord will give grace and glory ; large wages l grace and glory ? what things be these ? one would think that were reward enough for such sorry service, as we can do him, at best : ey, but then her's more then enough, for no good thing will be withhold from them that walk uprightly. Oh bountifull God ! who would not chuse and covet to be thy servant ? who would not gladly stand waiting at the posts of thy gates p, if haply at any hour of the day he might hear thy happy call, and be hired into thy heavenly Vineyard ? who would not run through thick and thin * to compasse such a gainfull service ? And yet 'tis a world to see, a wonder to behold how strangely men hang off here : how hard they are to be wonn to the setting in hand with the works of the Lord : miserably slighting Gods offers, and letting slip their golden opportunities of getting into his employment. They talke sometimes of the wages, but shrink at the work, as the Israelites talked of the reward of Goliath's conquest, yet fled from it when they had done q. The land is good ; said those faint-hearted spies, but the cities are walled up to heaven, and the inhabitants unconquerable. They wish well other-whiles to heaven, as he that kneeled to our Saviour with good master r in his mouth : they could be glad with Balaam to dye the death of the righteous, but to live their precise and austere life, that goes to the heart of them : they cannot frame to it. O blinder then Beetles ! the merchant refuseth no adventure for the hope of gain : the hunter shrinketh at no weather for love of game ; the souldier declineth no danger for desire of glory or spoile : the bear breaks in upon the hives, contemning the stings ; And shall we fain to our selves an ease in not understanding, or an idleness in not seeking after that service that will be a means unto us, not only of avoyding intollerable, and endlesse torments ( which is the devils meed and wages ) but also of attaining immeasurable and immortall glory, pleasure and gain, which is Gods reward and guerdon : For glory, honour, and peace to every man that works good, to the Jew first, and also to the Gentile s. And contented godlinesse is greatest gain t, saith the same Apostle, such as wherein all losses are recompented, all wants supplied, all curses removed, crosses sanctified, promises accomplished, blessednesse procured, Satan conquered, Death destroyed, the grave sweetned, corruption abolished, sanctification perfected, and heaven opened for a more happy enterance. What should I say more for a conclusion of this first Exhortation to those that are in their naturall condition ? There is no gain to that of grace, no increase to that of Gods service. The Usurer gaines fix in the hundred, but the gain of godlinesse is an hundred-fold here, and eternall life hereafter. Oh who would not then turne spirituall purchaser ?

SECT. VI.

Use 4. Exhortation to Saints to abide in Gods love, and to abound in his work : sith their labour of love is not in vain in the Lord.

Our second Exhortation is to be addressed to all those that are true of heart, whose names are written in heaven a, whose services are set down in Gods book of remembrance. How should these first; rejoyce in this priviledge, more a great deal then if devils were subdued unto them x: what a mercy is this, that God should set so highly by their poor performances, as to record them in the high court of heaven: to gratifie and grant them thereupon great suites on earth; to glory and boast of them before the Prince of hell; as he did of Iob 7, because he was jealous over himself and his with a godly jealousy z. How should the Saints delight themselves in such a master, and make their boasts of God all day long a? How should they sing with David, Lord thou hast dealt bountifully with thy servant according to thy word b: carolling out, and calendring up the noble acts of that Lord ***, who shall count when he writes up the people c; that such a man was born there, and there was faithfull in all his house, as a servant d, with Moses: kept his word, and not denyed his name with Pergamus and Philadelphia e: instantly served the Lord day and night, with the twelve tribes f &c. These things he carefully recordeth, and honourably mentioneth, and is it not a shame for us to be slothfull, and silent? to be forgetfull of him that thus remembreth us, and the poor things that pass from us? Of all things God cannot abide to be forgotten: See how ill he takes it at the hands of his people. They are a forward generation, children in whom no faith saith he. For of the Rock that begat them they are unmindfull, and the God that formed them they have forgotten. And when the Lord saw it, he abhorred them, because of this provoking of his sons and of his daughters g. And a fire was kindled in his anger thereupon, even such as burneth to the lowest hell. For the wicked shall be turned into hell, and who too? With all them that forget God h. But what shall become of them in the mean while? Behold, I even I will utterly forget you (and so pay you home in your own coyne) yea I will bring an everlasting reproach upon you, and a perpetuall shame which shall not be forgotten i. See this exemplified in the rich glutton Luc. 16. who because he remembered not that God gave him his corne and wine and oile, and multiplied his silver and his gold k, but sacrificed to his own net, and burnt incense to his own yare, because by them his portion was fat, and his meat plenteous l, therefore is he not so much as once called by his name in holy scripture, but lyes wrapt up in the sheet of infamy, and buried in everlasting reproach which shall not be forgotten. When as the poor beggar that set God alwayes before him m, with David, that remembered his name in the night, and thereby kept his law n; is thought worthy to have a name in Gods book, and a name in Gods house o, the Lord saying unto him as once to Moses, I have known thee by name p, thy memorial shall endure to all generations q. Nay the Lord Jesus remembreth such still, now he is in his kingdome r, that bestir themselves all they can, and despatch a great deal of work in a little time, as that famous thief did, who therefore by a commendable theft, after he had offered violence to Gods kingdome s, stole heaven, and sapt in paradise.

Use. 4.
Heb. 12.23
Luc. 16
Iob 1.8
Iob 1.5
Psal. 44.8
Psal. 119.17
Psal. 105.1
Psal. 87.6
Heb. 3.5
Rev. 2. & 3
Act. 26.7
ἐκτενέστατον
λατρεῖαν

Deut. 32.18
Psal. 9.17
Ier. 23.
39.40

Hof. 2.8
Habak. 1.16
Psal. 16
Ps. 119.55
Ezra 9.8
Exod. 33.12
Psal. 112.
Luc. 23.42
Mat. 11.12
οἱ βασιλεῖς
ἀπὸ τοῦ
ἀρριπύοντες
diripiunt, ut ci-tatur ab Hilario: Metaph.
castris aut arce
quapian quæ
irrupentibus
hostibus diripiunt. Beza.

SECT. VII.

But secondly, Doth God remember his Saints and their services? then let us learn hence not only to reciprocate by remembring him and his mercies, but also (as his remembrancers) to put him in minde (in case he seem lets forward to

- do us good ) of his ancient proceedings, and gracious promises. This is that the Prophet exhorts unto : Ye that are the Lords remembrancers keep not silence r. This the Psalmist constantly practised ; Remember O Lord, thy tender mercies, and thy loving kindneses, for they have been for ever u. And this the Lord though he needeth it not, yet every where stands upon. He exacts and expects it from us, as a part of his service, and as a condition on our part to be fulfilled in the new covenant. Where, after he had promised great things ( concerning Justification, Sanctification, and preservation ) he subjoyns. Yet I will for this be enquired of by the house of Israel to do it x. So in another Prophet, I will blot out thy transgressions, and not remember thy sinnes. But then, Put me in remembrance, let us plead together : declare that thou mayest be justified y. Whereby you see what's to be done on our part, if we would be remembred with the mercies of Gods people. Plead wee must the gracious promises : spread them before the Lord, as Hezekiah did Sennacheribs letter z. Pray them over, as David often, and so put him in mind of the good he hath spoken concerning us. He loves to be importuned in his own words, to be burdened with his own promises, and to be urged with arguments taken from his old proceedings. Arise, as in the dayes of old, and performe the mercy which thou hast sworn to our fathers from the dayes of old a.
- This Moses and Elias well understood : and therefore the former as in pleading for the people, he minds the Lord often of his covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob b, and treats with him to that purpose by his Name Yehovah ( that emphaticall and comfortable Name c : ) so when he had foretold a plague to the Egyptians, or the remove of it, yet he omitted not to pray the accomplishment. And the latter, when he had by warrant from heaven promised rain to Ahab after three yeers draught, yet he went afterward to the top of Carmel, and prayed earnestly d, ( saith St. James ) he prayed toughly, lustily, laboriously ; he strained every vein of his heart ( as it were ) in prayer, for he stoopt, and stretcht, and put his face between his knees, saith the story, and this for a great while together, till at length a cloud, and after this a cataclysm of raine and waters came of it ; when once he had prayed to purpose, and not till then. For the Lord, though he be liberall, yet he is not prodigall : and although he reject not our weak services, yet he throwes not away his mercyes upon such as hold them 'not' worth whistling after, as they say. Be his children never so deare unto him, yet they shall know their distance, and their duty : and although he love to be acquainted with them in the walkes of their obedience, yet he taketh state upon him in his ordinances, and will be sought unto for his mercies. Seek the Lord, saith the Prophet, and then will he raine righteousness upon you f. For likeas the Sun drawes up vapours from the earth, not to retaine them, but to return them to the moistening and so fattening of the same : so doth the Lord draw from us our devotions and other duties, not for any benefit of his own, but to raine them down againe upon us in so many blessings.

SECT. VIII.

- LAstly, this ( me thinks ) should mightily encourage good peoples hearts, and strengthen their hands in well-doing, to consider, that the Lord doth perfectly remember plentifully to requite whatsoever service. The pains cannot be cast away that we resolve to lay out, nay to lose for Christ. Master, saith Peter, we have laboured all night, and have taken nothing. Nevertheless at thy word we will let down the net g. And he sped accordingly ; for he enclosed a great draught of fishes, even to the breaking of the Net, &c. So true is that of the Apostle, He that is Lord over all, is rich unto all that call upon him h : He gives exceeding abundantly, even above all that we ask or think i. Thus David asked life of the Lord, and he gave him length of dayes for ever and ever k. Solomon asked wisdom ( not wealth ) and he had wisdom and wealth too : Hezekiah asked one life, and God gave him two : added fifteen yeers to his dayes, which we count two mens lives, and a yeer over. The palsie man seeking health at Christs hands, had health and heaven to boot. Zachary striving to see Christ, not onely seeth him, but heareth him speaking salvation to him and his.

Yea,

Yea, (may some say) God may crown his people with salvation : but they are hardly put to't in the mean while, many of them, and sorely vexed by the oppressions of their enemies, who make pitifull havock of them, and God regards it not.

First, this is not for their diligence, but negligence rather in the work of the Lord: lazy servants must be quickned.

Secondly, God hereby tryeth the truth, and soundnesse of their graces ; makes it appear that they serve him for himself, and not meerly for provender, or for a whole skin, as the Devil accused Job 1.

Thirdly, God in humbling them remembreth them, for his mercy endureth for ever m. Is Ephraim my dear sonne ? is he a pleasant child ? for since I spake against him, I do earnestly remember him still : therefore my bowels are troubled for him: I will surely have mercy upon him, saith the Lord n.

Lastly, heaven will pay for all, and the lesse they take up of their wages before hand, the more they shall receive at the quarter day. It we suffer together with him, we shalbe glorified together o. This made Abraham content to dwell in tents, because he looked for a more enduring city p : Moses chose the reproach of Christ, (the worst part of him) before the honour of Pharaoh's court : & this when he was no baby neither, but at mans estate q and therefore knew well what he did ; and all because he had respect to the recompence of Reward. This made the beleev- ing Hebrewes suffer with joy the spoiling of their goods, as knowing that they had in heaven a better, and more enduring substance r . Ezekiel willing to deliver an unpleasing message, and suffer for it too, because God took him up and let him heare the noise of a great rushing, saying, Blessed be the glory of the Lord s . Nay our Saviour Christ helped himself over the hardshipp of his crosse, by cast- ing his eye upon the Crown : leaving us an example to follow, a copie t to write after. And indeed it is a matter passing difficult to obey God, when carnall reason suggesteth likelyhood or damage or other danger. But if it were a suffici- ent reason to move Jacob to neglect his stufte in the land of Canaan, because Pha- raoh promised him the best things of Egypt u . How much more should the assurance of heaven (that true treasure) make us carelesse of this earthly trash ? How should the very fore-thought of that exceeding, exceeding weight of glory x , make us plentifull in Gods worke : cause and even compell us to hear much, pray much, live holily, deale uprightly, be constant and abundant in well- doing, what ever come of it : Not standing upon the worlds censure, who are apt enough to call thee foole for thy forwardnesse, and two fooles for thy foole- hardinesse, (so they usually call and count the care of good conscience, and cour- age in a good cause : ) let them work on, and spare not, but feare thou God : and against all their * black coles, comfort thy self with his white stone y . Let them think basely of thy course, but do thou think busily of Gods name : and he will think as carefully of thy recompence, even above all that thou canst aske or thinke z .

Up therefore (that I may resume the exhortation, and shut up all) Up. I say, and be doing, and the Lord shalbe with you a . Why stand ye here idle all the day long b ? Why linger ye and look thus one upon another c ? You see your work, you know your wages. It is but an inch of time you have to take paines in, and then eternitie of rest and recompence : Where it would repent you nothing more (if 'twere possible there to repent) then that you had begun no sooner, wrought no harder. It is no small encouragement ( in the mean-while ) to know, that he sets down in his book of remembrance, not how many yeares only, but dayes, nay hours we spend in his service : what heat we suffer, what cold, what hunger, what thirst : what losse, what straights : what danger, what difficulty, what every thing. There was found in a besieged city a poore wise man, (saith Solomon) and he by his wisdom delivered the city, yet no man remembered that same poore man d . This is the course of the world, but tis otherwise with

Ob.
John Baptist was without any law, right, or reason, beheaded in prison, as though God had known nothing at all of
him. George Marsh Martyr.
Ait. & Mon.
fol. 1423.
Sol.
1 Job. 2. 4
m Pla. 136. 23
n 1er 31. 20
o Rom. 8. 17
p Heb. 11. 9. 10
q Heb. 11. 24,
&c. r Heb. 10. 34
Nudus opum,
sed cui celum
terraque patet.
rent. De Ar-chimede suo Silias lib. 14.
s Ezek. 3. 12
t 1 Pet. 2. 21
υ πολυμωδ-
ως υποσχεσα-
μεν.
u Gen. 45. 20
x 2 Cor. 4. 17
καδ' υπερβο-
λην εις υπερ-βολην. There ye have an elegant treble Antithesis, &
double hyperbole beyond englis-
ing. A superlative transcendent phrase (saith
one) such as is
not to be found in all the Rhetorike of the Heathens, because they never wrote of such a theme, nor with such a spirit.
* Nigro carbō-
ne notandus.
Juvēn.
y Rev. 2. 17
z Eph 3. 20
a 1 Chr. 22. 16
b Mat. 20. 6
c Gen. 42. 1

Dies brevis est & opus multum, & operarij pigri, & paterfam: urget. Quare castigemus mores & moras nostras
R. Simeon. Qui studet optatam cursu contingere metam multa tulit fectique, sudavit & alit, Hor. d Ecclesi.

9. 15. merces mundi

e Rev 2.2

Ille non tan-tum quot annis sed
quot dies
atque horas
in illius
cultu con-
sumit

apugillimibus suis notat; æstam, frigora, famem culturam bonorum &c. Catt. f 1 Thessalonians 1.3 g Psal. 56.9
b Matthew 10.30. Quæ pretio habemus ea numeramus &c. i Act. 27.

God. I know thy workes, and thy labour e, saith he to Ephesus: not thy work only, but thy labour in working: not thy love only, but thy labour of love: not thy hope only, but thy patience of hope in our Lord Jesus Christ, in the fight of God and our father f: Not thy crosses only, but the number, time, place and measure of our crosses are with God: Not thy person only, but thy flittings are in his book, and thy teares in his bottle g: yea the haire of thy head are numbered h, not one of them shall perish: much lesse the head it self. But though washed a little, with Paul in the ship-wrack i, yet thou shalt be landed safe at the Key of Canaan, the kingdome of heaven.

CHAP. VII.

Doct. VI. Such as fear the Lord, will be thinking upon his Name: what it is to do so.

And that thought upon his Name.

* Shindler: in

☞

Pro. 30.4.

Jud. 13.18.

* æstimantibus

gloriam nominis

eius Cald.

parapraft.

sapientibus

corde, &amp; peri-

is mysterio-

rum Dei

R Abraham.

In intellectu suo invenientibus

omnes vias eius

judicium esse

Cæc. R. David

Qui gloriam

Dei asserunt

Cæc. Gualther.

Qui supputant

in pretio ha-

bent nomen

Dei Calvin:

Certam memi-

nis cognitio-

nem assiduâ

mentis rumi-

natione perstantes.

Folan. in locum.

* Hac laudis pietatis vera fontem indicat &amp;c.

Gualther: in locum. Doct.

Here's a further description of the parties in speech by a second property. As they feared the Lord, so they thought upon his Name. Where comes to be considered, first, what is meant by Gods Name, the object of their thoughts: secondly, what by thinking upon this Name, which is the act of these ancient beleevers, about that object.

Name here hath reference to God: and his Name signifieth. 1. Gods self, in his unsearchable Essence, or that unutterable subsistence that each person hath in the God-head*. 2. All such names and titles of God, his attributes, actions, ordinances, and al things else that have any special print of Gods image stampd upon them, are said to be gods Name upon them: because by them he is known as a man by his name.

Next, to think upon this Name of God, is diversely glossed, and expounded by interpreters. He doth best (in my opinion) that saith, to think upon Gods Name, is nothing else, but by sundry sad and serious meditations, well to weigh and deeply to digest whatsoever a man hath heard and learned of God, and his wayes Thus Polanus succinctly and pithily. This then was the guise of those godly ones of old: and this is stil the property and practise of Gods faithful people: who as they feared the Lord, (which is the first signe they are here set out by) so, as a fruit or rather root* of that holy fear, they think diligently upon his Name; that is they bend and busie their best thoughts upon the things of his kingdome. Hence we may learn,

That it is the part and property of a man truly fearing God to be much in the meditation of the things of God. Such as fear the Lord in truth will be thinking upon his Name.

SECT.

SECT. I.

The Point proved by Scripture.

YOU see they go coupled in the text, as individual companions: and other where in scripture, it is made the mark of a man truly religious that he hath right thoughts, that is, well set upon those rightest objects, God and his Name. The thoughts of the righteous are right a. And again, the desire of the righteous is only good b. Not that any man, in this viatory condition, is so happy as to have his heart altogether empty of evil thoughts and desires: but that's the thing he strives unto, and breaths after, he suffers not evil motions to roost in his minde, to keep residence there, to lodge in his inwards as Jeremies expression is: he serves God in his spirit with Paul (at least in his general resolution and intention) He sets the Lord alwayes at his right hand c with David: he walks continually in the sente of his presence, and height of his countenance, with Henoah, Noah, Abraham, and others, he wholly followeth after the Lord his God with Caleb f; in desire and endeavour at least he waites for God in the way of his judgements with the Church in Ijai. And the desire of his soul is to Gods name, and the remembrance of h.m.g. In which holy course if he be at any time interrupted (as the best is many times) he cries out mournfully with the Church in the same Chapter: O Lord our God, other lords besides thee have had dominion over us, yet through thee onely w.ll we make mention of thy name b. I finde a law in my members warring against the law of my minde (that frame of holy thoughts) and carrying me captive to the law of sin and of death i. The law truly is spiritual, but I am carnal sold under sin; I consent to the law that it is good, even then when I transgresse it, and do that I would not. Nay more, I delight in the law of God after the inward man: yea with the minde, I my self serve the law of God, then, when with the flesh, the law of sin. Thus the regenerate part in a christian still hankers and hangs toward God, as the sea-mans needle toward the North-pole, as the miserable captive toward his own countrey, as the distressed spouse toward him whom her soul loved: sh: slept indeed, but her heart waked k, all the while God is the proper and most pleasing object of a good mans thoughts and affections, as David often avoweth him in the book of Psalms. And though he be hard layed at sometimes; ey, and not feldom seduced l and hurried aside by armies and changes of evil thoughts, noysome lusts, satanical injections, and other grievous temptations both from within and without: Yet for the main bent, the general inclination and intention of his thoughts and affections, he is still with God, as David, when I awake I am still with thee m, saith he. And oh how precious are thy thoughts unto me O God n! how great is the sum of them? in the multitude of my perplexed thoughts within me, thy comforts delight my soul. And to like purpose the Church: All this is come upon us, yet we have not forgotten thee, neither have we dealt falsely in thy covenant. Our heart is not turned back, neither have our steps declined from thy wayes. Though thou hast sore broken us in the place of dragons, and covered us with the shadow of death, If we have forgotten the name of our God, or stretcht out our hands to a strange God, shall not God search out this? for he knowes the secrets of our hearts p. And that consideration as it kept their thoughts within compasse: so it may well minister unto us a ground of good reason for the point in the first place.

a Prov. 12. 5.
b Pro. 11. 23.
\ Magno studio superflua cogitationes amputande sunt: Sed tamen amputare funditus nequaquam possunt. Semper enim caro superflua generat, &c. Greg. Moral.*
c Jer. 4. 14.
d Rom. 1. 9.
e Psal. 16. 8.
f Josh. 14. 19.
Num. 14. 24 implevit post me. As a ship under saile, which is carried strongly with the wind &c. g Ijai. 26. 8.
h Elij. 26. 13.
i Rom. 7. 23.
14.
16.
22.
25.
k Cant. 5. 2.
l Lam. 1. 14.
m Psal. 17.
n Psal. 139. 17.
o Psal. 94. 19.
p Psal. 44. 17.
18, 19, 20, 21.

SECT. II.

The Point proved, and enforced by five reasons.

Gods people are much taken up in the thought of his name; for they know that he knows the secrets of their hearts q (as he that makes a watch knoweth every

Reas. 1.
q Heb. 4. 13.

All things are (for the outside) γυμνα-
naked, and (for the inside) τετρα-χυλισμένα
dissected, quar-
terd, cleft
thorough the back-bone, as it were.

f Ioh. 4. 24

g Act. 17. 28

h Prov. 16. 1

i Rom. 12. 1

j Isai. 29. 13

k Exod. 29. 39

l Psal. 51. 17

m Cant. 6. 1

n Gen. 43. 3

o Prov. 21. 26

p Deut. 6. 6

q Psal. 44. 17.
&c.

Reas. 2.

* Animus est
ubi amet, non
ubi animat.
f Cant. 1. 3
g Psal. 34. 8
h Iob 42. 5
i Eccles. 7. 1
k Ioh. 12. 3
l Rev. 14. 1. 4
m 1 Pet. 1. 8

n Rom. 5. 5
o 1 Ioh. 2. 20

Reas. 3

p 1 Cor. 6. 19
q Cant. 3. 6
r 2 Cor. 3. 5
s 1 Cor. 2. 9, 10.

t 1 Tim. 6. 16

every turning and winding in the watch.) And that as he knowes them, so he owes them too : For 'tis he that made us these spirits r , and therefore he requires to be served in our spirits f : It is he that gave us our thinking faculties, we cannot move (no nor with a motion of the minde) but in him t . Both the preparations of the heart, and answer of the tongue is of the Lord u . And is it not reason therefore that he should have a tribute of our thoughts, a thought-service also ? It is true our bodies with the members thereof, must be offered up and presented to God as a living sacrifice x . But that sacrifice can neither be living, nor well-pleasing, where the heart is wanting y . Hence he so called of old for all the fat of the inwards in the sin offering z : and testified afterwards by David that he delighteth more in a broken heart than in all sacrifices a ; he rolles himself in it as in a bed of spices b , and seemes to say of it to the sonnes of men, as sometimes Joseph to his brethren concerning Benjamin his brother, or as David to Abner concerning Michol his wife ; ye shall not see my face except ye bring it c . He will have the heart d or nothing, because it is the treasury of all our thoughts, speeches and actions : but first of our thoughts, which are the next and immediate fruit and issue of the heart, whence, the services done him by them, cannot but be most pleasing, sith they are most spirituall, and farthest off from pollution of hypocrisy ; whereunto they cannot be so subject as outward services, which are performed sometimes more out of respect to the Creature, then to the Creator. Hence the Church in that fore-alledged Psalm, seeking to approve her self to God, pleades the sincerity & goodnesse of her thoughts, as a sufficient testimony of her truth & integrity e . But this is not all : Gods people are thoughtfull of his Name, not only moved with feare (as the text here couples them,) because he searcheth out the secrets of their hearts, and calles principally for their thoughts : but also out of love, and strength of affection (as the spouse acknowledgeth :) the property whereof, is to set the thoughts aworke upon the thing beloved : according to that in the proverb, the minde of a man is not where it lives, but where it loves * And so it is here. Gods Name is as an ointment powerd out, therefore the virgines love him f. They have tasted and seen how good the Lord is g . They had often heard by the hearing of thee are, but now their eye hath seen him h . His good name hath been sweeter to them, then a precious ointment i ; it hath filled their hearts, as Maries Spikenard did the house k . This maketh the virgines, that follow the Lamb wheresoever he goeth, that stand with him upon mount Sion, having his fathers name written in their foreheads l ; to love him for the odour of his good ointments, though they see him not m . And out of the deare respect and love they bear unto his Name, to be continually thinking upon that which their soule loveth. The more they love, the more they think, and the more they think, the more they love : God having shed abroad his love (that part of his Name) in their hearts n as a sweet ointment, by the Holy ghost, that anointing that is given unto them, and which teacheth them all things o .

And that's a third Reason, why the Saints are so set upon the thoughts of Gods Name, they are taught and inabled thereunto by that holy spirit, their domestickall Monitour and sweet inhabitant. For, know ye not that your bodies are the temples of the holy ghost that is in you p . And if their bodies are the Spirits temples, surely then their soules are his Holy of Holies ; wherein are continuall pillars of incense ascending q ; good and holy thoughts, (I meane) abounding, by the operation of the Holy ghost ; (whose immediate motions they are) we being not able of our selves to think one good thought r . There never entred into the heart of a naturall man, the things that God hath prepared for them that love him s : But God hath revealed them to us by his spirit : whose worke it is.

1. To enlighten.

2. To enlarge the heart, wherein he takes up.

His first work is to beat out new windows in the dark soules of men, to let in a new light thereinto to give us thereby some sight of God, some sense of his sweetnesse, some glimpse of his glory. Not as he is in himself, in the brightnesse and perfection of his essence : for so he is incomprehensible, and the light whereby he should be seen inaccessible t . Nor yet so perfectly here, as he stands described unto us by his Attributes and actions, that's reserved for a better life.

But

But his back-parts u only ( with Moses ) that holy and reverend Name of his, Jehovah Jehovah strong, mercifull gracious, long suffering &c. Thus much the spirit gives us to see of God, though somewhat obscurely, as through a grate only, or as in a glasse, in a riddle, or as an old man through spectacles: the greatest part of our knowledge being but the least part of our ignorance. And Secondly, having thus opened our eyes, and turned us from darknesse to light, he turnes us next, from the power of Satan to God z: that whereas heretofore we were acted and agitated by the Prince of the power of the ayre a, the God of this world, who had first blinded our minds b, and then set abroad upon our hearts and affections, hatching out thence whole swarmes of evil thoughts, and litters of lusts that fight against the soul c: So now, being possessed by a better spirit, we are enlarged and enabled to captivate and conforme our thoughts to the soveraignty of Gods grace, the rules of his word, and the remembrance of his Name.

Fourthly, their new Nature, ( that blessed frame of Gods grace erected in them by the spirit; that great Architect, that plants the heavens, and lays the foundation of the earth, that he may say to Zion, Thou art my people d ) This Divine Nature e as Peter calls it, and renewed Image of God, this habit of heavenly-mindednesse putteth Gods servants upon a continuall fresh succession of holy thoughts. For besides that their phantasy or thinking-faculty (being a chief inward sense of the soul) is seized upon for God to the utter dissolving of that old frame of vile thoughts and lusts (those strong-holds wherein satan had entrencht f himself ) the whole spirit, soul and body of a Christian is sanctified throughout g. God writes his law in our hearts h, stamps his image upon the spirit of our minds i, makes us partake of the god-like nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world thorough lust k &c. Hence an ability of holy thoughts and affections, for as the man is, such are his dispositions and meditations. The liberall man deviseth liberall things l. A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth good things m: And as from within out of the old heart proceed evill thoughts n &c. so from the sanctified heart proceed sanctified thoughts, and gracious considerations and respects to God, and his Name.

Lastly, we may argue for the truth and certainty of this point of the godly mans practise, from the many near and dear relations he stands in to God: together with the daily dealings he hath and often use he makes of his Name. For God first, he is the good mans friend, and father, Prince and portion, God and guide, his All in All o: he hath given up his name to Gods truth, devoted himself to his fear p, sworn himself to his service q, and endeavours nothing more then to love him with all his heart, with all his soul, and with all his thought, which is that first and great commandment of the law, whereupon the rest hang r, as a thing upon a nail, or as beads upon a string. And secondly for the name of God, they run to it in any streffe, as to a strong tower s: they walk in his name t as in a Garden or gallery: they rejoyce in it as in all treasure u: yea what ever they do in word or deed they do all in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ x &c. Now can we possibly rejoyce in Gods name, run to it upon all occasions, walk in it, talk of it, do all in it, and yet not minde it, not be much in the thought of it? Again, can we acquaint our selves with the Almighty, vouch him for our God, set him up for our Sovereigne, converse familiarly with him as our friend, walk before him y in uprightnesse and integrity, walk with him z in an humble familiarity, walk after him a by an entire obedience and ready conformity, and yet not frequently think on him? 'tis not possible.

SECT. III.

Use 1. Those that habitually think not upon God, fear not God.

NOW for application: Are all Gods people such as think upon his Name? Use 1. This then serveth, first, to shut all such out of this holy society, and to evince

u Exo. 33. 23
x Exod. 34. 6
y 1 Cor. 13. 12
z 1 Cor. 13. 12
a 1 Cor. 13. 12
b 1 Cor. 13. 12
c 1 Cor. 13. 12

d Eph. 2. 2
e 2 Cor. 4. 4
f 1 Pet. 2. 11

Reas. 4.

d Esay 57. 16
e 2 Pet. 1. 4

f 2 Cor. 10. 4 5
g 1 Thes. 5. 23
h Heb. 8. 10
i Eph. 4. 23
k 2 Pet. 1. 4
l 1 Sa. 32. 8
m Mat. 12.
n Mark 7. 21

Reas. 5.

o Colos. 3. 11
p Psal. 119. 38
q Psal. 119. 119
r Mat. 22. 37
s Prov. 18. 10
t Micah. 4. 5
u Psal. 119. 14
x Colos. 3. 17

y 1 King. 9. 4
z Gen. 6. 9
a Deut. 13. 4

- evince them void of Gods true fear, that think not dayly and diligently upon God, that make not his name the matter of their meditation, that say not in their hearts, Let us now fear the Lord our God b &c. The wicked saith David, through the pride of his countenance will not seek after God: God is not in all his thoughts c: Eating and drinking, buying and selling, building and planting, plowing and reaping &c. are in his thoughts, but God falls not into his thoughts the whole day thoroughout. Or if in a whole lottery of thoughts, he stumble haply upon God and his Name, yet his heart is merely passive in it (as was Sauls and Balaams;) it is only as a thorough-fair for such thoughts: they give him a joy and away: they salute him as he in the Comedy did his fellow with good-morrow, and farewell both in a breath. He is soon fated, nay jaded and tired out at a sermon, or so, where he hath occasion of better thoughts then ordinary. He favours not these things of God d, he finds no more relish in them then in the white of an egge, or a dry chip. Hence it comes, that they soon pass away from him, like Nebchadnezzars dream, which himself could not remember by morning. Nothing settles or 'bides with him of this nature. They consider not in their hearts, that I remember all their wickednesse e. Some transient thoughts they may have that way, in cold blood other whiles, but to little or no purpose. They turn not short again upon themselves with the prodigall f: they sit not alone g with the Church in the Lamentations, to entertain and nourish good motions: they call not themselves to a domestick audit, 'tis death to them to do any thing that way: they do not commune with their own hearts upon their beds h. They summon not the sobriety of their senses before their own judgements, to set themselves down by right reason, to argue the case with their own consciences, and to say every man to himself, what have I done i? what do I mean? what doth God think of me? what will he do with me? what's my case here? and what will be my condition a thousand yeers hence? These savoury thoughts, these wholesome considerations seldome or never enter into the confines of their hearts. Or if they do (as sometimes they do) upon some sudden unexpected evil accident, (as the death of a dear friend, some more remarkable losse in their estates, the hearing of a powerfull sermon, or the like) oh what shift will these men make to rid their hearts of such unwelcome guests, that they may be no longer rackt and diseased by them? how do they bring their buckets to quench such a spark of the spirit kindled in their breasts? how do they choak and throttle, before it it draw breath, such a motion made them by the holy ghost! desperately saying to God, Depart from us, we desire not the knowledge of thy wayes k. Casting Gods word behind them, as the old world did Noahs preaching (it was even more then spilt upon them, whiles they would know nothing of all that was foretold them till the flood came, and swept them away, as vermine) hating to be healed, refusing to be reformed m, drowning the noise of their clamorous consciences, with the hurry, and clutter of worldly businesses and employments; as the old Italians in time of thunder used to shoot off their greatest ordnances, to ring their biggest bells, and to make all the fragour they could, to drown, as far as they might, the noyse of the heavens, that it might not affright them. And for that other faculty commonly called συνησις, to make all safe there, they lay fast hold upon all the principles in their heads, and imprison them n, as the Apostle speaketh, tearing out their soules, as much as may be, those common notions * of truth and falshood, right and wrong, good and evil, whether left in mans nature at the fall, or superinducted since, I will not dispute: There, I am sure they are by a good providence of God for the conversation of civill society: till razed and rooted out, or lockt up at least in restraint, by such as would sin securely without disturbance, till at length they arrive at that dead and dedolent disposition o of the debauched Heathens, little differing from that of the very devils, and so wrath come upon them to the utmost p.
- b Jer. 5. 24
c Psal. 10. 4
- Salve, Vale.
- d Rom. 8
- e Hof. 7. 2
f Luc. 15. 17
g King. 8. 47
h Lam. 3. 28
- h Psal. 4. 4
- i Jer. 8. 6
Πῶς παρήβην;
πὸν ἔρεξας;
τί μοι δὲδν ἔκ
ἐπελῆσθην;
Pythag.
- k Job 21. 14
l Math. 24. 39
ἐκ τῆς γλώσσης
- m Pl. 50. 17
- Sigou.
- n Rom. 1. 18
κατέχοντες.
* κοινὰ ἔν-
νοια.
- o Eph. 4. 19
ἀπηλγνισμέ-
νοι.
p 1 Thes. 2. 16

SECT. IV.

Of those that think base and bald thoughts of God.

But secondly, if the bare not-thinking upon God and goodnesse shew a man to bee unsanctified; what shall we say of such as think of God indeed, but think basely of him and unworthily: cast him, as it were into a dishonourable mould, by those bald conceits they take up of God. They become vain in their imaginations q about him, as those Philosophers spoken of by the Apostle, that changed the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like to a corruptible man. So do many ignorant people, now-adayes, conceive of God (and will not be beaten out of it) as of an old man sitting in heaven, with a crown on his head, and a scepter in his hand, administering his kingdom, as an earthly Prince, &c. Others that are not altogether so grosse-witted, but yeeld you, that God is a spirit, and not a bodily substance; yet they set him not up for such a spirit as he stands described in the holy Scriptures; Holy, pure, just, jealous, omnipresent, omniscient, omnipotent, recompencing the righteous, and repaying the wicked to his face r, &c. Of this sort of sinners were these above text, that denied Gods speciall providence, and care of his people, &c. And such amongst us are found, not a few, that conceive God either to be wicked altogether, such an one themselves, because he keeps silence at their sinnes s: or else to made up of mercy, that he will save them howsoever, and not destroy the work of his own hands; or lastly, so ignorant and wretchlesse, that although he reckon with them for other misdemeanours, yet thought shall go free. By beleeving and pleading of which most false proverb, and pestilent principle, what do they else but profane Gods spirituall nature, making a meer mock and an idol of the Almighty, as if he knew not mens thoughts, and had no sovereignty over them? But they shall find, to their sorrow, that God searcheth the hearts, and trieth the reins t, those seats of lusts, and most retired parts in all mans body: Yea, and kills men with death, because they will not belevee it u. That he knowes (as the meaning of the spirit x, so) of the flesh too; though it never put forth it self in the outward man: that he sets our secret finnes also in the sight of his countenance y: and will not fail to bring every secret thing to judgement z, even all their Atheisticall, vainglorious, covetous, ambitious, adulterous, malicious thoughts, and projects against the Lord and his Christ, his crown and dignity. And that none may be ignorant, he makes Proclamation thereof (as it were in open Sessions) by the voice of his holy Prophet, with a solemn Oyes; Hear O earth, behold, I will bring evill upon this people; even the fruit of their thoughts a. Where ye have to observe; that the heavy wrath and vengeance of Almighty God is both the just desert, and certain event of evil thoughts: and count you that a small matter? Is it nothing to fall into the punishing hands of the living God b? Is there not a fire kindled in his wrath (even for some one root of bitterness, (that is inward distemper, and mentall abomination harboured and allowed) that burns as low as the nether-most hell?

q Rom. 1.23.
Ann 402. questo quatuor
stultia & ridi-
cula videatur.
An Deus corp-
oreus sit? id est
An divina es-sentia sit corpus quoddam manus habens. Cytamen maximas
inter Monachos Egypti
urbes existi-
vit. Rudiores
enim ex ipso
teet non sentie-bant. Furens Chronol. Alce-tarius tradit Deum habere
essentiam cor-
poream, &c.
Alsted. Chron.
r Deut. 7.10
s Psal. 50.21
t Jer. 11.20 & 17.10
u Rev. 2.23
x Rom. 8.27
y Psal. 90.8
z Eccles. 12.7
ult.
a Jer. 6.19
b Heb. 10.31
c Deut. 32.22

SECT. V.

Against thoughts of Atheisme, Blasphemy, Infidelity, and Rebellion.

But in the third place, most of all to be condemned of want of Gods holy fear, are such, as not onely, not think of God, or not duly think of him; but unto all other their sinnes, adde this, that they think thoughts against him, directly opposite to his Name, Devise things contrary to the Name of Jesus d, taking up high and haughty imaginations, such as exalt themselves against the knowledge of God, and obedience of Christ e. And of this sort of sinners is that heavy complaint made by God himself in the Prophet Hosea; Though I have redeemed them, yet they have spoken lies against me; though I have bound, and strengthened their arms,

d Acts 26.9
e 2 Cor. 10.4,5
yet

f Hof 7.13.15
 g Zech 1.12
 -Deos diuici
 securum agere
 eum: Nec si
 quid miri faci
 at Natura Deos
 id Trijtes ex al
 to celi demit
 tere testis.
 Horat. serm.
 h Job 22.13
 i 1 Cor. 1.23
 k 2 Pet. 3.4
 l Gen 4.13
 m 1 Joh. 5.10
 Cum Leoni X.
 Papa Bembus
 Card. aliquid
 ex Evangelio
 obijceret, sub
 riens ille dixit.
 Nunquid non compertum ab
 unde fuit
 quantum nobis
 ex caeli no
 stro contulerit
 hac de Christo fabula. Aljted.
 Chronol. p. 398
 o Exod. 5.2
 p Act. 7.27
 q Psal. 12.4
 r Jer. 44.16.17
 s Jude 14. 15

yet do they imagine mischief against me f. Hitherto may be referred; 1. Thoughts of Atheisme, as to think there is no such thing as God: or if any, yet that hee seeth not, careth not, doth neither good nor evil g, walks in the circle of heaven, and hides himself in the thick cloud h, without any respect at all to this inferiour world. 2. Thoughts of blasphemy, as to murmur, grudge, and speak against him in our hearts: and secretly to mock at his mighty works, his powerfull ordinances i, the promise of his coming, &c. 3. Thoughts of infidelity, and despair; as that God doth not heed me, will not help me l, save me, make good his word unto me, &c. This is to make God a liar m, saith St. John, and (upon the matter) to averre and avouch that there is no such thing as Christ: or at leastwise, no such vertue and efficacy in his death and life, as to save all those that repose upon him. 4. Thoughts of high-treason, and open rebellion against heaven: as when men rise up against God in their hearts, as the horse against his rider; thinking within themselves, (though they shame to say as much) Who is the Lord that wee should serve him o? Who made thee a Prince or a Ruler over us p? Our lips are our own, who shall controll us q? The word that is spoken unto us in the Name of the Lord we will not do. No, but we will certainly do whatsoever thing goeth forth out of our own mouth r; say the Prophets and Preachers what they can to the contrary. Against all which detestable and damnable Atheists, yokelesse, and frontlesse Belialists. Behold the Lord cometh (saith that ancient Enoch) with ten thousand of his Saints, to execute judgement upon all, and (by vindicating his glorious Name, from their base surmises, and blasphemous aspersions) to convince all that are ungodly among them, of all their ungodly deeds, which (upon such false and abhorred principles) they have ungoddily committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have (out of the abundance of their hellish hearts) spoken against him s. Where wee leave them for present, to chew awhile upon that fearfull doom that abides them, till we hear of their amendment, and hasten to a second Use.

SECT. VI.

Use 2. Examination. Where trialls of the goodnesse of our best thoughts, by their 1. causes. 2. effects.

a Prov. 12.5
 u Iudg. 5.15
 x Acts 5.22
 Verse 23.
 Quum reprobo
 rum mentibus
 occasio peccati
 deest, desiderio
 rum cogitati
 ones eoru cor
 dibus nullate
 nus desunt: &
 quum non sem
 per diabolum
 sequuntur in opere, valde ta
 men se illi ob
 ligant in cogi tatione. Greg.
 Moral. lib. 14.
 y 2 Cor. 10.5
 z Acts 5. 3,4
 a Jer. 4.14
 b Gal. 5.23
 c Rom. 1.21
 d Phil. 3.19.20
 e Psal. 10.4
 f Acts 8.22.23
 g Esay 65.2
 h Phil. 3.23
 i Jude 4.

IS this so, that the thoughts of the righteous are right t, and that wheresoever the true fear of God is, there are great thoughts of heart u, concerning God and his Name? This then serves, next, for an Use of Triall: And so, let every man learn hence, to take a true estimate, to make a right judgement of his spirituall good estate, by the quality of his thoughts. For ever as the man is, such are his thoughts: and as the thoughts are habitually, and ordinarily good or evil, so is the man. Purity in the inward parts is the most sound and infallible evidence of our portion and interest in the power and purity of Christs saving passion, and sanctifying bloodshed. Whereas if our speeches and actions be never so Angelicall, yet if the thoughts of our hearts be not forgiven us x, and we enabled to keep them in some good compassse, by the spur of the first, and curb of the last commandment, we are in no better case then Simon Magus was: who for all his fair pretences, stuck fast still in the gall of bitterness, and bond of perdition. A civil honest man, a painted hypocrite, a gracelesse and wicked person dare insatiably mind, and muse upon those foul evils, which, for want either of ability, or opportunity, or both, he cannot act. Now such a man as this, (though his outward behaviour be never so fair, and unrebukeable, yet) the Scripture every where brands for a sonne of Belial, one that hath nothing of the spirit of God in him y, but is filled with the devil (that foul spirit) from corner to corner: z a man not washed from his wickednesse a, such as hath no part in Christ, nor portion in his kingdome b. Nay, he passeth in Gods Book for a Pagan c, such as hath no blood of a Christian in him; for an Epicure d, the worst of Pagans; for an Atheist, the worst of Epicures e; for an hypocrite f, the worst of Atheists; for an open rebell g, the worst of hypocrites; lastly, for a reprobate h, the most desperate of rebels; such as being enemies to the crosse of Christ, have destruction for their end, wherunto also of old they were appointed i.

I know

I know what such kinde of people (the ruder sort especially), are apt enough to object. They will never beleieve, they say, that the matter is so hainous, the danger so great, as the ministers would make of it, for first, they have as good hearts as the best: and although they be not so strait-laced as to make such a businesse about idle and evil thoughts, as some would seem to do, yet so long as none can tax them, for external outrages, and reproachful offences, they shall think never awhit the worie of themselves for all that.

ob.

Hereunto we answer, that this very brag of the goodnesse of their loose and lewd hearts speaks them at once. 1. Ignorant. 2. Proud. 3. Impenitent persons.

fol.

First, I say, Ignorant of God and his will, of themselves and their duties: as if they were not bound to love the Lord their God with all their thoughts also. Now without knowledge the minde is not good, saith Solomon, and he that (hood-wink with such blinde conceits) hasteneth with his feet (in away good enough as he fondly imagineth,) sinneth 1.

Math. 22.37

Prov. 19.2.

Rev. 3.16.
Math. 5.3,8.

Secondly, they are stuft up with pride, and self-conceitednesse: as the Laodiceans, who not knowing their own spiritual beggery, and blindnesse, gave out themselves for great rich men, and in as good case as the best. The pure in heart, are withal poor in spirit, humbled for nothing more then their inward impurities; those vain thoughts, deceitful dreams, carnal fears, worldly cares, endlesse and needlesse ploddings upon earthly things that haunt their hearts, and passe the forge of their fancies every day, in despite of whatsoever endeavours to the contrary. Together with those innumerable by-thoughts and distractions that will needs throng in upon them, even in the interim of divine duties, when they would be most free and reserv'd to God. These be the things that most gall and grieve the godly man, and bring him full often upon his knees for pardon of inward failings in those duties, for the outward well-performance whereof other godly people do many times both approve and applaud him. But now it is otherwise with the wicked: if he can wash his hands with Pilate: keep his fingers from picking and stealing, and his tongue from evil speaking: curb and keep in his inordinate lusts from budging and breaking forth in his outward practise; he cares not how foul his inwards are, how irregular and enormous the motions of his minde be: thinks though he never lay lawes upon those but suffer them to run riot, at pleasure, upon whatsoever vanities or villenies, yet he shall speed well enough, and perhaps step into heaven before the purest of them all. Here's a heart as full of pride, as empty of goodnesse: for he that listeth up himself, his minde is not upright in him.

Hab. 2.4

Luke. 13.3

Esa. 55.7.

Act. 8.22.

postulat tñ
mādvōlav
Jer. 4.14.

Thirdly, They are impenitent (and so out of the state of salvation) till they be-think themselves of a more thorough reformation. For repentance, where it is sound, begins at the heart. It is not a cleansing onely of the outside of the platter, but a changing of the inward thoughts, affections and purposes: according to that of the Prophet, Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return to the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, &c. And that of Peter to Simon Magus; Thy heart is not right in the sight of God: repent therefore, and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee. And that lastly, of the Prophet to the people. Oh Jerusalem wash thy heart from wickednesse, that thou mayest be saved (no heaven to be had, you see, where the heart is not washed) how long shall thy vain thoughts lodge within thee. No surer signe, of a foul and wicked heart, then the residence and raign of vain and vile thoughts. Let no man therefore bear himself in hand, or boast hereafter of the goodnesse of his heart, if his thoughts be habitually and allowedly evil.

ob.

Oh but we have many good and holy thoughts in our hearts: God and his name is much in our mindes and mouthes, and we think frequently upon his word we hear, and his works we see &c.

fol.

You have many good thoughts you say, 'tis well: a reprobate also may have good motions in his minde: and not be a button the better for any of them. Try your good thoughts therefore before you trust too much to them: and 1. By the causes. 2. By the effects.

For the causes, first, wee'l suppose them (for the matter) good and religious: but

but

but for their efficient cause, first, whence be they, let me ask. Are they inbred and native to your sanctified hearts, or are they onely injected from without and meerly adventitious? cast in by God, who now affects thine heart by a good motion, thy self no way concurring, but being meerly passive in the whole business? If so, Nebuchadnezzar might have as much comfort and hope here-hence as you. God put into his heart a good thought, viz. to turn his course against Israel the people of Gods wrath, and to revenge the quarrel of his covenant upon an hypocritical nation. Howbeit he meant not so, saith the Prophet, neither did his heart think so, but it was in his heart to destroy and cut off nations not a few &c.

Isai. 10. 7.

Secondly, for the form and fashion of your better sort of thoughts; are they set and solemn some times; with choice of fit matter, time and place? Do ye sit in the door of your hearts (on set purpose) to entertain good motions, as Abraham was wont, in the door of his tent to entertain strangers? Or are they not onely occasional and accidental, falling in by the by, and besides your intention by reason of some sudden occurrence? &c.

These holy men in the text did not onely think upon Gods name, as a thing that fell into their thoughts by chance: but solicitously, thoroughly studiously, seriously, they set themselves to work in good earnest, and in Gods fear, to consider of his fatherly providence, and most righteous proceedings damnably depraved and maligned by the wicked of those times; and stayed up their hearts against all discouragements with that wholesome meditation.

Mal. 3. 16.

Thirdly, as to the end of your good thoughts: both that of intention, and the other of duration. For your drift and intention first. Do ye (in taking up some holy thoughts) ayme at God and the advancement of those main ends, the setting forth of his glory in your own and other mens salvation? or do ye not rather therefore think of holy things.

1. That ye may set off with God, and make him some manner of amends, for your other infinite worldly ploddings, and wicked imaginations? or,

2. Is it not to colloque with the Lord, and curry favour, to get off the sooner, and easier when you are smarting, and it may be bleeding under his hand? Thus the false Israelites served him in the wilderness: when he slew them, then they sought him apace, they remembered that God was their Rock, and the high God their redeemer.

Vexatio dat
intellectum

These were good thoughts, had they been as well intended. But alas their project and device was onely to ease themselves of God; and to get from under his hand; for they flattered him with their mouths, and lied unto him with their lips. Their heart was not right with him (that is, their aymes and respects were sinister) neither were they stedfast in his covenant x, and so they failed in the end of continuance also.

Psal. 78. 34.
35. 36. 37.

3. Is it not to still and stifle the noise of your conscience, and to give it some sorry satisfaction, when it shall tell us (from the Pulpit, or when we are all alone, that God is to be thought upon, and his name to be had in remembrance of all that love him: that such onely as do so can be comfortably assured of their gracious estate &c. For if we do this or any other holy duty, not out of any delight we take in it, but merely to stop consciences mouth, and to ease our selves of that unrest and disquietment that we feel within, till the thing be done, our good thoughts are defective in the end of intention, and can yeeld us little comfort.

Next for the end of duration and continuance: Are those good thoughts you bind upon fixt and settled, constant and parmanent? Or are they not rather sitting and fugitive, transient and temporary, as soon gone as come, almost like a flash of lightning in the aire, like a dive-dapper upon the water, like a post that passeth swiftly by the door, or (to speak with the scripture) like the morning dew that melteth away? such were Sauls resolves z, and Balaams wishes a, Ephraims goodnesse b, and the stony-grounds fruit. The seed started up straight, and straightway also withered. That is, saith our Saviour, a man heares the word and anon with joy he receiveth it c, where by one affection of joy, ye are to understand any other: even that of grief, if the nature of the discourse call for it, let comfortable matter be handled in his hearing, he is wonderfully taken and ravished there with (for he doubts not with Haman but himself is the man whom the king wil honour d.) As if terrible or morfnul his thoughts are sutable: being affrighted, affected, enlarged, distressed, disposed as the matter requireth. O this is a passing fine temper of soul, and thus it should be with

Principium
feruet, medium
teget, exitus
alget.

y Hof. 6. 4

z 1 Sam. 26.

21.

a Num. 23. 10

b Hof. 6. 4

c Luc. 8. 6

d Math. 13. 20

d Esther 6. 6

us all, when we come to heare * . But how long will this hold, think you, with the Temporary? so long only as he is in the church, or not many hours after. This motion towards heaven is too violent to be lasting with him. The good ground therefore is said to be such, as brings forth fruit with patience e . The word signifies, with continuance or tarrance untill the fit time of fruit bearing: in opposition, doubtlesse to that ( straight way * ) of the stony ground, whose fruit was no sooner ripe then rotten; much like the Psalmists grasse upon the house top, which wishereth afore it groweth up f . Lo such are the good thoughts of ungodly men, they take them wings & are gone, they dye before they see the light, an untimely birth is better then they.

Secondly, having thus lookt upon thy good thoughts in the causes : see next, what effect they work in thee. Doth the thought of Gods presence and purity make thee tremble and sin not g ? of his mercy and patience, lead thee to repentance h ? of his power and All-sufficiencie worke thee to an even-walking, and integrity i ? Do thy thoughts of heaven, weane thee from earth ? of the vanity of life, fit thee for death ? of the uncertainty of things temporall, edge thy desires after things eternall ? Davids holy meditations were dr.ven all to this issue. His thoughts of God and his Name made him turne his feet to Gods testimonies k. The lively remembrance of Gods benefits, made him take the cup of salvation l &c. Apprehensions of mercy in God, wrought resolutions of obedience in him m. The consideration of his own present indisposition to do God service, made him chide himself out of that distemper, with, why art thou so sad my soule n &c. I thought, saith he, I would confesse my transgressions unto the Lord, and I did confesse them o. I will meditate on thy precepts : and what upshot will you drive it to ? I will have respect, saith he, to thy wayes p. Thus David and every Godly person : And thus if you can approve your thoughts truly good by the causes : and have improved them ( thus good ) to such holy effects and purposes, you may safely thence conclude your good estate; and comfortable condition.

SECT. VII.

Use 3. Exhortation. Settle the soundnesse of your Sanctification, by the goodnesse of your thoughts; motives thereunto.

THirdly, this point serves for Exhortation : and so it calles upon us all, to make our sanctification sure to our selves by this infallible signe : to approve our selves men truly fearing God by this character of a Christian, this thinking upon Gods Name.

A subject (if you look for motives) for the excellency of it (first) worthy of your best thoughts; and such as will perfect and transforme you dayly into the same image of his, from glory to glory q: causing you to shine as the pearle, which being often beaten upon by the Sun-beames, becomes at length light some & radiant as the Sun it self. By walking much in the hot Sun men gather blacknesse: but there is a glittering luster set upon their hearts and faces, that (with Moses) ascend up into the mount of God, and behold his glory r: That take a turn or two every day upon Mount Tabor, and contemplate his beauty and brightness s. These get such an excellency of experimentall wisdome hereby, as makes their faces shine t, and their lives Angelicall.

Secondly for the sweetnesse and pleasure of it, who would not wish himself an Anchorēt pent up in the voluntary prison-wales of Divine meditation? David met with marrow and farneffe, hony, and hony-comb, surpassing delight and cordiall comfort in his heavenly exercise: For, in the multitude of my perplext thoughts within me, thy comforts refresh my soule u. How precious are thy thoughts unto me O God x &c. And Moses after forty dayes converse with God in the mount (where he had been rapt and ravished in spirittall the while) was so little satisfied therewithall, that he presently after he came down againe,

* Vide Augusti
lib. 4 de doct.
Christi cap. 12:
et Luc. 8. 15
ἐν τῇ ὑπομο-
νῇ
proponitur τῇ ὑποσχολῇ de qua Heb 10.
38.

f Psal. 129. 6
 Like Charles
 8. of whose expedition to Naples Guicci-
 ardine faith,
 that he came into the field
 like thunder and lightning, but went out like a snuffe: more then a man at first, and lesse then a woman at last
 g Psal. 4. 4
 h Rom. 2. 4
 i Gen. 17. 9
 k Psal. 119. 59
 l Psal. 116. 12
 m Psal. 23.
 ult.
 n Psal. 43. ult.
 o Psal. 32. 5
 p Psal. 119.
 15. 16

Use 3.

Motives.

92 Cor. 3 ult.

Exod. 34. 29
Math. 17. 2

ꝑ Eccles. 8. 14
 valere est philosophari, inquit
 Seneca: Ego
 verò dixerim
 valere est me-ditari eloquia
 diuina. Horum meditatio vale-tudo mea, vita
 mea. Scultet: Observ: in Marc.
 ꝑ Psal. 94. 18
 ꝑ Psal. 139. 17

Exod. 32. 18

* Augustinus
dum sancta Trinitatis mysticium solus in cubiculo sedens
contemplatur,
ita à seipso abscesserat, ut à muliere quæ il-
lum consuleret
cupiebat sapiens
interpellatus,
nihil responde-
ret, imò ne respiceret qui-dem: mulier de-nique quia se
contemptam putavit, abiit
tristis. Ma-
rul. lib. 2. cap.
4. & Sab. lib.
2. cap. 6.
z Mat. 17. 4
a 2 Cor. 12. 3
* Verbaq; pro-
visam rem
Eccl. Hor.

b 2 Pet. 3. 17

* As St. Iohn
and after him
Greg. Nazianzen
d Osblosos.
e Ps. 119. 97, 98
d Rom. 15.
e 1 Cor. 2. ult.

f Ioh. 4.

g 2 Cor. 6. 20
h Act. 17. 28

i Eccles. 9. 11
& 12. ult.
Rom. 2. 15.
k 2 Sam. 7. 16
l Luc. 15. 18
m Prov. 4. 23

maketh a new motion: I beseech thee O Lord, shew me thy Glory y. Indeed this Divine meditation is a very heaven upon earth, a beginning of that beatificall vision, a hanfell of heavens happinesse, an having of one foot already in the porch of Paradise, a very foretast of eternall life. It is none other to the Saints then as the fiery Charret was to Elias: for by it men are transported from earth to heaven in their spirits, to have their conversation above, and to be so far ravished sometimes in their thinking upon Gods Name, as that they know not those things that are before them *, minde not those persons that are about them. But being in the body are carried, as it were, out of the body z, and so far lost in the endlesse maze of spirituall ravishments, that they could almost wish with Peter still to be there z, that they cannot well tell, with Paul, whether they are in the flesh, or out of the flesh a: this only they can tell, that they see unspeakable excellencies, tait incomparable sweetnesse, in that good name of his, such as no tongue of men or Angels is able to expresse.

Thirdly, as it is pleasant, so it is profitable, and that 1. to others: for meditation makes a full man, and fit for Christian conference; which is nothing else but the cloathing of our mentall conceptions, with suitable expressions *. 2. to our selves: and first, for the avoyding of evill meditation upon God and his name, awakeneth the drowly heart, weeds out inward corruptions, prevents the intrusion of trifling fancies, deceitfull dreams, vain hopes, carnall fears, foul and fleshly lusts, which else will muster and swarm in the best heart like the flies of Egypt; Leaves the devill no room, for his black, and blasphemous suggestions and injections: defeats the world that wily adversary, which else will be ready to catch us up and defile our hearts with spirituall fornication: if, Dinah-like, she finde them roving. And secondly, for furtherance in good it is many wayes profitable: for hereby we shall get intimate acquaintance with God the fountain of goodnesse, grow up in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord Iesus Christ b, (which is the ground-work of all true religion, and is therefore by a specialty called Theology *:) attain to a great measure of spirituall wildome and holinesse above our ancients: c treacherous enemies: prove all christians, expert christians, full of all goodnesse, filled with all knowledge d: not without a communication of Christs secrets, even to have the minde of Christ e &c.

Lastly, is also necessary: both in regard of God, and our selves. For God first, he calls for it, requires a Thought-worship, a service of the spirit: for why? himself

First, is a spirit f, and every one requires to be served like himself.

Secondly, he gave us these spirits, endued us with reasonable soules, with thinking faculties, that we might return them upon him again, by thinking industriously upon his Name g.

Thirdly, he upholds mans minde in its thoughts and workings, for in him we move, with the motions of the minde no lesse than of the body b.

Fourthly, he will account with us for our thoughts, as his precious talents i.

Fifthly, he will reward us for the right managing of them, as he did David k, the prodigall l, and these good people in the text.

Secondly, in respect of our selves this duty is necessary: Thoughts are the principles of Action m. Cogitation is the fountain of all both communication and conversation; causing the current of both to run either muddy or clear according to its self. For this is the manner and method of it, as the learned have well observed. Thoughts tickle and excite the affections, first, which kinde upon a thought, as tinder upon a spark. These stir and carry the will, as winds do the ship: The will, as a Queen, comandeth all the inferiour powers to execute what the thoughts have suggested, the affections seconded, and her self accepted: And is there not a just necessity then of well-employing the thoughts?

SECT. VIII.

Directions. 1. For the matter of good meditations.

But because he that exhorts to a duty, and directs not how to do it, is as he that bluffs a lamp, and powrs not in oyle to maintain it: let us lay down certain Rules and directions for 1. the Matter. 2. Manner. 3. Measure. 4. Means of better performing this piece of Gods service, and part of our duty.

For the Matter, first, of our best thoughts, it must be Gods holy Name (according to the text.) A little word, but of large extent, and very comprehensive. For besides that it signifies Gods self (as is above said) it noteth out also 1. all that is or can be known concerning God by the reasonable creatour *: such as are his essentiall Attributes communicable and incommunicable (Indeed they are all incommunicable, to speak properly and as the thing is, for they are infinitely otherwise in God then thy are in the creature, in whom they are only by some small resemblance and proportion) These are his Simplexes, Infinitenes, Life, Love, Wildome, Power, Holinesse, Justice, Goodnesse, &c. All which are but one in God (for whatsoever is in God, is God) they are distinguished only for our better apprehension: the Lord speaking to us of these things as divers one from another, only in regard of our shallow capacities. And this truth though we cannot so well comprehend, yet we are bound to beleve *: though we cannot subdue it to our understandings, yet we must strive to be subdued unto it. Here then, think of God as one not to be thought of, as one whose wisdom is his justice, whose justice is his power, whose power is his mercy, and all himself. Good without quality, great without quantity, everlasting without time, present every where without place, contayning all things, and yet sustayn'd of nothing. And here the well is deep, and we want a bucket o. A wise ignorance therefore, in these high points, is better then a foolish wisdom. It is sufficient here that we be of Gods Court, though we be not of his Councel *.

But secondly, Gods Name, as it notes out the properties of God, so his Ordinances also: I mean all these means whereby he is pleased to manifest himself unto the world.

As 1. his works: whether common to the world, as Creation and providence, the making and maintayning of all things: by both which he may be groped out p, (as the Apostle speaketh) in the dark, or rather, he is made visible q, as the same Apostle saith elsewhere, to the dimmest eye; as the beams of the Sun are by reflection, or as letters refracted and broken in a pair of spectacles. And here in contemplating these generall works of God, remember to tast the sweetnesse of God in the creature, and to delight thy self more in a spirituall, then in a naturall use of the same.

Secondly, those works are Gods Name that are more proper and peculiar to the Church; such as are Predestination, Redemption, Justification, Sanctification &c. Precious blessings, and never enough thought upon and admired; no though we should think upon nothing else all the dayes of our lives, nay as long as the dayes of heaven shall last, as that Martyr once said. These are the works of God: Secondly his word r and all other means of salvation, as the Sacraments, Prayer, discipline &c. with whatsoever belongeth else to Christian religion, is comprised under this Name of God.

Her's a large field then of matter, you see, wherein you may freely and fruitfully expatiate and feed your thoughts with these sweetest varieties, and most necessary, pleasant, profitable, and excellent objects. And to them that think upon these good things shall be mercy and truth s.

* Rom. 1. 19
το γινωσκον
78 Θεου
n Philip. 3. 12
Credite vult
Deus, non examinari, non indicari. Aug.
Our safest eloquence concerning God
is our silence.
Hooker.
Deus sphaera
est, cujus cen-
trum ubiq; pe-ripheria nus-quam. Empedo-
cles.
o Joh. 4. 11
* We can see
but his back-
parts and live:
and we need
see no more,
that we may live.
p Act. 17. 27.
Ἐν ἀφύπναι-αι
q Rom. 1. 20
καὶ ἀποφαν-
ται. We cannot see the Sun in fog, as the School-men
speak, that is,
in the circle
wherein it runs, but only
the beams of it: No more can we see God in his essence: you may see him
in his word, in
his works &c.
Preston of Gods Attributes.
r Act. 9. 15
Mal. 1. 9. 7. 11. 2.
Micah. 4. 3
s Prov. 14. 22

SECT. IX.

2. For the manner of doing this duty well, both for substance and circumstance.

BUt then secondly see as well to the manner as matter of your meditation. For it is the manner that makes or marrs every action of religion: and as a good garment may be marr'd in the making, so may a good duty in the doing. The rules here to be observed, if we would do this good work well, concerne 1. the circumstances 2. substance of this service. The circumstances are time and place. For the time first, there must be a taking heed lest at any time there be in us an evill heart of unbeleef to depart away from the living God t. But besides a continuall care of keeping alwayes a good conscience, and communion with God, and of raying up the heart by occasionall meditation, taken up from matters ever where occurring and offering themselves to our senses, that may minde us of God (as the spirituall mans fire will ever be aspiring, Nehemiah u, for instance, that man of ejaculations, and much acquaintance with God:) But besides this, I say, there must be a set and soleimn thinking upon Gods Name on sett purpose; all the powers of the soul being concentricke, and drawn into one point, that we may attend upon God all the while, as near as may be, without distraction x. And therefore I should judge it fit, that some convenient portion of time should be redeemed from other occasions, and purposely allotted and appointed, for the better and more thorough discharge of this most necessary, but yet much neglected duty.

Secondly, for the place where we meditate, let it be retired and secret, for the preventing of distraction, which else will certainly grow upon us, by the singular policy and malice of the devil: who taking all advantages of our carnality, and knowing how near and familiar earthly things are to our senses, how remote and supernaturall heavenly things y, he labours therefore (all he can) by outward objects to distract and divide *** the faculties of the soul by uncomely motions, and impertinent thoughts: so to slacken the earnestnesse of our affections, and bereave us, if possible, of the benefit of our best meditations. Retire we therefore into some secret place, whensoever wee would meditate. Peter did it upon the leads z, Isaac in the fields a, David in his closet b, Jacob upon the high-way to Mesopotamia c, to whom therefore so good a day was followed with so sweet a night: For he saw the blessed Angels climbing up and down that sacred ladder, at the top whereof is the Father, the whole length whereof is the Son, the Spirit firmly fastning all such thereunto as duely meditated, that they may bee transported unto blisse eternall.

Now in the next place, for the substance of this duty, let it be done in manner and form following.

First cheerfully: for God loves not to strain upon any, neither cares he for an ill-willing service. Delight thy self in the Lord d, if he shall delight in that thou doest: let it be thy recreation to walk into Gods Garden, to muse upon his word, and works, to be thinking upon his Name.

Secondly, do it soberly e, not prying into Gods secrets further then hee hath revealed them: lest ye lose your selves in the search, and be swallowed up in a maze, or whirl-pool of errors and heresies.

Thirdly, do it spiritually, without framing any grosse image of God in our mindes, or representing him by the similitude of any creature in our hearts; for this is idolatry. Onely this may help our understandings much: when we think of God, to conceive that God is in Christ (that expresse image of his Fathers person f) and there we may finde firme footing for our fickle thoughts. He is that ladder of ascension g, by which we may climb safely up to God; whilest we fix the

1 Heb. 3. 12

2 Neh. 2. 2

3 1 Cor. 7
distraction
sws.

4 Prov. 24. 7
* Divide thy regna. Machia.
Anima disper-
sa fit minor.

5 Acts 10. 9
a Gen. 24. 63
b Psal. 4. 4
c Gen. 21. 12

d Psal. 37. 4
Virtus volentium nulla est.

e Rom. 12. 3
σωφρονειν ελε το
σωφρονειν.
Qui scrutatur majestatem, opprimetur a gloria Aug.
f Heb. 1. 3. ωραδυ αμα
χι χαρανθη
g Joh. 3. 13

eye

eye of our minds upon his humane nature: in which the Godhead dwelleth bodily h, that is personally. So then, like as when I see the body of a man, there I know his soul is also: and therefore I speak to his understanding, when and where I see his body, because they are not severed: so viewing by the eye of my minde, that humane nature of Christ, now glorious in heaven; I can there also look upon the great God, because I know he is there personally united.

h Colof. 2.9
σωματικῶς.
Wee may not set before our eyes Christ-
man, and so worship without any more ado: but if
and besides

we conceive of the Man-Christ; and then worship that God-head that dwelleth in him, we do right: we attain to a point further, which is, to conceive of God in Christ. Bifield on 1 Pet. 2. pag. 530.

Fourthly, do this divine work reverently, taking heed that we defile not his Name i, by our slubbering services: as those greasie priests did in the beginning of this prophecy k; whiles they thought any thing good enough for God. But undertake we this duty with trembling hearts, and wel-composed affections, coming into his dreadful presence with the best preparation we can get: considering that he is a great king, and stands upon his seniority, as he tells them there: yea his Name is dreadful among the Heathen. ib.

i Deut. 28. 38
k Mal. 1. 8

Lastly, do it constantly, never going off, nor giving over the holy matter of our meditation (whatever it be) till we have made somewhat of it; till it bee form'd and seated in our hearts, till it be well digested, and improved for practise. Else what will it profit us to knock at the door of our hearts by some good thoughts of God and his Name, if we stay not an answer? Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the Lord l, saith the Prophet.

Verse ult.

l Hof. 6. 3

SECT. X.

Directions about the measure of divine Meditation: where is shewed how men offend 5. wayes in thinking on earthly things.

Hitherto the manner of our thinking upon Gods Name. The measure follows; And that must be modus sine modo: For the generall, it must be without measure *. In particular, think we must upon the things of God more plentifully, largely, affectionately, constantly then of all other things in the world laid together. This is a duty of the first Commandement, yea this is that first and great Commandement of the Law, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all, &c.

* Cum Cyprianus
no modum esse
putemus in pie-tate nullum te-
nere modum.
Quocumque tempore non cogitaueris Deum
2: c. 3.
puta tempus
illud amisisse.
Casarius monuit.
Omne tempus quo de Deo non cogitasti, cogita-
re perdidisse,
Bernardus.
Magis Dei meminisse debe-
mus quam re-
spirare.
Herdfield.
m Psal. 139. 18
n Eley 26. 9
o Mar. 6. 33
p Eley 58. 13
* Hoc age. Gel.
q 2 Sam. 17. 7
r Psal. 36. 6. 7
s Job 29. 18
t Luke 10. 4
u 1 Cor. 13. 11

Not, but that it is lawfull to think also of other necessary busineses in their due place and season: but the offence is, when 1. We think of them primarily, and in the first place: letting them have the first-fruits of our thoughts in a morning, which indeed is due to God alone, and was paid him in kind by David: When I awake, I am still with thee m, saith he. And by Esay, With my soul have I desired thee in the night, yea with my spirit within me will I seek thee early n. That rule of our Saviour is generall, and holds here, Seek ye first the kingdome of God o, &c. 2. Unseasonably, at prohibited times, as on the Lords day p, and in the Interim of divine duties any day *: for then to give way to earthly thoughts, is to commit dalliance with strangers before Gods face: yea to think of the best things out of season, when the duty in hand calls for the whole heart, is sinfull: and in that case we must answer the tempter, as Husbai did Ahitophel, Thy counsell is not good at this time q. 3. Too favourily, or with over-much delight, or confidence in the same; being wedded and wedg'd unto them in our thoughts, and affections, laying our whole waight upon them (as it were:) as David did, when he had gotten him upon his mount, and said, He should never be moved r; and as Job, when flourishing and swimming in all abundance of wealth and ease, hee made no other reckoning but to die in his nest s. 4. Solicitously, distrustfully, anxiously, when (Martha-like) we trouble our heads about many things t, and turmoil our spirits, with fretting, vexing, carking, and corroding cares, and thoughts of the things of this life, contrary to that Evangelicall precept, Take no thought u, and again,

Ph lip. 4. 6

Luke 12. 29
in carefull
suspence

1 Cor 7. 29
Zacheus converted
fac. Illuminati
stant opul se
nil agendum
seris in tota vita prater ce-lestia, reliqua
obliu. Rolloc:
in Joh. 4. 32

In nothing be carefull x. 5. Needlessly, endlessly, and superfluously; laying out far more thoughts upon these earthly things, then the matter amounts to. Live not in carefull suspence 7. The word sounds thus much, Hang not like Meteors, make no tedious and superfluous discourses in the air. It notes out the covetous persons endlesse framing of projects, and tossing of thoughts, this way, and that way, and every way, for the compassing of his greedy desires, and worldly designs. But do not you so, saith our Saviour: rather be paring off superfluities this way, and contract your thoughts into as narrow a compasse as may be. It is enough to look at the world slightly, aloof off, and out at eyes end, as it were: the main weight of our thoughts must be laid upon God, and the advancing of his Name. It is affirmed, to his singular commendation, of a worthy Divine of Scotland, that he did eate and drink, and sleep eternall life.

Whom that you may expresse, and imitate, harken lastly, to the means of thinking fruitfully upon Gods Name. These are two. 1. Shun the hinderances, 2. Use the helps to this duty.

SECT. XI.

*Directions to the means of fruitfull thinking on Gods holy Name: where
4. hinderances to be avoided, and 7. helps to be used.*

1 Cor 3. 5
Psal. 25. 9

1 Tim. 6. 4, 5
Prov. 14. 26

THE hinderances are 1. pride and conceitednesse of a sufficiency in our selves to conceive of God, or think of any thing else that's good, to good purpose a. God imparts his secrets to none such b, but leaves them commonly to dote and busy their brains about questions, or vain disputations that tend to nothing but strife and ostentation c.

2. Passion, He that is hasty of spirit, well he may exalt folly d, saith Solomon, but he shall not lift up many holy thoughts; ( He give him that gift : ) For these require a heart meek and at rest from the confused hurry of troublesome passions.

Mat. 3. 7

1 Joh. 3. 3
2 Tim. 3. 6

3. Impenitency, a wilfull continuance in any known wickednesse. For the pure in heart only see God e; sith there must be some proportion between the eye and the object: so between our minds, and God the object of our minds. Of all the body, the eye only receiveth the light, and that because it is like the light: so he that hath any sound hope of seeing God ( one day as he is, in the mean time as we may ) must purify himself as God is pure f. But as black can take no other dye: so an impenitent heart is incapable of divine contemplation g.

1 Cor 7. 31,
32.
1b.

Colof. 3. 1, 2

4. Lastly, Earthly-mindednesse: this distracts and divides the heart, and indisposeth it to thinking upon God and goodnesse h: Indeed it eateth out the very heart of goodnesse, by eating all goodnesse out of the heart. It causeth that a man cannot care for the things of the Lord, i. minde and affect the things above k, have our conversation in heaven, attend upon the Lord without distraction: for who can serve two masters &c? Remove the hinderances first, rid thy heart of these evill guests. And this done, make use of the following helps.

Lam. 3. 23

Ps. 108. 1, 2, 3

Prov. 3. 21,
24, 25
Pro 6. 21, 22
Christian
courteau.

Ars artium est regimen animarum Greg:
in Pastor.
1 Joh. 2. 16

Fi st, Accustom your selves to awake with God, and forget not to begin the day with thoughts of him and his mercyes renewed upon you every morning l every moment. This will sweetly season and supply the soul, putting it into an happy and heavenly temper for the whole day following: as it did Dauids m. And here, remember to close up your heart, at your down-lying at night; and, if possibly you can, to fall asleep out of some heavenly meditation: so shall your sleep be the more sweet n and secure o, and your heart in better plight whensoever you awake. He that thus raketh up his fire ore-night, shall finde fire in the morning.

Secondly, keep your hearts with all custody the whole day thorowout. 1. Con- ttergard them continually from corruption within, from infection without: especi- ally that which is drawn from those three poisonous objects, mentioned by St. John, The lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes and the pride of life p: that is, plea- sure, sure, profit, and preferment the worldly mans Trinity (as one fitly stiles them) A heart scattered up and down with these vanities will be as far to seek when it should wait upon God, as a wild horse run'd up in a wide field, that cannot be taken when he should be saddled. 2. Be often elevating, and winding up your hearts as the weights of a clock, that bear downwards naturally, and are yet drawn lower by the sin that doth so easily surround and oppresse us as a talent of lead r: Unto thee O Lord do I lift up my soul, saith David s, and Nehemiah was often darting up some good desire to God, whatsoever his employment was. And our civill conversation also is in heaven t, saith Paul: we exercise our general callings in our particular, and go about our earthly busineses with heavenly minds, using common things as a stirrop to mount us up to things of an higher straine, and exacting (by a divine Alchymy) heavenly meditations out of earthly objects and occasions.

Thirdly, examine your thoughts often, and let not an idle motion, flying fancy, or sinfull dream pass without a sharp check, a censure of the word. There is a sharp eye to be set, and a strict hand to be held over a mans thoughts if ever he will have good of them; they being so infinite, nimble, slippery, and in so secret a place, free from the worlds censure. Call them therefore often to a domestick Audit, cherish the good, check the bad, let them have the law if they be extravagants. Remember that an evill thought uncontrolled, may vex thee on thy death-bed, as little and as light a matter as many make thereof.

Fourthly, get a sound and clear judgment, able to discern of things that be excellent, and to prefer God and the things of God incomparably before all other things whatsoever. Make those things above your treasure once, and then your heart will be chiefly set, and your thoughts will chiefly run on them u.

Fifthly, greaten your love to God and goodnesse: for strong affections make strong impressions, and cause great thoughts of heart. A man cannot but think much of that he loves. Oh how I love thy law, saith David (and as an effect of that love) it is my meditation day and night x. But especially, love to be Gods servants on the sabbath day y; let the entire concurrence of the whole man be his alone that day, as much as may be: so shall ye be the better able to think profitably of him, the whole week after. Our infinite week-day wandrings, and wofull trisling out our golden hours in idle and evill thoughts comes (much what) from our customary and carnall keeping of Gods holy-day z.

Sixtly, exercise your selves in the word of life: to witte to hear and read Gods holy word. Search and study the scriptures a: These will 1. free the heart from impure lusts. Wherewithall shall a young man (bisse that is in the heat of his passions) cleanse his way b, or rub off his filth? (It is a metaphor from glasse, which though rub'd never so clean, will soon gather dust again.) Answer is made there, by taking heed thereto according to thy word. 2. It will fill the head with good notions of God, and his nature, his word, and his works &c. *, so that no rume shall be left for worse thoughts, which else will be stirring. For the thoughts of a man are never idle, as ye know, save when he sleeps; nor then many times; but are like a mill that turns round unceasingly, while it hath water, and if it want other grist, will grind and grate upon it self.

Lastly, (to sett all the former awork) add hearty prayer to him that is both the heart-maker, and heart-mender too. Pray him to make the meditations of our hearts ever acceptable in his sight c: and when we are in a good frame, to keep it ever in the imagination of the thoughts of our hearts, and to prepare our hearts unto himself d, as David begs in the behalf of his people. Pray him to open your understandings, to sanctify your wills and affections, to raise up and ravish your hearts, to fix your quicksilver as one speaks; that is, in meditating upon good things to grant you strength of memory, stedfastnesse of imagination, steadnesse of minde, sharpnesse of conceit, soundnesse of judgement, and all other necessary gifts and abilities, that ye may so meditate upon Gods precepts, that wisethall ye may have respect to his wayes e.

q Heb. 12.
ἐν ᾧ ἐγὼ ζῶ
begirreth us.
r Zach. 5. 8
s Psal. 25. 1
t Philip. 3. 20
πολίτευμα.
Prov. 15. 24
The godly man goeth up high: as an eagle stretcheth his wings, he stretcheth out his feet, and
even in the common businesse of this life.

Quicquid judet dicere, pudet et cogitare. Est tuisissimum et periculum ut
assuescat animus sollicita semper et per-vigili custodia
discernere co-
gitationes suas,
et ad primum
animi motum
vel probare,
vel reprobare
quod cogitat:
vel bonas co-
gitationes a lat,
vel statim ma-
las extinguat.

Hier: in Epist.
ad Demetriad:
mens non cessat
parere cogitati-
ones: tu autem
malas ewelle,
bonas excole.
Chrysost.

Dum in cogit-atione voluptas
non reprimitur,
etiam in actione
dominatur.
u Mat. 6. 21
x Pl. 119. 97
y Esay 56. 6
z Esay 58. 13
a Joh. 5. 39
b Psal. 119. 9

יורה * Hieronymus
de Nepot: vit.
cum assidua
lectione et me-ditatione diu-
turna. pectus
suum bibl. thes-cam christi
effecisse.

Cogitationes
innumerae sunt
une die: eas
quis colliget,
quis corriget?

quis reprimet, quis exprimet? Sphinx philof. c Psal. 19. ult. d 1 Chron. 29. 18. e Psal. 119. 15, 16.

SECT. XII.

The Conclusion.

f Gal. 6.16
g Prov. 14.28
h 2 Sam. 19.20

Let this be the way, walk in it: And as many as walk after this direction peace shall be on them and mercy, and upon the Israel of God f. For, Do they not erre that devise evill? but to them that think upon good things shall be mercy and truth g. Mercy and truth be with you h. Amen.

The Righteous mans Recompence.

OR,

GODS JEWELS MARKT AND MADE UP,

FROM MENS MISUSAGES.

The Text: MALACHI 3. 17.

And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of Hosts, in that day when I make up my Jewels: And I will spare them as a man spareth his own sonne that serveth him.

CHAP. I.

The Text divided.

GODS gracious acceptation of his people and their holy services, hath been hitherto detcribed, and discovered. Followes now his righteous remuneration, and rich respects to their persons, which he highly prizeth; for They shall be mine, saith the Lord of Hosts, in that day when I make up my Jewels. 2. To their performances which he bountifully rewardeth. And I will spare them, as a man spareth his own sonne that serveth him. Then shall ye return and discern &c.

The former, without forcing points us to these three positions.

1. That God is the Lord of Hosts.
2. That this Lord of Hosts will have his day to do good to his people: and to make them up as his Jewels from the worlds misusages.
3. That this people of his shall be graciously owned, and greatly honoured in that day.

SECT.

SECT.

That God is Lord of Hosts. What these Hosts are, why called Hosts :
What it is to be Lord of Hosts.

First, God is the Lord of Hosts. So he is frequently stiled in the old Testament, Lord of Sabaoth (which is all one) in the New ; though this more seldome, because the old Law was given in fear, the new in love, as Hugo will have it.

Now touching this title here, and elsewhere given to God, let us see, 1. What these Hosts, or Armies are, whereof he is Lord. 2. Why they are called his Hosts. 3. What it is to be Lord of these Hosts, and what honour accrues, and is ascribed to God by this Attribute. In treating whereof, I must intreat my Reader, the same that the Orator did His, (when he spake of Socrates, and Lucius Crassus) that they should imagine some greater matter then here they finde written : forasmuch as in speaking of God we speak not what we ought, but what wee are able, as that Emperour hath well observed in his Epistle to Ambrose.

Doct. 1.

Ut majus quiddam de tis, quam qua
scripta sunt,
suspiciantur.

Cic. 3. de Oratore. Loquimur de Deo non quantum debemus sed quantum possumus. Gratian. Inperator

First then, these Hosts whereof God is said to be Lord Sovereigne, are all creatures heaven, in earth, and under earth. 1. In heaven there are. 1. Angels, which are called, The Host of heaven, 1 King. 22. 19. An heavenly Army, or the multitude of the heavenly Host, Luke 2. 13. the armies that are in heaven, following the Lord Christ upon white horses, &c. Rev. 19. 13. The Authour to the Hebrews calles them the heavens (as some conceive it) Chap. 7. 26. Not because they were coworkers with God in the creation of the world, as the Rabbins will have it : for though Angels are called Elohim, Psal. 8. 5. yet it was Jehovah Elohim onely that made all things of nothing, Gen 2. 4. Esay 45. 24. Neither yet, because they move the heavens, and governe the whole world, as the Jews (after the Platonists) beleevd, and thereupon fell into the sinne of Angel worship, intruding into those things that they had not seen, Colos. 2. 18. and curiously prying into those secrets whereof there is neither proof, nor profit. Howbeit, that they have, under God, a main stroke in ordering the course of naturall and civil affairs, it may be proved out of Ezekiel, Chap. 1. where the beasts are said to stir the wheels, as themselves are stirred by the Spirit of God. And for the manner of their motion, every one of them is said to have four faces, that is, they can look every way at once ; and to have calves feet round, that is, they are apt to go every way : and this with the greatest facility that can be.

Goodw. Child. of Light, &c.
102.

Ratione plu-
ralis Elohim;
ex Hebraeis
aliqui existi-
mant so. ierarchum Deo Angelos in opere creatio-nis, &c. Pa-
reus in Gen.
1. 1.

Hebraei Platonici imbui opinionibus Angelos colorum motores totiusque mundi gubernatores esse putabant, &c. Pareus in Heb. 2. 5.

Next below the Angels in Gods hosts, are the Sunne, Moon, and Stars, those Celestial bodies, 1 Cor. 15. 40 the glorious furniture of the visible heavens, called also, the Host of heaven, Deut. 4. 19. Aet 7. 42. Zeph. 1. 5. These fought in their courses against Sisera, Gods enemy, Judg. 5. 20. And so they do still by their light, heat, and influence : causing stormy, tempestuous, and unseasonable weather, to the annoyance of the Adversary, as once of the Quades, and Marcomans, upon the prayers of the thundering Legion (as they were afterwards called) in the dayes of Marcus Antoninus the Philosopher, Emperour. And as in the Battle between Edward the third of England, and Philip of France (who being enraged with a former defeat, marched with fury into the field ; elevated with a false hope of triumphant victory) there fell at the instant such a piercing shower of rain, as dissolved their strings, and made their bowes unusefull. And at the breaking up of the shewre, the Sunne shone full in the face of the French, dazeling their sight, &c. and on the backs of the English, as if

The Queen of heaven, Ire 44 17.

Vidore licebat in eodem loco aquam ignemque fi-
mul de celo cadere :
Ignis non attingebat
Romanos, neque imber
juvabat barbaros, sed
eos non, secus inflam-
mabat, ac oleum, &c.
*Dio Cass. in vita M.
Antonini. Philof.*

Daniels Hist. of Eng. fol. 237.

Milites nobis,
qui adstant,
reulerunt, ex-
torta sibi esse
de manibus
quoscumq; jacu-libantur. cum
a Theodosij partibus in ad-versarios vehemens ventus
iret, qui & ipsorum tela in eorum corpora retorqueret. Aug. de civ. dei. lib. 5. cap. 26. Rupertus ventos nominat scopas mundi, quod Deus illis everrat, & expurget aeris corruptionem. Job 38. 23.

it all made for them. Hence the superstitious Heathens, and some degenerate Jews in Jeremies time worshipped this Chen of heaven (as they called it) set up the constellations of heaven for gods. In opposition to which petty Gods, he is called Lord of Hosts, God of these gods, maker and master of them all. And these are his heavenly hosts, his cavahy, his high-land forces: not to mention here the meteors (whether fiery, as thunder and lightning, or aiery, as winde and earthquakes, or watery, as rain, hail &c. All which God is said to keep by him in his treasury, and to bring them fort in the day of battle.

Rabbi Kimchi well observeth, that God hath magnified chelo b, and mateb chelob his upper and lower troops, as his horse and foot ready preft. Mark 16. 15. Σοφὸν τὸ κρυπτό καὶ ἰσχυρόν. Eurip. Τέχνημα σοφῶν τις, ἀντιπαρὸν καὶ ἐκδοτόν. X. noph. Ejus conciliis militant etiam qui ejus conciliis repugnant. Greg. Agunt quod vult Deus, sed non volunt quod vult Deus. Bern The Turks bear no weapon but in travel, then some of them seem like a walking armory. Blounts voy- age p. 79. D Willet on Rom. Gorran in Rom. 9. 29. 1 Tim. 1. 20. expounded.

Secondly Gods armies in the earth are al terrestiall bodies 1 Cor. 15. 40. both lifeless and living creatures. All which continue and keep their station this day according to his ordinance, saith David: for they are all thy servants: Psal. 119. 91. and at thy beck and check Esay 45. 12. Plato was wont to say, that the earth was a kinde of living creature, having stones for bones, rivers for veins, trees for haire &c. But Philo better sayth, that the world is after a sort, a great man, and a man little world. In the Gospel man is called every creature. Go forth into all the world faith our Saviour, and preach the Gospel to every creature, that is, to man the Model of the whole creation, the master-piece of Gods handy-work. A wise Philosopher could say that man is the end of all things in a semicircle: that is, All things else were made for him, and he himself is made for God. His servant he is, and sworn souldier, as Nebuchadnezzar is called and Cyrus: and Askur, the rod in his hand. For even the wicked also do the will of God, though unwittingly: partly besides, and partly against their own wils. And in this sense, one nation may be Gods host to punish another, or to sheath their own swords in their own bowels, as Midian. But especially this holds true of the Church militant, which is terrible as an army with banners, and every member thereof is a spiritual warrior, harnessed, like a travelling Turk, capapee, with that heavenly Panoplie Eph. 6. 13. resisting the devil, who fleeth from him, J. m. 4. 7. The Israelites marching out of Egypt are called the Lords hosts Exod. 12. 41 In relation whereunto, some have thought that God assumed to himself this title; because the Ark, (that testimony of his speciall presence) marched in good array, and all comly equipage, in the midst of the camp. But to speak forwards.

Thirdly, under the earth, besides those creatures that passeth thorough the pates of the sea, Psal. 8. 8. Whales and whirl-pooles, Dragons and Leviathans, that serve to swallow up Gods Jonasses, and afterwards to ship them to land again. The very Devils also are at Gods command, and appointment: as is intimated (according to some) in that Angelical visitation Holy, holy, holy Lord God of hosts, that is faul. Gorran, of Angels, men, and devils. True it is, he is called Prince of the air: but that is by divine permission for a season. And God of this world: but no otherwise then Absalom was once called the king, viz. by usurpation. Take him in his greatest power, what is the Devil else but Gods officer or executioner, to blinde the reprobate, and to teach others that belong to God, not to blaspheme: that is by afflicting their bodies, and buffetting their consciences, to warn them not to walk unchristianly, to the scandal of the weak; and the scorne of the wicked.

These then are Gods hosts. Hosts they are called (and so we descend to the second quare.)

1. For the huge number, and mighty multitude, infinitely surpassing those numerous armies of Xerxes, Tamerlane, the Ethiopians in Asas time, that brought a thousand thousand into the field, the biggest army that I remember to have read of in holy Writ: but no way comparable unto the Lords hosts, who (besides all other creatures innumerable attendant) hath thousand thousands of Angels ministring unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand standing before him, as waiting an errand, and that would be glad of an office. He bringeth them out by number, and calleth them all by their names Esay 40. 20. which no earthly Generall can do.

2. They

Reas. 1.
2 Cor. 14. 9.

Dan. 7. 10.

2 They are called hosts for their Eutaxie, the comly and lovely order of them, keeping their stations, as it were in martial manner, and battel-ray. When eē the Septuagint commonly render this word used for Hosts by κόσμη and Hierome, Ornatus; for order makes an army beautiful.

3. For their obedience which is no lesse admirable, then their order amiable. No souldier is so obsequious, so active, so ready prest at the command of his captain, as all creatures are at the command of God: So well disciplined are they and trained to it, (not by rules of art, but by instinct of nature, Psal. 119. 91.) that if he say but to any go, he goeth: if come, he cometh, if do this, he doeth it. Never was any Emperour so observed as he is, even to a nod or beck. Psal. 123. 2.

Fifthly, therefore is he stiled somtimes Lord of Hosts, and other times Lord God of Hosts, to denote and set forth his infinite and irresistibile power, and that there is no standing before him (thus armed and appointed) if his wrath be kindled, yea though never so little: which is an answer to the third quære. Hoc epitheto summa tribuitur Deo potentia, saith a grave and learned interpreter. (chiefest power and soveraign authority is given and ascribed to God by this attribute. For this, it is often used, and urged in the old Testament; as in the new, the very Hebrew word Sabaoth is retained for more Emphasis, Iam. 5. 4. The cryes of them that have reaped your fields, and yet received no wages, are entred into the eares of the Lord of sabaoth: that is, they are graciously heard by a Lord far more mighty then you are any, saith the same interpreter. And in his larger Annotations, this saith he, is added to shew his infinite forces, and matchlesse might. The like may easily be collected from Rev. 4. 8. compared with Esay 6. 3. Where the holy Ghost rendereth Holy, holy, holy Lord God of hosts, by Holy, holy, holy Lord God Almighty, παντοκράτωρ, not ἀντοκράτωρ onely, such a one as hath not the sole command alone, but the whole command of all the creatures. In heaven he hath good servants; in hell bad: in earth both. The other Apostles call him Lord (it is Gorranus observation) Iudas calls him not so, but Rabbi Mat. 26. 22, 25. because he had shaken off the yoke of obedience, but they that will not bend must break, as he did, when shortly after he became his own deathsmā, after that he had delivered up his master, and all by the determinate counsel of God, the mighty strong God, as he is stiled Esay 9. 6. the Al-sufficient God Gen. 17. 1. Aben Ezra renders it The conquerour: and the Lord Christ is said to go forth riding on his white horse conquering, and to conquer. Rev. 6. 2. The Septuagint render it Self-sufficient able to do all without help of any; how much more when having such hosts at command. Aquila renders it ἐλκμμος strong: lusty; valiant. Pagnine and Iunius, Omnipotent. Now, dicitur Omnipotens, quia omnium tenet potestatem, saith Isidore. And this David the King acknowledgeth in all ample manner (yea Nebuchadnezzar the tyrant Dan. 4. 37.) Thine O Lord is the greatnesse, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty. For all that is in the heaven is thine: thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head above all &c. 1 Chron. 29. 11. 12.

Reaf. 2.
quasi milites in statione ita
collocati sunt.
Sb indler Pentag.
Acceperunt
pro isebijucunditas decus ornamentum. Ib.
Reaf. 3.
Math. 8.

Berg in Rom.
9. 29. exauditi sunt a domino multo
potentior
quam ipse frs.
Ad infinitas
ipsum vires et copias explicandas. Berg.
in loc.
Kufis sets forth his absolute power
and soveraign-
ty over all creatures
whence he is called the
one or onely
Lord.
Eph. 4. 5.
ἀλάκμος μέγας
ἵψυ est
dispare, per-dere, quod
visiori conque-
rit imprimis.
ἀντοκράτης
ἰκαρ
ἀντοκράτης.

SECT. II.

The Pope will needs be Lord of Hosts

Vhat meaneth then that man of sin, that mouth of blasphemy (that I may apply) to speak so great things of himself Rev. 13. 5. to boast himself so much in mischief Psal. 52. 1. to lift up himself above all that is called God, sitting in Gods temple, and shewing himself there as if he were Lord of Hosts? For although he hath but some angle, and not all the corners of the earth, though he is but a fox in a hole, yet his discreet doctors say of him, that he can do all that Christ can do: that God hath put all things in subjection, under his feet; the beasts of the field, that is men living on the earth, the fishes in the sea, that is souls, in purgatory the souls of the aire, that is the souls of the blessed.

It sufficeth not Moscanina, to derive Pope of Papa the interjection of admiring, because Vfe. 1.

2 Thel. 2.
Psal 100.
Fran. Zabab.
Bellar. lib.
4. de. Pont. Ro.
quia in omnibus admirabi-
lis, stupor man-
di.

Rev. 13 3
 Admiratio pe-
 peris philoso-phiam, sic et Antichristia-nismum.
 habens in toto
 mundo utranque
 gladium &c.
 Dulcia adorandus.
 De ministris milit.
 Eccles. l. 1.
 cap. 1.
 Os pape et eulus diaboli in eodem sunt pra-
 dicamento.
 Ignarij Con-
 claus. pag. 135.
 vide Pareum
 in Apoc. 13. 3.
 Oraculis vocis
 mundi modera-
 ris habenas.
 et merito in ter-
 ris diceris esse
 Deus.
 Super Angelos
 eleuatur papa,
 adeo ut eos ex-communicare
 possit, ait Joh.
 23. in extra-
 vag.
 Luk. 4. 6
 Dr. Featly his Transub. exploded.

because the Pope is the worlds wonderment: (that beast, he should have said, in the Revelation, that all the world wondered after) and Pontifex, because he makes men a bridg to blessednesse, but he will have him to be King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, having the power of both swords throughout the world; yea command over all reasonable creatures. Boniface the 8. wrote to Philip K. of France, that he was Lord of all, both temporals and spirituals, in all countries, which is one of the diuels titles. Math. 4. Valladerius shames not to say of Pope Paul 5. that he was a god, lived familiarly with the Godhead, heard Predestination it self whispering to him, had a place to sit in council with the most diuine Trinitie. And another of the same Popes parasites, dedicates a booke to him thus: To Paul the 5. Vice-God, the most invincible Monarch of the Christian common-wealth, the most mighty defender of the Pontifician omnipotency. Our Lord God the Pope, saith a certaine Canonist: And, to thee is given all power in heaven and earth, said the Council of Lateran, the very year before Luther stood up against that Romish Antichrist; who weares a triple crowne, in token that he is Lord of heaven, where he may canonize saints, of hell, where he may free soules out of purgatory, of earth where he saith, as once the diuel did: All power is delivered unto me, and unto whomsoever I will, I give it. But how haps it then that he gives no more to many of his best ser-vants? To instance in some of our own fugitives: Allin had a Cardinals hat, but with so thin lining (meanes to support his state) that he was commonly called the starveling Cardinall. Stapleton was made professor of a petty universitie, scarce so good as one of our free-schooles in England. Sanders was starved. Will. Reynolds was nominated to a poore vicarage under value. On Harden his Holinesse bestow'd a prebend of Gannt, to speake more properly (saith mine Au-thour) a Gannt prebend &c. But this by the by onely.

SECT. III.

Wo to Rebels against the Lord of Hosts.

Use 2.
 Job. 21.

Psal. 68. 21.

--caesarem in-tonsam et capita alta ferentes.
 καρχηνομοῦν-
 τες Ἀχαιοί.
 Lacones coammutantiebant
 ad terrorem.

Cruentabit ca-
 put inimicorum
 suorum. Beza.

For a second Use. Is God the Lord of Hosts? and doth he with them whatsoever he will in heaven and earth? Wo then to rebels and refractaries, to traitours and transgressours, sons of Belial, children of disobedience, that say to the King Apostata, that break his bands, and send messages after him, saying, we will not have this man to rule over us: that refuse to be reclaimed, and stick not to oppose with crest and brest, whatsoever stands in the way of their sins and lusts.
 God (saith the Psalmist) shall wound the head of his enemies. But are there any such, may some say? so desperately mad, as to bear armes against heaven? yes, saith the prophet, and ye shall know who they are too. He shall wound the hairy scalp of such a one as goeth on in his trespasses. All those then that lye sucking at the borches of carnall pleasures, grinding in the mill of worldly lusts, listning the suggestions of Satan the Lords profest adversary, and principall Counter-factionist. All that against the rich offers of Gods free grace, the menaces of his mouth, the strokes of his hand, chuse to go on still in their lewd and lawlesse courses, refusing to be reformed, hating to be healed, all these are to be reputed Gods enemies. And although their scalps be never so hairy, their lockes never so dusky, their lookes never so lofty and haughty, fierce and furious: though they have marrow in their bones, and milk in their breasts, though their natural moisture be no whit decayed, through age or unhealthinesse, with Moses, much lesse turned into the drought of summer, with David, which might occasion baldnesse (as in elderly people) but that being young and youthy, yea strong and fappy, they had haire by weight, as Abolom, yea were rough all over with Espan, which which makes them look grim and terrible with the Caldeans, that people of fierce countenance, yet that shall little avails them, when God shall take them in hand. Hee'll crack their crownes, hee'll cleave their skulls, hee'll wound through the hairy scalps of all such, as obstinating themselves in an evill course, will

will needs on in their trespasses, * wharfever it stand them in. In the doing of which fearfull execution upon his enemies, the Lord of hosts will not much trouble himself neither. For he needs no more but arise, and his enemies shall be scattered: yea all that hate him shall flee before him, as it is in this same Psalm, ver. 1. He needs not arme himself, as David, against this giant-like generation, with weapons offensive or defensive: for with his bare hand only he can beat the proudest of them, yea make a puny-boy and a very baby of him.

Thou hast smitten all thine enemies, saith David, upon the cheek-bone; thou hast broken the teeth of the ungodly. As if he should have said, Those that think themselves tall fellowes, and dare challenge the very devill to a duell (as Caligula once did his Jupiter) are as children in thy great hands, and fare accordingly. For thou boxest them about the ears, clappst them on the cheeks with the palms of thy hands, buffetest them about the lips with thy clutch-fist, till they spit blood again, and be made to look their teeth in their throats, thou hast broken the teeth of the ungodly. But if yet they will not yeeld, but wrestle with thee, with the froward thou wilt wrestle Psalm. 18. 26. Thou wilt be as froward as they for the hearts of them. If they will needs try a fall with thee, thou wilt fell them, and quell them, thou wilt lay them at thy feet, (as the Lord Christ did Saul, and the souldiers that came to surprize him) yea thou wilt smite them in the hinder-parts (where we use to whip unruly boyes) and so put them to a perpetual reproach. Psalm. 78. 66. But what need the Lord (as I was saying) be at all this pains with himself, or once so much as foul his fingers with them, who hath such mighty armies, and so many Hosts afoot to chastise his rebels? so that if he do but once wag his little finger, or stamp with his foot only upon the ground (as that Roman vainly vaunted) he can presently command and call for legions of Angels to subdue Senacherib, millions of stars to fight against Sisera, volleys of thunder and lightning to blast and burn up the Philistins, cart-loads of massy hailstones to brain the kings of Canaan. These are Gods hosts in heaven. Neither is he to seek of sufficient forces here beneath, both by sea and land. There he hath whales and dragons to devour his enemies: here he hath, besides armies of diseases within them (Physicians reckon 2000. severall sorts, 200. whereof belong to the eye) that lye in wait for the precious life: let him but say with Jehn, who is on my side? who? and all beasts, fowls, and creeping things innumerable will straight looke out at their windowes, and tender him their service. God cannot possibly want a staff to beat his dogs with; a weapon to wound his rebels with. If He set against a world-full of wicked doers, the water will take his part: If against Sodom, fire: If against murmurers, earth: If against blasphemers, fiery serpents: If against Idolaters, lions: Dan. 6. If against mockers, bears: If against Herod, worms: If against Hann, mice: If against Pharaoh, all. Now a host of frogs distresse him, now of flies, now of lice, now of Caterpillers, now of grasshoppers &c. God made the earth fight against him, the ayre fight against him, the fire fight against him, the water fight against him: he left him not till he had beaten the very breath out of his body with stroke after stroke, and so made good with his hand, what he hath also said with his mouth. The Lord knoweth how to reserve the unjust to the day of punishment: And, In the thing wherein they deal proudly, he is above them. 2 Pet. 3. 9. Exod. 18. 11. He hath an eye to follow them, a guard to look to them, and a goaler to bring them forth, whensoever he shall call for them. In case they should make escape (as they cannot) he hath armies above them, armies below them, armies about them, armies upon them, yea armies within them, to bring them back to execution. For a wicked person is not safe from his own tongue to peach him, from his own hands to dispatch him, from his own phantasy to disquiet him, from his own conscience to affright him, from his own friends to betray him, from his own beasts to gore him, from his own fire to burn him, from his own house to brain him. Thus it is with him, whilst at home: as if he look abroad, to every creature he meets he may say as Ahab once said to the Prophet, Hast thou found me O mine enemy? For as every good souldier will fight for his Generall; and as a Noble-mans servants will soon draw, if their Lord be set upon; so there is not a creature in all the world, that is not ready prest to fight Gods battles, and revenge his quarrell upon

Psalm 3.7

Dio.

Act. 9.4
Joh. 18.6

Pomp. Mag.
nostra miseria
in es magnus.
Pub. Minus.

Facile est invenire baculum quo canem cedas.

2 King. 2.24

Act. 12.

Hatto Bonifus Presul Moguntinus, a mari-bus devoratus
An. Dom. 969.
ut ait Willero-
gus episcopus Argentinenfis
A. D. 997.

Alfred. Chron.
Fit cruor ex
undis, conspur-cant omnia ra-
na. Dat pulvis
cimices, postea
musca venit.
De in pestis
post ulcera,
grando, locustae,
tenebra. Tandem protoco-ultima plaga
necat.

Gen 4. 14

Job 18. 15

Job 9. 5

Eccleſ. 5. 13

Necesse est ut
eum omnibus
doctorem ag-noscam qui tri-ginta habet le-giones Phavo-
rim: de Adriano Imp: apud Spartian.

upon an ungodly person. What Cain sometimes said he hath good cause to take up and second; Every thing that findeth me shall slay me. Brimstone is strawed upon the house of the wicked, saith Iob, so that if the fire of Gods wrath do but lightly touch upon it, they are suddenly consumed: they walk all day long upon a mine of Gunpowder, either by force or stratageme they are sure to be surpris'd. Had Zimri peace that slew his master? Hath ever any waxed fierce against God and prospered? Oh that these gracelesse men would once learn to meddle with their match, and (according to the wise-mans counsell) beware of contending with one that is mightier then they; this Lord of Hosts, I mean, the Lord mighty in battle, Psal. 24. 8. this man of war as Moses calls him whose name is Jehovah Sabaoth: before whole dreadfull presence, and unresistible puissance they are no more able to stand, then is a glasse-bottle before a cannon-shot.

SECT. IIII.

Tremble before this mighty Lord of Hosts.

Use 3.

THirdly, Is he the Lord of Hosts with whom we have to deal? be we all hence exhorted and excited to the practise of divers duties.

Jam 4. 11

Isay 40. 22

Jer. 10. 6, 7

Mat 22. 21

τὸ Καίσαρος

Καίσαρι τὸ

τὸ Θεῷ τῷ

Θεῷ.

Prov. 19. 12

Prov. 15. 14

Prov. 20. 2

And first to tremble before this mighty God: who having so many millions at his beck and obedience, can with as much ease, and in as little time undo us as bid it be done. So Cesar once threatened Metellus in a bravaço; but so, God only and easily can do indeed to such as set against him. If the breath of God blow men to destruction Iob 4. 9. for we are but dust-heaps: if he can frown us to death with the rebuke of his countenance, Psal. 80. 16. what is the waight of his hand (that mighty hand as James calls it) wherewith he spans the heavens, and weigheth the earth in a ballance? He sits upon the circle of the earth, and the inhabitants are as grasshoppers: he shakes them out of it, at pleasure; as it were by a canvas, or as out of ones lap, so much the Hebrew word imports Iob 38. 13. Who would not therefore fear thee O King of Nations? for to thee doth it appertain; forasmuch as thou art great, and thy Name is great in might. Give unto Cesar the things that are Casars, saith Christ, and unto God the things that are Gods. Where it is remarkable that the Article in the Originall is twice repeated when he speaks of God, more then when he speaks of Cesar, to shew, saith a Divine, that our speciall care should be to give God his due. Now shall we fear to break the penall lawes of a King, because his wrath is as the roaring of a lion, and as the messengers of death, so that whoso provoketh him to anger, sinneth against his own soul? And shall we not fear this King of Nations, who hath Armies of creatures to do us to death, and after that, legions of devils to torment us in hell? shall we fear fire, water, lions, leopards; bulls; bears, and other common souldiers, yea the wrath of a fool, because it is heavier then the sand of the sea Prov. 27. 3. 4. And shall we not fear the great Emperour of all these, that hath them all at his beck and obeisance? These may kill us, but they cannot hurt us, as he once told the tyrant: destroy they may the body, but neither keep the good soul from heaven; nor the body from a glorious resurrection. But God can do all this; yea more then this: and shall we not fear his heavy displeasure? Especially since according to his fear, so is his wrath, Psal. 90. 11. That is (according to some) as any one doth more or less fear Gods indignation, in the same degree and measure shall he feel it: as he trembles at it, he shall tast of it. Or as others, (and perhaps better) Let a man stand in never so great awe of thy wrath, yet his fear shall not prove proportionall, or ever be able to match it: he shall never fear thee so much as thy wrath amounts to, let him fear his utmost. For there is a fire kindled in his anger, and it burns unto the lowest hell Deut. 32. 22. Now Bellarmino is of opinion that one glimpse of hell, were enough to make a man not only turn Christian and sober, but Anchorite and Monke, to live after the strictest rule that can be. I conclude with the Apostle, Wherefore let us have grace; whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear. For our God is a consuming fire Heb. 12. 28, 29.

SECT.

SECT. V.

Trust in his power for fulfilling his promises.

SEcondly, is He the Lord of Hosts? This should teach us to rest confidently upon his power, for the fulfilling of his promises: For what should hinder? First, God is not as Man that he should lie; he payes not what he hath promised, as Sirtorius is said to do, with fair words. Secondly, hee is not off and on with us, he doth not say and unsay, he is Jebovah that changeth not.

Phuarch.

Mal. 3.

Thirdly he is the Lord of Hosts, and cannot be resisted, or interrupted in his course. Nature may be, and was, when the fire burnt not, the water drown'd not, the Lions devoured not, &c. Men may be withstood though never so mighty, as the potent Prince of Persia was, Daniel 10. 20. And as Afa was, who although he brought five hundred thousand men into the field, yet was he encountred and overmatcht by an Army of a thousand thousand and upward, so that he was fain to flee to the old Rock for refuge. Devils may want of their will, though never so many, as that Legion in the Gospel, and though never so well united, as they there were: for though many, yet they say, My name, not Our name, they speak and act as One in that possession. But God doth whatsoever he will in heaven and earth, without controll or contradiction.

Esay 26. 4.

Squama Leviathan ita coherent, ut quasi loricatorum incendat Satan & cataphractus. Luther. D. Preston.

In the creatures, (saith One) there is an essence, and a faculty whereby they work; as in fire, the substance, and the quality of heat: between these God can sunder, and so hinder their working, as in the Babylonish fire, Dan. 3. In the Angels there is an Essence, and an executive power. God comes between these, orden, and hinders them from doing what they would. But now its otherwise in God: he is most simple, and entire, without mixture or composition. Hence his Almightinesse is his Essence, and his whole Essence is Almighty. Hee is not mighty in respect of some part, or faculty, as the creature is, but all in God is mighty. He is not dependent upon another for new supplies, as the creature, whose power will cease and determine, if not renewed and confirmed by God, Jer. 32. 18, 19. He is El-shaddai, absolutely self-sufficient, not needing any subsidiary help from without, though he please otherwhiles to make use of the creatures, as his Hosts, to tame his enemies, and performe his word to his people. Quid ciniphe vilis? saith Philo. What's more base then a lowse? yet all Egypt could not stand before this poor creature, but was forced to acknowledge it the finger of God. If any Pharaoh oppose to him, he can soon subdue the strongest Rebell by the weakest instrument. As if any Gideon build and bind upon his promise, of weak he shall become strong, Heb. 11. 34. Deo confici nunquam confusi. He that beleeveth shall not be ashamed, he need no more but stand and see the salvation of the Lord.

Tamen tantum effecit ut tota Aegyptus desiciens exclamaretur egeretur hunc esse digitum Dei Philo.

Exod. 14. 14

Psal. 37. 5

The Lord shall fight for you, saith Moses to Israel, namely by his red-sea, that shall cover your enemies, (as it did ours in 88.) but ye shall hold your peace. Commit your wayes therefore unto the Lord, trust also in him, and hee shall bring it to passe. Stand not upon these and these dangers, and difficulties that stand in the way. Found your faith fast upon the infallible promises of God All-sufficient; put them also in suit by faithfull and fervent prayer, and then though you see not how, or which way such a mercy should be attained, or deliverance compassed; yet give glory to Gods power with Abraham, Rom. 4. 18. and buy the field at Gods bidding with Jeremy, Chap. 32. 17--27. though the captivity were then foretold unavoydable. What talke wee of any thing impossible, or improbable to the Lord of Hosts? This is to limit the Help One of Israel, with those Rebels, that asked, Can the Lord provide a table for us in the wildernesse? or with that Infidell Lord of Samaria: Behold, if the Lord should make windowes in heaven, might this thing be? Can the Lord? and, Might this be? Why? what a question's that? He can give bread from heaven, and drink out of a rock: He can command the ravens to feed Elias, and the most hurtfull creatures to be usefull to us, as poyson in Physick. He can do more then ever he will, as he could have rescued his Sonne Christ by a legion of Angels, Mat. 26. 23. Some things God can do,

2 Tim. 2. 13.
Heb. 6. 18.

Ioh. 6

Num. 11. 13.

22.

Ver. 23.

Dei dicere est
facere.

but will not, Mat. 3. 9. Some things he neither will, nor can; as he cannot lie, die, deny himself, break his promise, &c. But whatsoever God willeth, that without impediment he effecteth, Esay 46. 10. For who hath resisted his will? And yet I know not how, 'tis naturall and usuall with us in an exigence, to question Gods power one while, (If thou canst do any thing, help us) his will another while, (Master, if thou wilt thou canst make me clean) and to tie him so to the means, that if they fail, he cannot help. When the bottle was spent, Hagar falls a crying as utterly undone. Whence shall we have bread to feed so many thousands? Whence should I have flesh to give unto all this people? shall the flocks be all slain, and all the fish of the Sea gathered together for them to suffice them, said Moses? But what said the Lord to it? Is the Lords hand waxed short? thou shalt see now whether my word shall come to passe unto thee, or not. Gods word is his deed, his promise sure-hold: never any yet miscarried that could produce and plead it: sith he wants neither power nor will to make it good. Peter had a good will to deliver Christ out of the Jews hands, but wanted power. Pilate had power enough to do it, but wanted will. God wants neither, but will put forth both for the safety and salvation of his faithful people. Hence holy Job, having spoken of Gods power speaketh of his thoughts, (as Calvin observeth) to tell us that his power and will are things inseparable, his minde and hand agree together, the one to determine, the other to execute. Job. 42. 2. All his shall have whatsoever heart can wish, or their condition require, 2 Sam. 22. 2. 3. even marvellous loving kindness from God in a strong city above all that can be uttered: The prophet is fain to expresse himself above it, by an exclamation Psal. 31. 19, 20, 31. The Lord of Hosts is for them, the God of Jacob is their refuge. He hath entred into a covenant with them both defensive and offensive, so that all his is theirs, as Iehosaphat that told his confederate King of Israel. 1 King. 22. 4.

SECT. VI.

Stoop to his power, and submit to his Sovereignty.

THirdly, is he the Lord of Hosts? what then should we rather and sooner do then stoop to his power, and submit to his sovereignty? And sith we must be either his servants, or his slaves, his subjects or his foot-stool, chuse the former condition, that we may escape the latter? for certain it is, he will fetch us in by one Pursivant or another (and he hath enow ready) if we make not hast with Shimei, to come down, and meet the Lord with intreaties of peace, that he may embrace us, and take us in to his princely favour. Do not ask me here, (as Pharaoh once did Moses) who is the Lord that I should serve him? Gods Attributes are of two kinds, which either shew what he is? or who he is? to the question of Moses what he is; God gave a short answer: I am. To the second of Pharaoh, who he is, he made a large reply by his armies of lice, flies, hail, locusts &c. Till Pharaoh was compelled to answer for him, The Lord is righteous, but I and my people are wicked. This was a faire confession; but extorted: for he was no sooner off the rack, but he bit it in again, and became more hard and hardy, as water grows more cold after a heat. And such, for all the world, was the forced and fained obedience of those Israelites in the wilderness while God slew them (by fiery serpents, and others his warriors) then they sought him, yea they returned, and enquired after God, as if they would have done the deed. Nevertheless they flattered him with their mounthes, and lied unto him with their lips. So must not we do, if ever we mean to do well: but throwing away our weapons, lay our selves low before his foot-stool, unfainedly submitting to the scepter of his kingdom, obeying from the heart that form of doctrine whereunto we have been delivered. For, what a shame is it for us not to do that homage to God, that all other creatures so gladly pay & perform? what a monstrous thing that man amidst all Gods handy-works that revere the Almighty, and readily do his will, that he I say, should prove a great Heteroclite, an open rebel, a profest adversary to God his sovereign Lord, his crown and

Psal. 78. 34-36

Rom. 6. 17.

and dignity? Oh send a lamb (in token of homage and fealty) to the ruler of the world Vow and pray to the Lord your God, bring presents unto Fear, that is, to him that ought to be feared. And for as much as with your ten thousand you are not able to encounter this great King, that comes against you with twenty thousand times twenty thousand; send an embassage quickly of prayers and tears, whiles he is yet on the way, and desire conditions of peace. Luk. 14. 32. You know how Jacob disarmed that rough man Esau that came against him with 400. cutthroats at his heels: how Abigail appealed that enraged man David, that had desperately vowed the death of so many innocents: how the Syrians prevailed with that non-such Ahab, for the life of their Lord Benhadad. Having heard that the kings of Israel were merciful men, they put sackcloth upon their loines and ropes upon their heads, and in this form of humble suppliants they came to the King, and said, Thy servant Benadad saith, I pray thee let me live. And a like addresse we read of in our own histories of the old Brittones to Ætius the Roman Governour, and of the Calice-men to one of our Edwards; Oh let their practise be our pattern. We have heard abundantly that there is a matchlesse mercy in God for all penitent persons, above that ever was found in the best king of Israel: this mercy we have a promise of, if we submit to the condition, (in thee the fatherlesse findeth mercy Hoj. 14 3.) So had not the Syrians: their best encouragement was a general hear say. This condition is no more then what every man will yeeld to be reasonable, viz. that we lay down the bucklers first: that we come before him in lowliest manner, with ashes on our heads (so they of old) as unworthy to be above ground, with sack-cloth on our loyns, as unworthy the courtest cloathing, with ropes about our heads, as deserving to be destroyed: yet humbly begging that we may live in his sight with Ismael, yea that we may serve in his presence with Moses, and dwell in his house with David all the dayes of our lives, to behold the fair beauty of the Lord, and to enquire in his temple. This is all that God requires, and this was that one thing that David beg'd so dearly at Gods hands Psal. 27 4. and accordingly obtained it. Hence he so confidently calls his soul to rest amidst a multitude of molestations and incumbrances. Hear him else, Psal. 3. I will not be afraid of ten thousands of people that have set themselves against me round about. I laid me down and slept, I awaked &c. He never brake his sleep for Abisalom and all his forces, then up in arms against him. For why? salvation, saith he, is of the Lord, his blessing is upon his people. (Ver. 5, 6, 8.) whereof I am one, and shall therefore be in safety. Behold I have blessed him, and he shall be blessed, said Isaac of Iacob: saith the God of Iacob, of all those that rest confidently upon his power for their preservation, that hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto them, at the revelation of Jesus Christ. 1 Pet. 1. 13 At destruction and famine thou shalt laugh, saith Eliphaz, neither shalt thou be afraid of the beasts of the earth. For thou shalt be in league with the stones of the field, and the beasts of the field shall be at peace with thee. Job. 5. 22, 23.

Irent propa, ne remorando iram victores exasperant. Tacit. hist. lib. 2 Mittamus preces & lacrymas cordis legatos Cyprian 1 Kin. 20. 32. The British Embassadors came in torne garments with sand on their heads, in the time of Valentinian the third. Daniels hist. of Eng. The Callice men came to Ed. 3 bare headed, bare footed in their shirts with halters about their neck: &c. lib. p. 240. Psal. 27.

SECT. VII.

Set his power awork, by prayer. The power of prayer.

LASTLY, is God Lord of Hosts? how should this consideration quicken and call us up to a constant infancy in prayer to that God, who is able to do for us above that we are able to ask or think, that we having all sufficiency alwayes in all good things, may abound unto every good work through Christ that strengthneth us. Many and glorious things are spoken of the power of prayer in the book of God. Indeed there is a kinde of Omnipotency ascribed unto it, and not without cause. For certainly whatsoever God can do, prayer can do: sith prayer sets God awork, God sets his power awork, and Gods power sets the creature awork (as at Peters enlargement) and then what wonder the thing come on an end, though never so difficult. For shal any thing be too hard for God? or shal not God avenge his praying people that cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them? I tell you that he will avenge them speedily. Asa and Iehosaphat prayed down their enemies, so did the parcht and scorcht: the very roots of herbes and trees being now decayd and dried up, and all in a manner past recovery. But faithfull and fervent prayer never comes too late, and that because God never comes too late. Prayer is a great wonder-work in heaven and earth. No good thing can match it, nor evill overmatch it.

Eph. 3. 21. 2 Cor. 8 Phillip. 4 Oratio fidelis omnipotens est. Luther. Est quaedam omnipotentia precum. Alsted sst. Theol. lib. 4. cap. 2. Luk. 18. 6.

δαυματῶδες.

The flood could not drown the old world, till praying Metbuseiab was laid up in peace. The fire could not consume sinfull Sodom, till praying Lot was provided for. It is not in the power of Labans hand to hurt Jacob, because, upon his yester-nights prayer, God had rebuked him. Nor could Esau touch him, because Jacob had wrestled with God all night, and would not away without a blessing of deliverance, and a guard of Angels. The plague cannot fasten upon the people, for Moses will not yeeld to it: nor Amalec prevail in the vale, because he held up his hands on the hill. If ever the enemy shall do good on't, and God have decreed it so, he first takes order for the silencing of his prophets, whose prayers would, as it were, tranfuse a dead palsy into his hands, that he could not smite, Ier. 7. 16. pray not faith he for this people, neither lift up cry, nor prayer for them, neither make intercession to me, for I will not hear. As if the Lord should have said thus: Had there been any good to be done in this case, prayer would have done it. But I am fully bent: and therefore though Moses and Samuel (those men of prayer) stood before me, yet my minde could not be toward this people. I am inexorable Ier. 15. 1. what then? shall Gods servants lose their prayers? No, this they shall have of my hand, they shall deliver their own souls, they shall have their own lives for a prey. Something there is that God will yeeld to prayer then, when he is most bitterly bent against a people or person Mat. 24. 20. Pray faith our Saviour (after he had foretold such an affliction as never had been, nor should be the like) pray faith he, that your flight be not in the winter, for that will be tedious, nor on the sabbath, for that will be grievous. Whereupon a learned Interpreter makes this note. In maxima severitate aliquid permittit precibus. Something God will graciously yeeld to prayers, in his greatest severity. Admirable is that, and for the present purpose most apt and apposite, that Polanus reports of a terrible earth-quake in the territories of Berne in Swisserland: by means whereof, a certain high mountain carried violently over other mountains, ore-whelmed and covered a whole township, that had ninety families in it, one halfhouse only excepted, wherein the master of the family with his wife and children were with bended knees calling earnestly upon God. This fell out no longer ago then in the year 1584. and is related by Amandus Polanus a famous Divine, who lived not many yeers since at Basil, not many miles distant from the place where the thing fell out. In which notable example who seeth not, as in a mirrour, the marvelous force and efficacy of faithfull prayer, standing, (Aaron-like) with his incense, betwixt the living and the dead, and verifying that of our Saviour: Verily I say unto you, if ye have faith and doubt not, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place, and it shall remove: yea be thou removed and cast into the sea, and it shall be done? And, All things whatsoever ye shall aske in prayer, beleevving; ye shall receive? Oh blessed Saviour! what could have fallen from that sweet mouth of thine more for the glory of thy free grace and our greatest encouragement to ply the throne of grace with dayly suites, that God would open our eyes to see the exceeding greatnesse of his power towards us that beleve, according to the working of his mighty power. There is in the Originall a sixfold gradation, and all too little. Words are too weak to utter it.

Quasi manu facta, Deum ambiunt orantes. Tertull. Preces sunt bombardae & instrumenta bellica christi-anorum Luth. Ligatum habent Sancti Deum, ut non puniat, nisi peccaverint ipsi. Bern in Cant. ferm. 30.

Caritw. in loc.

Polan. Syntag. Theolog. tom. 1. lib. 5. cap. 21. de terramotu mortuus est Polan: Anno. 1610 Mar. 21. 21

Eph. 1. 19

SECT. VIII.

Be comforted in the consideration of his power: where diverse objections of weak Christians are answered.

Singular comfort to all that belong to the Lord of Hosts, to consider that God hath a power alwayes prepared, an army ever in readinesse 1. to preserve them. 2. to provide for them. Use. 4

For

Dan. 3. 17

For their preservation, first, Our God is able to deliver us, either from the fire, or in it: this was the support of those three brave Worthies in Daniel, and may be ours, that lean on the Lord and the power of his might. Shall the Philistines rely upon their Goliath, Papists an their he-saints and she-saints, Turks on their Mahomet, Heathens on their Tutelaries, and not we encourage our selves in the Lord our God as David? not cheer up our hearts in this man of warr, whose name is the Lord of Hosts, the Lord mighty in battle? Oh say with the church in Micah, All people will walk, every one, in the name of his God, and we will walk in the name of the Lord our God for ever and ever. For their rock is not as our Rock, our enemies themselves being Judges. Contemno minutos istos Deos, modo sovem propitium habeam, said that Heathen, If God be for us, what need we fear what man or devill can do unto us?

Micah. 4. 5.

Deut. 32. 31

Rom. 8. 31

Ob.

Sol.

2 Chron. 14. 22

Ob.

Sol.

Nudatum nimirum enssem suum nunquam deposuit, sed inde usq; ab Ade lapsu eum in Ecclesia sua defens. &c. Bucholz.

Oh but mine enemies are many, and mighty.

Yea but thy champion is the Lord of hosts, with whom it's nothing to save whether with many or with no power. This staid up Asa's heart against a thousand thousand enemies.

But they are fierce and furious.

What of that? I know whom I have trusted, saith Paul, and I am sure that he is able to keep that I have committed to him against that day 2 Tim. 1. 12. I have been delivered out of the mouth of the lion; And the Lord shall deliver me from all evill &c. 2 Tim. 4. 17, 18. Did not the Lord appear to Josuah with a naked sword in his hand, as captain of the Host? Did not the Angels fight for Hezekiah, and environ Jacob at Mahanaim, Elisha in the mount &c? and hath not the Lord charged them still to pitch their tents round about the righteous. They appear not unto us, (it's true) now as of old, because the church now needs not such confirmations, and Christ being ascended, and the spirit plentifully bestowed, God would that our conversation should be in heaven, and not that the Angels should converse so visibly with us on earth. But they still pittie our humane frailty, and secretly suggest both counsell, and comfort: they also keep us from perils and dangers of body and soul, who else could not subsist, no not an hour.

Pro. 20. 30, 31

Rex ferarum

Isidor. lib. 10.

c. 2. οὐ καλὸς

Psal. 10. 9, 10

Psal. 78. 14

Pluviam escari-

tilem petram

aquavilem.

Tertull.

Vix unquam

major fuit gloria illius popu-

li in terra Canaan quam in deserto Buchol.

2 Pet. 2. 9

Phil. 4. 12, 13

1 King. 22.

Heb. 11.

Act. 7.

Next for provision of necessities, God hath taken and bound over the best of the creatures to purvey for his people, and to bring them in maintenance, the heaven, the earth, the corne, the wine, the oyle, the best of the best is for them. Hos. 2. 20, 21. The Lions saith the Palmist (and the Lion is the king of beasts) or, the rich among the people (as the Septuagint have it) shall hunger and starve, those that will be sure to have it, if it be to be had: wicked rich men not only rob but ravish the poor, when they have gotten them into their nets, that is, their debts, bonds, mortgages, as Chrysostom expounds it. Hence they are called men-eaters, Cannibals Psal. 14. 4. Loe these Cormorants, these yong Lions, shall lack and suffer hunger, but those that seek the Lord shall want nothing that is good. He will rain down bread from heaven, and set the flint-stone abroad, and turn the wilderness into a Paradise, before his people shall pine and perish. Never was Prince so served in his greatest pomp, as the rebellious Israelites in the desert. How good shall we finde him then to those that please him? Elias is fed one while by an Angell, another while by a Raven. But if both should have failed him, as the brook Cherith did, yet he that took away his meat, could have taken away his stomach, as he did also, for 40. dayes together in the mount of God. In a word, the Lord of hosts hath a thousand means ready and at hand to provide for his people: his strength and wisdom ever busieth and bestirreth it self for their comfort. The Lord (saith Peter who had tried it) knowes how to preserve his own, and to deliver the godly out of temptation. And I can do all through Christ that strengtheneth me, saith Paul, whether it be to be full or to be hungry, to abound or to be abated. A beleever walks about the world like a Conquerour, as Michaiah did after he had seen the Lord on his throne, with all the host of heaven about him: So Moses after he had by faith seen him that is invisible: and Steven after he had seen the son of man on the right hand of God, Angels, authorities and powers being made subject unto him. 1 Pet. 3. 22,

And as in temporall so in spirituall regards also, this holds true for the soul. and

and inward man of the heart, much distressed many times by wicked spirits in high places Ephes. 6.12. They have the upper ground of us (which is no small advantage) they assault us out of the air, and therefore buffet and batter us with their fiery darts (so called for the dolour and distemper they work in us, like a fire in the flesh, and the likest hell of any thing) with the haile-shot, hell-shot of their temptations. But God succours us by the supplies of his spirit, and by the visible ministry of his angels, as he did our Saviour in his agony, and after his great temptations. His grace is sufficient for us, his strength made perfect in our weaknesse. The serpents head is broke, his work dissolved; his trenches thrown down, and himself driven out of the field, by the Captain of our salvation, the author and finisher of our faith, who hath also prayed that our faith fail not, even at such times as Satan desires to have us, as a challenger Goliath-like, desires to have one of the other side to combat with. Michael and his angels, have disarmed and driven out the dragon and his angels, they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb: yea, the saints do overcome, or are more then conquerours, because through faith in Christ they overcome before they fight, they are sure of victory aforehand. And although Satan is said to make warre upon the Saints, and to overcome them, Revel. 13. 7. yet this is but spoken according to humane conceit, and in regard of outward persecutions. But thanks be to God, who maketh us alwayes to triumph through Christ, 2 Cor. 2. 14. The gates of hell shall not prevail against us: that is, all the power and policy of hell combined: for in the gates sate the Elders to consult in time of peace; and at the gates was planted the best munition in time of warre. Impostours should deceive, if it were possible, the very Elect (as that third part of the stars of heaven) but that cannot be.

Object not here, that Satan with a full mouth (as a fell Lion) roars upon you, and threatens to ruin you.

It is a Spanish Proverb, The Lion is not so fierce as he is painted: nor is the Devil so powerfull, he makes himself: well he may shake his chain at us, but he cannot set his fangs in us: well he may nibble at the heel, but he cannot hurt us in the head. He that is born of God keepeth himself, and that wicked One toucheth him not, that is, Tactus qualitativo, saith Cajetan, with a deadly touch. Besides, Christ is a Lion also, even the Lion of the Tribe of Judah (the victorious Tribe) that can out-roar Satan, and easily over-master him. As for thee that humblest thy self at his feet for mercy, assure thy self he will never trample on the yeelding prey.

Oh but Satan is not onely a Lion, but a dragon: hee not onely roars, but spets poyson, yea spews out of his mouth floods of venomous and violent temptations: yea he is a great red dragon, colour'd and died red, as it were, with the blood of souls he hath swallowed; and besides he hath seven heads to plot, and ten horns to push me into the pit of perdition, Rev. 12. 3.

True all this: but Mica-el? who is as the strong God? Christ, our onely Michael, hath with his sore, and great, and terrible sword, punished Leviathan, that crooked piercing serpent, and slain the dragon that is in the sea, Esay 27. 1. Under our feet he will tread him shortly, as he hath done already under his own: triumphing over him on the crosse, with Death, where's thy sting! hell, where's thy victory! To be brief: The Lamb with his two horns can do more, then the dragon with his ten. Stronger is he that is in you, then he that is in the world. Christ is that stronger man, that casts out the strong man armed out of his castle, and spoils his goods.

Oh, but he hath so strongly entrenched himself in my heart, by a herd of base lusts, and a frame of evil thoughts, that he will hardly ever out, if at all.

The weapons of our warfare are not carnall, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong-holds (or trenches) casting down imaginations, and every thing that exalts it self against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity, every thought to the obedience of Christ, 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5. Christs Ministers are called his white horses, whereon he rides about the world, conquering, and to conquer. And although for their persons, they be mean and contemptible, yet their message and ministry is that power of God to salvation, which the Devil cannot stand before. Our Saviour saw Satan falling as lightning from the heaven of mens hearts, when the Apostles were abroad preaching the Gospel. We preach Christ crucified,

Εν τοις ἐπουρανίοις about our interest in heavenly pri-
viledges.

Παρεῖς ἦν ὁ
ἰὺ δολοῦσα
ῥεῖν αἱ δε γῆ
πολεῖν, ὁ δὲ
ἀνὴρ ἐκλάσεν.
De Xerxis ex-
ercitu, Aristi.
ἡ το πνεύμα-
τος ἐμπρο-σθία. Phil. 1.
19. 2 Cor. 12 9
Luke 22. 31
Rev. 12. 8, 11
καὶ ἐνίκησεν.
Rom 8 37

Mat. 16. 18

Obj.

Sol.

Satan in sidiis
tanquam Leo circūdatus ē,
1 Pet. 5. 8.
Christus insub.
sidiis tanquam
Leo pugnaturus ē.
1 Thel. 1. 10

Obj.

Rev. 12 15
Draco multis
capitibus ὡς
καὶ τὸ δει-κνύειν; Scali-
gero τὰς το-
ν δεινὰ καὶ Quia animal venenatum ē
homini infestū.

Sol.

Rom. 16. 20
Colos. 2. 15
1 Cor. 15. 55
1 Joh. 4

Obj.

Sol.

Rev. 6. 2

Rom. 1. 16
Luk. 10

crucified, saith St. Paul, unto the Jews a stumbling-block, and to the Gentiles foolishness. But unto them that are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God, 1 Cor. 1. 22, 23. And a verse or two before. It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching, to save them that believe.

As unlikely a means in the worlds eye, to do such a feat, as the blowing of rams horns, to over-turn the walls of Jericho. But what matter is it, how unlikely the means are, if in the hands of Omnipotency? An Ox-goad in the hand of a Shamgar, an Ass-bone in the hand of a Sampson may do much: so here. The Devil must needs down, if God once send forth his Pauls, to open mens eyes, to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan to God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them that are sanctified by faith that is in Christ.

AAs 26.18

Obj.

Oh, but the Devil tells me, I shall never inherit, for I am not sanctified by faith.

Sol.

Settle that first (be sure) by sound and infallible evidences: See that thy faith and other graces be of the right stamp, effectual faith, laborious love, patient hope, &c. 1 Thes. 1. 3. and then sing a Requiem to thy self, as Luther once did (after a grievous conflict) the Psalm De profundis, in contemptum Diaboli, in defiance to the Devil. Onely be adviled, not to pore over-much upon thy sanctification, which in the best is imperfect, but to take comfort of thy Justification, which is compleat, and absolute. In confident consideration whereof, St. Paul triumphantly cries out; Who shall lay any thing to the charge of Gods chosen? so long as it is God that justifieth? Or, as Austin reads it, Shall God that justifies us? Who is he that condemneth? Do Angels? No, they rejoyce in our conversion, and call us their fellow-servants. But who then? Do the insensible or unreasonable creatures? They, in their kind are in covenant with us, Hof. 2. 18. and in earnest expectation groan, nay travell together with us, waiting (and, as it were lying bed-ridden the while) for our full manifestation, when the redemption of our bodies, Rom. 8. 19, &c. But who is it then? Do our own hearts condemn us? No neither, if not bemisted, and abused by Satan: for being justified by faith, we have so farre peace with God, that we glory in tribulation by the confident intertorgatory of a good conscience toward God. But say our own hearts do wrongfully accuse us, yet God is greater then our hearts, as well for good as for evil; to do us right, notwithstanding a misgiving, or misguided heart of our own. But say then: who is he that condemneth us? Is it the Devil and his wicked imps? Let them do their worst. He is indeed the accuser of the brethren: but Christ our Advocate is ever ready to non-suit and cast out all his accusations. The Spirit also is in direct and full opposition to this Accuser, called παράκλητος, the Comforter, or Pleader for us, pleading our evidences to our spirits, and helping us upon true repentance, to make apology for our selves, 2 Cor. 7. 11. such as God admits of and accepts. As for that old Serpent (the Accuser of the brethren) he is cast down already, and all his limbs shall bee cast after him ere long, into the burning lake. In the mean while, what cares the prisoner at the barre, though the gaoler and his fellow-prisoners passe sentence of death upon him in the gaole, so long as the Judge acquits him from the bench. And as little need any servant of the Lord of Hosts stand upon the censurs of earth, and hell, so long as God thinks well of him, and all the Hosts of God combine for his comfort.

Rom. 5. 1. 3
ἐπερωτημα.
1 Pet. 3. 21
1 Joh. 3. 20

κατήχησθ.
Rev. 12.

Yea, what apology, or clearing of
your selves.
Rev. 12. 10

Obj.

Oh, but I have hosts within me, that do me all the despite and displeasure. The flesh lusteth against the spirit, and other-whiles gets the better of it. Besides, there be bands of fleshly lusts, which like armed souldiers, lie billeted in my bosome, and ever and anon fight against my soul.

1 Pet. 2. 11

Sol.

Gal. 5. 17

Yet bee of good comfort, the spirit also lusteth against the flesh, so that thou canst not do what thou (naturally) wouldest, thy new nature will not suffer thee: as Paul would have gone to a certain place, but the Spirit forbade him. As for thy lusts (be they never so lordly) God can easily cut the combs, nay the throats of them, and let out their life-blood. My Father is stronger then all, and None can take you out of his hands. The weak brother shall be holden up (amidst a world of scandals without, and staggerings within) for God is able to make him stand. He can preserve a fire alive upon the face of the Ocean, a spark of the spirit, amidst amidst a world of wickednesse within. He can cause weak and worthlesse grasshoppers to become a great nation Joel 1.6. a mighty people chap.2.2. a huge army, ib. He can make the house of Israel pollute the idols, which they had once perfumed with incense, and to say to their familiar devils, get thee hence. He can stop or strike back the course of the Sun, though it rejoyce as a strong man to run his race. Naturally and freely it giveth light, but he can turn it into darknesse and blood. The mountains of themselves are ponderous and pressing, yet at Gods command they skip like lambs.

Joh. 10
Rom. 14. 4

Esa. 30. 22.
Psal. 19. 5.

Think the same of our dull and undutiful hearts. God can quickly oyl them and nimble them, drawing us by his free spirit, so as we shall run after him: as a baldder of it self is a heavy substance, and unapt for motion, but being filled with winde, it will scarce bide in a place. So we being filled with the holy Ghost shall finde our feet as hinds feet upon the everlasting mountains: no longer shackled by corruption, but at very good liberty to run the wayes of Gods commandments.

Psal. 119.

Its most sure we are not strained at all in God, but in our own bowels. He is both able and ready both to cover and cure our sins and sicknesses. In the dayes of his flesh, he offered himself to his patients, and was found of them that fought him not. He heal'd them also of diseases hereditary, and such as all the Physitians in the countrey might have cast their caps at. Now he hath lost nothing by heaven, you may be sure, neither of his will nor skill to do the same cures upon mens souls, as once he did upon their bodies: nay he cured their bodies onely in reference to their souls, and still hangs out his table of cures, to draw custome Rev. 3. 18. Lo thus we have searched, and so it is, Hear it and know it for thy good. Job. 5. 27.

Math. 8. 17. 18

CHAP. II.

The Lord will finde a fit time to make up his jewels from the worlds misusages.

And they shall be mine saith the Lord of Hosts, in that day when I make up my Jewels

God is the Lord of hosts. This is a point hath been hitherto proved, and im proved. Followes now a second Observation.

This Lord of Hosts will not fail to finde a fit time, for the making up of his jewels, from the worlds misusages.

There is a day here specified in the text, a set and solemn day, a particular time, a certain season, wherein God will make himself glorious, and to be admired in all them that beleve in that day. So speaks the Apostle of that last day, called elsewhere the day of the Lord, the day of Christ, the day of God, and the day of the declaration of the just judgement of God according to the Gospel. And of this last and great day of general judgement, the most interpreters understand this text. And truly I beleve it is partly, if not principally intimated, and mainly, though I cannot think onely here intended. Some mens sins are open afore-hand, going before to judgement, and some men they follow after. Likewise also the good works of some are manifest before hand, and they that are otherwise, cannot be hid. Some sinners are here punished, that we may acknowledge a providence: and yet not all, that we may expect a judgement. But a day there will be, as sure as day, (whether sooner or later I have not to determine) wherein God will take out the precious from the vile, the corn from the chaffe, the sheep from the goats, the good fish, and good figs from the bad, wherein he will set a price upon his pearls, make up his jewels, advance his favorites, his darlings; his peculiar people, and put away all the wicked of the earth as drosse, Psal. 119. 119. And albeit he delay haply to do it, because his hour is not yet come: yet his forbearance is no quit-

Doct. Confirmat hac locutio Deo esse suam
opportunitatem
Cyc. Calvin in
locum.

Baïom, in isto
die. Jam significat per Synechdoch. tem-
pus certum atq;
id præcipue cum
de futuro agitur
Shindl. pentag.
2 Thes. 1. 10.
1 Thes. 5. 2.
2 Thes. 2. 2.
2 Pet. 3. 12.
Rom 2. 5. 16.
Gualter.
Figuier Alij.
1 Tim. 5. 24.
25.

tance

Vide Calvin
in loc.

tance to the bad, nor deniance to the better sort. God first writes things down in his book of remembrance, and then afterwards executes them, which requires some time between. But a time he will finde, and that must needs be so, for these reasons, some respecting God, and some the saints themselves: but both sorts grounded upon the text, and there-hence borrowed.

SECT. I.

Reason 1. From Gods providence.

Reas. 1.
*Sic spectat uni-
versos. quasi singulos: sic singulos quasi solos. Aug.*
1 Tim 4. 10.
*Curiosus et plenus negotij Deus Tull. de
nat deor.*

For God, first, there be many things in Him, that may well infer the point in proof, as his providence, power, Faithfulnesse, Goodnesse, and Justice.

First his good providence, which like a well-drawn picture eyeth each one in the room. Neither is he a bare spectator onely, but as chief Agent, he wisely ordereth all the worlds disorders to the good of his children. He saveth, that is, he preserveth all men, but especially those that beleeve, saith the Apostle, he is curious and full of businesse, saith the Heathen, my father worketh hitherunto, and I also work, saith our Saviour. And this is meant by those seven eyes of the Lord Zech. 4. 10. That run to and fro thorow the whole earth, causing that none shall have cause to despise the day of small things, (Gods jewels are little in bulk, great in worth) for as small as they are they shall see the plummet in the hand of Zerubb bel with, or by those seven. And the eyes of the Lord, saith another Prophet, run to and fro thorow the earth, to behold the evil and the good, and not so only, but to shew himself strong in the behalf of them, whose heart is perfect toward him, and to give them an expected end. And this reason is secretly couched in that clause of our text. There was a book of remembrance written before him: Est autem hic liber providentia, (saith Polanus) this is the book of Gods providence, wherein as all our members are written, which in continuance of time were fashioned, (had he left out an eye in his common-place book thou hadst wanted it) so are all our services, that they may be recompensed, yea and all our sufferings too that they may be remedied and revenged, when the time of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord. Thou tellest my wandrings, saith David, put thou my tears into thy bottle, are they not in thy book? And there-hence he rightly concludes the point in hand, ver. 9. Then shall mine enemies turn back in the day that I call: this I know that God will be for me, or that God will be mine as the same phrase is rendered in this text.

2 Chron. 16. 9
Jer. 29. 11

Polan in loc.
Psal. 139. 16.

A. R. 3. 19.

Psal. 56. 8. 9.

SECT. II.

Reason 2. From Gods power.

Next there is an almighty power in God (called therefore Lord of Hosts in the text) exerted and exercised for the relief and rescue of his poor people trampled on by those fat buls of Basan with the foule feet of contempt and cruelty: whereby he taketh course that they be not over-trod, or too long held under by the insolencies and insultations of their enemies. But when they shall seem to themselves and others utterly forlorn, and undone, so that salvation it selfe cannot save them, (which was good Davids case Psal. 3. 2.) then shall the Lord be a shield for them, their glory, their strong tower, and the lifter up of their head. Ver. 3. And this he shall do with a great deal of ease and expedition, as being Lord of Hosts; that is, of all creatures, by the hands of whom he shall send from heaven, and save them from the reproach of him that would swallow them up. Selah. God shall send forth his mercy and his truth. Psal. 57. 3.

SECT. III.

Reason 3. from Gods Truth.

And that passage points us to two other reasons for the point ; God will send forth his mercy and truth.

And first his truth : I meane his faithfulness, intimated also in these words of our text. Saith the Lord of Hosts. These things saith he that is faithfull and true, they shall be mine in the day &c. I will have a time to make up my Jewels in much mercy. Now hath God said it, and shall he not accomplish it ? Is not his decree his facere ? shall he not fulfill with his hand, what he hath promised with his mouth ? God is not as man that he should lye : neither is he unconstant as other friends, that he should change : no, nor yet unmindfull that he should forget ; least of all is he unfaithfull that he should falsify. God is faithfull, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that you are able &c. 1 Cor. 10. He will give patience under the temptation, a good use of it, and a good issue from out of it, in the best time.

εὐμεταβολήτον ζῶντος
εἰληθ.

Mal. 3. 6

SECT. IIII.

Reason the 4. from Gods goodnesse.

But besides ; God will send forth his mercy, as well as his truth, for the salvation of his people. This mercy moved him at first, to make a sure covenant with them, and to marke them out for his own, and doth still to shew himselfe ( as he did oft for Moses ) seasonably and sweetly for their support and succour. For they shall be mine saith the Lord of Hosts &c.

So they were ever, may some say.

Yea, but then they shall be mighty and mercifully declared to be the children of God, by a kinde of resurrection from the dead, as the Apostle speaketh of the head, and it holds as true of the members. Rom. 1. 3. Thus God left his people in Egypt, and afterwards in in Babylon till their civill estate was dead and buried, as it were. As after the captivitie, these good soules in our text, seemed so far given up and cast off by God, as if he had had no further care of them, or part in them. But they shall be mine saith the Lord of Hosts in the day &c. That is, the time is at hand, when it shall well appeare by my mercies to the one, and judgments on the other, who are mine, who not, which are pearles, which are pibbles, which precious Jewels, which reprobate silver, which are sons, which bastards ; though all things now seeme to tend to a confusion, and no such difference be yet discerned and acknowledged. And the sooner shall this day come, because the proud adversary lookes upon my people as outcasts, my servants as abjects, my children as fatherlesse. For in thee the fatherlesse findeth mercy. Hos. 14. 3. And, because they called thee an outcast, saying, This is Sion, whom no man seeks after, therefore I will heal thee of thy wounds &c. Jer. 30. 17. The righteous shall see this and rejoyce : but all iniquitie shall stop her mouth. Who so is wise, and will observe these things, even he shall understand that it is of the loving kindnesse of the Lord. Psal. 107. ult.

Ob.
Sol.

SECT. V.

Reason 5. from Gods Justice.

Lastly, I might easily (& not unfitly) argue out of ver. 18. of this chapter, from the Justice of God, engaged for his oppressed people. For being judge of the whole earth,

X x x

Gen. 18. 25

earth, (as Abraham once urged it for his Nephew Lot) he must needs deal righteously between man and man, rendering to every one according to his works. Now who seeth not for present that dayly verified, that above was wickedly objected. Behold we call the proud happy, yea they that work wickedness are set up &c. ver. 15. when godly men, o'tother side, are usually held under hatches, being destitute, afflicted, tormented, even such of Gods worthies as the world is not worthy of, yet such unworthy usage they mostly meet withall. Now that Gods Justice may be cleared and every mouth stopped, what more requisite then that God should set forth a fit time to set all to rights among the sons of men, and to rectifie those things which even to godly men, other-whiles, seem less equally carried, that Gods dear children being propitiously pardoned, preciouslly esteemed, and graciously recompensed, the wicked may self-condemned return and discern between the righteous and themselves, between him that serveth God, and him that serveth him not. It is even a righteous thing with God to render tributorial to them that trouble you, but to you who are troubled rest with us (if not before, yet certainly) when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty Angels. &c. 2 Thef. 1. 6, 7.

SECT. VI.

Reasons from the Saints themselves.

Reaf. 2.

Sub persecutione Ariana Basilio Magno ista aliquando injecta est cogitatio: An Ecclesiæ suas prorsus dereliquit Dominus? an novissima hora est?

Psal. 34. 19, 21

SEcondly from God, turne your eyes to the people of God, and so they come there commended and described unto us 1. by their near relation to God, they are his, his Jewels, his sons, his servants, his serviceable sons, his righteous servants, and can such be alwayes unremembred? So some have feared, but time hath confuted them. 2. By their rare qualifications.

For 1. habitually they are men fearing God, religious and godly persons, and therefore heires of the promises of good things for both lives 1 Tim. 4. 8. And for evils be they never so many or great, he that feareth God shall come forth of them all, Eccles. 7. 18. Many saith David the father, are the troubles of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth him out of them all: but one affliction slayeth the wicked, because his shadow is departed from him. And of the same minde is Solomon his son. Though the righteous man fall seven times into misery, yet he hath time to rise again: but the wicked at one evill fall downright Prov. 24. 16.

2. They actually expresse this holy habit of Gods true fear in their hearts. 1. by setting their thoughts a work, to chew upon Gods holy name, and to roll it as sugar under their tongues, that thence (as Sampsons out of his hony-comb) they might suck out strong consolations. For the Name of the Lord is a strong tower; the righteous run to it and are safe. And, In the fear of the Lord is strong confidence, and his children have a place of refuge. Now shall the saints think upon Gods name, and he not think upon their needs? Yea, I know the thoughts that I think toward you, saith the Lord, thoughts of peace, and not of evill, and all to give you an expected end. For after 70. yeers be accomplished at Babylon (loe they must have their time of suffering, as he hath his of saving) I will visit you, and performe my good word toward you, to cause you to returne to this place. 2. By setting their tongues a work to vent those holy thoughts of theirs, as opportunity was offered: And first for the vindicating of Gods glory so much opposed and obscured by those above-said Belialists moved with a great zeal for the Lord of hosts, as Elias once was against the pleaders for Baals service, and saying (as some will have this text to be read) Verily the Lord (whom you blasphemously charge with deep oscitancy or foul iniquity) doth harken and hear, both your detestable contumelies, and his peoples pious performances, and there is a book of remembrance written before him &c. Next, they spake often one to another, as often as they met and might, for mutuall help and encouragement: stirring up themselves among themselves to take better hold of God; and not, by a shamefull recidivation or comporting with the times, to lose those

Prov. 10.

Prov. 14. 26

Jer. 29. 10, 11

those things that they had wrought, but that they might receive a full reward. Thus were those ancient Christians occupied both within doores and without, at home in their own hearts and houses, and abroad also among their foes on the one hand, and their friends on the other: and what their practise was then is still the guise of godly persons. Now should God in the mean-while be unrighteous to forget their work, and labour of love, that they have shewed toward his Name, which they have stoutly vindicated, and toward his saints to whose souls they have ministered, and do minister by wholesome admonition, and Christian encouragement?

SECT. VII.

When God will make up his Jewels.

But what is that time, and when is that day, that the Lord will make up his Jewels, and shew himself propitious to his afflicted people?

1. Generally and indefinitely, at any time, no one day excepted, or exempted. Ans. God judgeth the righteous, and God is angry with the wicked every day. Psal. 7. 11. Thus God judg'd David, that is, he justified him, and avenged his quarrell, when he was angry with Nabal the churle, and after ten dayes sicknesse struck him with death. Blessed be the Lord, (saith he upon the news thereof) that hath judged the cause of my rebuke at the hand of Nabal, and so hath cleared his own glory, and mine integrity. There is no time wherein the righteous may not rejoyce, when he seeth the vengeance, and wash his feet in the blood of the wicked: So that he shall be able to say, Verily there is a reward for the righteous, Verily He is a God that judgeth in the earth.

Particularly, and for instance, there are three more speciall dayes of deliverance to the people of God.

First, in an exigence, and utmost distresse, when they know not what to do with Jehosaphat, nor whither to turn them with David: when they are at a dead lift with Ionah, and at their wits end with the children of Israel under the Egyptian bondage, and at the red sea: when the children are come to the birth, and there is not strength to bring forth, as in Hezekiah's dayes. Senacherib had already in his hopes and conceit swallowed up the city, and was fetching his deadly blow at all the people of God, as if they had all had but one neck: when God put a hook into the nostrills of that great Leviathan, and turned him back: yea sent forth an Angel that destroyed his army, to the terrour of other nations. God delights to bring his people to the mount with Abraham, yea to the very brow of the hill (as the Nazarenes brought our Saviour Luk. 4.) till their feet slip, and then delivers them. In the Mount will the Lord be seen for the saving of his Isaac from the fatall stroke, of his Peters from the destroying sword, of his Daniels from the lions gripe, of his whole Church from Humans plots and Papists conspiracies. When Saul had hemmed David in on every side to take him, there came a messenger (in the nick) to Saul saying, Hast thee and come, for the Philistines have invaded the land. When Senacherib had taken all the defended cities of Judah, and was advancing toward Jerusalem, God sent a blast upon him, and made him hear a rumour that Tirhakah King of Ethiopia was come forth to make warr with him. When Charles the fifth was mustering his forces to root out the Lutheran heresy out of Germany, he was called off by God to fight with the Turk who at that very time made an irruption into Hungary, and the confine countries.

Secondly, in a common calamity, in an overflowing scourge, a sweeping showre, that takes all afore it. Such as was that horrible devastation and destruction of Jerusalem, first by Nebuchadnezzar, when God manifestly made up his Jewels, graciously provided for his Jeremies, Baruchs, Ebedmelechs, Gedaliahs, whose father Ahikam had formerly freed the prophet Jeremy out of danger, chap. 39. 24. and 48. 5. and 26. 24. As for those faithfull ones that went into captivity, Nabal parricidus.

1 Sam. 25. 39

Psal. 58. 10. 11

Cum duplicentur lateres, Venit. Moyses. Capino.

Omnibus Judæis, persuade ac si unum jugulum haberent, extremum illud intentabatur. Bucholz. Statue Senacherib in inscriptionum refert Herodotus lib. 2. Epist. 715 de eorum eversione 1500. 1 Sa 23. 26, 27. Esay 37. 7, 9. Canes lingunt ulcera Lezari. Turca mittit edictum Augustinum. Scul. Annal.

Jer. 2. 4.

Repetit eorum
verba non sine
spe ie ironica.
Calvin.

1 Thef. 2. 15, 16

Quodvis verbum exaggerat
crimen. Rolloc.
in loc.
Jfeph de bell.
Jud lib 6. c. 4.
& 1. 7. c. 18

God had for their sakes sent the good figs ( Daniel with his three fellowes and others ) before them in a former captivity under Jecooniah, as so many Josephs to provide for them in a farre-countray. Next, when the City was razed, and harased by the Romans: which calamity seems to be here principally and particularly pointed at, as appeareth by the first, second, and third verses of the fourth Chapter.

For behold, the day cometh that shall burn like an oven, and all the proud, and all that do wickedly ( which those blasphemers above had pronounced happy, and high above others ) shall be stubble, and the day that cometh shall burne them up, saith the Lord of Hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch, that is, neither sonne, nor nephew, as the Chaldee Paraphrast, and after him Kimchi expounds it.
This was literally and punctually fulfilled upon the unbelieving Jews, thirty eight yeers after our Saviours Resurrection. Who forasmuch as they would not know, at the least in that their day, the things that belong'd to their peace: but both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own Prophets and Apostles, being displeasing to God, and thwart to all men, so filling up the measure of their sinnes, therefore came wrath upon them to the utmost. But what will God do for his Jewels in this common combustion, in this utter desolation, and dissolution of the Jewish Nation?
See what follows: But unto you that fear my Name ( the proper badge and character of a true Christian ) shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings, ( It is fair weather with Gods children mostly, when it is foulest with the wicked: At once the fire falls upon Sodom, and the Sunne riseth upon Zoar: Abraham stands upon the hill, and sees the cities burning ) and ye shall go forth ( sc. to Pella, and other hiding places provided for you, and there ) shall ye grow up as calves of the stall. And ye shall tread down the wicked: for they shall be ashes ( in reference to the burning oven above-mentioned ) under the soles of your feet, in the day that I shall do this, ( that is, in the day when I thus make up my Jewels ) saith the Lord of Hosts. Which second and third verses of the fourth Chapter ( for the first verse depends on Chap. 3. 18. and explains it ) as they contain a just Comment upon my Text, so do they acquaint us with diversie precious pledges and priviledges, whereby God will seal up his dearest love to his most esteemed Jewels, in most afflicted times of common calamitie.

These are, 1. Light, ( that is joy ) by the arising of the Sunne of righteous-nesse upon them. See Esther 8. 16. 2. Health to their souls, and healing to the r state: for this Sunne shall arise with healing under his wings, that is in his beams. See Psal. 60. 1, 2. with 2 Chron. 7. 14. 3. Liberty, for ye shall goe forth, to wit, out of the strait prison, the little-ease of Affliction, and grow up, or frisk about for joy ( so some render it ) as fat calves, and young cattle in the spring. 4. Prosperity, ye shall grow up, as the Palme tree, notwithstanding your oppressions: ye shall break out, and get up, as blown bladders aloft all waters, as the Sunne from under a cloud, as the seed from under a clod. 5. Victory:
for ye shall tread down the wicked, and they shall be as ashes under the soles of your feet, which, erst, rode over your heads, and made you passe thorough fire and water, Psal. 66. 12. But when shall all this be? In the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord, q. d. Not so soon as your selves would, for then it should be presently, you would be pulling at the fruit afore it were ripe, and plucking off the plaster afore the sore were healed ) nor so long hence as the enemies would, for then it should be never: but in Gods good time, when he seeth fit, who hath kept that key of times and seasons under his own girdle. Not seldome, in this life; as when Constantine overcame, and trampled upon Dioclesian, Maximian, Maxentius, Li-cinius, and other persecuting Tyrants, according to that of Solomon. The evil bow before the good, and the wicked at the gates of the righteous. i

Prov. 14. 19

But most certainly at the day of judgement, ( which is the third particular day of deliverance we have to speak to ) called, that day, by an appellative proper. Then, at utmost, God will make up his jewels in much mercy, ( and of this last day, the most interpret it ) then will he both bring to light the hidden things of darknesse, and also those Hidden ones of his, that are all glorious within, though for the outside mean and despicable; together with all their secret services, and mental performances, even the counsels of their hearts shall be made manifest; and then shall every man have praise of God, 1 Cor. 4. 5. That is, every jewel, every Jew inwardly, every Israelite indeed

Vatablus
Figuer
Gualther, &c.
1<sup>o</sup> al. 83. 3

Hoc esset poma
aerba ad hunc
deceperet. Cyp.

Ut aer percu-sus non laedi-
tur, imò ne di-
viditur quidē,
sed resundit
sest. & spissior
redit. Job. 2
Wooler.

Calvin.

indeed whose praise is not of men but of God, shall be graced by the judge himself, before a world of men and angels. For without the least mention of their sins Ezek. 18.22. Rev. 14.13. Their good parts and practises onely and amply, shall be remembered and rehearsed. And those not strictly censured (for he will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him) but onely produced as proofs and evidences of that effectual faith of theirs, whereby they have a plentiful entrance further and further into the kingdom of God 2 Pet. 1.10.11. Rom. 2.29

SECT. VIII.

Comfort under publike Calamities.

For application: the main vse of this point, and that which the holy Ghost in this text chiefly drives at is, Singular comfort and encouragement to all and every of Gods faithful servants, both in regard of the Church universal first, and themselves, next, in their own particular. Vse. 1.

First then, for the labouring church, what can be a greater comfort to every good child of hers then to hear that God will have his time ere long, to ease her of her adversaries, and avenge her of those her enemies that now revel in her ruines, crying, down with her, down with her, even to the ground? This is the horrid and hideous voice of Babels brats, and Edoms rufflers, sleight in blood, and used to the spoil, as birds of prey: But what saith the Oracle? Comfort ye, comfort ye my people saith your God, speak ye to the heart of Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her set time is expired, that her iniquity is pardoned, and so the quarrel fairely ended: for she hath received of the Lords hand double for all her sins. So it hath seemed to him, that waited all this while to shew her mercy, and thought long of the time she was in misery, as being himself afflicted in all her afflictions, and bearing a part. Surely it is not willing; (or from his heart, saith the original) that he doth at any time afflict, or grieve the Children of men, said that church that was even then under the lash: but though he cause grief (such is our untowardnesse that will not else be ordered) yet will he have compassion according to the multitude of his mercies; he will not cast off for ever. This was her comfort and this may be ours: when we hear how ill it fares with Gods people abroad, and what preasures and grievances they groan under at home, say, This is the time of Jacobs trouble, but he shall be saved out of it. Troubled the Saints are on every side, but not distressed: doubting but not despairing, persecuted but not deserted, cast down, but not cast off. Tost the Church might be with Nochs Ark, but not overwhelmed, washt with Paul in the shipwreck, but not drowned, fired with Moses bush, but not consumed, pressed with Davids bay-tree, but not oppressed, prickt with Solomons lillie among thorns, but not choaked, growing in a bottom with Zacharies myrtle tree. Chap. 1.8. Yet not overtopped: a burdensome stone, a torch of fire, a cup of trembling in the hand of her enemies (Zach. 12.2,3,6.) who have but a time Dan. 11.24,39. The wicked plotteth against the just, and gnasheth upon him with his teeth. The Lord shall laugh at him, saith the Psalmist, for he seeth that his day is coming Psal. 37.12,13. And thereupon afterwards he inferreth, mark the upright man, and behold the just, for (let his beginning or middle be never so troublesome,) the end of that man is peace. God delighteth to make fools of his enemies, and lets them bring their designs to the utmost, and then defeats them, suffers them to proceed very far that they may return with the greater shame as Sennacherib; that their high hopes may end in a baltar, as Haman, that their own swords may be sheathed in their own throates as Goliaths. When they are tumultuating, and triumphing, as if the day were their own, and they were masters of the field, with Gog and Magog, then shall God come down as it were in an engin, to rescue his saints, and to dissolve the Gordian knots of all Antichristian power and policy. This he doth also for his own greater glory, to make himself a name in the earth, when thus in a moment, in the turning of a hand, he turns the wheel, causing light suddenly and sweetly to spring forth, not onely in, but out of deepest darknesse. Psal. 137. Ille dolet quoties cogitur esse ferox. Ovid. Trist. Cuius fere panem sumere panis sua est. ib. Lam. 3.31.32. 33. Ier. 30.7. 2 Cor. 4.8,9. Niteris incassum Christi subnergere navem. Cant. 2.2. 2 Chro. 32.21. Esther. 7.10. 1 Sam. 27.51. Ode: and many others. Psal 112.4 2 Cor. 4.6

Deut. 32. 27.
 Rom. 10.
 17. 20. Do-
 mine. 102.
 Catechus tanquā symbo-
 lum in ore ha-bebāt, agens de futurum cala-
 mitatibus Melch. Adam.
 Jer 8. 20.
 Psal. 90. 13.
 14. 15.
 Iſai. 45. 15.

Roma diu titu-bans variis
 erroribus aſſa Corruet, &
 mundi deſinet
 eſſe caput.
 Luk. 18. 7. 9

1 Theſ. 2.

All that we have here to do is to leave the labouring Church in Gods everlasting armes, as Moses speaketh, crying out unto him day and night; How long Lord, holy and true, doest thou not judge, and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? Lord, how long shall the wicked, how long shall the wicked triumph? How long wilt thou not have mercy on Ierusalem, and the cities of Iudah, against which thou haſt had indignation theſe threeſcore yeers; Thou ſhalt ariſe and have mercy upon Sion, for the time to favour her, yea the ſet time is come Pſal. 102. 13. (The ſight of the rubbiſh moved affections of prayer, hence they knew the ſet time of help was at hand, as when we bid our children ask us any thing, it is becauſe that we mean to give it them) the harveſt is paſt, the ſummer is ended, and we are not ſaved.
 Return O Lord, how long? and let it repent thee concerning thy ſervants. O ſatſifie us early with thy mercy, that we may rejoyce and be glad all our dayes.
 make us glad according to the dayes wherein thou haſt afflicted us, and the yeers wherein we have ſeen evil &c. This was the courſe that Daniel took in like caſe, when he underſtood by books the number of the yeers, that the ſet and appointed time was now paſt, he ſet his face by earneſt prayer, to ſeek out that God that hideth himſelf; and ſo to draw him out of his place, to puniſh the inhabitants of the earth for their cruelty, and to plead the cauſe of his oppreſſed people. Iſai. 26. 21.
 A time there is ſet we all know, for the fall of Antichriſt. This cannot be far by all ſignes and tokens well nigh fulfilled and accompliſhed. And for the elects ſake ſhould not thoſe dayes be ſhortned, would they but cry day and night to him that heareth prayers, though he bear long with them, I tell you that he would avenge them ſpee-dily. And that he doth it no ſooner, may we not thank our own dulneſſe and ſlackneſſe to ply the throne of grace with faithful and fervent prayer. For when the ſon of man cometh (to deſtroy that wicked one, with the brightneſſe of his coming) ſhall he finde faith upon earth? ſuch a vigorous and victorious faith as would make Gods remembrancers pray and faint not (which is the drift of that parable of the importunate widow) to make mention of the Lord, and to give him no reſt till he eſtabliſh, and make his Ierusalem a praiſe in the earth Iſaiah 62. 6, 7?

SECT. IX.

Comfort under personal crosses and grievances.

τὸ πικρὸν
 μίχρον Νεφύδιον
 ἐστὶ καὶ πικρὸν
 ἕρπης.
 Athanaſ. apud
 Socrat. hiſt.
 Eccleſ. lib. 3.
 cap. 14.
 Iſai. 26
 Heb. 10. Hab. 2
 Rev. 22.
 Psal. 37.
 Hab. 2.
 Heb. 10. 38.
 ὁ ἀποκρίνεται.
 A military word from ſouldiers who recoyle and leave their ſtanding.
 Prov. 31.
 ἀναστροφή.
 voi: Heb. 11.

NExt, here's a word of comfort and encouragement to each particular Chriſtian as touching his perſonal croſſes and encombrances whatſoever. Let none faint or ſhrink under the heaviſt burden of their light affliction, ſith it is but for a moment, as Paul hath it; for a few dayes onely, while you would ſay what's thiſt?
 as Jacob computed it: Mourning laſteth but till morning, ſaith David, for a very little while ſaith Eſay, for a ſmal pittance of time ſaith the Author to the Hebrews after Habacuc, and then he that ſhal come, will come and will not tarry.
 Behold, I come quickly, ſaith Chriſt, and my reward is with me. But what ſhall we do in the mean while? Feed on faith, ſaith David, The juſt ſhall live by faith, ſaith Habacuc; yea, and make a good living of it too. For 1. It will rein him in that he ſhall not run from his colours, for ſake his captain to ſeek for help of the God of Ekron, to bring it in by the back-door, that he ſhall not make more haſt out of his, preſent preſures then good ſpeed, according to that, He that beleeveth, maketh not haſt, he can be content to wait Gods leiſure, and not to anticipate his time.
 2. Faith again fetcheth comfort and ſupport, as the merchants ſhip doth treaſure from afar: it makes a man look thorough the preſent durance to the future deliverance, which faith ſaluteth afar off, and reſteth as confident of the accompliſhment of Gods promiſe by hope, as if it were already in hand. Faith taketh, and individuateth the promiſe, applies and appropriates that to it ſelf. He ſhall deliver thee in ſix troubles, yea in ſeven there ſhall no evil touch thee. No devoratory evil, as Terrullian, termeth it ſhall touch thee, ſaith qualitative, as Cajetan hath it, with a deadly touch. Touch thee it may to thy ſmart, but not atall to thy hurt

hurt. Touch it may thy feet, as Jordan did the Priests feet that bore the Arke, but sure the proud waters shall not go over thy soule. For God will give thee rest from the dayes of adversity, untill the pit be digged for the wicked. Yea I will settle you after your old estates, & will do better unto you then at your beginnings and ye shall know that I am the Lord. Now all these and the like promises, faith takes for present pay, counts them sure-hold, and so lives upon them, and the just by it. 3. Faith puts a mans head into heaven; gives him to walk with God in affliction, sets him as it were into the upper region, above all stormes, as Henoch: who seing and walking with him that is invisible, was taken up even before he was taken up. Here below are many changes of weather, but above with God, there is a continuall serenity. Now the way of the righteous is on high, saith Solomon: and as waters abide not on ground that lyes high, so neither doth the sense of afflictions lye long on mindes lifted up in heavenly contemplations. I will not say but such may be surprized by a common calamity, by a deluge of destruction that overspreads the whole land: But usually God doth either hide his Jewels then in the golden cabinet of his gracious providence, that they shall not be much the worse for it, as he did the Israelites in Goshen, the disciples in Pella, the marked mourners in the hollow of his own hand: Or if they be wrapt up in a common condition with others, yet God will make a manifest difference in that day. For either he will give them their lives for a prey (Thou hast afflicted me sore, saith David, but not given me up to death. The plowers plowed upon my back, but thou hast cut asunder their traces) and provide liberally for them in the land of their captivity, as he did for Ezekiel, Daniel, and others, he will be a little sanctuary unto them there, and supplie the defect of all other comforts. Or if he call them to higher sufferings, he will give them an higher spirit: if he free them not from the common destruction, yet certainly from the common distraction. If they resist unto blood, yea unto losse of life, yet in the midst of death, they shall live, conquer and raigne. For blessed are they that dye in the Lord (especially if withall they dye for the Lord) for they shall rest from their labours; rest in their beds, each one walking in his uprightness. There remaineth then a rest unto the people of God, an eternall Sabbathisme, such a day as knowes no evening, or end, or toile of travell, that great Sabbath-day that comprehends and accomplishes all the Sabbaths of the law. These were first the weekly Sabboaths, wherein they rested from their week-day labours. Secondly, the seven-yeares-sabbath: for every seventh yeare the ground also rested from tillage and manuring. Thirdly, the fifty-yeares-sabbath: for every seventh seventh year was a year of Jubilee. And then, all debts were remitted, all prisoners released, and all mortgages restored to their right inheritours. Heaven involves all these: And that great day of the Resurrection (when God shall chiefly make up his Jewels, and redeeme Israel out of all her troubles, called therefore the day of Redemption of the purchased possession for Gods peculiar, the people of his purchase) This day, I say, shall set Gods people at rest from their labours, and the creatures (which now lye bed-ridden, as it were, waiting the good houre) at rest from all their burdens and bondages, into the glorious Jubilee of the children of God. Who shall then have all their wrongs righted, all their sins pardoned, debts discharged, bonds cancelled, graces perfected, desires satisfied, and that heavenly inheritance (mortgaged in paradise, and long since forfeited) shall be then restored. Where they shall be possessed of all the pleasures at Gods right hand, seated as Princes in thrones of Majesty, crowned with diadems of immarcescible glory, having power over all creatures, and plenary possession of that new heaven, and that new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness. Beholding, and being filled with the vision, and fruition of Gods glorious presence; amidst a world of blessed angels and crowned saints, even all the court of heaven, who shall joyfully meet and welcome them. Oh let the forethought of those unutterable varieties, felicities, eternities lighten our spirits, smooth our countenances, and chear up our hearts, as it did Dauids; and doth all the servants of God, who with stretcht out necks, look up, long after, and even hasten that happy day, crying all with one minde, and with one mouth, Come Lord Jesus, come quickly; and exhaling their broken spirits in continuall sallies and egressions of love, affecting not only a union but a unity with Christ.

Psal. 124. 5
Psal. 94. 13
Ezek. 36. 11

Psal. 129. 3; 4

Esay. 57. 3
Heb. 4

Rom. 8. 21
Psal. 16. 11
Rev. 3. 21
2 Tim. 4. 8
Rev. 2. 26
2 Pet. 3. 13
Heb. 12. 22
Psal. 16. 9, 10,
11. & 17. ult.
Rom. 8. 19.
ἀναπαύσει
αὐτὰν as a bird
out of a cage,
as longing for liberty or as a prisoner out
of a grate
looking for a pardon: or as one out of a turret, expecting his friends coming.

SECT. X.

Reproof of forwardnesse and saintheartednesse in affliction.

SEcondly, will the Lord indeed finde a set time to free his poor people of all their sorrowes and sufferings? this then serves sharply to reprove that impatiency and shortnesse of spirit found in not a few of Gods dearest Jewels: who because they are vilipended, and undervalued by the blind world, who know not the price of a heavenly Jewel, and for that they are trode under foot for a time by these swine, and slurried with the mire of their contempt and cruelty, are drawn thereupon one while to fret, and another while to faint; begin to be out of all heart, and hope of a better condition, and to make against themselves these or the like desperate conclusions: Surely I shall never winde out of these disgraces and distresses, I shall go softly all my yeers in the bitterness of my soul: My state is past recovery, I never look to see joyfull day more. Abraham had a spice of this diseale, when he could enjoy nothing, because he wanted one thing. Gen. 15. 1, 2. But Iacob was farr over-gone with it, when (together with his wife Rachel) he refused to be comforted, and would needs go down into the grave unto his son Ioseph mourning, as if all his merry dayes were past. So the children of Iacob in Egypt, that could not take comfort in the sweet words of Moses and Aaron, for the greatnesse of their oppressions: The care that tryeth words as the mouth doth meat, was so imbittered with their extreme bondage that they could not relish any thing, nor tast how good and sweet the Lord was. This was Iobs fault, when he cursed his day, and the consolations of God were small unto him. Elias also wisht himself dead in a passion, and wist not that he was to be carried up ere long in a fiery charret. And what can we say for David, when he repented him of his repentance Psal. 73. 13. and another time said, I shall surely fall one day by the hand of this same Saul, notwithstanding Gods promise to me of the kingdome. Were it not better for me to save one, (Behold, I am going to dye, and what profit shall this birth-right do to me?) and to shift for my self by flying to the Philistines, then by biding longer here to hazard my life upon the hopes of a kingdome, being a mere uncertainty, sith all men are liars, not the Prophets themselves excepted. Thus he in hast. And thus the whole Church upon as little good advice, Lam. 3. 18, 19. I said, my strength, and my hope is perished from the Lord: Remembring mine affliction, and my misery, the wormwood and the gall. This made her desperately conclude the book: But thou hast utterly rejected us, thou art very wroth against us. And the very truth is, the best faith, long tried will something flag and hang the wing. The best minds when troubled yeeld inconsiderate motions, as water that is violently stirred sends up bubbles. Addeo ridicul est in nobis magni, saith One, quod non queat minui. But, for this we must take up our selves roundly, and chide our hearts out of these distempers, with, Why art thou cast down, O my soul, and why art thou disquieted within me? Why dost fret? Why dost faint? Hope in God: for I shall yet praise him &c.

Should I conclude that it will never be better with me, either I should deny that I am Gods child, and one of his Jewels, which were to bely my self, and deny the work of Gods grace in my soul: or basely and blasphemously to joyne with those ranke Atheists above-mentioned, that charge him with heedlesnes and improvidence, as one that laid his Jewels at his heels, and cared not what became of them. Which were to set my mouth against heaven, and like a breathing-devill to bely the Almighty, whose secret is upon my tabernacle, Iob 29. 4. that is, his secret and singular providence, who ordereth my down-sitting, and mine uprising Psal. 139. 2. who cutteth out my whole condition, and not only keepeth my bones, nor one of them is broken, but numbrell all my haire, nor one of them is missing. Things are therefore numbred, that none of them may be diminished. Lo, the hairs of our heads are numbred (as the three childrens

Esay 38.15

Gen. 37. 35

Exod. 6. 9

Psal 34.

1 Sam. 27. 1

Gen. 25. 32

1 Sam. 27. 1

Psal. 116. 11

Lam. 3. 18, 19

Lam. 4. 22

Fidei murus
tentationem ariete, durius
aliquando pul-satus, et con-
cussus, facile
nutare ac rui-
nam minari in-cipit nisi divinitus sustente-
tur. Bucholz.
Psal. 43. 7.

childrens were in the Babylonish furnace ) not one of them can fall to the ground without your heavenly father. And if not a hair much lets the head it self. Zion may say, The Lord hath forsaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me. But that was but her mistake, and misprision of the matter. For the Lord will not utterly cast off his people, nor forsake his inheritance for ever. For a small moment he may forsake them (to their thinking) but with great mercy will he gather them: In a little wrath, he may hide his face from them, for a moment: but with everlasting kindnesse will he have mercy on them. He will not contend for ever, nor be alwayes wroth, for the spirit should faile before him. When the childe swoons in the whipping, God lets fall the rod, and falls a killing it, to fetch life into it again. In some diseases blood must be let usque ad deliquium, till the patient faint again: Yet it is a rule in Physick still to maintaine nature: so doth God uphold the spirits of his children by cordials of consolation in their deepest affliction. This we should never doubt of, but constantly shame and shent our selves in Gods presence for our forwardnesse and faintheartednesse.

Mat. 10. 29

Esay 49. 14

Psal. 94. 14

Esay 54. 7, 8

Esay 57. 16

SECT. XI.

Exhortation to diligence in duty.

THe last use we shall put this point to, for present, is an Exhortation to a double duty 1. Diligence in doing Gods will. 2. Patience in suffering it.

Ufe. 3.

For the first: It's encouragement enough to shew all good Conscience and fidelity in our generall and particular callings, to consider that sooner or later God will not fail to requite our labour of love even to a cup of cold water, or a bit of bread cast upon the waters, and so cast away, (as a man would think) but after many dayes thou shalt finde it. Give a portion to seven and also to eight: for he that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord, and that which he giveth will he pay him again. Not down upon the naile, it may be, but he is a sure and a liberall paymaster, he gives double interest, nay a hundred fold here (as Isaac had a hundred fold increase of the seed he sowed in the land of Canaan) and eternall life hereafter. When we have laid our grain in the ground, we look not to see it the same day in the barne or garner (as he saith of the Hyperborean people farr North, that they sow shortly after sun-rising, and reap before sun-set; for with them the whole half-year is but one continuall day) but we are content to wait for a crop till the year be run about, living in hope mean-while, and therewith sustaining our selves. And shall we not shew like patience in waiting Gods good leisure, without being dismayed or disheartened, though not presently required? light is sown for the righteous, and joy for the upright in heart. Lo it is but seed-time with the saints, while here, and that's commonly a wet time and dropping. But they that sow in tears shall reape in joy. He that goeth forth, and weepeth bearing precious seed, shall doubtlesse come again with rejoycing, bringing his sheaves with him.

Eccles. 11. 1

Prov. 19. 17

Mat. 19. 29

Herespach: de re rustica. Spes alit agricolae: spes sulcis credit arvis Semina, quae magno fenore reddit ager. Tibull.

Psal. 126. 5, 6

Ob.

Sol.

Rev. 22. 12

Act. 13. 36

Act. 13. 25

2 Tim. 4. 7, 8

Gal. 6. 9

1 Cor. 15. 58

Ey, but when?

Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give unto every man according to his works. David served out his time, and is entred into his masters joy. John Baptist did up his work, and is gone to take up his wages. St. Paul finished his course, and hath received his crown. Wherefore let us not be weary of well doing: for in due season we shall surely reap, if we faint not. Yea, be ye stedfast and unmoveable, alwayes abounding in the work of the Lord: forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord.

SECT. XII.

Exhortation to patience in misery.

NExt let this Doctrine of Gods day of delivering, and doing good to his people, patient our hearts, and quietly compose our spirits in an humble submission to Gods holy hand, and a hopefull expectation of the day of grace, walking and waiting in the midst of our houses till he come unto us. It is but a little while that we have to wait: that he futures us yet, and comes no sooner, it is for the more effectually triall of our faith and patience, and for the better exercise of our hope and prayerfulness. When that's once done, He will send his Mandamus (as Psal. 44. 4.) by some swift Gabriel, who brought an answer to Daniels prayers, with weariness of sight, Dan. 9. 21. Yea he himself will break the heavens and come down, he will come riding upon the wings of the wind, he will come leaping as a hind over the mountains of Bether (all lets and impediments) to our relief and release. In the Courts of Princes there is ἀναβολὴ καὶ μεταβολή, delays, and discardings. But God is quick to help, and constant in his care, even when he seems to cast off: hee hates putting away, whatever he makes shew of. Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord, saith St. James: and sweeten your present tears, (yea though God should make you a diet-drink of them) with the hope of future comforts. Look upon the husband-man, saith he, who, although his barn bee empty, and his seed cast into the earth, not yet appearing above ground, yet hee waiteth for the crop, and hath long patience for it, untill he receive the former and latter rain. And what of all this? Be ye also patient therefore, and stablish your hearts, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. And to the same purpose St. Paul: Let your patient mind be known to all men. Why? the Lord is at hand, to right your wrongs, and plead your cause against an ungodly Nation. Yea it may be God will look upon Dauids affliction the sooner, and do him good the rather, for Shimei's cursing this day. God gives over the wicked many times to exceed their commission, that he may hasten deliverance to his chosen, destruction to their enemies, their sinnes being once full. See for this, Psal. 119. 126. Jer. 51. 33, 34. Zach. 1. 15. I am very sore displeased with the Heathen, that are at ease. For I was but a little displeased (with Israel my people) but they helped forward the affliction: that is, they were excessively outrageous, above that they were bid to do: I gave them an inch, they took an ell. Now therefore, lest the righteous (put beyond his patience) should reach forth his hand to iniquity, now will I arise, saith the Lord, I will set him in safety, from him that puffeth at him, Psal. 12. 5. God seeth it but high-time to make us heave (other-whiles) with manifold afflictions. But blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for after hee hath suffered awhile, he shall receive the crown of life. For this light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a farre more exceeding and eternall weight of glory. An exceeding, excessive, eternall weight of glory is wrought out unto us by our short and light afflictions. God will look upon us as those that have been judged already, and account the present sufferings sufficient unto us, 1 Pet. 4. 13. Good therefore is the counsell of our Saviour, who himself was perfected by sufferings, In your patience possesse your souls. And that of the Psalmist, Wait on the Lord, and be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thy heart: wait, I say, on the Lord. He hath appointed a time for all, and every thing is beautifull in its season. The Israelites had their flesh at Even, and bread in the Morning. God will be waited on, and give the consummation of his blessings at his leisure. Their journey from Ægypt to Canaan, might have been dispatcht in three dayes, as Philo tells us: but God led them up and down the wilderness, as if they had been treading a maze, and held them sometimes a yeer together in a place, to their grief no doubt, but for their good, that He might humble them, and try them, and do them good in their later end. Water was not turned into wine, till the wine failed. Joseph was not set out of prison, till the set time came. The Israelites went not out of Ægypt,

Psal. 101. 2

Esay 64. 1

Cant. 8

Jam. 5. 7

Verse 8

Philip. 4. 5

2 Sam. 16. 12

Gen. 15. 16

Jam. 1. 12

2 Cor. 4. 17

ἡ παλαιότης

ἡλασθῶν, ab ἡλασθῶν. A levitate &amp;

agilitate cer-

vum nomen

habet. Chernik

Leve pondere

ut pluma Cor-

nel. à Lapide.

Heb. 5. 8

Luke 17

Psal. 27. 14

Ecclef. 3. 1, 11

Deut. 5

Egypt, till the very last day of the four hundred yeers was well-nigh at an end. Smyrna must be in prison ten dayes at least, that she may be tried, and that the trial of their faith being much more precious then that of gold that perisheth, though tried in the fire, might be found to praise, honour, and glory.

The day of the churches reſtauration by Chriſt here promiſed was not performed of 400. years after: yet when the fulneſſe of time was come, God ſent his ſon made of a woman, made under the law &c. Say it had been 4000 years, a thouſand years is to God but as one day, becauſe in him there is no flux, nor motion. Our purblind eyes ſee nothing but that which toucheth the lid, as it were, when Gods quick fight vieweth that as preſent that is a world off. But now, when all was at worſt in Church and common-wealth, and ſcarce a Joſeph or a Simeon left, that looked for the conſolation of Iſrael, ſcarce a Mary or an Anna that waited for ſalvation in Ieruſalem, then came the deſire of all nations: then the ſun of righteous broke out, with healing under his whings. What ſhall I ſay more? Chriſt himſelf, the Captain of our ſalvation was forty dayes, and forty nights tempted by the devil, before the Angels miniſtered unto him; his ſoul was heavy unto the death, ere his heart was glad, and his glory rejoyced. We alſo muſt ſuffer together, ere we can be glorified together, as two pieces of iron cannot be faſtned, till both hath paſſed the fire.

Rev. 2. 10.
1 Pet. 1. 7
Gal. 4.

Hag.2

Math. 4
Pfal. 16, 9.
Rom. 8, 17.

SECT. XIII.

Helps to patient waiting upon God for deliverance.

VV Herefore lift up the hands that hang down, and the feeble knees, and Heb. 12. 12.
for support, consider

First, that life it self, in its full length and latitudo, is but short: the afflictions therefore of life cannot be long. To live, saith one, is but to lie a dying. There is a time to be born, and a time to die, saith the wife-man. He saith not, There is a time to live, for death borders upon life, and a mans cradle stands in his grave. Oh what a short cut hath the longest liver ab utero ad urnam, from the womb to the tomb, from the birth to the burial. We chop into the earth before we are aware, like a man that walking in a field covered with snow, falls suddenly into a marle-pit. Few and evil are the dayes of my pilgrimage, saith old Iacob. Evil they are, but few and evil. Man that is born of a woman is of few dayes, and full of trouble. Trouble some his dayes are, but soon determining, sharp his sufferings, but short withal: as the paines of a travelling woman, whereunto they are oft compared. Every day we yeeld somewhat to death: and death at utmost cures all diseases, as that Martyr said.

Venite me oportet
et ego praeferam
vobis. Epist.
Multos ostendunt
terris bona sua fata, ultra
esse sinunt ---.
Νὺν δ' ἄμα
αὐτὸς μορὸς
καὶ ἐξέρχεται
πρὸς πάντων
ἐπ' αὐτοῖς. Hom.
Iliad. 12.
Theris de Achille,
Dego à de ego.
Ita degimus
quanti quā
καθ' ἡμέραν
minus fit, et nos una Be-
man. de Orig.
Rev. 7. 16.

Secondly, this life once ended, heaven begins and makes amends for all. For they shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, nor shall the sun light on them, nor any heat, but the lamb shall feed them, and lead them to the waters of life, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, as a nurse doth from the eyes of her tender babe. Now she is a sorry spouse, saith one, that cannot make shift with an uneasie horse, while she rideth to see the consummation of her love with her betrothed husband. I reckon, saith that great Apostle (that had seen as much of this, and the other world as ever man saw) that the afflictions of the present time, are not worthy to be compared, or are in no comparison, worthy of the glory that shall be revealed in us. Rom. 8. 18. For (that ye may see the inequality of the comparison) our light and momentary affliction worketh for us, a far more exceeding and an eternal weight of glory. In which text there is well observed to be a triple Antithesis, with a more then superlative description of heavens happinesse, by an hyperbole above an hyperbole. For, for affliction here's glory for light affliction a waight of glory, a heavy massy substantial glory; for momentary affliction an eternal excessive weight of glory. A lively & lofty kinde of expression, but such as falls far short of that inexplicable felicity, that abides us, and is wrought out unto us, by our shortest sufferings: Words are too weak to utter it.

2 Cor. 5. 14.
Mr. Leigh of
the promises.
*Hic si usquam Claudicat in-genium delirat
linguaq;
mensq; Luctet.*

Thirdly,

Rev. 21. 4.

Thirdly, consider that its here that God must meet with us, or no where. Here-after there shall be no more death, nor sorrow, nor crying, nor pain. Here we must have it, or in a worse place. This world is our purgatory, our little-cave, our wash-house, our place of penance, penalty, pilgrimage. Here he rubs off our rust, scours off our scurf, hewes us (as in the mount) to be living stones in the celestial Temple. Here he fines us, files us, polisheth us, thresheth us out of the husk, that we may be meat for the masters tooth, as that Father phrased it. In a word this is all the hell, we are like to have, let us make us merry with it, and sing sweet songs, as David did, in this house of our pilgrimage. Home's hard by.

149 54.

Eccles 9. 4.
Lam. 3. 39.

In the mean while, fourthly, life is a mercy, though never so full of misery. A living dog is better then a dead lion. Joseph is yet alive, that's more, then Joseph is the second man in the land. Why is living man sorrowful? Man suffers for his sin. q. d. Suffer he never so much, never so long, he receives but the due desert of his evil deeds, as that penitent thief told his fellow. And that he yet lives amidst all, and cuts not off, as a weaver the thrum of his wretched life, Hezekiah held it a precious indulgence. The reason whereof he yeelds a little after. The grave cannot praise thee: they that go down to the pit cannot hope for thy truth. Death cannot celebrate thee, that is, dead men cannot be exemplary, and so shine before men that they may see their good works, and glorifie thee. The living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I do this day, the father to the children shall make known thy truth.

Esay 38. 12.
18. 19.

Add hereunto for a fitt consideration, that no man is so hard beset with sorrows behinde and before, but he hath some lucida intervalla, some refreshings, some respits, and breathing-whiles betwixt. Iobs case is not every mans, nay, it is scarce any mans, to be visited every morning, to be tried every moment: to be held uncessantly on the rack, and not so much liberty left him, as while he swallows his spittle. This was an hard case, and might be any of ours, as well as Iobs. Now that it is not, see ground of patience, nay of thankfulness to that God, that might have doomed man at first to be ever in sweating out a poor living (called therefore the life of his hand, because it is upheld by the labour of his hand) and women to be ever labouring in the extreame paines of child-birth, neither yet to be saved after all, no though she should continue in faith and charity, and holiness with sobriety.

Esay. 57. 10

1 Tim 2. 15.

Sixthly, God is with us al the while we are in durance; optimum solatium, sodalium can we have better company? He goes along with us into the fire, as with the three children, and into the water, as with Ionas: yea though he had closed her mouth upon us, and swallowed us up into her bowels, yet it must (in despite of it) render us up again, because God is with us and for us. Hells stomach could not long hold us, no more then the whale could brook Ionas, which if he had light upon the mariners, he would devoured and digested twenty of them in lesse space.

Seventhly, God accounts what we suffer now sufficient for all: and lookes upon us as those that have been judged already, yea that have received double for al our sins. The time is now that judgement begins at the house of God 1 Pet. 4. 17 And when we are judged we are chastened of the Lord, that we may not be condemned with the world 1 Cor. 11. 32. Abiahav, though worthy of death, shall live, because he had been formerly afflicted with David. So shall we, which have suffered with Christ raig for ever with him, who else had been but dead men, had not God chastised us, and taught us in his law, by those corrections of instruction that are the way to life.

Psal. 94. 12.

Prov. 6. 23.

2 Cor. 7. 6.

Esay. 30. 13.

Sustine tu il-

lum qui sustinuit te. Sust-

nuit ille te, dum

tu corrigeres

vitam malam:

sustine tu illum,

dum coronet

vitam bonam.

Aug.

Esay. 26. 9.

1 Pet. 5. 6

Lastly, consider that God, that comforteth the abject, hath set a certain time for our deliverance, a day to do us good in: waiting (mean-while) to shew mercy, and counting, as it were, the slow minutes till we become eapable Iob. 13. 36. Now shall he wait upon us, and shall not we wait for him? Yea, we have waited for the Lord, saith the Church in the way of thy judgements. And humble your selves under the mighty hand of God, saith Peter, and he will lift you up in season in the opportunity of time. To prescribe to the most wise God were intolerable presumption, and to anteverit his season, dangerous precipitancy: to set him a time with that king of Israel 2 King. 6. 33. to send for him by a post with those Bethulians, either be must save us now or not at all, how can can he endure it? Rebecca was too nimble with her, If it be so, why am I thus? & as ill-advised, when she said; I am weary of my life because of the daughters of Heb. And she and her son Jacob should have had the patience, to wait Gods leisure for the blessing, and not to have gotten in by the back-door. But we are all naturally impatient of delays, and too ready to think we should sow and reape both in a day. As our grand-mother Eve, who having received the promise of a Messiah, thought that her first-borne Cain must needs have been the Man: and therefore, as pleased with the conceit thereof, she said, I have gotten that Man (that famous Man, even the Man Christ Jesus) of the Lord. But she was fairly deceived: and so are all such like to be, as are in like hast, and cannot frame with patience to wait for the Lord, as David Psal. 40. 1. Yea to pant, and sometimes to faint, as Jeremy, with long looking after his coming.

Now the God of all grace, who hath called us to his twofold kingdom of power, and of patience, by Jesus Christ, after ye have suffered awhile (for so you must) make you perfect, settle, strengthen, stablish you. To him be glory and power for ever and ever Amen.

Reg- } Patien-
num } tie.
} Den} tia.
Rev. 1. 9
1 Pet. 5. 10.

CHAP. III.

God will owne, and honour his Saints.

And they shall be mine saith the Lord of Hosts, in the day when I make up my Jewels &c.

Of the three points gathered out of the former part of the 17. Verse. Two are already dispatcht. The third now followes.

That Gods faithfull people shall be graciously owned and acknowledged, yea preciouslly esteemed and accounted of in that day. They shall be mine, saith the Lord of Hosts: there he ownes them. And I will make them up as my Jewels, there he honours them.

I know the words are by some, somewhat otherwise read and rendered, as thus: They shall be to me in the day that I shall do this (or that I shall make or set out) for a flock. So the Geneva Translators, after the vulgar, Varabius, Pagnine, Calvin, and the whole streame of Interpreters. Our last most accurate Translation, after Tricellius, Polanus and Shindler, hath it better, and nearer to the naturall genuine, grammaticall sense of the Originall, thus: And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of Hosts. In die quo consecutus sum peculium, in the day that I make up my Jewels, or peculiar treasure, my proper goods and most precious substance, my silver and my gold, my gemmes and my Jewels, the people of my purchase (as St. Peter after the Septuagint renders it) and those that comprehend, as it were, all my gettings: they are as it were, all he hath, that he makes any account of. The Lords portion is his people, saith Moses, and Jacob the the lot of his inheritance. God is their portion, and they are his. They his glory and gold, and He theirs: they are round about him, and he interchangably, round about them, as the mountaines are round about Jerusalem. They make their boast of God, and God boasts as fast of them. Hast thou considered my servant Iob, that there is not such a man in all the earth? He avoucheth them for his people, high above all nations in praise, in name, and in honour: And they o'ther side (such a sweet correspondency there is) avouch him for their God, to walk in his waies, and to keep his statutes, to shew forth his vertues, as examples of the Rule, and as a kingdome of Priests to cover Gods altar with the calves of their lips, and to offer up spirituall sacrifices acceptable to God, by Jesus Christ; in whom he hath chosen them (as vessels of honour) before the foundation of the world &c. Eph. 1. 4.

Doct.

Nota quod ipsi futuri sint Deo inter peculiarium, quo die sum peculium sit consecutus. Polan.

λαός εἰς τι-
μιωτάτων.
1 Pet. 2. 9.
λαός περιού-
τος.
Tit. 2. 14
Deut. 32. 9
Iob 22. 25
Psal. 148. 14
Psal. 125. 2
Οὐτε χεῖρότε-
ρον ἀδελφεῖς
ἐνὸς ἀσπασ-
ται ὡς πρὸς αγαθόν ἀν-
θρώπου
συμπερι-ποιῶν. Plato.
Deut. 26. 17,
18, 19.
1 Pet. 2. 9
Heb. 13. 15

For we are not redeemed with corruptible things as silver and gold ( poor things to purchase a soul with, more likely a fair deal to drown it desperately in perdition and destruction ) but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb undefiled, and without spot : who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify us to himself ( by that blood of sprinkling, that saved us from the Destroyer ) a peculiar people, and present us to himself a glorious church not having spot, wrinkle, or any such thing Eph. 5. 27.

1 Tim. 6. 9
1 Pet. 1. 18, 19
1 Pet. 1. 2
Tit 2. 14

SECT. II. III.

Reason 4.

4. HE hath effectually called us with an high and heavenly calling. Heb. 3. 1. Whereby we that in times past were not a people ( as St. Peter, after the Prophet, hath it ) or if any, a disobedient and gainsaying people Rom. 10. 21 a people laden with iniquity Isay 1. 4. a people of Gomorrah, ver. 10. a naughty people, Ier. 13. 10. good for nothing, but to be cast off as a rotten girdle (ibidem) and therefore the people of Gods wrath, Isa. 10. 6. and of his curse Esay 34. 5. are now by a gracious calling, and speciall priviledge become the people of God, a righteous people Esay 60. 21. a holy people Esay 62. 12. wise and understanding above all people Dent. 4. 6. a people in whose heart is Gods law Isa. 51. 7. the epistle of Christ written not with inke, but with the spirit of the living God, known and read of all men 2 Cor. 3. 2. whiles we walk, as examples of the Rule, harmelesse and blamelesse, the sons of God without rebuke in the midst of a crooked and corrupt nation, amongst whom we shine as lights in the world, holding forth the word of life ( as an ensigne or badge of our high and honourable vocation ) and as an holy nation, a peculiar people, shewing ( or preaching ) forth the vertues of Christ that hath called us out of Egypt into Goshen, out of palpable darknesse into his marvelous light. And this the rather, because not many wise, mighty, or noble are called : 'tis a wonder that any. But God hath made known the riches of his glory on the vessels of mercy, which he had afore prepared unto glory, even us whom he hath called according to purpose, not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles. As he saith also in Osee, I will call them my people which were not my people, and clepe her beloved which was not beloved Rom. 9. 23, 24. yea, I will betroth her unto me in faithfulness, and marry her in mercy for ever. Now marriage in it self is honourable among all men : How much more when to such and such an honourable personage as the Heir of all things? Especially since to make her a fit spouse, he purifies her, as they did Esther, and beautifies her as Abrahams servant did Rebecca : for he puts a Jewel upon her fore-head, earerings in her eares, and a crown royall upon her head, Ezek. 16. 12. he decks her as a bride-groom, and as a bride adorns her self with Jewels Isa. 61. 10. thus is her beauty perfect through his comeliness put upon her. And herein the Lord Christ goes beyond all earthly bride-grooms whatsoever. Moses married a blackmore, and could not change her hue, Solomon an Egyptian, and could not convert her to the truth. But Christs conveys and communicates his beauty to his bride ( every grace in that chaine about her neck wherewith Christ is ravished Cant. 4. 9. being as a costly Jewel set in fine gold ) and whensoever he calls a man to an heavenly kingdome ( as once Saul to an earthly ) he makes him to be of another spirit then before, and to walk worthy of God, and worthy of the vocation wherewith he is called. Eph. 4. 1.

Reaf. 4.

Phil. 2. 15.

1 Pet 2. 9
1 Cor. 1. 24

Hof. 2. 20
Heb. 1. 2

SECT. V.

Reason 5.

Lastly, God hath already glorified his people ( so the Apostle doubts not to deliver himself of sanctification begun here, and to be perfected hereafter ) set

Reaf. 5.
Rom. 8. 30
them

Ephes. 2.6

them together with Christ in heavenly places, given them the earnest of their inheritance for a pawn of the whole bargain, the first-fruits of the Spirit as a fore-taste, a pledge of the whole harvest, garnished them with that grace that will one day be glory, nay is so already: for what is grace but glory begun? and what is Christ, Luk. 22. 30. yea one with Christ, Job. 17. 21. even as He and the Father are one : and so above the most glorious Angels : for are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister to them that shall be heirs of salvation, Heb. 1. 14? This ( according to some ) the devil and his black guard ( once bright Angels ) could not brook, or bring their hearts to, and therefore fell ( through envy and malice to the known truth, Job. 8. 48. ) from their first estate, and left their own habitation to dwell in darknesse, rather then they would endure to honour such a Mordecai as man, a clod of clay : a bag of wind, so poor a thing, merely made up of soul and foil, of breath and body ( a puff of wind the one, a pile of dust the other ) nay now since the fall, a very mixture and compound of dirt and sinne. But whether the devil will or no, the Church shall be brought unto the king in raiment of needlework : the virgins her companions also shall be brought, unto him. With gladnesse and rejoycing shall they be brought, they shall enter into the kings palace, and be set on his right hand ( a place of dignity and safety ) in whose presence is fulnesse of joy, and at whose right hand there are pleasures for evermore. For quality, ther's joy and gladnesse: for quantity, a fulnesse of both : for certainty at Gods right hand, and for perpetuity, for evermore.

Bucan.loc.com.
p. 76.

Νῦν καὶ χῆς

Psal. 45. 14.
15. 9.
Psal. 16. vlt.

SECT. VI.

It shall be far otherwise with the wicked.

NOW for Application : this in the first place, is no good newes to the wicked that persecute Gods people, and cast dirt on his Jewels, to hear that they shall one day be so dearly acknowledged, and highly honoured by the God of heaven. For as in a pair of buckets, when the one is at well top, the other is down at bottom, as when David grew stronger and stronger, the house of Saul waked weaker and weaker : and as Mordecaies rise was Hamans downfal : so when God shall make up his Jewels, he shall put away the wicked of the earth as drosse and of-scouring, and when soever he doth best to his chosen, then doth he worst of all to reprobates. This is so constant a thing with God, that could we but go as far back with the feet of our mindes as Gods decrees, and then come hand in hand with him again, and view all his particular acts of Execution, we should soon see, that when he is chusing the one, he is refusing the other, when he is redeeming one, he is renouncing another, when he is comforting one, he is terrifying another, when he is converting the one, he is hardning the other, when he is rewarding one, he is revenging another, when he is quickning one, he is killing another, when saving one, he is damning another. And yet all his works are holy, and just and good, though he do not alwayes ( as often he doth ) give a reason of his proceedings. Job. 33. 13. This day of the Lord, here mentioned in the text, wherein ( God shall mercifully make up his Jewels ) as it shall be to them a day of light, life, liberty, prosperity, and victory Chap. 4. 1, 2, 3. so shall it be to the wicked, a day of blacknesse and darknesse, for it shall burn them as an oven, and themselves shall be as stubble, whereof neither root nor stalk shall be left untou ht, but all turned to ashes, ( in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord ) under the feet of those that fear my name. Then shall the sinners in Sion be afraid, horror shall surprize the hypocrites, who shall run away with those sad words in their mouths. Who amongst us shall dwell with the devouring fire ? who amongst us shall dwell with everlasting burnings ? But whither alas will they run from him that is every where ? If to the creature, a horse is a vain thing for help, the Egyptians are men and not God, their horses flesh and not spirit &c. If to the creatour, he doth utterly disclaim and disown them : for if any have not the spirit of Christ, the same is none of his, be he whose he will be. These indeed, shall be mine, saith the Lord of Hosts &c. such a good man I know, and such a godly woman I know, but who are ye ? Then shall they say unto him, Lord, Lord, have not we prophesied in thy name, and eat and drunk in thy presence, that is communicated at thy table, and heard thee teaching in our streets. But he o' to' ther side will as deeply disavow them, as they do boldly

Vfe. 1.

Psal. 119. 119.

Αὐτὸς ἐνθυνοῦς
ὁ Θεός

Elay 33. 14.

Rom. 8. 9

Y y y 3

lay

Math. 7. 23. lay claim to him : for then will I professe to them I never knew you, depart from me, ye that work iniquity. And if they shall offer yet to make request for their lives with Hamur, and to speak for themselves, as once those Israelites, we have sinned, do thou unto us, whatsoever seemeth good unto thee, deliver us onely, we pray thee, this day ; he will answer them according to the idols of their hearts, as he did chiole of old, and say, Ye have forsaken me, and served other gods : wherefore I will deliver you no more, go and cry to the gods that your selves have chosen, let them deliver you in the day of your tribulation : than the which I know not what more dreadful or direful sentence can possibly fall from Gods holy mouth, unless it be that last irrevocable doom of damnation, go ye cursed &c. At the first hearing whereof, their very heart strings shal crack, and their hearts fall asunder in their bowels, like drops of water. Well were it with the wicked in that day, if they might trudge directly on to damnation, and not be forced to see the face of the Judge, that they have buffeted, and to hear his voice that they have despised. But (alasse for their misery ! ) it may not be. For after that all in vain, they have tired out the deaf rocks and mountains, with their continue cryings, Fall upon us, cover us, hide us, dash us, and quash us to pieces, grinde us to powder, do any thing to dispatch us, they must perforce, in person, measure the place and race of judgement. It is appointed for all men once to die and after death judgement. Not a man that sleeps in the dust of death, but must needs awake, some to everlasting life, and preferment, and some to shame and everlasting contempt ; as those that have all their evil deeds, as it were written in their fore-heads, so that all shall see and say, Behold the man, and behold his works. These and these things hast thou done, will the Judge then say, and I kept silence ; thou thoughtest that I was altogether such as thy self, but I will set thee down, and set them down in an order before thee to thy perpetual confusion. As the word goeth forth of the kings mouth their faces shall gather blacknesse, and be covered as Hamans, and themselves shall be speechlesse. They shall be confounded, and troubled for ever, they shall be put to shame and perish. That men may know that he, whose name is Jehovah, is the most high over all the earth. Psal. 83. 17, 18. Enoch foretold this day of judgement before Noah foretold the flood. That day is longer ere it comes, but shall be more terrible when it is come.

Ezek. 14. 4.*Jud. 10. 13, 14.*Is.*Formidabilis*erat Adam*Dei vox cum*leniter & pa-*terne cum alio-*quebatur in pa-*radiso in astra*autora, ne dum*cum in furore*& turbine &c.*Ca. 10.*Heb. 9. 27.*Isa. 12. 2.*At the day of*judgement,*secret things*shall be*brought to*light, as packs*and fardels*are not open-*ed till they*come to the*fair or market*D. Willet.

SECT. VII.

*Terrour to those that set themselves against the Saints.Uc. 2.*Dan. 9.*νεχασιτω-*μανα.*Luk. 1.*αρετι & το*θεου. Act. 7.*Heb. 12.*Rom. 8.*Psal. 45.*1 Cor. 4. 13.*Rom. 3. 8.*Nemo me im-*pune laceffit.*Trascepp.*Rom. nemo*sapienter possit.*Tacit.

Secondly, Doth the Lord graciously own and honour all that fear his name ? how should this terrific and take off all those dogged dogs, and bedlam Belialists, that offer any manner affront or offence to such ? sith how mean soever and miserable in the worlds eye, they are dearly beloved of God as Daniel, highly favoured in heaven, as Mary, dearlings to the Almighty, as David, faire to God as Moses, and not only faithful as he in al Gods house as servants, but such as have a naile & a name there, better then of sons and of daughters Esay 58. 5. For they are the first-born whose names are written in heaven, as free denisons : yea, they are heires of God, and coheires with Christ, who is not ashamed to call them brethren, fellows, friends, favorites, any thing, every thing that may evidence the dear respects he bears unto them. Now were it a wise-mans part to fall out with the Kings favourite ? to lowre upon his son and heir ? to deface his picture, to tread under foot his Jewels, to spit upon his royal robe, or imperial diadem ? How was Balaam slain by the Lord, for but wishing evil to his Israel ? Goliath for but defying his host ? Nabal for reviling his David, which was scandalum Magnatum, and in the new Testament termed blasphemy ? How was Cain schooled for but scowling upon Abel ? and Laban threatened for but following after Jacob ? and Abimelech plagued for but an unwitting abuse to Abraham ? Thus he suffered none to do them wrong, yea, he reprov'd even kings for their fakes Psal. 105. 14. will ye know the reason ? he remembered his covenant to Abraham, and his oath to Israel, ver. 8. 9.

There

There is a straight league betwixt God and his people, such as was that betwixt Jehosaphat and Ahab, nay such as passed betwixt David and Abiathar. Look what David said once to him, the same saith god to his. Abide thou with me, feare not: for he that seeketh my life, seeketh thy life, but with me shalt thou be in safeguard. He is a Sun, saith the Psalmist, to refresh his people, and a shield to shelter them. As the shield is betwixt the body and the dart, so is God betwixt his people and their hurt. He carrieth them on his wings, as the Eagle doth her yong; so that there is no wounding of them but through his sides, nay no touching of them, but ye touch the apple of his Eye.

1 Sam. 22.23
Psal. 84.11

Deut. 32.11
Aquila pullos suos in alis portans, aliter reliqui inter pedes. Munster ex rabbi Solomon.

Zach. 3.8
Acts 9.4
2 King. 19.22

As the eye is vexed with the least mote that gets into it, so is he with the least indignity done to his people. If Saul tread upon the least toe in Christs mystical body, the head will try out from heaven, why hurtest thou me? If Rabshakeh raile upon Hezekiah, Against whom hast thou railed, saith God, and whom hast thou provoked to wrath? even the Holy one of Israel. In pushing at any of these lively stones in Gods temple, men spurne at the corner-stone it self, and so kick against the prickles. In offending the least of Christs little ones, they presently proclaim open war against Him; who keepeth all their bones, bottles up all their teares, yea numbeth all their haire, not one of them is diminished, but he accounts himself damnified. You know how dearly the proud Ammonites paid for the hair they shaved off from Davids servants. And shall not the son of David avenge his own elect, though he beare long with them? He keepeth the very feet of his Saints, saith holy Hannah, and chargerh his angels with them, to beare them in their hands, lest at any time they dash their feet against a stone. If they stumble and fall, yet they shall get up againe: for the Lord puts under his hand Psal. 37. 24. Yea the everlasting armes are underneath Deut. 33. 27. They that swear by God and Malchom shall fall (as old Eli did) and never rise againe: but the Saints of God, though Ioseph-like, they fall into a pit, yet, as prisoners of hope, they shall come forth, by the blood of the covenant. Zach. 9. 10. Good Mordecai, a Jew, may fall before a Persian and get up againe; yea prevaile and prosper. But if wicked Haman begin to fall before a Jew, (that is in covenant with God) he can neither stay when he stumbles, nor rise when he is down. God himself is to far interested and ingaged in the quarrels of such (as I was saying erewhile) that who so toucheth them, toucheth the ball of his Eye. The eye is a tender part we know, and a small matter offends it. God is every whit as choise and as chary of his people, as a man is of his eyes. Now a good thump on the back is better borne then a light touch on the eye. Take heed, I adviſe you, how you meddle with Gods Eye, lest you heare of him to your cost. For although we must turne t'other cheek also, yet he will not rake a blow on the eye for the proudest of them all. No man will stand still while his eyes are pecked out, much lesse will God. Thou knowest, saith dying David to his son Solomon, what Isaah did to me. He meaneth it of the slaughter of Abner and Amasa, which David appropriats, and makes it his own case. The soveraigne is smitten in the subject, neither is it other then just, that the arraignment of mean Malefactours runs, in the stile of wrong to to the Kings Crowne and dignity. Gods people are his crowne, let none presume to attempt against it: his dignity, his glory, let none turne it into shame Psal. 4. 3. His pearles, let no swine trample them, his holy things, let no dogs profane them, by holding their lives madnesse, and their ends without honour, by speaking basely of their persons, actions, sufferings, as if they were vile and inglorious. It was an heavy indictment doubtlesse Psal. 14. 6. You have spumed the counsell of the poore, because the Lord is his refuge. Thus those miscreants, that mocked and railed at Christ upon the crosse, upbraided him not with any evill, but only for the good he had done in saving others, for his trust in God, and prayers to God. Thus also they deale with David, they that render evill for good, are mine adversaries (or hate me like divels) and why? Because I do the thing that good is. And the very truth is, that were wicked mens insides turned outward, it would well appeare, that when they disgrace those that make conscience of their waies under the infamous names of puritans, singularitans, zelots, and the like termes of reproach, it is for the good that is in them, and for the true

2 Sam. 10
Luke 18. 7
1 Sam. 2
Psal. 91

Am. 1.

Esth. 6. 14

What part is more sensible of the least touch then the eye? or being hurt causeth greater pain it and rage? or if put out, brings more deformity to the face? God is as tender of us &c Pemble on Zach. 2.8

Psal. 38.20
they satanical ly hate me.

glory

Terrell.

1 Joh. 3. 12

Gracium Ju-

lium virum

egregium Casar

occidit ob hoc

unumquod me-

lior vir erat

quam esse quem

quam tyranno

expediret. Sen.

l. 2. de benef. c.

21.

glory that God hath stamped upon their persons and performances. This favours strongly of the Devill of hell, whose property it is to hate and persecute any footstep of Gods holy image, where-ever he finds it (as the Tigre if he see but the picture of a man, he flies upon it and tears it to peeces) And it proves men to be the posterity of Cain, the devils Patriarch, as one calls him, who was of that wicked one (of the serpents seed) and slew his brother. And wherefore slew he him, but because his own works were evill, and his brothers good? That was all the quarrell then, and is still. All that viperous brood bear an aking tooth to the better sort; they do maliciously and mortally hate all holy impressions of grace wrought upon any by the sanctifying spirit, though they refrain sometimes the expreffion and exercise of this hatred for advantage and in policy, by accident, and for by-respects, it may be.

SECT. 8. 9. 10.

Exhortation to honour them that fear the Lord: and what great cause men have and shall have so to do.

Use. 3.

LEt us that know and professe better things approve our selves to be of the family of heaven, and followers of God, as dear children by contemning a vile person, though never so glorious a magnifico in the worlds eye and esteem, but honouring them that fear the Lord, though never so much under-prized and vilipended by the wicked of the earth. This is a note of Gods household-servant Psal. 15. 4. and of one that hath share in Christs kingdome, wherein the vile person shall no more be called liberall, nor the churle bountifull. Esay 32. 5. Further, would we have boldnesse in that last and great day, and be able to lift up our faces before the son of man, let love be perfect in us toward the brotherhood, loving them in truth, and for the truths sake, and being ready to serve the saints in love, to wash, yea to kisse their very feet, and to lay down our lives for the brethren if called thereunto. And because this can never be done, except men see more in them then ordinary to move them; labour and learne to know the price of a saint, and to esteem them very highly in love, for their worths sake. The Jews tell us, and truly, that those seventy souls that went with Jacob into Egypt were as much worth as all the seventy Nations of the world besides. It is not for nothing (sure) that the saints are called All things Coloss. 1. 20. and Every creature Mar. 16. 15. and the salt of the earth, that keep the rest from putrefying the substance and support of the earth, that keep the rest from shattering, I bear up the pillars of it, saith David, and the Innocent delivereth the Island, saith Eliphaz. Iob. 22. 30.

Mat. 5.

H. 6. 11. stau-

men terra.

Tren.

For their sakes it is that God spares and prospers the wicked as he did Laban for Iacobs sake, Potiphar for Iosephs, Sodom for Lots, when they were carried captive by Kederlaomer. Whereas else he would make a short work upon the earth. Rom. 9. 28. If the mourner's were once marked, and set safe out of harmes way, he would soon say to the Angell, Smite and spare not. Look what Elisba once said to Jehoram King of Israel, the same saith God to all ungodly persons. Surely were it not that I regard the presence of Iehoshaphat the good king of Judah, I would not look toward thee, nor see thee. Add hereunto, that God not only spareth, and bleisseth, but also graceth and giveth the wicked with excellent abilities and endowments for his peoples behoof and benefit: as Saul with a spirit of government for Israels sake, and of prophecy, for Dauids safety: the Egyptians with Jewels for the use of the sanctuary, and those that shall hear, Depart ye, with the power of prophesying and doing miracles for the Churches use and benefit: Nay more, the wicked shall be a ransome for the righteous, and the transgressor for the upright. Thus God gave Egypt, for Israels ransome Isa. 43. 3, 4. I gave Ethiopia and Seba for thee. And why? Since thou wast precious in my sight thou hast been honourable, and I have loved thee: Therefore will I give men for thee, and people for thy life. Thus is the righteous delivered out of trouble, and the wicked comes in his stead. Prov. 11. 8.

Ezek 9.

2 King. 3. 14

Prov. 21. 18

SECT.

SECT. IX.

OH but we see it otherwise often, that those you call righteous are not delivered. And what more sure then sight?

Ob.
Sol.

First, sight (though the most certain sense) may be deceived about its own object, if it want a clear middle. For example: A man beholds a staff, part through the clear ayre, and part through the dark water, and so deems it crooked, when indeed it is straight: So the purblind world beholding the Christian life thorough the dark middle of prejudice, judgeth it miserable and disconsolate: not knowing that to the righteous there ariseth light out of darknesse, joy out of grief, good out of evill, comforts out of crosses, and those equivalent to deliverances. Those mentioned in that little book of Martyrs Heb. 11. though tortured and tympanized, yet they would not be delivered, that they might obtain a better resurrection. It was never merrier with the three children then in the midst of the furnace where the son of God was walking with them. Jacobs heart was never so light as when his head lay hardest.

ισχυρωσι.
δυνατ.

Dan.3.
Gen.28.

Secondly, there is a double deliverance: One keeping us from the evill, and another keeping us under it, that it shall not hold us, much lesse hurt us. And this later way, at least, every of Gods Jewels is made up and delivered. For, though ye have layne among the pots, all burnt and swooty, yet shall ye be as the wings of a dove covered with silver, and her feathers of yellow gold. Delivered then the righteous are, we see, though not delivered. That they are not here fully freed from trouble, they may thank themselves in a great measure. For as the subjection of the creature to us depends upon our subjection to God; and our peace with men upon our keeping peace with him, Job 5. 23. So our subjection to God, and peace with him here being only inchoate and imperfect, we recover our safety from the creatures and peace with men, but in part, and imperfectly. But look what is wanting therein, is recompensed with spirituall peace even here, Job. 16. 23. how much more hereafter?

Psal.68.13

And say that God suffer his Jewels to be killed all day long, and counted as sheep to the slaughter: yet precious in the eyes of the Lord is the death of his saints, and neither life, nor death, shall funder them from Gods love in Christ Jesus. So that if they scape not his sword without, yet they shall scape the terror within, which is that that sets an edge upon the sword, and makes it enter into the soul. The godly man shall be able in the worst times to call his soul to rest with David, and to comfort himself in the Lord his God in a common combustion, then when others shall be at their wits ends, and even mad again for the sight of their eyes, and perplexity of their spirits. Death, he knowes is the worst that can befall him, and that (ever since it ran through the veins of Christ crucified) is so sweetened unto him, that he is little or no whit amazed at the fore-going gripes, which are but as the throwes of Child-birth, by which the soul is borne out of this lothsome body into endlesse felicity. Oh therefore the safety and dignity of a true Christian, whom very pain easeth, whom death reviveth, whom dissolution uniteth, whom lastly his very corruption preserveth, and sin glorifieth!

Psal.116.15
Rom.8.

Psal.116.7
1 Sam.30.6
Luc.21.
Deut.20.

As for our full deliverance from all annoyances, we growe within our selves and with patience wait for it, even the redemption of our bodies Rom. 8. 23, 24. And when that happy day once begins to shine forth, then look up if ever, for your redemption draweth nigh, Luc. 21. 28. The Lord Christ will then lift up your heads as Pharaoh did his Butlers, take you from the prison to the palace, and restore you to your ancient honours and offices lost in Adam: as to be Kings, Priests, Judges, Benchers &c. He shall say unto you then as once to Israel, Behold I will tettele you after your old estates, and will do better unto you then at your beginnings, and ye shall know that I am the Lord. This meditation setled David exceedingly Psal. 17. where having spoken of the men of this world, which have their portion here, he presently subjoynes, As for me, I shall behold thy face in righteousness, I shall be satisfied when I awake (that is, out of the dust of death)

Pecatum tametsi non bonum, tamen in bonum. Aug.

Ezek.36.18
Psal.17.15

- death) wish thine image. This also kept Jobs head above water, when else he had been overwhelmed with floods of affliction. I know that my Redeemer liveth, &c. And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh I shall see God. Daniel 12. 1, 2. Though things be otherwise darkly delivered, yet when the Jews were to lose land and life, then plainly the Resurrection is named. And Heb. 11. 35. we read of some that were tortured, not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection. I know, saith Martha, that my brother shall rise at the Resurrection, at the Consolation, saith the Syriack Translator. And well he might call it the Consolation to the righteous, for these prerogatives and priviledges that shall befall all such in that day.
- Job 19. 25, 26
Joh. 11. 24

SECT. X.

1. First, a glorious resurrection of their dead bodies, by vertue of the mystical Union they have with Christ. The bodies of the Saints, though sundred from their souls for a season, are not separated at all from Christ; as neither was Christs body sundred from his Deity, when laid in the grave. A substance there is still preserved, by a secret influence, proceeding from Christ as a head. This substance is (by rotting in the grave) refined, and shall by the same influence be raised incorruptible. This rotting of the body is but as the rotting of corn under the earth, that it may shoot up into an harvest, or as the melting of a battered piece of plate in the fire, that it may be brought forth of a better fashion. Hence they are said to sleep, and to sleep in Jesus, and to be dead in Christ, who shall raise our vile bodies, and make them like unto his glorious body, &c. like unto the Angels in heaven, Mat 22. 30. may like unto God himself, whom they shall resemble as children do their father. Hence they are called, children of the resurrection, in a like sence, as when God raised up Jesus again, he said, (as the Apostle Paul applies it) Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee, Act. 13. 3. Reprobates also shall rise again (though some of the Ancients, grounding upon that, Psal. 1. 5. thought otherwise) but after an other manner, by another mean, and for another end. They shall be dragg'd, as malefactours out of the prison of the grave, and driven before Christs tribunall, by vertue of his judiciary power, and of the curse of the law, to be tumbled thence into torment, Rev. 1. 7. but the Elect shall be raised, as members of Christs body, by vertue derived from his Resurrection, 1 Cor. 15. 20, 22, 45.
- Luke 20. 36
- לא יקומו
Psal. 1. 5. pro
quo Gratus in-terpres reddi-
dit, ex ἀναστ-
σουται, unde
postea emanavit eorum error qui resurrecturos nega-
runt.
Mali resurgent, sed non beneficio resurr. Christi, sed illius maledictionis vi quo die comederis, in rieris, ad condemnatio-
nem. Malcolm.

2. A second priviledge they shall then have, is priority in the Resurrection: for the dead in Christ shall rise first, and those that are alive and remain shall be caught up, together with them, in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, 1 Thes. 4. 16, 17.
3. Thirdly elevation, or lifting up the head for joy, when all the wicked shall wail for wo, and look gaffly: their hearts failing them for fear of what will follow. The godly shall then stand before the Son of man, with much courage and confidence, Rom. 8. 33, 34. Luk. 21. 36.
- Revel. 1.
ἐξουσίαν καὶ
ἐξουσίαν
Luk. 21. 36
ἐξουσίαν
Consistatis, i. ita apparentis ut iudicis vultum & sententiam sustinere possitis. Beza.

4. Fourthly, Collection by the Angels, who shall easily discern them from the rest, as the servants of the house do their masters harvest, or as the corn from the tares: their lively looks also shall distinguish them.
5. Fifthly, Assumption, to meet the Lord in the air, and ascension in a cloud, in manner as Christ himself ascended. For as birds being hatched do flie lightly up into the air, which being egges were a heavy and slimy matter: so the bodies of Gods Elect (which by nature are massie and ponderous) being hatcht, as it were, by the Resurrection, shall be made pure, powerfull, nimble, and able to mount up into the heavens.
- Mat. 24
1 Thes. 4. 16, 17.
Zanch. de oper. Dei.

Sixthly

Sixthly Aggregation, or gathering together to the signe of the Son of man, that flag, not of defiance, but of deliverance, that he shall then hang out, those colours that he shall then display for an ensigne or royal standard, that his people may repair unto, not to give battle to the enemy, but to share with the Conquerour, to divide the spoil, and take part in the triumph. 2. Cor. 2. 14.

Seventhly, Collocation, or placing them at his right hand, as Solomon did his mother for honour-sake, when the goats shall be on the left. Math. 25. 33. where our Saviour seems to allude to that in Deut. 29. 11. where the six free-born tribes blesse the people from mount Gerizim on the right hand, and the six other curse from mount Ebal on the left.

Eightly, Inchoation, or taking beginning of the judgement from them. For the separation being made, then shall the king say (first) to them on the right hand, Come ye blessed, &c. glad to see them, as Jacob once to see Joseph, or as ever any father to see his childe, that had been long absent. Thus, as judgement here began at Gods house, inasmuch as the righteous scarcely were saved: so there, the judicial sentence shall take beginning from the righteous, who shall thenceforth be saved with a mighty salvation: to the utmost Heb. 7. 25.

Ninthly, Commemoration or an honourable recital of all their good parts, and practises (as once of that good womans that washt his feet with her tears, and wiped them with the hair of her head) together with an open declaration of all their righteousness desired or done 2 Cor. 5. 10 and that with such fervency of affection in the judge, that he will see and set forth nothing but their goodness, not so much as once mentioning their faults and frailties Math. 25. 34 to 41. For in this day of making up his Jewels, he will spare them as a man spares his own son that serveth him: their good works onely shall follow them. Rev. 14. 13.

Tenthly Pronunciation of that sweetest sentence of absolution, Come ye blessed of my father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you, from the foundation of the world. A speech that breathes out nothing else but crowns, scepters, kingdoms glories, beauties, Angelical entertainments, beatifical visions, unutterable extasies, sweetest varieties, felicities, eternities.

Lastly, Execution of the sentence, and first upon the wicked. For although the godly shall first be sentenced, yet the wicked shall first be executed, and all for the saints sake.

1. That they may rejoyce when they see the vengeance, being wholly swallowed up with a zeal of Gods glory Psal. 58. 10. and 79. 10.

2. That they may more fully acknowledge the greatness of their own felicity, in the sight of the others remediless misery. For these shal go away into everlasting punishment, into eternity of extremity, but the righteous into life everlasting Mat. 25. 45. They shall not onely sit with Christ as Assessours and approvers of this righteous sentence, but the judgement once ended, they shall triumphantly ascend with him into heaven, and there enjoy the most exquisit and unmixed pleasures, the highest pitch of preferment, plenty without want, and fulnesse without satiety. For their apparel it shall be long white robes (washed in the blood of the lamb) such as betoken perfect purity, clarity, dignity, and festivity. For their habitation, they are stately Mansions in a lightsom city. For their company, the sacred Trinity, the glorious Angels, the crowned Saints. And if it be such an honour to converse familiarly with kings, and great personages, what is it then with the King of glory, and all those heavenly courtiers, to enjoy the company of the blessed Patriarches, Prophets, Apostles, Martyrs, Confessours, our dearest friends and acquaintance, whom it is probable we shall know, as Adam did his wife upon the first sight in paradise, and as Peter and John did Moses and Elias in that glimps of heavens glory they had in the monnt? Sure it is, we shal perfectly love them as our selves, and rejoyce in their happiness, as much as in our own, whereby our joyes shall be according to their innumerable number, multiplied and increased.

Next for their dignity, and glory, they shall sit upon Christs throne with palms in their hands, and crowns on their heads. Now beyond the excellency of a crown mortal mens wishes extend not. But the crown we are speaking of is a crown of glory 1 Per. 5. 4. A crown of righteousness. 2 Tim. 4. 8. A crown of life 1am.

1. 12. an incorruptible crown 1 Cor. 9. 25. A crown not consisting of some pre-

6.

Math. 24.
Carter. Hist.
Christi in Mat
24. 31.

τῶ θριαμ-
βουοντι ημεας
2 Cor. 2. 14.

7.

8.

Math. 25. 34.
Eis to parter-
las. Ita ut
nihil ad eam
salutem possit amplius desiderari Beza.
in loc.

9.

Luk. 7. 44. 45.
46.

10.

Math. 25. 34.

11.

Math. 19. 28.
1 Cor. 6. 2. 3.

Rev. 6. 9, 10.

Ioh. 14. 2.
Rev. 21. 23.

Ἰδὲ Πίστε-
καὶ Πάουλ-
καὶ πάντες
οἱ Ἀποστόλοι
Ἰδὲ Δαβὶδ
Ὑψ. Christ.

cious

Corona signifi-
cat absolutionem, consum-
mationem &
perfectionem & evinciendo capiti destina-
tur, quæ & absolutiss. & eminentissima pars
est. Sculter.
et pp̄nta p̄n-
tatur.
2 Cor. 12.4.

Cant. 3.11.

Psal. 16.3.
Sap̄ sub attrita laur̄ar sapi-
entia veste.
Heb. 11
Sic Bruii ba-
culus apud Plutarch: cu-
jus intus soli-
dum aurum
corneo velaba-
tur cortice.
Joh. 6.
Esay. 53.2
U: templo Dei
corporaliter in eo habitantes.
Ber.

Cant. 1.5.6.
vide Plin. lib.
6.c.28. & So-
lin. cap.36
Psal. 83.3.
See Prov. 15
24

Rev. 2
Jam. 2.5

Πρόκατος
Χρυσός
Syllanum vo-
cabat Cæsar.
Dio.
Aët. 12.

ious thing without us, but of royal excellency, such as wherewith our souls and bodies bedight and adorn'd shall out-shine the sun in his strength: what shall I say more? but indeed why do I say so much? For as one being asked what God was, answered, Si scirem, Deus essem. So if I should undertake to describe heaven, it were requisite, that I should have been at heaven. And yet he that had been there (St. Paul I mean) could say no more then that he had heard there wordless words, words unspeakable, not possible to be uttered. And when he doth speak of heavens happinesse, he commonly useth a transcendent kinde of expression, as finding words too weak for such a purpose.

Lo thus shall it be done to the man whom the king immortal will honour in the day when he makes up his Jewels. Consider him well, as God bad the devil do Iob, and know that there is none like him in the whole earth again. Goe forth (saith the spouse) and behold King Solomon, with the crowns wherewith his mother crowned him, in the day of his espousals. So say I, behold the godly Christian as crowned with all the forenamed priviledges and prerogatives: look upon him as once the city of Shushan did upon Mordecai when the king would do him honour, and then tell me whom you have to esteem and account of, to set up and side with, to prize and prefer in your best affections and expressions: Not the rich, but the righteous, not the great, but the gracious, not the worlds minions, though never so accomplished with all the ornaments of nature, art, pollicie, preferment, but Gods Jewels and darlings, righteous and religious persons, those excellent ones of the earth, in whom was all Davids delight, and should be ours also. Despise them not for their outward meannesse: the true treasure is carried in earthen vessels, and there may be a precious pearl in a leathern purse: Iohn Baptist had a girdle of skin about his loins, and Elias was a rough hairy man, for his outward habit it was coarse and homely. Those ancient worthies went about the world in shipskins and goat-skins, but they were like the Ark whose out-side was of goats-hair, and badgers skins, but the inside pure gold. Christ himself whom that Ark typified, was hid for awhile under the carpenters son. The carnal Capernaïtes could see nothing in him more then in another man, how can this man, said they, give us his flesh to eat? he had no form, nor comeliness, saith that Evangeliſtical Prophet, and when we shall see him, there is no such beauty that we should desire him. And yet in him the God-head dwelt bodily, that is, personally: and in him were hid all the treasures of wisdom and worth Colos. 2. And the like may be said of many a poor Christian cast out by the world as unworthy their company or countenance, but readily received, and highly honoured by God himself the blessed spirit, and all men that have their senses exercised to discern good and evil. But as the root of Iesse was rugged and unsightly, so are his branches, many of them. Howbeit the kings daughter is all glorious within, that's her comfort, black she is, but comly as the curtains of Solomon, as the tents of Kedar which were rough, but rich, as pitch in the deserts of Arabia. Gods servants are called his Hidden ones. According to the fashion of the wealthy, he pleaseth himself in hidden treasure. It is enough that his own eyes behold his Jewels, and such to whom the father shewes them. The ideots of the world set a very low rate, a light price upon Gods precious ones: but its all the wit they have, for wisdom is above to the foolish, saith Solomon, he cannot skill of it. It sufficeth to wisdom that she is justified of her children, who know how to do her reverence, in what garb soever she please to shew her self. I know thy poverty saith Christ to one of the seven churches, but that's nothing. God hath chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, to be heires of his kingdom in Christ. Who can have the face to despise any one for his outward wants and indigence, when Abraham the father of the faithful, and heir of the world, had not a foot of land, that he could call his own, more then a burying-place? when Christs mother was not wealthy enough to bring a lamb for her purification? when Christ himself had not twentypence at hand to pay the tribute money, nor a pillow to rest his head on, when tired out with hard toile and travel? And who o't'other-side would admire any for his worldly wealth, and outward magnificence, when Pharaohs horses had costly trappings Cant. 1.8. and the Midianites camels had chaines of gold about their necks? Iudg. 8.26. when Dives ruffles in his filkes every day, and Herod glitters in his cloth of silver: who yet to the eye of heavenly wisdom were no better

ter then so many stinking carcases stuck over with flowers, magnified dung, gilded rottenness, golden damnation? who knowes not how sharply St. James takes up the partiall Christians of his time, for admiring mens ease, wealth, and pomp, rather then grace, and true spirituall worth? This, saith he, is to despise Christs poor, and to be judges of evill thoughts. Vertue is a thousand Escucheons saith one, and it is grace alone that animateth and ennobleth, all other good parts and abilities, which else are but as a glasse bugle, saith Hierome after Tertullian, to the pearle of price, or as gold to brasse, saith Barnard; and a little of the palest and counterfeit gold, is far better then much of the finest and brightest brasse: so is the meanest of Gods servants better then the most magnificent glorious worldling that ever trod upon earthly mould, and so let us esteeme them.

Tanti vitrum?
quanti Margaritum?
Melius est pal-
lens aurum
quam fulgens
aurichalcum,
Ber. in cant. 6.
Davids desire,
by Rob. Abbots

Mr. Fox, when he was asked whether he knew a certain poore man who had received succour from in time of trouble, answered, I remember him well: I tell you, I forget Lords and Ladies to remember such.

SECT. XI.

Exhortation to practise holinesse, that is so honoured.

Fourthly, are those that are found faithfull so highly honoured in heaven? This, me-thinks, should much raise the price of religion, and bring godlinesse into greater request amongst all those that would be of any reckoning, or repute with God at that day. It will go to the hearts of ungodly men, I wot well, to see some of all sorts sitting down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdome of heaven, and themselves shut out amongst dogs: to see such as they would have disdained to have set with the dogs of their flocks, to be set then upon thrones judging their judges, and having power over the Nations, to binde their Kings with chaines, and their Nobles with fetters of iron; To execute upon them the judgments written, and yet this honour have all his Saints (Psal. 149. 8, 9.) For know ye not, saith the Apostle, that the Saints shall judge the world? yea the angels. Who would not therefore rule with God, as Judah, by labouring to be faithfull with his Saints? Hof. 11. 12. We see with what a deal of eagerness, honours and offices, rich prizes and great places are sought and pursued after. Balaams asse never gallops fast enough to fetch in profit and preferment. Set but a wedge of gold in sight, and Ioshua that could stop the course of the Sun, cannot stay Achan from courting and catching at it. And yet what are riches, and honours, but golden gyves the Noble miseries of this wretched life? And what do they that are to set upon them (with the neglect of heavenly honours, and that wealth of a better world) but prefer the onions of Egypt, before the bread of angels, paltry pibbles before precious pearles, thick clay before pure gold, counterfeit coine before true treasure? Oh see and bewaile this so great a folly in your selves and others: and (for future) learne to cover spirituals, to be greedy of grace, to encroach upon God for more and more of his favour and fellowship as Moses did. Exod. 33. 12, 13, 14, 17, 18, 19. & chap. 34. 9. To be ambitious of peace 1 Thess. 4. 11. And of pleasing God 2 Cor. 5. 9. To seek for honour and glory by well-doing Rom. 2. 7. To be zealous of the better things 1 Cor. 12. 31. To pursue after the perfect knowledge of Christ, having it as it were in chase (as St. Paul had Philip 3. 4. .) as the hunter hath his prey, or as the persecuter hath him that he persecuteth. He had once been mad in persecuting the saints Acts 26. 11. And breathed out threatnings, lay panting, as it were for breath, like a tired wolfe. Acts 9. 1, 2. Now when God had turned the streame, he was judged by some as mad the other way. 2 Cor. 5. 13. Whilst, knowing the terrour of the last day, he perswaded men, and in the meane-while, he laid his policy and bent his best wits (as the word there signifies) to keep a good conscience, that richest treasure, and most precious Jewell, that ever the heart of man was acquainted with.

Use 4.

Rev. 21. 8.
Job. 29.

1 Cor. 3

In cepeet allium
impenfa 1600
talenta in pyra-
midum una ex-truenda refert
Herodot.
Viri boni avi-
ditas tuta est.
Sene. epist. 23.
Φιλονησιδαι Ambitiose quip-piam contende-
re, sic ut re non patiatis ab alio
vinci. Eras.
Ζηλῶτε Σump-
ta est metapho-ra à προcis Ζε-λοῦσις. Beza.
Διῶκω.
Act. 24. 15.
ἐν τῷ τοῦ fu-
bandi χρόνῳ
interca duui resurrectionem
expecto. Beza.
ἀσκήσω πνοή.
ἀντιποιμαίνω.

Z z z

SECT.

SECT. XII.

why.

Psal. 14.2

Ier. 5. 1,2

And deus est
deus est est ap-
pau. Dig.
Luc. nā accensi hominem
querebat
et fipus Ipsa bestia
bestia fore est
homo ratione
viger. et ra-tione non vi-vens. Bern in Cant. 5. Rati-
one homines
in: entis religione homines
hominibus an-testant. Boet:
de consol. 1.4.
prof. 3. Ultra homines provenit probitas so-
la, infra homi-
nem destruit improbitas ib.
περὶ τὴν ἀρετὴν
ex Διδ. 89.
v. Hom.

Chap. 20.

Viri annis pan-
nifq; obfui.
Melancthon
apud Job.
Manl. loc. com.
pag. 361.

Prov. 18.23

TO quicken you to the pursuit and practise of this duty. Consider that Grace is the only thing that God looks after in this world. God looked down from heaven saith David, upon the sons of men, to see, not who were wealthy, witty, mighty, magnificent &c. but to see if there were any that did understand or sought God. And he bids the Prophet Jeremy run to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem, to see if he could finde a man, that is, a righteous man that feareth God and kept his commandments: Hoc est enim totus homo, for this is the whole man, saith Solomon. And it is as if he should say, He is not a compleat man that's voyd of Gods holy fear, framing him to obedience, though otherwise never so well accomplished. This is that whereby one man doth as far excell another, as any man excels a beast, saith Bernard and Boetius. The righteous is more excellent then his neighbour, saith Solomon, let him dwell where he will. He is of better birth and breeding, of better alliance and attendance, of better place and office, of higher degree and dignity. The Holy Ghost stileth such the Nobles of the earth Ps. 16.3. honourable personages Psal. 45. 9. plants of renown, Esay 5.3. privy-councillours to the great King Psal. 25. 14. Princes in all lands Psal. 45. 16. Kings and Priests to God Rev. 1. 5. yea higher then heathen kings Psal. 89. 27. and better then those mighty Monarks Dan. 7. 37. Where it is very remarkable, that the Prophet having set forth the greatnesse and glory of the Princes, Potentates and mighty states in the four Monarchies, comes to speak at last of a kingdome which is the greatest under the whole heaven, and that is the kingdome of the saints of the most High.

Hence is it that God himself makes a challenge to all the world besides in the behalf of his Israel Deut. 33. 29. Happy art thou O Israel: who is like unto thee O people saved by the Lord! meaning indeed, that no Nation under heaven, how happy so ever, was comparable to them. And hence it is also that the kings of the earth shall bring their glory to the church (as Constantine did) and coming to see, (as Theodosius did) an excellency in grace, a beauty in holinesse above any outward trappings, they shall leave the throne and palace to seek the sweet delights of the faithfull, and to sing their songs, Psal. 138. 4. 5. Aeneas Sylvius relates of Ingo King of Draves and Veneds, that making on a time a stately feast, he invited thereunto all his Nobles (at that time Pagans) together with a multitude of poor christians. His Nobles he set in his hall below, and those poor Christians with himself in his presence-chamber, giving them all royall entertainment and attendance. At which when his Nobles wondred and stomacked, he told them this he did, not as he was King of Draves, but as King of another world, wherein these poor ragged people should be his compeeres and fellow-Princes. These Heathen Nobles might haply stumble hereat, as the Saracen Prince once did at a like speech of Charles the great. His custome was to have ever at his meals a board of beggers, feeding not farr from his table. This Prince Aigoland (for so was the Saracens name) coming gallantly accompanied to the French Court, pretending that he would be baptized, and become a Christian, and being feasted by King Charles, asked what those Lazars and poor people were? Answer was returned, that these were the friends and servants of our God, whom we Christians worship. Whereupon he speedily departed, desperately protesting, that he would not serve that God which could keep his servants no better. This man knew not that God hath chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, to be heirs of his kingdome of glory. Smyrna the poorest of the seven Churches hath the richest price set upon it. The poor man indeed speaks supplications, and the rich man answereth him roughly. The world despiseth the poor though never so vertuous, as the Prodigalls elder-brother did him, This thy son saith he, not this my brother, he disdaineth to call him brother, because of his poverty. So doth not the Lord Christ.

Christ. Of Queen Elisabeth it is said, that she hated no less, then did Mithridates, such as maliciously persecuted vertue forsaken of fortune. The poorest bondslave ( if a free-man of Christ ) when he suffers hard words, and ill usage from his master for well-doing, doth herein finde acception with God. 1 Pet. 2. 19, 20. Be a man never so poor in estate, if withall he be poor in spirit, and pure in heart, the kingdome of God is his, Mat. 5. 3. Gods kingdome indeed is not of this world, commeth not by observation, neither consisteth in meat and drink, in pomp and outward splendour, but in righteousness and peace ( as did that of Melchisedech ) and joy in the holy Ghost, unspeakable and glorious joy, concerning which hear him that had felt it, and spoke by experience: Certain it is ( saith a late Reverend Writer ) that if a man were crowned with the royall state and imperial command of all the kingdomes upon earth: if his heart were enlarged to the utmost of all created capacity, and filled with all the exquisite, and unmixed pleasures that the reach of mortality and most ambitious curiosity could possibly devise, and might ( without interruption and distast ) enjoy them the length of the worlds duration, they were all nothing to the precious and peerlesse comforts of the kingdome of grace, but even for an hour. I speak the truth in Christ, and use no hyperbole, the spirit of all comfort, and consciences of all true christians bearing me witnesse. Hitherto He and I cannot better conclude this discourse, then he doth that, with a little alteration. Be we all entreated with a proportionable zeal and fervency to incline and enlarge our affections to the pursue and practise of so excellent and glorious a happinesse, that God may guide us with his counsell, and afterwards receive us to his glory Psal. 73.

Candens Elfa. fol. 531.

Quales sunt pleriq; vera Ecclesia cives. Beza.

Mr. Boltons Disc. of true Happ. Epist. dedicat.

SECT. XIII.

Let the Saints see their dignity, and be thankful.

LASTLY, let Gods Jewels be hereby excited to a double duty.
1. Let them be joyfull in glory, let them sing aloud upon their beds. Let the high praises of God be in their mouths, and a two-edged sword be in their hands Psal 149. 5, 6. Let the brother of low degree rejoyce in that he is exalted ( to that Christian parity spoken of Colos. 3. 11. ) but the rich in that he is made low: that is, that he is taken off from that high esteem he once had of outward honour and excellency before his conversion: whereas now he seeth they are but fading flowers, things not worth the while: and is therefore called upon here to rejoyce in that true treasure, that fellowes him with his poor brother, poor in purse but rich in faith, before him haply in the best things, though far behinde him in worldly wealth and worship. The best is, that in Gods kingdome money bears no mastery, ( as that Martyr said ) neither is there respect of persons with God, but in every rank and degree of people, he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is highly accepted in heaven. One such shall stand before him to turne away wrath, as Abraham and Lor, when ten thousand Sodomites shall not be looked upon. And this is that that may stay up the heart of a poor despised christian against all the contempts and oppositions of the ungodly. God is his gold and his portion for ever Iob 22. 25. Neither doth any covetous person so entirely love his gold ( his god ) and so set by his hid treasure, as God doth by his dear children: He will surely see to his own ( will not every Infidell do as much ? ) and makes up his Jewels safe in the golden Cabinet of his gracious providence; as he did Noah in the Ark, Jeremy in the prison-court, Luther in his Pathmos, as he called it &c. God will one day right their wrongs, and clear their innocency, bring forth their righteousness as the light, and their judgement as the noon-day. The Church in the Canticles was wounded by the watch-men as an evil-doer, judg'd as a dishonest woman, whose feet would not abide in her house, no not in the night-season: they beat her, and took away her vail, branding her thereby with a note of infamy and disloyalty to her Lord, and husband whom she went to look out Cant. 5. 7. All which notwithstanding the daughters of Jerusalem, the life.

Jam. 1. 9, 10

Ad. 10.

Psal. 94

Ez. 23:25, 26

truely religious, disctened her beauty in the dark night of her tribulation, and confessed that she was fair and glorious, Chap. 6.1. Christ also passing by her former remissenesse, and unworthy usage of him, professeth that she was as amiable in his eyes as ever: her hair, teeth, temples, all, as fair and well featured, yea that she was fair as the Moon, cleer as the Sun, that Sun of righteousness, having blotted out all her sins, as a cloud, Isa. 44.22. so that none of her transgressions could be found: though looked for, Jer. 50. 20. but every tongue that rose up against her should she condemn, Isa. 54.17. Further, he hath provided that every body do love and honour his people, he hath given a charge to that end in diverse scriptures. Now what is wanting in men, himself will make up, honoring & pleading for them in the hearts of their very enemies, who cannot but be confounded many times, and stand amazed at the height of spirit, and resolution that possesseth their hearts, and at the sober and undaunted majesty that shines in the faces of those that fear the Lord. Now if he say, Grace, Grace unto us, it should suffice to encourage us in building the towre of godlinesse. Yea it should make us hold out, to lay the very last stone thereof with joy, Zach. 4.7. being vexed at nothing more then at the vile dulnesse of our hearts, that are no more affected with these indeleble ravishments.

SECT. XIV.

Let the Saints see their duty and be carefull.

1 Pet. 2.9

Mat. 5.14

*Qui in excelsa
atatem agunt,
eorum facta
cuncti mortales
noverunt. Salust.
ad Casarem.*

Αγιων.

2 Thel. 3.2

compact of meer incongruities.

*Εδωκε
λαμπες οι
δηλοι θε-
οανειροι.*

Naxian in

Mat. 19

*Ideo deteriores
sumus, quia
meliores esse
debemus.*

1 Sam. 6.3

In maxima liberate minima licentia.

*Salust. Deus in circuitu
sanctorum.*

*ακριβως πα-
ει ποεις ακ-
ρον βαλειν.*

Ephel. 5.15

*το περιποι-
ου μεν εσθε.
πως ευχου-
μενος αιδως
τις διδ.*

Posse & nolle nobile est.

Beneficium poistulas officium.

2. Next, as Gods servants must see their dignity, and take comfort in it, so must they also look to their duty, and take care about it. And this to walk worthy of the high and heavenly vocation wherewith they are called: remembring alwayes, that they are a chosen generation, a royall priesthood, a peculiar people, the light of the world, the salt of the earth to season the rest, a city seated on an hill, conspicuous to all the countrey. The Sunne may go as soon unseen, as they unobserved: there are that watch for their halting, and snatch at any thing, whereat they may snarl and cavil; be it but an indiscreet speech that falls from such, it's enough to break down the banks of blasphemy. Oh labour to silence these absurd men, to stop an open mouth, to cut off all occasion of obloquy. Any spot is spied in white apparrell, and the least stain doth evil upon a royall robe. A small flaw in a jewel is a great blemish, and so is a small defect in a Christian. His heart is made pure by the blood of Christ, and fine white linen is sooner and deeper stained then course rags. Therefore are such worse, saith Salvian, though they be no worse then others, because they ought to be better. Adde hereunto, that it is some singular thing that God requires of his servants. He will take that from Philistines, that he will not brook from Israelites; who thought they might carry Gods Ark in a new-cart, as those Pagans had done before them, but they payed for their presumption. Greatest States afford least liberty. His Saints are round about him, and, like good Angels, they stand always in the presence of their heavenly Father. All holy circumspection therefore and exact walking is required of them, even an excellency above ordinary. Every Calling hath a comeliness appertaining to it. The Scholler behaves himself otherwise then the clown, the Courtier then the carter, the Prince then the peasant: so should a Christian otherwise then an unbeliever, then a profligate professor, a carnall Gospeller. He should walk nobly, bravely, gallantly, worthy of God, and as becometh a Saint, considering that of Bernard, in every enterprize of his, an liceat, an deceat, an expediat: whether the thing be lawfull, seemly, suitable to his state. Not stretching alway to the utmost of his chain, lest he break a link, but beating off a solicitation to sinne, as Nehemiah did to cowardize, Shall such a man as I do it? God forbid that I should part with my patrimony, said Naboth: that I should leave my fat, and my sweet, said the Vine in Joshams parable: that I should flinch from my colours, having set my hand to Christs plow: that I should flinch from my colours, having taken his presse-money, disgrace his house, being received into his retinue. Great things are bestowed upon me, great things are expected from me. Every mercy calls for duty: every every deliverance commands obedience. God hath elected me for a vessel of honour, shall I defile my self with the kitchen-stuffe of uncleannesse? He hath bought me with a price: shall not I yeeld my self up to his service? He hath adopted me for his childe, shall not I carry my self as a childe? he hath sanctified me by his spirit, shall I pollute his temple? He hath inrighted me to a kingdom, and keeps a crown for me, shall I lay it to gage for ever trifle? shall I say with Eſau, what is this birth-right? Oh let there be no root of bitterneſſe, no profane perſon amongſt you, as Eſau, who for one morſel of meat ſold his birth-right, and is therefore ſo often branded for it with This is Edom.

CHAP. III.

God is a Father to all his faithfull ſervants.

And I will ſpare them, as a man ſpareth his own ſon that feareth him.

VHat gracious reſpects and high honours the God of heaven puts upon the perſons of them that fear him, both ſmall and great, hath been ſaid already. That which follows in the text, concerneth their performances. For every childe in Gods houſe know's his own work; in doing whereof as there is great reward, ſo there is no little favour ſhewed him, in caſe it be not all out ſo well done. For I will ſpare them, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, as a man ſpareth his own ſon that ſerves him, I will be no leſſe propitious unto him, then is the moſt indulgent parent to his moſt obedient childe. Videmus ergo &c. We ſee then, ſaith judicious Calvin, the Prophets purpoſe in this precious promiſe.

1. That they ſhal ſerve God, and ſerve him as ſons do, that is, ingenuouſly and freely.
2. That God will graciously accept the ſervice of ſuch, taking in God part from them what they are able, and pardoning the reſt.

Theſe are his notes upon the text, and theſe ſhall be ours.

1. That God is a father to all his faithful ſervants: He looks upon ſuch as ſerve him in ſincerity as upon ſons and daughters.

2. That he will ſurely ſhew like mercies and mildneſſe to his children in their faults and failings, in their wants and weakneſſes, as the kindeſt father would do to his deareſt ſon that ſerveth him.

For the former point: The promiſe of pardon is here fitly made ſub patris parabola, ſaith Gualther, under the ſimilitude of a father. And the ſenſe is thus much, ſaith another Interpreter, : although I ſeem for a time to the blinde moles of the world, to be negligent of thoſe that are diligent about me, of my beſt, and buſieſt ſervants; yet I think upon them ſtill as my deareſt children, and when I may be thought moſt careleſſe and cruel towards them, then am I a moſt propitious and ſin-pardoning father, fully reconciled unto them in Chriſt, for there comes in the kinred, according to that of our Saviour in his meſſage by Mary to his diſtreſſed diſciples after his reſurrection, I aſcend unto your father, and my father, mine and yours, and therefore yours becauſe mine. For as many as received him, ſaith St. Iohn, to them he gave priviledge to become the ſons of God. And again, when the fulneſſe of time was come, ſaith another Apoſtle, God ſent forth his ſon (his natural, onely begotten ſon) made of a woman (and ſo by perſonal union of the two natures in one Chriſt, his ſon by a new relation, according to that, This day have I begotten thee, and all to the end,) that we may receive the adoption of ſons. That we which by nature were children of wrath, and by practice, children of the devil, might by divine acceptation and grace be made the children of God: who had predeſtinated us unto the adoption of children by Jeſus Chriſt to himſelf, according to the good pleaſure of his will, to the praiſe of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the beloved One.

Pal. 115. 13.

Pal. 19. 11.

Doſt.

Deus nobis eſt, Pater, & nos ſibi reconcilia- vit in Chriſto Calvin in loc.

Figuiet in loc.

Iohn. 20. 17.

Ioh. 1. 12.

Gal. 4. 4.

Eph. 1. 4. 5.

SECT. I.

Reasons hereof drawn from the causes.

Reas. 1.

IN which heavenly Text, we have the first and chief ground of this doctrine, drawn from the causes of our spiritual sonship.

1. The fundamental and original cause, Gods decree of election by grace; we have an act for it in Gods eternal counsel. According as he hath chosen us in Christ before the foundation of the world &c. For which cause also the predestinate are called the Church of the first-born who are written in heaven. Heb. 12. 23. And whom he did foreknow, saith Saint Paul, them he did predestinate also to be conformed to the image of his son: like him in glory, as well as in sufferings, like in being sons, as he is a son, that he might be (even according to his humanity) the first-born among many brethren.

Rom. 8. 29.

2. The meritorious and procuring, or working cause of our adoption, is here set forth to be the Lord Christ, in whom he (as a father) hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly things Eph. 1. 3. but all in Christ, and all in this order. A christian by the Gospel is made a believer. Now faith after an unspeakable manner engrafteth him into the body of Christ the natural son, and hence we become the adopted sons of God: it being the property of faith to adopt as well as to justify, ratione objecti by means of the object Christ, upon whom faith layeth hold. For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus Gal. 3. 26. Children, I say, not by creation as Adam is called the son of God Luk. 3. because he was produced in the similitude of God; but by marriage and mystical union with Christ the second Adam, the heir of all, who hath

1. Laid down the price of that great privilege Heb. 9. 15. even his own most precious blood, redeeming us thereby that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons Gal. 4. 5.

2. He hath sealed it up to us by his spirit, that earnest of our inheritance Eph. 1. 13. called therefore the spirit of adoption, and the spirit of Gods son (as springing out of his death, and procured by his intercession) For because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the spirit of his son into your hearts crying Abba, father.

Rom. 8. 15.

Joh. 16. 14.

Gal 4. 6

3. Here is the motive and impulsive cause: and that is the good pleasure of his will, his absolute independent grace and mercy was the sole inductive. He giveth us this dignity, saith St John in his Gospel. And what more free then gift? he sheweth us this love, saith he in his epistle, because it was the time of love, that we should be called the sons of God. So that our Adoption is not a privilege purchased by contract of justice, but an inheritance cast upon us of free grace and goodness. The Lord shew mercy to Onesiphorus in that day when our adoption shalbe crowned with its full accomplishment. Lastly here we have the final cause of our adoption, the privilege of the glory of his grace. This is the end God propounds to himself in this, as in all other his works, as having none higher then himself, to whom to have respect, for he is the most highest. God hath made all things for himself, yea the wicked also for the day of evil: viz. for the glory of his justice and power (as he told Pharaoh Rom. 9. 17.) but especially of his grace: sith all that his justice doth in the Reprobation of some, tendeth to this ultimate end of all, that the riches of his grace may be the more displayed in the election of others.

Joh. 1. 12

1 John 3. 1.

2 Tim. 1. vlt.

Rom. 8. 23.

Prov. 16. 4.

SECT. II.

Reasons from the effects of his father-hood.

Reas. 2.

A Second reason followeth from the effects, and those are no lesse demonstrative of the point then the causes.

These are 1. Gods fatherly affections. 2. His expressions, both which speake him a father to all his.

For

For his affection, first, to his people: Albeit they be but his Adopted children, yet he loves them more then any naturall father doth his own bowels. Hence he is called the father by an eminency, as if there were no father to him, none like him, none besides him, as indeed there is not originally and properly. Called he is the father of all mercies, the fountaine of all that mercy; that is found in any father: all is but a spark of his flame, a drop of his ocean, Yea he is stiled the father of all the fatherhoods in heaven and earth. Whence also our Saviour, Call no man, saith He, your father on earth, for one is your father, even God. To enter comparison in some few particulars.

First a father loves freely, not so much for that his child is witty, or wealthy, or wel-favour'd, as for that he is his. There needs no other argument to a father but that, this is my child. So is it with God. Deut. 7. 7. Ezek. 36. 32.

Secondly, a father loves hugely: there is an ocean of love in a fathers heart: he loves his child as well if not better then himself; as Joab twitted David with his excessive love to his unnaturall Absolom. There is also an immense, incomparable, incomprehensible love in God toward his children, an hyperbole, an excelsse of love, a love passing knowledge Eph. 3. 19. And that passeth all the dimensions. It is higher then heaven Psal. 36. 5. deeper then hell Psal. 86. 13. longer then the earth, and broader then the sea Psal. 98. 4. & Psal. 104. 24. a transcendent, boundlesse, bottomlesse love, truly exalted above the love of naturall parents, which yet is wonderous great. Psal. 103. 13. Esay. 49. 15. But infinitely short of Gods love, it makes not the tith of it.

Thirdly, a father loveth constantly and unchangably, yea though his child be never so untoward and disobedient, as David did his Amnon, and his Absolom, even to the last of them did he love them. So, and much more then so doth God his children. For as himself is an everlasting father, so is his love everlasting. Esay 9. 6. & 49. 14. His compassions faile not. Lam. 3. 22. He cannot grow out of kinde, nor be weary of loving. Having loved his own, saith the evangelist, to the end he loved them. Ioh. 13. 1. Frown he can, if need be, hate he cannot: hide his face he may for a while, but his heart is ever earning towards them, his bowels are turned within him, his repentings are kindled together: soe ere them he doth (other-whiles) with the rods of men, but the sure mercies of David he will never take from them. Naturall parents may prove unnaturall: not so our heavenly father, he is all bowels: they may hate where they loved, they may loath whom they liked; but he rests in his love. Zeph. 3. 17. He hates putting away. Hof. 2. Davids father and mother may cast him out, but then God will gather him. Father Abraham may forget us, and Israel may disown us. Esay 63. 16. But God hath said, I will not leave thee. I will not not not forsake thee. The Fathers and governours of the Church may, under a faire pretence of zeale, cast us out, and say, let the Lord be glorified: but then shall God appeare to our joy, and they shall be ashamed. Esay 66. 5. The fathers of our flesh are mutable, and fickle-minded, but with the father of light is no shaddow of change, his love lasteth to all eternity without any alteration.

SECT. III.

Other reasons from the effects of his fatherhood.

NExt, as Gods affection to his children is more then fatherly, so are his expressions and provisions for them too.

For, 1. Besides his eternall electing them to the adoption of children Eph. 1. 4. It was he that took us out of the womb Psal. 22. 9. that we might not ( Ephraim-like that unwise son) stay over-long in the birth, and dye before we saw his marvellous light. It was he that baptizd us into his own name, whereby we are called as a childe by his fathers.

2. He loves the very places they first breathed in the better for their sakes Pf. 86. 7.

Jam. 1. 11.

Eph. 3. 15

mat. 23. 12

Paternitas, paternela.

Math. 23. 9

Patriam amat

quisque, non quia

magna, sed quia

sua. Sen. ep.

66. sic et pro-

lem

De mercatore

pro filijs suis

duobus capis

seipsum offe-

rente, ut filijs

servatis ipse

interficetur; lege

Sozom. lib. 7. cap. 24.

Hof. 11. 8

Psal. 89.

Esa. 57. 7, 8, 9.

Act. 20. 21

Rom. 1

Psal. 27. 10

Isa. 54. 17.

Heb. 13.

Jam. 1. 17

Hof. 13. 13

Isa. 54. 17.

Math. 23. 19

Zech. 7. 14
 Rom. 4. 13.
 Psal. 89. 12

and the very ground they tread upon. Hence Judæa, the seate of the church, is called a delightfome land Mal. 3. 12. the glorious land, the land of desires or ornaments Dan. 11. 41. yea Canaan, for this, is called the whore world, and Tabor and Hermon is put for the East and West of the world.

Esay 66. 11
 Act. 7.
 Ezek. 36. 25

3. He chargeth all sorts, as they love him to love his lambs, his little ones, to handle them gently for his sake. He feeds them with sincere milk streaming from those full-strutting breasts of consolation, the lively oracles; he brings them forth butter in a lordly dish Judg. 5. 25. he makes them ready and unready, as new-borne-babes, lulling them asleep in a holy security, shifting them in their scapes by the clean water of his spirit in their sanctification, and the clean linnen of Christs righteousness in their justification. He keepeth them from fire & from water, the fire of temptation which the Dragon spews, and the water of persecution which he spews out of his mouth, as a flood, to drown the travelling church, and to devour her babe as soon as it was borne.

Rev. 12. 4, 15

1 Thes. 2. 7

All this God doeth for his children as soon as they are any thing. Afterwards, as they grow up to any bignelle, he beares them in his bosome as a nursing-father bears the sucking child Num. 11. 12. carries them in his armes till such time as they can go Esa. 46. 4. guides them with his eye when they begin to finde their feet (I taught Ephraim also to go, taking them by their armes Hos. 11. 3. leads them in his hand, as a horse in the wilderness Ez. 63. 13. If the way be too rough for their tender feet, or too long for their short legs, he lifts them over by his spirit, he chargeth also his angels to bear them in their hands, who are as glad of such an office as the servants are to get their yong master in their armes. It's certain that no yong Prince goes better guarded and attended then a childe of God. Heb. 1. ult.

Gen. 47. 12
 Luk. 15.
 Αὐτὸς ἀγαθὸς
 πατὴρ νουθετῶν
 ἐδιδόκεν ἡγιασ-
 ται. Ding:
 apud Plutarch.
 Prov. 15. 15

Next for their diet and apparrell: God feeds his children with the kidneyes of wheat, with the hidden Manna, with the bread of life, with the best of the best, fat things full of marrow, wines on the lees well refined Isa. 25. 6. Thus he nourisheth them (as Ioseph did his fathers family in Egypt) as a little child is nourished. And for apparrell they have it of the finest. Bring forth the best robe, and the best ring &c. the righteousness of the saints, even the red upper-coat of Justification, and the white under-coat of sanctification. They are ever in their holy-day cloaths, their festivall apparrell every day-being the christian mans holy-day, and he having within him a continuall feast.

Θεοφιλικῶς
 Prov. 1. 4
 ἐλέγχου.
 Ioh. 16. 8
 Eph. 5. 9
 Cant. 2. 4
 Such comfort
 there is in Christs presence, (though but in the womb)
 as it made
 Iohn to spring.
 Luc. 1.
 Shindler: Pen-
 teg Buxtorf.
 Lexic. Carw:
 Harm.
 The North is a nipping-
 wind, the South a cherishing wind,
 but both for the saints. D.
 Sibbes.

6. For their teaching and tuition, they are all taught of God Esay 54. 13. who 1. by his word makes them wise to salvation, gives subtlety to the simple, and to the yong man knowledge and discretion. 2. by his spirit of revelation convinceth them of their false principles, refells their fallacious reasonings, unteacheth them the devils learning, and then leads them into all truth and goodnesse: for the fruit of the spirit is in all goodnesse, righteousness and truth. And of this teaching speaketh St. Paul 1 Thes. 4. 6. and St. Iohn 1 Epist. 2. 27.

7. Next for their delight and recreation, he allows them his garden to walk into, his wine-cellar to go down into. He plealeth himself wondrously in their company, be they but two or three of them, he is in the midst: as once he made the third with those two going Emaus. He sets them between his legs (as it were) so some read that text Deut. 33. 3. He loved the people and (as an effect thereof) they sat down at thy feet, or, they were set between thy feet, as the fathers darlings. Moreover, when he hath them there, he rejoyceth over them with joy, yea he rejoyceth over them with singing. Zeph. 3. 17. like as earthly parents dandle, dance, and sing their little ones upon their knees.

Further, he is wondrous choyce and chary of his children, so that he cannot abide the cold wind should blow upon them. The sun must not smite them by day, nor the moon by night, and what wind soever blow, whether North or South (and what more contrary then those?) they must blow good to Gods children Cant. 4. ult. In a word, he thinks nothing good that he hath to himself, except they may share a part. And is not this the part of a loving parent?

8. Lastly, for matter of maintenance, and outward subsistence, your heavenly father knowes that ye need these things also Mat. 6. 32. and it's enough for you that he knowes it. He holds them to hard-meat sometimes, but then they have it of free-coft, when the wicked pay deare for their tid-bits, and dainty morsels.

morsels. Their meat is sawced, and their drink spiced with the wrath of God, Iob 20. 14. their very table is a snare to them. The Inne-keeper gives his guests the bests dishes, but reserves the inheritance for his children: so here, God gives his people mony in their purses, so much as will serve turne to beare their charges home, to buy them necessaries, and to keep them true men at least; though they have not to lavish and riot, because he knows their weaknesse that way; and therefore holds them (mostly) to straight allowance. Not out of niggardize, I must tell you: for he could beteeame them more meanes, and so he doth also to some of his better children, that have grace to use it, and make them friends with it. But the lesse he allows them here, the more he layes up for them in heaven. Psal. 89. 28, & 31, 19. And when they are once come to the full stature of a man in Christ (for now they are in their nonage) the whole inheritance shall be given them of the father Rom. 8. 16. They shall have power over all creatures Rev. 2. 26. and possession of that new heaven and new earth. 2. Pet. 3. 13. And if these be not the expressions and provisions of a bountifull father, pray y' what is?

SECT. IIII.

God no Father to the wicked, what ever they pretend to him.

NOW for Application, Doth God the Lord look upon such as sons and daughters as sincerely serve him? How then (think we) doth he look upon all such as serve not God but Mammon, as serve not the Lord Christ but their own bellies their base lusts, this present evill world, nay the God of this world, whose works they do, and will do, and are therefore of their father the devill. This, saith St. Iohn, entitles the devill to a man; for he that commits sin is of the devill, that's flat: And again, In this the children of God are manifest and the children of the devill, He that is borne of God doth not commit sin. Well he may slip into it of infirmity, and at unawares Gal. 6. 1. A sheep may slip into a slough, but delights not to wallow in it. He doth not work iniquity on set purpose, he doth not sell over himself to sin with Ahab, he doth not hire out his members as weapons of wickednesse, working all uncleannesse with greedinesse. No, this is not the guise of a childe of God, but of an impe of hell, of a brat of fathomlesse perdition. They have corrupted themselves, saith Moses, their spot is not the spot of his children, they are a perverse and crooked generation. And yet who so forward as these to claime kindred of the Almighty, to fawn upon God, and call him father? Wilt thou not from this time (saith He to Idolatrous Israel, that had in this behalf an whores forehead, a wainscot face hatcht all over with impudence) wilt thou not from this time cry unto me, My father, my father, art thou not the guide of my youth? Will he reserve his anger for ever? will he keep it to the end? Here were good words: Sed quid verba quero, facta cum videam? How canst thou say, thou lovest me, when thy heart is not with me? Behold, saith God in the same place, thou hast spoken and done evill things as thou couldest, thou hast polluted the land with thy whoredomes and wickednesse, and hast thou yet a face to call me Father? Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God 2 Iob. 9. He that walketh not in the steps of Abrahams saith, hath not Abraham to his father Rom. 4. 12. what-ever he pretends to him with those braving Jews. Iob. 8. Tell me not here that God hath blessed you, as a father, sustein'd you with corne and wine Gen. 27. 37. given you of the fatnesse of the earth, and of the dew of heaven &c. for Esa had as good a portion as this, and yet a cast-away: and Abraham gave the moveables to the children of the concubins, whom he lesse respected, but Isaac had the inheritance.

Oh but we are children of the free-woman, borne and bred in the bosome of the church, and enjoy many outward priviledges. So did Esa, and yet was hated of God, so did Iudas, and yet a firebrand of hell.

Neither is it any such businesse, as many make of it, that they have had their Christendoms. For unlesse they be withall baptized with the holy Ghost and with fire, with

Use. 1.

Math. 6.
Rom. 16.
2 Cor. 4. 4
Ioh. 8.
1 Ioh. 3. 8
Ver. 9. 10
Gal. 1. 19

Rom. 6.
Eph. 4.

Deut. 32. 5

Judg. 16. 15
Ier. 3. 2, 3, 4, 5.

Obj.
Sol.

Obj.
Sol.

Obj.
Sol.

Mat. 3.

- Esay 47. With the spirit of judgement and of burning, whereby they have so put on Christ, as that they are become the children of God, by faith in him, Gal. 3. 26, 27. Its pity that ever Font-water was spilt upon their faces. Saul was circumcised, and yet David calls him Cushite, or Ethiopian; and unregenerate Israel is to me as Ethiopia, faith God, Amos 9. 7. and as Gomorrah, Esay 1. 10. notwithstanding all their externall services, and ludibrious devotions. Christ shall one day rid his house, and wash his hands of all such unworthy hang-byes, and powerlesse pretenders. Depart from me, shall they hear, to their everlasting amazement. Go, get ye to the gods whom ye have chosen. Look to the rock from whence ye were hewen, and to the hole whence ye were digged: see what your father the devil will do for you, for He take no further charge of you: his work ye have done, and his wages ye shall have. And sith ye have runne out with the Prodigall, and loathing such wholesome fare as my house afforded, ye have fed hungerly on those murthring morsels of iniquity, the devils husks, therefore shall they stick in your throats, like the envenomed arrows of the Almighty, thoroughout all eternity.
- Psal. 7. Title.
- Esay 51. 1

SECT. V.

Terrour to those that maligne or misuse Gods children.

- U/c. 2. But secondly, is God a Father to all faithfull Christians? how ill-advised then are all such as either by their violent hands, or virulent tongues, misuse or maligne them? yea, that offer them the least affront or offence, despite or displeasure? For know they not whose children they are, and to whose charge they belong? Shall not God avenge his own, though he bear long with them? Very Infidels and worse will defend their own. Very beasts will see to the safety of their young ones, and spend their lives freely for their rescue. Amongst fowls, the Phoenix is famous, and the Pellican much more, for reviving her dead birds, with her heart blood. Now, is there mercy and good nature in a man, in a bird, in a beast, in the creature, in the unreasonable creature also, and can we without blasphemy, or extreme injury, imagine worse of God? It's more then evident to him that hath but half an eye, or doth observe any thing at all in Gods word, or works, that as he taketh notice of smallest curtesies, even to a cup of cold water, to requite them, so of their least or lightest indignities, and injuries to repay them, be it but a frown or a fump. Cain shall answer it before the Lord, if he but lowre upon Abel. Miriam shall be a leper seven dayes at least, and stand ashamed of her fathers spetting in her face, if she but mutter against Moses. An Ammonite, or a Moabite shall be bastardized, and banished the beauty of holinesse, the threshold of the Sanctuary, to their tenth generation, merely for an omission, because they met not Gods first-born Israel with bread and water in the wilderness: How much more because they hired Balaam to curse him, Deut. 23. 3, 4. which when he could not do, God turning his curse into a blessing unto his children, because he loved them, verse 4. yet for that he shewed his good-will to have done it, and moreover taught Balac to lay a stumbling-block before Gods Israel, to eat things sacrificed to Idols, and to commit fornication, Rev. 2. 14. therefore was he slain by the sword of the Lord. For is she not our sister? should he make our sister a whore? said those two brethren in iniquity: which if it seemed a sufficient plea to them, (as likewise to Absalom, in the behalf of his sister Tamar) for that barbarous and bloody massacre, how shall the Lord drench and drown the sword of his justice in the bowels of such as wrong his children to his face, and do them all the despite that may be? what will they force the Queen also in the house? will they offend Gods little-ones, rake into his bowels, pollute his presence with the slaughter, or but misusage of his children? Had Zimri peace that slew his Master? Hath ever any waxed fierce against God and prospered? Look to it, all ye that smite any child of his, either with hand or tongue. 'Twere better a millstone were hanged about your necks, and your selves drowned in the depth of the Sea, then that ye offend one of these little-ones, if a beleever. For I tell you (Christ tells you) that in heaven their Angels do always behold the face of their heavenly Father, waiting for a commission to do speedy execution on the enemies of his children.
- It is a Spanish proverb: He that wipeth the childs nose, kisseth the mothers check.
Gen. 4.
Num 12. 14
- Gen. 34. 31
- Esth. 7. 8
- Job 9. 3
- Mat. 18. 6, 10

SECT.

SECT. VI.

Try your title to God as a Father: Marks.

EXhortation, and first, to try our title to God as a loving Father, by our care to serve him as obedient children. There be sundry distinctive notes of a child of God sparfed here and there, up and down the Scriptures: but that in the Text shall suffice for the present, and it is infallible. I will spare them, as one spares his own sonne that serves him. Every sonne then of his serves him, we see, and not as a slave his Lord, but as a son serves his father. How's that?

Use 3.

First, cheerfully and willingly: Every one that is born of God, serves him with gladnesse, Psal. 100. 2. loves to be his servant, takes hold of his covenant, counts it his meat and drink to do the will of his heavenly Father, in whose house therefore he hath a name better then of a sonne or daughter, Esay 56. 6.

1.

Next, reverently, with a filiall fear and awfull respect to God as his father, whose favour he finds better then life, and whose displeasure he fears, and hath felt more bitter then death, Heb. 12. 27. 1 Pet. 1. 17. Psal. 2. 11. How fearfull is this place, said Jacob? where yet he had seen visions of love.

2.

Gen. 28

Thirdly, confidently and with an humble boldnesse, as well assured of his Fathers both assistance and acceptance: treating with him ever and anon by affectionate prayer (as God hath no dumb children) and making his requests known unto him with affiance of acceffe, and successe in all his suits: which the phrase of crying Abba, Father, also importeth. See Heb. 4. 16.

3.

Sincerely, and entirely, both 1. For subject, not having a heart and a heart, (as that desperate Neapolitan said, he had one for God, and another for the devil) not carrying two faces under a hood, (as one wittily saith of Haymo and Remigius:) which double-dealing is most detestable in a child toward his father, (we say of an arrant dissembler, He would not spare to cozen even his own father) and no good child will offer it. But serving him with singlenesse of heart; yea with all the heart, and all the soul: presenting our bodies also, as a whole burnt sacrifice, which is our reasonable service, yea glorifying him with both our spirits and bodies, which are the Lords: Not offering to detain from him that hath bought us with a price, any part of his purchase; for why should we lie to the Holy Ghost? All Gods children are such as will not lie, Esay 63. 8. but obey from the heart that form of doctrine, whereunto, denying themselves, they have been delivered, rather seeking to be good, then seeming to be so. 2. For object: Every true child of God obeys his father in all, as well as in any part or point of duty. He is a doer of righteousness, 1 Joh. 3. 10. a fulfiller of all righteousness, Mat. 3. something (at least) he is doing at it, as he is able (and this distinguisheth him from a child of the devil, saith St. John) he follows after it (as Solomons expression is) as a man follows his trade, wherein use makes mastery: he lifts at the latch, though he cannot do open the door: he shews his good will, and is humbled for his failing: when either he misfeth of his work, or marres it in the manner. So purifying himself by the practise of mortification, as God is pure, in some truth of resemblance, and all out of a right hope, that he is his child, 1 Joh. 3. 2, 3.

Dent. 10. 12
Rom. 12. 1
2 Cor. 6. 20

Act. 5. 3, 4

Rom. 6. 17

1 Joh. 3. 10

Constantly, and unweariably. A good child will be serviceable to his father, in whatsoever he can, so long as they two shall live together. Semblably, Gods children serve him in righteousness and holiness, all the dayes of their lives. Thus David, as he swore himself to Gods service, and promised to dwell in his house for ever, without shifting his service, so he performed it accordingly: for he served out his whole time, as an Apprentice to the trade, Act. 13. 36, 22. and spent all his dayes (after he was once bound) in doing all the wills of God, one as well as other.

5.

Luk. 1. 75

Θαλασσαν

Lastly, unanimously with the rest of his fellow-servants, with one consent, and one shoulder, as the scripture speaketh, Zeph. 3. 9. observing our Lords last charge, the same in effect with that of Joseph to his brethren: Fall not out by the way, but bee at peace among your selves, loving one another out of a pure heart fervently. For, by this shall your selves know, that ye are my children, 1 Joh. 3. 10, 13. and 6.

by

Heb. 4

by this shall all men know, that ye are my disciples, if ye love one another: and seale up this love by stirring up your selves, among your selves, to love and good workes.

Lo, These are the signes of such a servant of God as he will own for a son, and account of as a Jewell to be made up in his Magazine. If ye be such, ye are made for ever: As if otherwise

SECT. VII.

Settle this, that ye are Gods children, and how.

1 Pet. 1.3
Gal. 5.211 Cor. 6.10: 11
*Homo templum Dei: Deus ara
hominis.*2 Cor. 6.16, 17, 18.

MY second Exhortation is, that ye give no rest to your eyes, nor sleep to your eye-lids, till you have secured and settle this to your selves: it being a matter of that moment, that without nothing can be safe, nothing comfortable. Now to become children of God there is no other way under heaven, then to passe thorough the narrow womb of repentance, and be born againe. For flesh and blood cannot inherit: and all unrighteous persons are utterly excluded from the benefit of Adoption, 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. And yet such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified. And how justified? but by the name, that is, by the merits of the Lord Jesus Christ apprehended by faith, which adopts as well as justifies? And how sanctified? but by the spirit of our God, whose office and operation it is, to transfuse the divine nature into us, and to erect that faire fabrick of the new man in our hearts for a temple to himself; that he may dwell in us, and walk in us, yea secretly and sweetly say to us, being now separated from all ill courses and companies, I will be a father unto you, and ye shall be my sonnes and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.

SECT. VIII.

Let all Gods children know their Father: and how.

Use. 4.

Hof 4

Isa. 1.2,3
Deut. 32.6
Psal. 14.3
Esa. 64.7
Judg. 18. 24
Isa. 65. 1
1 Chron. 28.9

INstruction to all such as are received into the number of Gods children, as never they expect his blessing, or respect their birth-right, to discharge that duty that this dignity calles for.

And first to know their father: So to know God as a child doth his father, not only with an apprehensive but an effective knowledge, that unites the heart unto him, labours not only after an union, but a unity with him. We are all by nature like runagate children, who would never have kept neer their parents house, but assembled themselves by troopes, in harlots houses, with the prodigall, where whordome and wine, and new wine hath taken away our hearts: the things of this life are so neer and naturall to us, so present and pleasant, that we cannot ascend into heaven to learne wisdom, to get the knowledge of the Holy One, Prov. 30. 3, 4. The spirit of fornication hath so befotted us, that we have not so much as a mind to look toward God. Hence that complaint. I have brought up children, and they have rebelled against me. The ox knoweth his owner, and the asse his masters crib, but Israel doth not know; my people doth not consider. Do ye thus requite the Lord, O foolish people and unwise? Is not he thy father &c? But there is none that understandeth, and seeketh God, none that stirrith up himself to take hold of God &c. Gracelesse and heedlesse impes we are all, that will not once take knowledge our of father, or cry after him though lost, as Micah did after his lost idols: albeit we have so tasted of his sweetnesse, and he hath said, Behold me, behold me, unto a nation that was not called by his name. But thou, Solomon my son, know thou the God of thy fathers, yea God thy father: for, I will be his father and he shall be my son, said the Lord to David.

2 Sam.

2 Sam. 7. 14. We use to say (and we have it from the Greeks) that he is a wife child that knows his father. But he is no child of God, that knowes not him for his father. I write unto you babes, saith St. Iohn, because ye have known the father. Lo he is not yet a babe in Christ that hath not some knowledge of this, that God is his father. True it is that the most gray headed, and most experienced Christian knowes but in part, and imperfectly; because he is taught but lamely, we prophecy in part 1 Cor. 13. 9. we see here but as in a glasse obscurely, we see but Gods back-parts, the later end of his traine: we hear of him here by the hearing of the eare, but it is no more then as the later end of a sentence, or so much only as the Echo refounds. But we must be getting and growing in this grace, even in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. He is the brightnesse of his fathers glory, and the expresse image of his person. The beam of the Sun is not so like the body of the Sun, the character on the wax is not so like the seal that imprints it, nay milk is not so like milke, as Christ is like his father. He is up and down the self-same that his Father is: they differ in nothing, but that the one is the father, and not the son; the other is the son, and not the father. Hence that of our Saviour to Philip, when he said, Lord shew us the father, and it sufficeth us. Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? He that hath seen me, hath seen the Father, and how sayest thou then, shew us the Father?

Telemachus
apud Homer.
Odys. a.
1 Ioh. 2. 13

ὡς ἐν ἀνίγ-
ματι.
Exod. 33.
Isa. 6.
2 Pet. 3. 18
Heb. 1. 3
ἀπαύρασμα.
Lumen de lu-
mine.

Christus est
alius à patre,
non aliud.

Ioh. 14. 8, 9

The very same All-powerfull God, who in fellowship of his sacred person hath a soul and body glorified, the same spirituall nature is the nature of the Father: As if the same soul and body that is in you, were communicated with the person of your child. Well might our Saviour therefore say, If ye had known me, ye should have known my father also. Iohn 14. 7. Oh learne and labour therefore to profit more and more in the mystery of Christ, to know him better in his natures, in his offices, in his workes both of Abasement and Advancement, of Humiliation and Exaltation: but especially to know him as St. Paul did (for the other you may easily know out of every Catechisme) to know him and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable to his death Phil. 3. 10. This is the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus ver. 8. this is life eternall Ioh. 17. 3. We know no more of God and his will, then we practise, and have experience of: Christ is said to know no sin, because he did none: and Eli's sons knew not the Lord; (though priests) because they feared him not: they detained the truth, they knew, in unrighteousnesse, as those Philosophers did Rom. 1. 18.

SECT. IX.

Let them thankfully acknowledge his free grace in their adoption:
and why.

A Second duty we owe to God as his children is thankfull acknowledgement of that never-enough adored depth of his singular love in our Adoption. The absolute and independant freedome of his grace herein was such, that without any the least colour of cause, or shew of reason in us, without any defect on his part or desert on ours, He drew us out of the most vile and servile condition that could be, into the glorious liberty of the sons of God. David was to be gathered to his fathers, and it was therefore a singular favour to him that he should have children to sit upon his throne after him. But God is the King immortall, as St. Paul stiles him, the everlasting Father, as Esay, and therefore needs no son to succeed him. But if he did, he had a son of his own as like him as is possible, whom also he hath set as King upon his holy hill of Sion. Amongst men, those that have children of their own, if they adopt another mans childe, it is commonly because their own are unfit for succession either from some bodily weaknesse as not likely to leave issue, or for basenesse of spirit, and badnesse of behaviour, as incapable and unfit for government. Now none of all this can without horrible

Psal. 132. 11
Esay 9. 6
1 Tim. 1. 17
Psal. 2.

A a a

blasphemy

blasphemy be said of the Lord Christ. But admit the case had so stood with God, that it had been requisite he should have adopted any for his sons, and heirs, the good Angels might have drawn away his affection from us by their holiness, or the evil angels his compassion, for their wretchedness: or he could, for a need, of very stones have raised up children to himself, to be heirs of his kingdom in Christ. It was his will only, and nothing else, that moved his will to set his love upon us, as we may see both in the type Deut. 7. 7. and in the truth Eph. 1. 5. Surely as there was no defect or need in him, so there was as little merit or desert in us. For whereas in the civil adoption (as when Pharaohs daughter adopted Moses, Mordecai adopted Ester, Jacob the two sons of Joseph) there is something in the Adopted that moveth the Adoptant: either some outward inducement, as kindred, beauty, favour &c. or some inward, as the gifts of the minde, understanding, ingenuity, hopefulness &c. there was nothing at all in us to move God to such a mercy. For outward respects, there was neither kindred to incite him (for our father was an Amorite, our mother a Hittite: we were the sons of the perverse rebellious woman, as Saul reproached Jonathan) nor yet beauty to intice him, for we were in our blood, in our blood, in our blood, when he spread the skirt of his garment over us, and said unto us, Live. Blood is so many severall times there named, to note our extreme filthiness: so little amiable were we when he set his love upon us.

Ezek. 16. 3, 4,
5, 6.
Christ calls his spouse
first his Love,
and then his fair one.
Gal. 2. 10.
Homo est in-versus decalo-
gus.
Eph. 2. 1, 2.

συγκαλησ-
ται.
Gal. 3. 23.

And for any inward motive, grace (which is the only thing that God looks after Psal. 14. 2.) is not at all to be found in the natural man. Nay he stands accross, and is quite contrary to it; as being acted and agitated by the devill, and held captive, as a slave by him, at his pleasure. Lo, this was our estate, thus the Lord found us when he came to adopt us. And indeed Adoption (to speak properly, as it is a borrowed terme from the civil law) imports as much. For it is the taking of one for a son, who is, for present, in some servitude to another. And so Lawyers distinguish it from Arrogation, which is, say they, the chusing of one for a son that is free, his own man, & not under the command of another. But such (alass) was not our case: for both Jews and Gentiles were shut up under sin, full shut up close prisoners in the devills dungeon, whose works we did, as slaves, and could not but do them, whose image we bear, as sons, and could not but resemble him: being as like the devill, as if we had been spout of his mouth, and had perished together with him in our own filth and blood like that forlorne infant, Ezek. 16. had not he of his mere grace and goodness, when it was the time of loves, said unto us, Live, yea when we were weltring in our blood, he said Live. Oh let the deep and due consideration of this matchlesse mercy and free favour ravish and stir our hearts, to greatest cheerfulness and thankfulness: let it swallow up all discontents, and make us send up many an humble, joyfull, and praisefull heart to him.

SECT. X.

Let them honour their father: and how.

Mal. 1. 6

Οι υιοί
θεοῦ
ἐφ' ὅτι.
Hiero.

1 Sam. 2.

Psal. 24.

A Third duty we are to performe to God as a father is Reverence, according to that in the Prophet, A son honoureth his father. If then I be a father, where's mine honour? and that in the Decalogue, Honour thy father and thy mother, which, saith St. Paul, is the first commandment with promise. Promise, I say, of long life to him that (by honouring them) lengtheneth his parents life. Reverence and loving respect to parents never went unrecompenced, as in Japheth, Isaac, Ruth, others: much lesse shall that to God: for, them that honour him he will honour.

Here then we are 1. to have an high and honourable esteem of God in our hearts: lifting up, and laying open those everlasting doors, that the King of glory may come in, and come in state, in his own likeness. Ignorant people cast him into a dishonourable mould as it were: they have bald and base conceits of God: they think him altogether such a one as themselves, or worse: they change the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man &c. they dishonour him, and therefore he gives them up to passions of dishonour, or vile affections. For as a king will take it ill to be entertained no otherwise by his subjects, when he comes amongst them, then if he were some Knight or meaner man: so will God, when we have low conceptions of him, when we glorifie him not as God, when we enlarge not his roome, and let him in-dwell richly in us, when we conceive not of him as the only potentate; represent him not to our thoughts in the apprehension of one that is in and of himself All-sufficient, Omnipotent, onely wise, and in Christ our most merciful father, yet still our father in heaven; who without respect of persons judgeth according to every mans works: whom therefore if we call father we must passe the whole time of our sojourning here (till he send for us home) in fear. Lo this is to honour God in our hearts. And this is that, that is required so often in scripture, under the term of magnifying God, or making him great, and of glorifying God, or making him glorious: so he is pleased to account of it, when we get so far, as to conceive of him above all creatures: and that is when he comes into our hearts as a king of glory, far above all the glory that can be found in earthly princes.
glory

2. We must honour him in our speeches, both to him, and of him.

1. In our prayers to God, we must take unto us words, neither too curious, nor too carelesse, we must speak supplications, with the poor publican, we must address our selves unto him in lowliest manner, as the Prodigal did, Father I have sinned against heaven and before thee, I am no more worthy to be called thy child. A servants place in thine house is too good for me. Briefly, our words to God in prayer must be, as the words use to be of a childe to his father, humble, earnest, and direct to the point, avoiding vain babblings. This is to be sober in prayer 1 Pet. 4.3. when considering that God is in heaven, and we on earth, considering the infinite distance, and disproportion between him and us, therefore our words are few. We are allowed to parle with God by prayer, to use an holy and humble familiarity, and to come boldly unto the throne of grace; but yet we must so couch our petitions, that all needless hear tlesse repetitions, superfluous endlesse digressions, tedious and unnecessary prolixities be carefully avoided. Humble and pithy prayer findes freer access to God, and returns with better successe to us.

2. As we must thus honour our heavenly father in our speeches to him, so in our speeches also of him to others. Take heed, that we take not up that great and terrible name of his, unreverently, lightly, loosely, disrespectfully: for he hath vowed that he will hold none guiltlesse, he hath sworn that no vain swearers, or other dishallowers of his name shall ever enter into his kingdom. Reviling of parents was banishment by Pluo's laws, death by Gods laws Exod 21. 17. How shall they escape that bore thorough the glorious and dreadful name of God, to fling it in their common talk as filthy dogs do stinking carrion; that swear in jest and not in judgement; that play with oaths as apes do with nuts, not considering that there is a large roll of ten yard long and five yards broad full of curses against the swearer, and that shall rest upon his house, which he calls his castle, and where he thinks himself most secure. Zach. 5.2. Oh what will become of those hellish mouthes that belch out blasphemies against him. (whom yet they daily call Our father which art in heaven) so ordinarily and so openly, that some of them are become very inter eltions of speech to the vulgar, and other-somemere phrales of gallantry to the braver, as one complainerh. How should we grieve at this, as those good men did when David was reviled by Shimei, how should our hearts rise to hear our heavenly father thus dishonoured? surely good blood will not belie it self.

3. God is to be honoured as a father in our whole conversation, remembring that we are ever in his eye: and should therefore walk before him in an holy bashfulness, as ashamed and afraid to do any thing unworthy of his presence, or that may give him discontent. It was ordered in Moses law, that when any went forth of the camp to ease nature, they should dig a hole with a paddle, and cover their excrements: And why? For the Lord thy God walketh in the midst of thy camp, therefore shall it be holy, that he see no unclean thing in thee, and turn away from thee Deut. 23. 13, 14. Now there was more in this law, then every man looks unto. Sin is the souls excrements: St. Iames therefore calls it the super-

Psal. 50. 21.
Rom. 1. 13.
26. πρόθυμα
ἐννοήσω.
2 Cor. 6. 15

1 Pet. 1. 17:

Verba nec leſſa
ſint nec neg-
leſſa.

Eccles 5. 2.
ἐν τρυφῇ
interparſance
1 Tim. 2. 1.
Omnino oportet
nos orationis
tempore curiam
intrare celeſtem, in qua Rex regum
ſteſſo ſedet ſolio
&c.
Quant à ergo
cum reverentia
quanto timores
quanto illac
humilitate accedere
debet epulo ſus
procedens &c
repens vilis rannuncula?
Bern.
Lev. 19. 12.

S. Edw. Sande.

Iam. 1. 21.
 H. b. 1. 13.
 Amos 3. 3.
 2. Sam. 12. 9.
 Act. 10. 33.
 ἡμεῖς ἡμεῖς
 H. b. 4. 13.
 Gen. 27. 12, 41
 Prov 17. 2.
 as Samuels and Elie's sons
 as Jonathan
 the son of
 the son of
 of Manasseh, or, of some copies have it, the son of Moses. In accuratissimis libris Nun sufperferunt ju-pra alias line-
 as in signum,
 cum hieram
 adesse vel abes-
 se posse, ut fit
 Et filius Moysi
 Et Manassis
 2 Reg. 21.
 istius, prae sapia,
 huius imitatio-
 ne. Buxtorf.
 Tiber. Amam Coronis.

fluity of naughtiness, in reference to the dung of the beasts that were slain in sacrifice. Now God is of purer eyes then to behold sin with patience, in his own especially: for can two walk together and they not be agreed? David is grievously threatened for despising God his father, that is, for daring to do that before him, that he would not have done before a child of a dozen yeers-old. Cornelius and his company set themselves as in Gods view, looked him full in the face, and carried themselves accordingly: so must we, remembling that all things are naked and open before the eyes of him, with whom we have to do. Iacob feared to displease his father; lest he should get himself a curse, and not a blessing: yea that profane Esau would not offer to attempt any thing against Iacob his brother during his fathers dayes, for fear of displeasing him. Epaminond is rejoyced in nothing more, then that he had done noble exploits, and attained great victories: whiles his parents were yet alive, that they might share with him in the comfort and credit thereof. Oh let it be our constant care so to carry our selves, that we may not shame our fathers house, as Solomons fool, but to get him honour from others Mat. 5. 16. that they may see and say that we are the seed that the Lord hath blessed Esay 61. 9. It is not for noble mens sons to be lingering and lodging in the stable or gate-house, (that's a place for grooms and hindes) much lesse to be found filling muck-cart. the No more doth it sute with the sons of God to be loading themselves with thick clay, to have their hands elbow-deep in the world, to busie themselves about many things with neglect of the one thing necessary, to run squeaking up and down the world, as rats and mice good for nothing but to devour victuals. This is not to walk worthy of God their father, and of Christ their elder brother.

SECT. XI.

Let them resemble their father, and wherein.

M. Rob. Harris
 Math 23.
 ὁ λόγος ἐνεδύ-
 σαντο τὴν Κοισαντίνον, ἐμ-
 πρέπουτες
 ταῖς τῷ πα-
 τρὶ καλλω-
 πισμασιν.
 Euseb.

Gods children must resemble him, as well as reverence him. The child is but the father multiplied; the father of the second Edition, as One speaketh, like him ordinarily, both in countenance and condition. The Pharisees were so like their fathers they were the worse again. Isaac trod in his fathers foot-steps, and heyled him, even in his infirmities, Gen. 26. 7. Constantines sonnes exactly resembled their father in his good parts and practises. We must also be followers of God as dear children. 1. In light, 1 Joh. 1. 5. being transparent as a chrysell glasse with a light in the midst of it. 2. In love, Ephes. 5. 1, 2. for have we not all one father, Mal. 2. 10. Ephes. 4. 5, 6. love therefore as brethren, 1 Pet. 3. 8. fall not out by the way, Gen. 45. 24. let there be no difference, for we are brethren, and the Canaanite is in the land Gen. 13. 7, 8. How can we look our father in the face, or expect his blessing, when we know that he knowes there is dissention amongst us? Oh how happy and pleasant a thing it is, brethren to be at unity; there surely it is that God commands the blessing Psal. 133. 1, 3. He never came at Abraham that we read of till the breach betwixt him and Lot was made up again; live therefore at peace, and the God of love and peace shall be with you. 3. In mercy Luk. 6. 36. loving them that hate us, blessing them that curse us, doing good to them that persecute us: for so shall we be the children of our heavenly father, who doth good both to the just, and to the unjust, causeth his sun to shine, and his raine to fall, not onely upon flowers, and fruit-trees, but also upon briers and thorns of the wilderness, such incarnat devils, as march up and down the earth with hearts and hands as full as bell, with al manner of malice and mischief. Such a child of God was Elisha that feasted his enemies, & Steven that prayed for his persecutours, and that Mary, that when he could not obtain a fair hearing before Steven Gardner, cryed out. Send me to my prison again among my frogs and toads which will not interrupt me, whiles I pray for your Lordships conversion. 4. In sanctifying the sabbath, Exod. 20. 11. Esay 56. 5, 6. by resting not only from corporal labour, but spiritual idleness: as God rested on that day from creating, and yet works hitherunto in preserving and upholding all things by the word of his power. The baser sort fort of people in Sweth-land do alwayes break the sabbath, saying that its onely for gentlemen to keep that day. And in many places amongst us Gods sabbaths are made the voyder and dunghill for all refuse busineses. But the Pharisees (taking it for granted that Christ had done that he could not justifie on that day, (wherein they were mistaken) rightly conclude: If this man were of God he would not have broke the sabbath day: this not the guise of Gods children. 5. Lastly, in all holy life and pure conversation, according to that, Be ye holy as I am holy, pure as I am pure, perfect as I am perfect. Our lives should be as so many visible commentaries upon Christ's life: we should preach forth his vertues, and expresse him to the world in all his imitable praises, and practises. Then we are said to walk in Christ, yea, to walk as Christ walked, when we resemble him; not as an image doth a man in out-ward lineaments onely, but as a son doth his father in nature and disposition, in affection and action. Our utmost good consists in communion with God, and conformity to him: in keeping inward peace with him that he abhor us not, because of the provoking of his sons and of his daughters Deut. 33. 13. and in seeking and keeping (if it be possible, and as much as in us lies) peace with all men, and holiness; for such shall both see God (which is not every mans priviledge,) and be counted and called the sons of God Muh. 5. 10: they shall have both the comfort and credit of divine Adoption.

David's desire
by Rob. Abbot. p 16

2 Cor. 7. 1
1 Pet. 1. 14, 15

Coloff. 2. 6
1 Joh. 2. 6

Heb. 12. 14

SECT. XII.

Let them love their Father: and how to expresse their love.

IF God be our Father, it's but fit we should love him; God having tied parents and children together with cords of love, saith Nazianzen. Love, I grant, though of a fiery nature, yet (contrary to the nature of fire herein) descends rather then ascends. Hence, grandfathers oft love their grandchildren better then their own. But love should (and in good children doth) ascend also. It is but reason they should reciprocate, and return their parents love for love: do not publicans the same, Mat. 5. 46? Do not our clothes warmed by us, warme us again? That God loves all his with a love more then Fatherly, hath been abundantly proved above. God so loved the world, that he gave his onely begotten Son. This is a fic without a ficnt: there is no sufficient similitude in nature to expresse it by. Herein, if ever, he made naked unto us the bowels of his Fatherly affection, as in an anatomy. God so loved his Son, as he gave him all the world for his possession, Psal. 2. but he so loved the world, that he gave Son and all for its redemption. Thus (O ye finfull sonnes of men) Gods bowels are open unto you, his heart is enlarged. Yee are not straitned in him, but yee are straitned in your own bowels. Now for a recompence in the same, (he speaks unto you as unto his children) be ye also enlarged. Amate amorem illius, saith St. Bernard. Oh love, that love of his, who for love of thee coupled his love to thy love, by abasing himself, by advancing thee, by uniting the light of his eternity to the mire of thy mortality. Whom therefore having not seen, ye love, saith Peter, 1 Epist. 1. 8. and My love was crucified, said Ignatius. And, I love thee dearly, O Lord my God, saith David. And again, O how I love thy law! O how amiable are thy Tabernacles! he even wondereth at his own love, and vents himself by an exclamation. For, Amor Dei est extaticus, nec se scit esse sui juris, saith One. There is a two-fold love, (and both due to him in whom there is a concurrence of all attractives, and retentives of our love) 1. Of Desire; this is an earnest longing after that which wee beleeve would do us much good, if we could attain to it. 2. Of Delight, or complacency, when having attained that which we desired, we hugge and embrace it, and solace our selves in the fruition of it. Now Christ, (the Everlasting Father, Esay 9. 6.) must have both these, and that in the highest degree: For he is white and ruddy, white in his life, and ruddy in his death, the chief of ten thousand, or the standard-bearer of ten thousand. For as the tallest and goodliest men use to carry the Ensigne, to display the Banner, or Standard: such is Christ: All excellency is invested in him, all good is conveyed unto us by him, all love is therefore 5. φιλάτεω ὁ

συνέδωκε Θε-
ὸς πλείας τῆ
ἀγάπης τῆ.
Aui magis a-mant nepotes,
quam suos libe-
ros. Heildfeld.
Cōs amoris
amor.
Joh 3. 16

2 Cor. 6. 11,
12, 13
Conjungendo
lumen suae aeternitatis
limo tua mortalitatis. Bern.
"Εγὼς δ' ἐμὸς
ἐσαύρωμαι.
Psal. 18. 1
Psal. 119. 97
Psal. 84. 1
Pinkes Serm.
of love.

Cant. 5. 10
ὄφει καλὸν
φιλῶν ὄφει.

Non bene con-veniant nec in una sede mo-rantur Majes-
tas et Amor.
Juvenal.
ἡ δὲ θεοῦ ἀγάπη.
1 Pet 2. 21

Afts & Mon.
fol. 1438.
lb. 1430.

Ib. 805.

Pinkes Serm
of love. p. 21.

D. Sibbes Ser
on 1 Cor 2. 9.

Vix diligitur
Jesus propter
Jesus. Aug.

due from us to him. We say that Majesty & love cannot dwell together, beca use love is the abasing of the soul to all services. But its otherwise in Christ. Majesty and love could cohabite in his heart, & hereof he gave us the best assurance, when the Lord of life was crucified to death. Love is most teen in suffering: as it self is a passion, so it is tried rather by passions then actions. He sealed up his love both by doing and dying for us: leaving us a Copie to write after, (as St. Peter hath it) to do whatsoever he bids us to forbear whatsoever he forbids us, and to lay down our dearest lives for his sake, if called thereunto, according to that: For thy sake are we slain all the day long, we are in deaths often. Ye were every haire of my head a man, (said Ardely the Martyr, to bloody Bonner) I would suffer death in the opinion and faith I am now in. The heavens shall sooner fall, then I will forsake my Christ, said William Flower. My wife and my children are so dearly beloved unto me (said George Carpenter burnt at Munken) that they cannot be bought from me for all the riches and possessions of the Duke of Bavaria: but for the love of my Lord Christ I will willingly forsake them. He that loveth father or mother more then me, is not worthy of me: and he that loveth son or daughter more then me, is not worthy of me Math. 10. 37. If a man hold not the Lord Christ worthy of more love then his dearest friends, he hath no part in him. All our love must be bestowed upon him as most worthy, there is not one particle of it to be bestowed on any other thing. But then he gives us our love againe, and then we may disperse it here and there, and love other things: but no otherwise then as they convey love to us from Christ, and may be meanes of drawing up our affections to Christ. My love unto my Saviour (saith one) although it came occasionally and impulsively from my love of my self, yet it is terminated principally in his glory, though accessorially likewise, as he is contented it should, in mine own happinesse. But it is a kind of miracle (saith another) in evill, when we love other things besides God; or better then God, baser then our selves: It is as much as if a river should turne backward. What a base thing is it for a man to suffer such a sweet streame as love, to run into such a sinke? And a little after, It was a miracle, saith he, that the three young men should be in the midst of the furnace, and be there as if they were in another place, no hotter. And it is as much a miracle, that men should be in the midst of all encouragements to love God, and yet love any thing more then God. He is absolutely good, and so is to be loved absolutely and for himself, but all other things in him, and for him, as our friends are to be loved in the Lord, and our foes for the Lord. This is child-like indeed.

SECT. XIII.

Let them depend upon their Father, both for prevention of evill, and provision of good.

Phil. 4. 6.

2 Sam. 13. 4

1 Pet. 5. 5.
Psal. 55. 22.

Rom. 8.
Qui misit unigenitum immi-
misit spiritum,
promisit vultum
quid tandem tibi negaturus
est. B. I. de tem.

LAstly, learn we to depend upon God as a father, for both prevention of evill and provision of good. In nothing be carefull, but in all things make your request known to God with thanksgiving, saith Paul. And marke, that he bids us bring our thanks together with our request, to have the one as ready as the other, for we are sure to speed. Why art thou then pale and leane from day to day with carking cares, and disquieting feares of this or that danger? Art not thou the Kings son? and will he deny thee any thing thou askest? Cast all thy care upon God, for he cares for thee. Roll both thy self upon him, and thy Gift upon him, saith David: that is, whatsoever thou wouldst that God should bestow upon thee, cast it first upon him by faith and it shall be effected: he shall bring it to passe. Away with the spirits of bondage to feare againe: we have now received the spirit of Adoption, whereby we cry Abba father: yea, for an unquestionable pledge of his infinite love, he hath given us his son: how shall he not then together with him, give us all things also? That's St. Pauls argument. If ye which are evill can give good things to your children, how much more wil your heavenly father give to them them that ask of him? that's our Saviours argument. Whereunto let me adde this.

God made himself known to be our gracious and provident Father; before we could know our selves to be his children. He formed us in the womb, cruddled us there like cheefe, curiously wrought us in those lowermost parts of the earth, (as an Artificer, when he hath some speciall piece of work to do, retires into some private room out of the sight of others) whilest we were there, he filled two bottles of milk for our entertainment into the world: whereinto we no sooner came; but he entred into covenant with us, to be our God and Father: hee signed and sealed this covenant by the Sacrament of Baptisme, the solemne seal of our adoption: And all this before ere we knew what was done unto us. And will hee now forget to do us good, when we know and acknowledge him, when we pray unto him; and by faith depend upon him? It is not possible. He feeds the fowls, and clothes the lillies, to whom he is no father: And will he not much more do so for you, Oh ye, small faiths. A child whiles he hath his fathers favour cares for nothing; never troubles himself to think where he shall have his next meal, or a new suit of clothes: let him but please his father, and those things shall be provided to his hand. Again, let a child walk in dark and dangerous places, so long as he hath hold of his father he fears not. Did we but stirre up our selves to take hold of God, wee should be secure, yea though we walked in the vale of the shadow of death, with David: we should never be heard to say, (as Heathens that have no interest in God) What shall we eat? or what shall we drink? or wherewith shall we be clothed? so long as our heavenly Father knows that we need all these things, and will not fail to provide them in a competent measure. The men of Gods hand, it may be, shall have more then wee, because they have their portion here with the prodigall. But we need not envie them that: for it is but an estate for life, granted them in the utmost and most remote part of our inheritance. Will a child think much a father should give a pension for life, out of this, or that, whiles he hath far greater things left him; yea the inheritance also of that, out of which an annuity is granted for a time to some other? Children ought not to lay up for their parents; but parents for their children, saith the Apostle. And, Oh how great things, saith the Prophet, hast thou laid up in store for them that fear thee! Now, will he give us a crown, and deny us a crust? provide heaven for us, and with-hold earth from us? Ask onely and it shall be given you: the earth is the Lords, and the fulnesse thereof. In your Fathers house is bread enough. Shall the prodigall call so confidently for his childs part? shall Esaú go so roundly to his father for the blessing? And do we stand doubting whether we were best speak, or hold our tongues? and not fall down with Ester before Ahasuerus, or with Achsah before her father Caleb, and beg the upper-springs of spirituall blessings, and the nether-springs of temporall comforts? which he with-holds, haply, for a time, with an unwilling willingnesse, that he may hear of us, and have our prayers: which, though never so poor and imperfect, yet he is much taken with, as a naturall parent is with the prating, and stammering of his own, above all the plain speech of all the children in the Town besides.

Mat. 6
A Christian is crowned not only in his cradle with K.
James, but before he is born, as Sapores K. of Persia was. For his father dying, left his mother with child, and the Persian Nobility set the crown on his mothers belly, acknowledging thereby her issue
for their Prince. Heyl.
Geog. p. 64
Mat. 6
ἐκ τῆς μητρὸς.
Psal. 23. 3

Psal. 17

2 Cor. 12. 14

Luk. 15. 12
Gen. 27. 34

SECT. XIV.

*Comfort of Adoption: where are shewed the Priviledges of sonnes;
privative, and positive.*

Comfort to all Gods faithfull servants: they are sonnes and daughters to the Almighty: and count you that a small matter? Is it nothing to be son-in-law to a king, saith David? What pains did Jacob take night and day to be but sonne-in-law to Laban, who changed his wages ten times, and ever for the worse: Joseph and Daniel were for their good service highly advanced, but not adopted. But every servant of God is a sonne, and every sonne an heir. Great was the glory of our first Parents in Paradise, had they held it: and yet if they had, what had they gotten, more then a confirmation of their present estate, or at most, the reward of their service, wages for their work? they could never have attained to this

Use 5.

Joh. 1. 12.
ἐξ υἱοῦ.

this honour, to be the sons of God. This St. Iohn in his gospell calls a dignity, an eminency, a royalty. And in his first epistle, he stands and wonders, as transported with an extasy of admiration at it 1 Joh. 3. 1. And well he might: For this (saith the psalmist) is to be set above the Kings of the earth, it interesteth and inrighteth a man to the inheritance of heaven and earth. The possession of the earth is as yet deteyned from Gods children by the wicked for a time, as the promised land was from Israel by the Amorites: but they have great things meanwhile in reversion, even heaven with all its happines, whither they may comfortably look up and boast, on better ground then Nebuchadnezzar did of his Babel. Is not this mine inheritance? Am I not kept by the power of God to that salvation reserved for me in the heavens? Yea they may comfortably lift up their eye: (as God bid Abraham, toward heaven, and tell the stars if he were able) so they their glorious priviledges. This, Moses well understood, and therefore chose rather to suffer as a son, then to scape as a bastard, he preffer'd the reproach of Christ before the honour of being the son of Pharaohs daughter, and the possibility of being heir to two kings, as Iosephus relates it. He was faithfull in all Gods house as a servant: but that was not all. For the servant abideth not in the house for ever, as the son doth. Moreover, the kings of the earth take tribute of their servants and subjects, but their children go free Mat. 17. 26. Behold, Gods children are all manumitted by Christ, and possessed of a twofold freedome.

1 Pet. 1. 4

Heb. 11.

Joh. 8. 35

*Multi plures sunt gratie privative quam
positiva Gerson*

Rom. 8.

Joh. 14. 18

*Hic cum triste
aliquid statuit sit tristis et ipsa. Cuius fere
penam sumere
parata est:
Ovid. 2 de Pont. eleg. 2.
To say, God
hath cast you off, because he hath hid his face, is a fallacy fercht out of the Devils Topicks.*

Janua vita porta celi Bern.

1. Privative from the dominion, and damnation of sin, from the rigour and irritation of the law, from the captivity and cruelty of the devill, from the danger of death, and horreur of hell &c. This is a priviledge far beyond that of a citizen of Rome, which yet might neither be suffered to beg, nor be bound with thongs Act. 22. 29. And this is that the Apostle calls the glorious liberty of the sons of God, as elsewhere he couples Adoption with glory Rom. 9. 4. includes it in glory Rom. 8. 30. and puts it for glory Rom. 8. 23. Freed Gods children are not (I confesse,) of crosses and corrections, for then were they bastards and not sons. He scourgeth every son whom he receiveth, but he never leaveth them orphans, helpelesse, comfortlesse. In the midst of desertion (the forest kinde of affliction) they may, nay they must call him Father, and ask him blessing. Esay 64. 7, 8, 9, and he knowes not how to say them nay, coming unto him in that name, and under that notion. Should a parent see his sick childe pant and look pittifully, cry out (as once the Shunamites son to his father) O my head, my head! my heart is sick, my head is heavy. I am weary with paines: what shall I do? where shall I rest? &c. He could not turn his back upon him and neglect his moans: much lesse could he continue to strike him, lifting up his feeble hands for mercy, and looking upon him with watery eyes; but would rather set himself to seek out, and to do him all possible ease and comfort. And shall not the God of all mercy, and the Father of all consolation pity his poor children that are distressed, or diseased, and send deliverance? Will he not melt over his childe, and burn his rod? Will he not hold him up with one hand as he did Iacob, when he beats him down with the other? will he not look through the chinkers to see how we do, when he hath shut us up close prisoners? will he not deal by us as the mother deals by her little one, makes him beleeve she will cast him away to the puttock, or pitch him headlong into the pool, when yet she keeps fast hold on him?

2. Positive, and so he is made a free-denison of Jerusalem that is above, and possessed of all the priviledges of that supernall city. See a brief extract of them in that 1 Cor. 3. 22, 23. All things are yours? A very large charter; All illuminations, inspirations, gifts and graces of the spirit, gifts of Gods ministers and the abler sort of Christians, all these are not more their own then yours to use; you have title to them, and interest in them, and may claime them for your own: Whether Paul, or Apollo, or Cephas, or the world, you are heirs of it together with faithfull Abraham: Or life, grace to spend it well, or death, to the wicked a trap-dore to hell, but to the saints an inlet into eternall happines, or things present, all occurrences are sanctified to you, or things to come, heaven waits for you, hell hath nothing to do with you. Thus all is yours, as the Apostle there reiterates it, though not in possession (unless it be in our Head) yet in use, in right

right or by way of reduction, as we say, the worst things are Gods childrens: they are heirs of the kingdom saith James, heads destinated to the diadem, saith Tertullian. Their privileges as sons, are fitter to be beleaved, then possible to be discourfed. And this should make them hold up their heads, but not too high, and be cheerfull, but not, withall, scornfull.

Jam. 2. 5
Sermo non valet exprimere,
experimento
opus est. Cbrys.
Lati finis

non securi, gaudentes in spiritu sancto, sed tamen caventes à recidivo. Bern.

CHAP. V.

God will pity and pardon his people their wants and weaknesses.

And I will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serves him.

How graciously God will deal with his dear children in respect of their pious performances, is here sweetly set forth by an exquisite simile, from the dealing of an indulgent father with his obsequious childe, I will spare them, saith he, nay that's not full enough; I will pardon and pity them, I will commiserate and compassionate them, as Pharaohs daughter once did the forlorne infant she found among the flags. I will use clemency and shew kindnesse unto them, And how? As a man doth to his own son that serves him.

Shindler: Pen-
tag. miserebor, misericordia
commovebor.
Figuer. Cle-
mentia utar.
Trem. polan.
In quo duplex
est amoris ratio
dyc. Figuer
De Carulone
filio à patre Machao ob contemptum cruci affixo lege Just. lib. 18.
Heb. 13. 18.

In which comfortable expression there is a double declaration (saith an Interpreter) of Gods fatherly affection: as thus. We cannot but shew love even to a stranger that observes us: As o' tother side, we dislike and detest even a son that slights us. But a son, and a serviceable son, what father can chuse but love and like well of? And shall God, the father of all the father-hoods in heaven and earth shew lesse love to his obedient children that are obedientes willing at least to keep a good conscience, and are faithfull in weaknesse, though weak in faith? No: but he will kindly accept of what they are able, and remit the rest: He will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serves him.

Than the which I know not what the good Lord could have spoken more effectually for the setting forth of his own fatherly compassion, or for the setting of our hearts in found consolation. Take it thus,

God will surely shew like mercy and mildenesse to his obedient children in their faults and faculties, in their wants and weaknesses, as the kindest father would do to his dearest son that serves him.

Doct.

SECT. I. 2. 3. 4.

Reasons from God, out of Micah. 7. 18, 19.

This is no new doctrine for (besides that the Text is for us in so many words almost) the man whose eyes are open hath said it, He hath said, who heard the words of God, who saw the visions of the Almighty; God seeth no iniquity in Jacob, nor transgression in Israel. See he doth ('tis true) for he is all eye, and all things are naked and open before him. Yea he seeth enough in the best to provoke the eyes of his glory. For though the crow think her owne bird whitest, and some parents can see nothing amisse in their children, as David in his Adonijah: yet he charged his Angels with folly, and the stars are not pure in his sight. How much less man that is a worme &c. He is neither so blinde as not to behold, nor so fond as not to mislike the least fault in his best childe. For he is of more pure eyes then

Num. 23. 21
Πανόραμος Θεός.
1 King. 1. 6
Jeb 4. 18. 24
25. 5. 6

to

Habuc. 1. 13. to behold evil in whomsoever, with approbation: he cannot look on iniquity, and not shew his displeasure. All which notwithstanding, the truth of this point is irrefragable, and the text alledged is no lesse firm then plain for us: God seeth no sin in his children. For, besides that, he will never throw them to hell, (which is the just hire of the least sin) it's often seen, that he never so much as corrects them, no not with the rods of men, for innumerable sayings and infirmities.

But winking at smal faults, as we say, nay passing by the transgressions of the remnant of his heritage, like as a father pitieth his children, (and pardoneth them their childifhnesse) so the doth lord pitty them that fear him. Lo, he pitieth them, not punisheth them. Or if he do proceed to correction (as he must other whiles, such is our frowardnesse) yet amidst all, he knoweth our frame, he remembreth we are but dust, a peece of earth neatly made up, that we carry our souls as a light in a paper-lanthorne, that our breath in our nostrils, is every moment ready to puffe out, and that therefore if he should alwayes chide, the spirit would fail before him, we should soon faint, and swoon under his hands; wherefore he deals not with us after our sins, nor rewards us according to our iniquities. But as a man chasteneth his son (saith Moses, and he would have us wisely to consider of it too) so the Lord thy God chasteneth thee. Deut. 8. 5. Break their stomackes he will, but not their bones: their hearts but not their heads. And albeit they, (such is their peevishnesse under the rod) give up all for lost, and make desperate conclusions upon their corrections, as Grason did, yet the foundation of God remaineth sure, The Lord knoweth who are his, he knows their souls in adversity. I said in my haste, I am cast out of thy sight. Here was a poor prayer. And yet thou heardest the voice of my prayer (poor though it were) when I cryed unto thee Psal. 31. 22. So Zion (when under the laith) sud, The Lord hath forsaken me, and my God hath forgotten me.

Psal. 103. 13.
14.

Esay 2. 22.

Judg 6. 13.
2 Tim. 2.

Esay 49. 15. 16

Can a woman forget her sucking childe, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, she may forget, and some Tigresses have done it, yet I will not forget thee. Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands &c. Look how a natural mother turns her childe out of doors for dabbling himself, or some other threwd turn, and with a thump on the back bids it be gone a begging, yet when the childe begins once to make a lip, whimper and set up his lure, she takes him in again, and puts him in her bosom: the very like dealing we may read of in God with Ephraim, his dear son, his pleasant childe Hof. 13. 1, 2, 3. &c. Ephraim of trembling and tender conscienced became a flagitious offendour, a desperate idolater. Ver. 1. 2. And was not it high time then to take him in hand? therefore, they shall be as the morning cloud, as the early dew, as the chaffe before the whirl-winde, as the smoke out of the chimney. No lesse then utter desolation is threatened against them. But the Lord soon repents him concerning his servants, witness the words following. Yet I am the Lord thy God, from the land of Egypt: I am thy sole saviour. Here's now mercy in the midst of judgement. Oh but they abuse mercy, forget their God and sin again: Ver. 6. Why therefore God threateneth them again with a more terrible judgement, Ver. 7, 8. Behold I will be unto them as a Lion, and a leopard, as a bear bereft: I will rent the kell of their hearts, and devour them. Oh fearful condition! who would ever think of such, but as of deplored and desperate, yet see the sequel. O Israel, thou hast destroyed thy self, but in me is thy help. Ver. 9. Thou hast done thy utmost utterly to undoe thy self, but yet I have thought of a way for thy help, I will be thy king: where is any other that would save thee (as I do) in all thy cities? And albeit thou art an unwise son, yet I will binde up thine iniquity (as a cancelled bond) and hide thy sin Ver. 12. And although the travels of a sorrowful woman be upon thee, such is thy dulnesse in not coming off roundly with Gods work (with those lively Israelitish women, Exod. 1. 19.) but staying too long in the birth, which might justly be thy death, as it was Rachels, yet I will ransom thee from the power of the grave, I will redeem thee from death. Ver. 14. Ey but for how long? might they say: I shall be (likely) breaking out again, and then thou wilt undoe me, after thou hast done me good. No, saith God, repentance shall be hid from mine eyes. He will not cast away a perfect man, saith Bildad Job 8. 20. The Lord will not cast off for ever, saith Jeremy, but though he cause grief, yet will he have compassion, according to the multitude (or, the magnitude) of his mercies.

Lam. 3. 31, 32.

And

And this was that miracle that amused, so and amased the Prophet Micah, chap. 7. 18. who is a God, saith he, like unto thee that pardoneth iniquity, and passeth by the transgression of his heritage? He retaineth not his anger for ever. And will ye know a reason? That text supplies us with two, (for failing) and both from God. 1. He delights in mercy. 2. He provides for his own glory; as occasioning hereby his pardoned people to praise him, for present, saying as here who is a God like unto thee &c. and to trust him for future. He will turn again, he will have compassion upon us &c. Thou wilt perform thy truth to Jacob, &c. ver. 19. 20.

SECT. II.

The reasons are of two sorts. First respecting God.

First, God will, father-like, pitty and pardon his poor people, because he delights in mercy. Now delight will do any thing as we say. If the sun delight to run his race, who shall stop him? If Solomon delight to search out the secrets of wisdom, what shall be hid from him? If Samson delight in Daliance, what will he not dare to do for it? If Abashueub delight in Esther, what may not she have of him? If the Lord delight in us saith Caleb, then he will bring us into this land of giants, and give it us. As, if he hath no delight in me, said David, behold here I am, let him do to me, as seemeth good to him. But now the Lord doth delight in every David, and will shew him, yea, seal up unto him the sure mercies of day. He delights in mercy saith the Prophet: yea, such a mercy, saith the Apostle, he rejoyleth against judgement, and glories over it, as over his adversary whom he hath subdued. Hence it was that he erected himself of old, not a judgment-seat, but a mercy-seat in the midst of his people, as one that settled himself to shew them mercy. When the Judge sate him down in the gates of Israel, it was to do justice. When the scorner sits him down in the chair of pestilence, he will scoff to some purpose: so now that God sits in his mercy-seat, he will surely shew mercy with ease, yea a multitude of mercies. When a man hath settled himself in his seat, it's supposed he is at ease, and a small matter shall not raise him. God is never more at ease, (as I may say) and better pleased, then when he is in his mercy-seat, in his throne of grace. Hence he is said to rise out of his place, to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity. Esay 26. 21. and to do his work his strange work, when he is to do justice. Esay. 28. 21. It is an act neither so proper to him, for it is his strange work, nor so pleasant to him, for he riseth out of his place to do it, which is a kinde of diseasement, and a pain, to him especially, from whom mercie flows as freely and as naturally as light from the sun, hony from the comb, water from the well-spring. He quits himself in it, as well afraid thereof, he rests in his love, and will seek no farther Zeph. 3. 17. This mercy-seat was the cover of the Ark, where the two tables of the Law lay: to note the blessednesse of those that receive mercy, their iniquity is forgiven, their sin is covered. Again from this mercy-seate, scituate not between the Seraphims, (those flaming executioners of justice Isa. 6.) but between the Cherubims, as ministers of mercy, the Lord shewed himself, and gave forth the lively oracles, as St. Steven stiles them. Once he spake from the burning bush, or smoaking mountain, so terrible that Moses himself said, I exceedingly fear and quake; This was mount Sina in Arabia. But we are come to mount Sion &c. and upon all the glory now there is a covering, or mercy-seat Isa. 4. 5. The tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, Rev. 21. 3. Jerusalem (which is from above) is now called the throne of the Lord, and all nations flock unto it, Jer. 3. God puts them among the children of his love, and saith to each of his, Thou shalt call me, my father, and shalt not turn away from me. Therefore are they before the throne of God (answerable to the ancient mercy-seat) serving him day and night in his temple. Rev. 7. 15. Where the Angel of his presence Jesus Christ offers their services, powring in of his incense with the prayer of all Saints, upon the golden altar which is before the throne Rev. 8. 3. And hence it is, that the good Lord pardoneth every one that pre-

Reas. 1.
Psal 19. 4.
Ecclef. 7. 25.
Numb. 14. 8.
2 Sam. 15. 26.
αγαπᾷ καὶ χῆ-
ται.
Jam. 2. 13.

Psal. 1. 1.
ἐν καρδίᾳ σου
λοιμὸν Sept.

Heb. 4. 16.

Psal. 32. 1.

Act. 7.

Heb. 12. 21.

Jer. 17. 19.

pareth

2 Chr. 30. 18, 19.

pareth his heart to seek God, though he be not cleansed according to the purification of the Sanctuary: that he winks at small-faults, shall I say? and spares them as a man spares his own son that serves him? nay that he pardoneth iniquity, and passeth by transgression or treason: he retaineth not his anger for ever (seem he never so much displeased) and all because mercy pleaseth him: which puts the prophet to his pathetical exclamation by way of wonderment. Who is a God like unto thee &c.

SECT. III.

Reas. 2.

Creta Jovis est imago auribus carens, ait Plutarchus. Non enim convenit audiri ab eo quenquam, qui omnium dominus sit, & princeps. Plut. Mor. Lucianus fingit cancellos in celo, per quos Jupiter certo tempore homines respiciat: quo solummodo tempore petentes exaudiantur. Psal. 48. 10 Tollens iniquitatem, peccatum & scelus: sic enim exprimitur magnitudo clementia, quod non levibus tantum delictis det veniam, sed graviss. quibusque sceleribus. Calvin. ὁ ἀπελευθερώσας. 1 Tim. 1. 14

And that is the rise of our second Reason from God, who therefore spares his people, as a father his childe, that they may 1. praise him for present, yea for ever: that he may fill their mouths with laughter and their tongues with triumph: that they may say among the heathen, The Lord hath done great things for them: that they may say among the saints, Their Rock is not as our Rock, our enemies themselves being judges. Oh who is God like unto thee! The Gods of the Nations are idols. And we know that an idol is nothing, and that of nothing, nothing comes: of such dung-hill deities no mercy is to be expected, they cannot work beyond the sphere of their activity. But our God is in the heavens, and as the heavens are high above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that fear him. He is a great God, and a great King above all Gods. And as himself is great, so is his mercy, and so also is his glory. For, according to thy name O Lord, so also is thy praise unto the ends of the earth. Now what is Gods name? Heare it from his own mouth. Iehovah, Iehovah, God, mercifull and gracious &c. forgiving iniquity, transgression and sin, that is, all sorts of sins though never so heavy, never so heinous: Naturall pollution, actual transgression, stifneckt presumption; all sins, and blasphemies shall be forgiven to the sons of men, saith our Saviour: how much more the involuntary slips of the saints, their unavoidable infirmities, their sins of daily incursion, for which also there is provided a pardon of course, it needs no more but suing out. It is the glory of a man to pass by a transgression, saith Solomon Prov. 19. 11. And it makes no lesse for the glory of God, that he pardons the iniquity of his people, that he multiplyeth pardons, as they multiply sins Esay 55. 7. that where grace aboundeth, then doth grace superabound, or abounds to flowing over, as the word there signifieth: that they cannot commit more, then he will remit. Surely hereby the power of our Lord appears to be exceeding great, and, as true as he liveth, all the earth is thereby filled with the glory of the Lord, as it is Num. 14. 17, 19, 21. He maketh his wonderfull works to be remembred, saith the Psalmist, and that, in nothing more then this, that the Lord is gracious and full of compassion Psal. 111. 4. This makes his people sing and shout Hallelujah, O praise the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever.

SECT. IIII.

Reas. 3.

Psal. 36. 10

Eccles. 1. 8

Next, as they praise him for the present, so they trust him for the future (which is the greatest honour they can do him, as the thistle in Ionathans parable could tell Iudg. 9. 15.) sith every former mercy is a pledge of a future, and every old mercy draws on a new (as the links do one another in a chain) if we break not off their course by our unbelief and diffidence. O continue thy loving kindnesse, saith David. It is in the Hebrew, O draw out thy loving kindnesse to the full length. Gods mercies to his are a continued series, there is a concatenation, a connexion between them. As a spring runneth after it hath run, so doth God spare his, after he hath spared them. The eye is not weary of seeing, nor the eare of hearing, no more is God of shewing mercy. Hence Gods servants have usually argued from what they have had, to what they should have: as David, Paul, and the church here in Micah. She had praised God for his clemency clemency in pardoning her sins, and therefore confidently concludeth for power against sin: If God will cover it, certainly he will cure it. The same mercy that moved him to pass by the transgression of his heritage, will make him turne againe, and have further compassion upon us (say they) in subduing our sins, and casting them all, as a stone into the mighty waters, so that we shall see them no more, any otherwise then the Israelites saw the Egyptians, dead on the shore. And all this he will do for his truth and mercies sake to Jacob and Abraham, for his promise and covenants sake to our fathers of old. Our fathers trusted in thee, they hoped in thee and were not confounded. Oh who is a God like unto thee &c? All nations will walk every one in the name of his God, we also will trust in the name of the Lord our God for ever, and ever. And these are the reasons respecting God.

Mic. 4. 5

SECT. V.

6. Reasons respecting the Saints themselves, wee are 1. pure in heart.
2. perfect in Christ.

A second rank of Reasons respect the Saints, who are 1. Pure in heart 2. Perfect in Christ, and therefore spared, as a man spares his own son that serves him.

First, Gods people are pure in heart: they are washed, they are justified, they are sanctified by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by the spirit of our God. Now: Yet God is good to Israel, to the pure in heart, Psal. 73. 1. Yet for all the sorrow: Yet for all their faults and frailties: which, forasmuch as they disallow, and disclaim, bewail and out-grow, therefore they are not laid to their charge. Iob was a patient man, yea he is set forth as a pattern of patience, notwithstanding all his frowardnesse, notwithstanding he made so many knots, and brake his thread so oft as he did, God accounts of him as if he had spun an even thread of patience all the time of his temptation. David had his faults as great as another; and yet because he was upright in the main, God testifieth of him, that he had followed him with all his heart, and done only that that was right in his sight. 1 King. 14. 8. Solomon at Gibeon climbs those disallowed hills, the high-places, and yet loves the Lord, and is loved of him. God will not see weaknesses, where he seeth truth: so pleasing a thing to him is sincerity in his service. With one breath doth God report both these: The high-places were not removed (that was a great fault no doubt) nevertheless Asa's heart was perfect all his dayes. Such is the mercy of our God to the pure in heart, to those that study purity, that he will not suffer our well-meant weaknesses to bereave us of his favour: he rather pittieeth then plagueth his children for the infirmities of upright hearts. A slender service, a small chare, though but bungled at by a child, is much set by of the father. And a bridegroom thinks nothing the worse of his bride, for a little dirt she hath got, being about some foul chare, it being such especially as she may wash off at pleasure. We have a fountain alwaies open where we may wash and be clean, and a dayly propitiation for dayly transgression, even Jesus Christ the Righteous: in whom

Reas. 1.

1 Cor. 6. 11
Austin answered roundly when one upbraided him with the sins of his youth, Quæ in reprehendis ego damnavi. And when One twitted Beza with his youthly wanton poems, he replied. Hic homo invidet mihi gratiam Christi.

2 Sam. 12. 25

2 Chro. 15. 17

Zach. 13. 1.

1 Joh. 2. 1

SECT. VII.

The Saints are perfect in Christ.

Secondly, our wants are covered, and our works perfected and refined from all the filth and flesh that cleaves unto them. For although the Saints are not so pure in heart, but that their sanctification is still spotted and imperfect; yet their justification by Christs righteousness imputed, is absolute, and without blemish:

Reas. 2.

B b b

According

2 Cor. 5. 21

1 Cor. 1. 30
Jer. 23. 6

Zach. 3. 4, 5

Σικαιδωτα
των αγίων.Daniels Hist.
of England.

1 Cor. 12. 12

According to that, He hath made him to be sinne, or a sinne-offering, for us who knew no sinne, that we might be made the righteousnesses of God (as Osander vainly dreamt) but that perfect obedience both active and passive, of the Son of God, performed unto his Father: by whom he is made unto us wisdom, righteousnesse, &c. yea, Jehovah our righteousness: Which one Name of his would answer all our doubts and objections, had we but skill to spell all the letters in it. This righteousness of Christ (made ours by imputation and acceptance) is that white raiment, Rev. 3. 17. wherewith being clothed, the shame of our nakednesse doth not appear: for it is full broad, large, and wide enough to cover all our imperfections. This is that broyered work, and those bracelets wherewith the Church in Ezekiel being bedight and bedeckt became perfectly beautifull, even to admiration. These are those jewels of gold, with studs of silver, made us by the whole Trinity, Cant. 6. 9. that best robe of the prodigall, that cloth of gold and needle-work-vesture of the royall daughter, Psal. 45. 9. that fair mitre, and change of raiment of Jehoshuah the high-priest; when the Lord took away his filthy garments, and clothed him with better, although Satan, at the same time, stood at his right hand, had the upper hand of him, because (as some will have it) his accusation was as true as vehement.

In short, these are the righteousnessees of the Saints, Revel. 19. 8. the pure Lamb of God having covered us with his own fleece, and, as it were exchanged suits with us: clothing himself with our nature, that he might again clothe us with the divine nature: so that Christ puts on us, and we put on him, (as once Edmund Ironside and Knute the Dane did by exchange of garments, sealing up thereby a sure peace) Christ becomes ours, and we become Christs, and both together make up but one mysticall Christ. For as the body is one, and hath many members: and all the members being many, are but one body: so also is Christ, that is, mysticall Christ, the Church. Now to bring what hath been said home to the point in hand; Look how that King could remember no hostility in Themistocles, whiles he saw in his arms the smiling countenance of his own sonne and heir, whom he had taken up: And as David could discern no defect or deformity in lame Mephiboseth: whiles he beholds in him the feature of his friend Jonathan: so neither doth our heavenly Father regard our infirmities, whiles he looks upon us in the face of Christ, and finds us framed anew, according to the image of Christ, in whom he is abundantly well-pleased.

SECT. VIII.

Let none suck poyson out of this sweet Point.

Use 1.

AAs 1. 18

Deut. 32. 5
Phil. 2. 15

FOR Application: Of this comfortable point, we may well say as the Prophet doth in another case, Esay 28. 9. To whom shall we teach this Doctrine? who is fit to hear and receive it? This is meat for children, not offal for dogs, not draff for swine. Let it therefore be limited to Gods children that fall of infirmity, not laid hold on by his enemies, that go on in iniquity. And that they may not, let us bound the point, and mound it too, that no beast break thorow to this mountain of mercy, lest he be thrust thorow with a dart: that no oxen nor asse fall into this pit, by turning Gods grace into wantonnesse, lest at length he fall into the bottomlesse pit: that no spider suck poyson out of this flower, lest he burst, and his bowels gush out with Judas, and so he go to his place. In a word, that none stumble at this good word of God, being disobedient thereunto, 1 Pet. 2. 8. lest he stumble and fall, and never rise again, Hos. 14. 9. Which to prevent, two things would be considered. First, that though all men have their spots, and therefore deserve not to be spared, yet as wicked mens spots are not the spots of Gods children, so neither is their speed. For their spots first, Hear what God saith of the one; They have corrupted themselves, their spots are not the spots of my children, they are a perverse generation: As of the other; They are, saith he, blamelesse and harmlesse, the sonnes of God, unspotted in the midst of a wicked and wayward genera- generation. Where it is easie to observe, a flat opposition, a palpable difference. The naturall man is all overspread with the bright spot of sins-leprosie. Spots they are and blemishes (saith St. Peter) in the abstract, sporting themselves with their own deceivings, having eyes full of adultery, and that cannot cease to sinne. Such an habit and even necessity of sinne they have, by long trading, contracted; that if the Ethiopian can change his skin, or the leopard his spots, then may they also do good that are inured to evil. Sinne is in such no otherwise then spots are in a leopard, not by accident but by nature: such as no Art can cure, no water wash off: For why? they are not in the leopards skin, but in the flesh and bones, in the sinews, and inwards. And this (to say truth) is the case and condition of us all by nature. Whence also it is, that the just man slips seven times a day, and, in many things we offend all, saith St. James, Apostles and all: and that none can say, his heart is clean. Howbeit, though a godly man sin, yet he doth not commit sin, he doth not sinne sinningly, for his feed remaineth in him. The oil of Gods Spirit wherewith such a one is anointed, setteth the colours (which are of his own tempering) so sure on, and maketh them cleave so fast together, that it is impossible he should return to his own hue. Christ also, that offereth himself without spot to God his Father, hath so purged their consciences from dead works, that they thenceforth serve the living God acceptably, lifting up their faces before him without spot; yea they are steadfast, and need not fear, Job 11.5. Lo, this is the comfortable condition of the children of God. This is their spot on earth, and this is their speed in heaven. But now the ungodly are not so. Neither their spot nor their speed is as that of the Saints. For, first, the lepers lips should be covered according to the law: their breath is infectious and offensive. To the wicked God saith, What hast thou to do to declare my statutes, &c. Psal. 50. 16. Our Saviour suffered not the devils to speak, because he needed not the service of such: high words besit not a fool, saith Solomon. Even David himself (till thoroughly purged from his two more grievous finnes) was suspended from the comfort of the covenant, and disabled for holy duties, Psal. 51. 15. For, know ye not, saith He, that the Lord hath set apart the godly man for himself. And thence inferres, the Lord will hear when (as such a One) I call unto him. But if I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me. If I cast but a leering look toward some lust, or have but a moneths mind to it. If there be in me but an irresolution against any evil, much more a deliberate purpose to run into it; God, that cannot see evil, will not hear the prayers, nor bear the manners of such a David. How much lesse of gracelesse and profane persons, whose whole lump is leavened, whose whole hide is spotted, whose whole frame is corrupted, being evil, onely evil, and evill continually. Who, lastly, are so transformed into sinne, that it is even predicated of them: according to that of the Prophet; What is the transgression of Jacob? is it not Samaria? And what are the high-places of Judah? are they not Jerusalem? God as he seeth no sinne in his children, so he seeth nothing else but sinne in others: Their morall virtues are with him but splendida peccata, glistering finnes: their civil praises nothing set by, Jer. 8. 8. Sinne in such is said to be the old man, as if sinne were alive, and the men dead: as if they were totally turn'd and transform'd into finnes image. What marvel then though the Lord be farre from the wicked, when he heareth the prayer of the righteous, Prov. 15. 29. They sacrifice flesh for the sacrifice of mine offerings and eat it, but the Lord accepts it not. Now (even amidst their sacrifices) will he remember their iniquity, and visit their finnes, Hof. 8. 13. Where it is remarkable that in scorn He calleth their sacrifices flesh, ordinary flesh, such as they sell in the shambles. See the like, Jer. 7. 21. And in a like sence, Hof. 9. 4. Their bread for their soul shall not come into the house of the Lord, that is, the bread for their naturall sustenance. The Prophet speaks thereof that meat-offering, Levit. 2. 5. appointed for a spirituall use; yet called the bread for their life or livelihood, because God esteemed it no other then common-meat. Semblably, such (now-adayes) as come in their finnes to the Lords Supper, they receive the bare elements, and because no more, a curse with them. Obed-Edom was blessed for the Ark, the Philistines cursed: wheresoever the Ark came amongst them, there came destruction. The ordinances, if they be not proper to men, are deadly. God saith of those that frequent them, as Solomon said of

2 Pet. 2. 19

Jer. 13 23

Non datur malum punicum in quo non inest granum putre, dixit Crates. 1 Joh. 3. 9 μακαριον εστωσι.

Quia non indigebat immundorum laude. Neque enim speciosa laus in ore peccatoris. Theophyl. in Luc. 4. 3. 1 sal. 66. 16 In Græcorum sacris sacerdos exclamabat. τίς τῷ θεῷ; quis hic? Respondebant qui aderant. πολλοὶ τῷ θεῷ: τε ἀγαθοὶ. Eras. ἐπεὶ πᾶσι ὁμοῦ. Act. 13. 8 In fermento tota jacet uxor. Plaut. Mic. 1. 5. Tabulus quidam paulo supra Ciceronem prator fuit: honor in proelio improbus, ut ejus nomen non hærrens sed vitii esse videretur. Lips. antiq. lect.

Panem Domini, non panem Dominum.

1 Kin. 1. 52.

Adonijah, if he will shew himself a worthy man, there shall not an hair of him fall to the earth : but if wickednesse shall be found in him, he shall dye.

SECT. VIII.

Reproof of such as censure hardly of God

Ulc. 2.

Luk. 19. 21. 22

Num. 14. 3.

Gal. 5. 3:
Rom. 6Neh. 8. 10.
Psal. 119. 24.
2 Cor. 12. 9.

NExt here's ground of just and sharp reproof of sundry such, as being otherwise very honest and good people, are yet herein much to be blamed and censured that they censure so ill of God, worse of themselves, and worst of all others.

For God first, they repute and report him an austere man, a strict and severe Lord, a hard and rigorous task-master, such as reaps where he sowed not, gathers where he scattered not, exacts more then he affords requires more then they are able to perform. Now if they were ungodly and irreligious men that thus quarrelled their Lord, as once those murmurers in the wilderness were, that esteemed Gods house a prison-house, of greater bondage and baseness then Egypt it self, it were the lesse to be wondered at, and the better to be born withal. For such being out of Christ are yet under the rigor and coaction of the law, as it requires perfect obedience, and that by their own strength : which because it is impossible, as now, they die without mercy. But for a childe of God that is no longer under the law but under grace, that hath Christ formed already in his heart, of whose fulnesse he hath received grace for grace, that hath the spirit of God for his guide, the joy of God for his strength, the word of God for his learned counsel, and the grace if God to be sufficient for him ; sufficient, I say, to supply that which is wanting, to forgive that which is committed, to impute Christs righteousness, to uphold him in his weaknesses, to raise and restore him in his lapses, and in all to spare him as a man spares his own son that serveth him, what reason is there that such a man should complain of a hard master, or cry out of an unreasonable task ? indeed if God would accept of no service, but that which is perfect, bear with no failings, though never so involuntary, cast out every such thing as were not cleansed according to the purification of the sanctuary, there were no dealing with him, no standing before him, no encouragement to come anear him, in his works and worships. If thou Lord shouldest mark iniquities, saith the Psalmist, O Lord, who should stand ? But there is forgiveness with thee, that thou mayest be feared, that is served (which else thou wouldest not.) And upon this ground let Israel hope in the Lord, (not run away from him and repine against him as Cain did, for that were to add iniquity to their sin, as Samuel told the terrified people 1 Sam. 12. 20, 21, for with the Lord there is mercy, (the most powerful attractive Rom. 12. 1. to those that have not put off humanity : whence the cords of kindness are called the cords of a man Hos. 11. 6. not to be drawn to God by them, is bestial) and with him is plenteous redemption, a cornu copia of comfort, a horn of salvation, enough and enough for us all, were we never so many of us. He shall redeem Israel from all his iniquities, Psal. 130. 3, 4, 7, 8. Be not ye therefore murmurers against God, as some of them also murmured, and were destroyed of the destroyer : sith those thins were written for our admonition upon whom the ends of the world are come.

SECT. IX.

Reproof of such saints as censure hardly of themselves, and their performances.

1 Cor. 10. 10.
11.

SEcondly, such of Gods servants as are here censurable as censure over-hardly of themselves, as if no children, because not obedient in all things, as it were meet. These are those over much wicked Eccles. 7. 17. (according to some) that that will needs condemn themselves to die before their time; think too vilely of their own persons and performances, denie, if not, belie the work of Gods grace in their hearts, not wisely distinguishing betwixt nullity of grace and imperfection, weaknesse and utter want of it, to their I know nor how great spiritual hurt and hinderance.

These consider not that the law admits of a dispensation in the gospel, that the tenour of the new covenant requires no set measures of grace, and that if there be a willing minde. God accepts according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not; takes any thing in good worth where there is a desire of doing better, and for the rest spares us as a man spares his own son that serves him. Away then with that male-contented sowerneesse seen in some saints also, Gods whinnels you may call them; for they are ever crying and pining, when they should rather sing at their work, and rejoyce in their priviledges: this would please their father best, as if a man have ever a little cricket among his children that will be merry and make him merry, this is the fathers darling. Oh blessed are those that dwell in thine house, saith David, they shall be alwayes praising thee. Psal. 84.4. And for nothing more, surely, then for this fatherly and gracious disposition towards thy poor servants that desire to fear thy name, are willing in all things to keep a good conscience pleasing God. Lo the very will to do well pleaseth God, if sincere, and seconded with strifes, and attended with grief for coming short of what we should do. Hearty humiliation under weaknesse in well-doing, is as true a signe of sanctification, and fruit of conversion as abilitie to do better.

Neh. 1.
Heb. 12. 18.

Now I demand, which of Gods children doth not thus much? and whether in doing hereof they cannot, or at least may not finde sweetest acceptance, and surest recompence? Consider, is not Abraham said to have sacrificed his son, because he would have done it? And for David, had not he for his bare purpose of building God an house, this promise made him, that God would build his house for ever? And albeit that very purpose of his was ignorantly and fondly taken up, as wanting warrant from God, 2 Sam. 7.7. yet the Lord both graciously approves it, for thou didst well, saith he, in that thou wast so minded 2 Chron. 6.8. and bountifully rewards it, by fulfilling that with his hand, that he had promised with his mouth, as Solomon thankfully acknowledgeth. God takes not advantages against his servants, as he might, but makes the best of every thing where the heart is upright.

Heb. 11. 11.

1 Chron. 6. 14

The good women that came with their spices to embalm our Saviours dead body, should have known that God would not suffer his holy one to see corruption, that his body could not have putrified: it was their ignorance, and yet they are commended for their good intentions. So afterwards, when they came to look for the living among the dead, they deserved a chiding for not remembring what he had foretold them of his resurrection, but receive a comforting from the Angels. Math. 28.5.

Psal. 16.

Luk. 24. 1.

The preparations of the heart are of great price with God Esay. 55. 1. Jer. 50.2. Hath he not promised to blesse our buds, so that we shall grow up as the willows by the water-courses, to be as the dew to his people, to that they shall grow as the lilly, and cast forth their roots as Lebanon. Hos. 14 4,5. to open a door to such as have but a little strength, and such a door as none can shut? to supply all our necessities out of the riches of his glory? Hath he said all this for our encouragement, who is the Amen, the faithful and true witnesse, and shall we not by faith subscribe & seal to it? Do we yet doubt and demur with Zachary? do we yet stagger at the promises with Sarah? do we question Gods either power or patience with Moses at Meribah? Oh take heed lest a promise, nay a covenant (which is a whole bundle of promises, like a cluster of the grapes of Canaan) a league of love being left us; any of us should seem to fall short through unbelief Heb. 4.1. Certain it is that God, that will bear much with his children in other cases, can least of all brook their unbelief. For this is as for a childe to question his fathers love, though he protest it never so deeply, which is an extream-provocation. Hence his severity to his best servants, for offending in this kinde. Zachary shall speak no more

Esa. 44. 2,3,4.

Rev. 3. 8,9
Phil. 4. 19.

Luk. 1

Heb. 11. 11

Deut. 32. 52

1 Cor. 10. 11

Colos. 2

Prov. 25. 16

words for nine moneths, because he beleevd not the Angels words that spake good unto him. Sarah is checkt for her laughing at the unlikelyhood, though she overcame the doubt, judged him faithfull that had promised, and by her faith received power to conceive seed. Those two disciples going to Emaus heard, O foolies and slow of heart &c. and the other eleven were reprov'd for their unbelief. Mar. 16. 14. Moses also and Aaron were deny'd the comfort of an earthly Canaan, because they beleev'd not God to sanctify him at the rock Rimmon. Now all these things hapned unto them for types to us, and are written for our admonition &c.

Be not ye therefore unbelievers, but beleve: turne not the back of the hand to the promise, that as a staffe should support you: spoile not your soules by a cruell modesty, by a false humility of the comfort God affords you: but having found honey, cate it: beleve the prophets and ye shall prosper: see your names written in this and other precious promises: and if ye cannot out-reason the devill who seekes to unsettle you, yet out-will him, and say, I will not be blasted out of my beleife, I will not cast away my confidence, or be drawne from the hornes of the Altar Christ Jesus. If I must dye, I will dye at his feet who hath promised to spare me, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him.

SECT. X.

Reproove of such as uncharitably censure others.

Jam. 3. 1

Esay 65. 5
Jude 19.

Luk. 9. 54

LASTly, such are here met with as superciliously censure others, for those things that God is content to passe by and pardon in them: that will needs be many masters, as St. James hath it, and judge another mans servant: that step into Gods seat of judicature, and presume to passe hard sentence upon their fellow servants, because not so forwardly and forth-putting as themselves forsooth. Yea, there want not such unbridled spirits as stick not to forestall the angels office of severing the elect from the reprobats, to condemne the race of the righteous, to excommunicate them for some frailties and infirmities out of their consciences and companies, yea to unchurch them and to unbrother them in a passion: despising Christs little ones, casting dirt on his Jewels, and estranging themselves from such in affection, in countenance, in society, for every small infirmity: as if they were akin to those hypocrits in Esay that cry, stand apart; or those wandring starres in St. Jude, that separate themselves, sensuall, having not the spirit, which yet they make great boasts of; or at least, to those inconsiderat sons of Zebedee, who would needs have set fire from heaven straight, &c. were therefore told, ye know not of what spirit ye be. Not of his spirit surely that came not to be served, but to serve, not to judge, but to save.

For cure of this corrupt humour, Consider.

Zach. 4. 10

Heb. 10. 24

1. Is this to be followers of God as deare children, and to walk as we have him for an example? Or would you be content God should deale thus rigidly with you? I trow not. He seeth noe sin in his children, such is his love, and shall we be juster then God? Christ will not quench but cherish the least spark of grace that is in any; and shall we be wiser then Christ? The holy ghost disdaineth not to dwell in the darke and smoaky chambers of their hearts; And shall we be holier then he? who is this that hath despised the day of small things? for they shall rejoyce &c. saith God to those Jewes that wept and slighted the second temple. Hag. 2. 3.

2. The Authour to the Hebrews bids us study one another, and take notice of such things only in our brethren, as may whet on love, not that engender dislike, Pitch upon such things as are amiable, and passe by the rest. This is love, and this is to be like unto God who is love. There was nothing good in all Sarahs speech Gen. 18. 12. but only this, that she calles her husband lord: and yet for this, God praiseth her, setting it as a pearle in a gold-ring to her eternal com-commendation 1 Pet. 3. 6. There was nothing almost but sin in Rahabs entertainment of the spies, and in the midwives excuse to the King, and yet Rahab is re-gifted among the ancient beleivers, and God builded the midwives houses, that is, gave them children (as some interpret it) in lieu of their care for preferring the Hebrew children. Nay for a patern of ingenuity and candour to us, he gives the very devills also their due, praising in them what is praise-worthy, when he stiles them principalties, powers, Rulers &c. who yet sin against him of malicious wickednes. And shall we unchristianly conceal, or but dissemble the better parts and practises of our weaker brethren, and fasten only upon that they may draw on dislike or disaffection? This is with the crow to light upon carrion, and prefer it before sweeter food. This is with the fly to fasten on the sore, passing by the sounder places of the body. This is with the vultures, to hunt after dead carcasses, and with swine turn'd into a garden, to root in the muck-kill, if any such be there, not once taking notice of the fruits and sweets. Sure it is, that if a man should do nothing else but pore upon his own infirmities, he would, in short space, loath and abhor himself with Iob: how much more if God should break up that sink of sin that is in us, as in Judas, should we never be able to abide the stench thereof.

Rivet in Exod.

Vultures ad male olentia feruntur.

3. Is it not sufficient that the wicked censure us for hypocrites, factionists, humourists &c. watch for our haltings, making a man an offendour for a word, and turning aside the just for a thing of nought Esay 29. 21? barking and blaspheming for every small matter, but that we must thus fall out amongst our selves, and thus foule upon one another? Is it not enough that the Pharisees quarrell Christs disciples for not fasting, but Iohns disciples must joine with them, and be first in the quarrell? Mar. 2. 18, Mat. 9. 14. should'st thou sit and speak against thine own mothers son? Psal. 50. 20.

Res commiseranda cum pij fratres &c. Carw: in loc.

4. Consider lastly, the evill that redounds here-hence to our selves. For a censorious christian subjects himself to the judgment both of God Mat. 18. 34. Iam. 3. 4. and men, Mat. 7. 1, 2. Luke 6. 38. Good men will suspect such, bad men scorn them, and all shun them, and desire to be rid of them. Besides, it may be just in God to leave such to themselves, and to give them over to the power of the like temptation, or worse, Gal. 6. 1. that they may learne to lend that mercy too thers that now they are compell'd to borrow of others.

Scalig: dere poet: cap. 16. gives this proud and unmannerly censure. Gorbii bellua: Scoti non minus: Angli perfidi.

inflati, feri, contemptores, solidi, amentes, inertes, inhospitales, immanes. One comes after and censures him thus: His bolt you see, is soon shot, and so you may happily guesse at the quality of the Archer.

SECT. XI.

Exhortation to put our selves into Gods service.

THirdly, this Doctrine may serve for justification: and first to those without, that are yet to chuse their master; let them learne to pitch upon God alone, and to put themselves, as soon as may be, into his service: sith he looketh upon every servant as a child, and useth them accordingly. Time was when the kingdom of heaven suffered violence, and men throng'd into it. when the people were so forward to serve God with the best of their substance, that they brought more then enough for the works of the Tabernacle Exod. 36. 6. When men called upon themselves and one another, with Come, let us go up to the house of the Lord &c. In which voyage they passed from strength to strength, went many a deare mile, and many a weary step, till they came to see the face of God in Sion. And yet how did they see it otherwise then in the dark glass of the ceremonies, and not with that evidence of vision and nearnesse of acquaintance that we now see and serve him? Time was when the people in Ioshua's dayes were set to serve God. And notwithstanding he told them, Ye cannot serve the Lord: for he is a holy God, he is a jealous God, he will not forgive your transgression, nor your

Ufe. 3.

Esay. 2. 1

Psal. 84.

Iosh. 24. 18.

sin:

Eſay 56.6

Pſal. 110. 2, 3

Exod. 25. 2

ſin: which was enough in likelihood to have quailed and cooled them, yet they reſolutely replied, Nay, but we will ſerve the Lord, as not knowing how better to prefer themſelves, or provide for their poſterity. How is it then that we ſeek not after his ſervice, that we hire not our ſelves into his houſe, ſith his work is ſo fair, his wages ſo great? that we put not our necks under his yoke, ſith it is ſo eaſy? that we bear not his burden, ſith it is ſo light (no more burden to a man then wings are to a bird?) that we love not to be his ſervants, ſith he rules with ſo much love and lenity? that we come off no more roundly with his buſineſſe, as a free-hearted people, ſith he is content to take up with ſo little? But we are ready rather to ſhift off that little as Ionaſ did his journey to Niniveh. Virtus volentium nulla eſt. He that does good with an ill will, does ill. God ſtrains upon no man, Exod. 25. 2. neither likes he that ſervice that is wretched from us, as Pharaoh's, or wrung out of us as verjuice is out of a crab. He loves a cheerfull giver: and therefore when he calls for an offering, he wills that every man give it willingly with his heart. And that none may pretend cauſe to hang off, ſee how low he ſtoops. Content he is to accept of a lamb or two for a ſacrifice. And if that be too much, and a man want means for a lamb, let him bring a pair of turtles, or two ſmall pigeons, and it ſhall be taken. Or if he cannot reach to that, a handfull or two of flower, with a corn or two of ſalt ſhall ſuffice. Levit. 14. 10, 21, 31, 32. And it is often repeated for the encouragement of weak ones. Looke, what a man is able, according to his ability, even what his hand is able to reach unto, and it ſhall be accepted. Now is not this motive ſufficient to ſet in, and go on to lay the laſt ſtone of Gods ſpiritual building with joy? He rules not over his ſervants with rigour, as the Egyptians did over the Iſraelites: he puts them to no drudgery, as the Iſraelites did the Gibeonites: but meaſuring the deed by the deſire, and the deſire by the ſincerity, he takes all in good part that they do willingly, though never ſo weakly: And for what's wanting in their work, he ſpares them as a man ſpares his own ſon that ſerves him. To conclude this firſt Exhortation, He requires no more of us then he gives, and gives ſo much as ſhall ſuffice to his acceptation. How is it then that we ſtand here idle all day long, and do not lay our bones to work in his Vineyard?

SECT. XII.

Give God the glory of his fatherly goodneſſe.

NExt, we addreſſe this Exhortation to Gods faithfull children. And ſo this doctrine of his fatherly dealing with ſuch as ſerve him in ſincerity ſhould inforce upon them a threefold duty. 1. of thankfulneſſe to God. 2. of mercy to men, 3. comfortable enjoyment of themſelves. Let God be praised, our brethren pittied, and our ſelves ached.

For God firſt, how ſhould we not only juſtify him from hard ſuſpicions and aſperſions of rigour; but alſo glorify him for his ſingular love to us herein, that he is content to take any thing well at our hands, that is but done with honeſt hearts. To quicken you hereunto conſider 1. that he requires no more of us then he gives. 2. gives us to do what he requires. 3. makes the beſt of that little we do, and remits the reſt.

Firſt, he requires no more then he gives, expects not the gain of ten talents, where he hath given but five, nor of five, where he hath beſtowed but one: but that every man be doing ſomething according to his modell, and meaſure of grace received. Cursed be that cozener, ſaith the Prophet, that hath in his flock a male, and ſacrificeth to the Lord a corrupt thing. But he is not accuſed that brings no better, becauſe he hath no better to bring. Of a little God is content to take a little; as in Jeroboams ſon, in whom there was found a little good, and God took him for it, and as in the Church of Philadelphia, who had but a little ſtrength, and yet for that little is highly commended. and not blamed for any thing as the reſt rest were. Where no gold was to be had, goats-hair was as well accepted. The poor widow went as farr with her two mites, as some other with two millions. And those beggars that never were able to deal an almes, shall yet hear, Come ye blessed &c. for ye fed me hungry, clothed me naked &c. that is, ye would have done it if it had laine in your power; and to what ye were able, ye were not backward.

Mal. 1. 14.

Secondly, he gives us to do that which he requires to be done: which made Austin pray; Give Lord what thou commandest, and then command what thou wilt. I will put my Spirit into you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, saith God in the new-covenant. Christ will not break the bruised reed, nor quench the smoaking flax. Every man cannot be a strong pillar, as James and Cephas, or a flaming torch, a burning and a shining light in Gods house, as John Baptist. What though he be but a bruised reed? Christ will not break him. What though he be but a smoaking week of a candle? Christ will not quench him. A smoaking week is offensive to the smell, and is soon quenched, according to that, Esay 43. 17. they are quenched as tow, which is a thing soon done. But Christ will not do it tho: but he will attemper himself to their infirmity, till he hath supplied them with light more full, and strength more solid: till he hath brought forth judgement to victory, that is, a smaller measure of grace to full perfection of conquest over whatsoever corruption. He will not reject the corn for the chaffe, the wine for the dregs, the gold for the drosse, but purging out all our drosse, and taking away all our rinne, Esay 1. 25. he will correct and cure us of all wants and weakneses, till we come to a perfection of purity, Ephes. 5. 26. to the full measure of a man in Christ, Ephes. 4. 13.

Thirdly, he makes the best of that little we do, when he perceives it to proceed from great love: as in Mary that loved much, and out of her love anointed Christs head with that precious ointment. It is likely that she had no further intent then to shew her love in doing our Saviour that honour, usuall at feasts, and to refresh his spirits by the sweet scent of that ointment. But the Spirit of God directed that fact for a funerall-service: and Christ defends her against Judas and the rest, that she had done it against the day of his buriall, Joh. 12. 7. In the same Chapter, at his triumphant riding into Jerusalem, the children sang, the disciples shout, Hosanna in the highest: the Pharisees fret at both, the Lord Christ defends both. The children he defendeth from Psal. 8. 2. Out of the mouth of babes, &c. the disciples he defendeth from the necessity of their duty, wherein had they failed, the very stones would cry out, Luk. 19. 36, 40. And yet the Disciples themselves (how much lesse the children?) understood not what they did at that time. Indeed, when Jesus was glorified, then that they had done these things unto him, Joh. 12. 16. But that whether ignorance, or incogitancy was never laid to their charge, through Gods fatherly love, and indulgence to his, whom he spareth as a man spares his own sonne that serves him: and is therefore to be praised of them throughout all eternity.

SECT. XIII.

Bear with others weakneses, and forbear harsh censures.

SEcondly, Let Gods Saints be exhorted to look (as God doth) upon the infirmities of their brethren with a more favourable, and forbearing eye: not thinking it strength of grace to endure nothing in the weaker sort, but bearing with them, and believing all things, straining to a good opinion of them, where there is but the least probability to indure it, 1 Cor. 13. 7. Take not up every evil report you hear of another from a tale-bearer, as you do wares from a pedler: but frown upon such, and be ready to make apology. In particular. 1. Judge no man by the outward appearance, or common-hearsay: for so you may beseem to condemn a dear child of God, and approve a detestable heretike, an incarnate devil. St. Pauls companions, that were the very glory of Jesus Christ, 2 Cor. 8. 23. were counted the sweepings of the world, and off-scouring of all things. The precious sonnes

Revel. 3. 7
Ο οὐρανός σου
περὶ πλά-
σιός σου
Ναζ.
Quicquid vis
et non potes, factum Deus
reputat. Aug.

Ezek. 36. 27

Gal 2. 9
Joh. 5.
Mat. 12. 20, 21

Joh. 12. 7

Confiteatur Lutherus se esse
Apollonem, sed Lestum, qui fidem diabolo
datam non ser-
vavit.

sonnes of Sion, comparable to fine gold, were esteemed as earthen pitchers, Lam.
4. 2. Athanasius was impeached by the Arrians of adultery. Basil by his brethren of heresie. Luther by the Papists of Apostacy. Austere John is said to have a devil. Sociable Christ to be a wine-bibber. And it was the worse because from Scribes and Pharisees, whose word must carry such credit with it, as alone to condemn Christ. We would not have brought him to thee, were he not worthy of death.
And whose life must be a rule to others, Do any of the Pharisees beleeve in him?
Take heed therefore what you hear, and to whom you give credit.

O J. But may I not beleeve mine own eyes? judge the tree by the fruits?
Matth. 7.

Sol. Not alwayes in matter of fact. Our Saviour speaks there of heretikes and se-ducers; and bids judge of them by their fruits, that is, by their doctrines and opinions that are corrupt and carnall. But for point of practise, the best tree doth not alwayes bear, or not alwayes alike: An apple-tree may have a fit of barrennesse as well as a crab-tree: or the fruit may be nipt sometimes by a frost. God onely knows what sap is in the root, what truth is in the heart: and let him that knows it, judge of it.

2. Be favourable in sinnes strengthened by naturall inclination, or by long continued custome (which is not so easily broke off,) or by multitude of temptations and enticements. The best minds when troubled yeeld inconsiderate motions: as water that is violently stirred sends up bubbles: and how often have carnall respects drawn weak goodnesse to disguise it self with sinne?

3. Judge no man by that he is in a passion, whether of grief, fear, or anger:
for these are violent, and have made the holiest in their behaviour little lesse then bestiall: witnesse David in his fear of Sauls fury, in his roaring over Abolom, and rage at Nabal. Passions like kine in a narrow passage ride one upon another; and like heavy bodies down steep hills, once in motion they know no ground but the bottom. Oh how subject are Gods best Saints to weak passions! and if they have the grace to ward an expected blow, how easily are they surprized with a sudden foil! Sometimes both grace and wit are asleep in the holiest and wariest breasts:
and the wisest are miscaried by their passions to their cost. What shiprack of his faith and patience had meek Moses well-nigh made against the Rock Rimmon. As, at another time how did he in a sudden indignation cast away the two-Tables, and abandon that which he would, in cold blood, have held faster then his life?
But passion doth so bemist the clearest judgement otherwhiles, that a man shall bee apt to think there is sence in sinning, and that he hath some reason to be mad.

4. Censure not any to be either better or worse for some particular action, but consider what his main bent is, and accordingly conceive of him. David that saith his sinnes were more then the hairs of his head, saith also, (in respect of his generall resolution, and full purpose of heart) I have not declined from thy statutes, neither is there any way of wickednesse in me. Saint John looked upon the Lady, and her children, as elect, because they walked in the truth, though not without some particular stumblings, and aberrations. And Saint Paul was confident of the Thessalonians election, though so compassed with infirmities, that he doubted he had laboured in vain, and feared their Apostacy, 1 Thes. 3. 5.
Periwaded also he was better things of the Hebrews, and such as accompany salvation, though he found them slow of foot, and dull of hearing, and frights them with the terrour of the Lord upon Apostates. Who can promise himself free-dome from grosse infirmities, when Aaron that went up into the mount comes down, and doth that in the valley which he heard forbidden in the hill? Gods best children may not onely be drenched in the waves of sinne, but lie in them for a time, and perhaps sink twice to the bottom, before they recover.
Sudden indeliberate out-bursts, contrary to the generall bent and purpose, break not the league betwixt God and his people, as the robberies done by Pirates of either Nation do not betwixt King and King. A good man is habitually good when actually evil, and an evil man is habitually evil, when actually good. He that goes up a hill, may have many slips and falls, yet is still said to be going up the hill, because his face is toward the top. A sheep may

2 Joh. 1. 4

1 Thes. 1. 4

Heb. 6. 9

may slip into a ditch, as he is leaping over it, yea lye there some time till the shepherd finde it and help it out. Behold, I, even I will both search my lost sheep, and seek them out saith the Lord. I will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away, and will binde up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick. I will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in the cloudy and dark day. Christ the good shepherd tiddeth his lambs, dyed for their ignorance Heb. 7. 7. bare their infirmities Esay 53. breeds a first love in his little ones, and gives charge that none despise them, much lesse discard them, no, though they go astray as David did like a lost sheep. And mark his reasons, God despiseth them not Math 18. 10. but sent his son to seek them, and sets his Angels to tend and look to them; therefore let none set light by them.

Ezek. 34. 11,
12. 16.
Rev 24.
Psal. 119. 176

SECT. XIV.

Take comfort and courage notwithstanding infirmities and failings in the manner.

Lastly, this doctrine methinks might make the servants of God everlastingly merry: it should wonderfully clear up the countenances and cheer up the hearts of all Gods chosen: it should banish and bar out of their blessed souls all their unnecessary scruples, distrusts, dejections and discouragements arising from the sense of their manifold defects, distractions in duty, indisposition, ignorance, forgetfulness, omissions, or failings in the manner.

All which, so long as they are grieved under, grieved at, and striven against, God will never impute unto them: nay, he will spare them as a man spares his own son that serves him. Now how that is they can well tell that are parents of to-wardly and tractable children, that are good-natured, and well-conditioned. And yet they cannot neither, be they never so tender, and their children never so tractable: sith there is no more comparison betwixt their mercy and his, then is betwixt a molehill and a mountain, nay the least drop of a bucket, and the main Ocean. Yea, I dare be bold to say, that all the mercies of all the fathers, mothers, husbands, wives, friends, allies in the world, compared to his mercy, are mere cruelty.

Peccata nobis
non nocent si
non placent.
Augustin.

This makes the Prophet as having no other way to utter it, vent himself by an exclamation, Oh how excellent is thy loving kindnesse O God! The clouds may commend thy faithfulness, the mountaines thy righteousness, the great deep thy judgements, but who or what can set forth thy goodness? Psal. 36. 5, 6, 7. It is beyond all that heart of man can conceive, or tongue of Angels expresse. Having therefore such a mercy to make use of, such a father to do service unto, how is it that we are so dull and disconsolate? how is that we serve not the Lord, with gladnesse, and come before him with singing? Psalm 100. 2.

A son feeling the love of his father, creeps neerer under his wing, or elbow, and is welcom. So here.

Yea, but I am so weak, and worthlesse, that I doubt much whether I am a childe or not.

Obj.

How weak? say thou be no stronger then a childe newly quickned in the womb, the very first-springings in the womb of grace are precious before God. Co. 2. 13. And you hath he quickned, to assure the weak (saith One) that though they be but as the childe that lies in the womb, and have not so much as the strength of a babe new-born, they are accepted with God.

Sol.

Quickned I trust I am, saith another, and born anew to God: but its so little I know, and lesse that I can do, that I have no great joy of my self: for though God spareth some, yet it is as a father spares his son that serveth him.

Obj.

A

work of his hands, so that a little one shall be come a thousand, and a small one a strong nation. I the Lord will hasten it in his time Esay 60. 21.

4. You have more cause of comfort in that little you have, then of discouragement in that more that you want: sith it is a far greater work to beget grace where it is not, then to increase it where it is.

Look therefore on others bitterneffe for imitation and incitation, but not for slavish dejection and self-blinding. Disgrace not thine own graces because of other mens perfections and precedencies: but be thankfull if Christ be formed in thee to any degree, and that thou hast any thing to do about God. Only whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all thy might. And then, be that followeth after righteousness as a servant followeth his trade whereto he is bound apprentice (though he be far from being his trades-master) he shall have honour and life, honour in earth, and life in heaven. Prov. 21. 21.

Yea but displeasing service is double dishonour, because we displease God in that act, wherein he specially lookes to be pleased.

Obj.

I grant that a powerlesse performance of holy duties, proceeding from a spirit of sloth joyned with presumption, so highly provoketh God against his own dear children, that he hath much a doe to forbear killing them, as he had to forbear Moses when he met him in the Inne. Ready he is to have a blow at them, as he had at David when he brake his bones, and felt his fall to his dying-day. But they that see and sigh under their wants and weakneses with shame and sorrow need not be discomforted. Christ appeares for them in heaven with their names upon his bosom, and their services in his hand, which he not only presents but perfumeth; not only puts them up, but adds weight to them: nonsuting and casting out of the court all accusations, and allegations made against them either by sin or Satan: and drowning their noise by that blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things then the blood of Abel.

Sol.

Psal. 51

Heb. 12.

This he doth for them in heaven: as on earth, he is touched with the feeling of their infirmities, and hath taken order with their enemies for their security Joh. 18. 8. and with their friends for their kinde acceptance, commanding the stronger to receive them into their affections Rom. 12. 1. and to restore them in their outstraies Gal. 6. 1. promising also to give strength to him that fainteth, and to increase power to him that hath no strength. Even the youths (that trust to their own strength, or to any measure of grace acquired, which is but a creature, and to trust in it, is to trust in the arme of flesh; so those youths) shall faint and be weary: and the young men shall utterly fall. But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength: they shall mount up with wings as Eagles, they shall run, and not be weary, and they shall walk, and not faint. Esay 40. 29, 30, 31.

In regard of the Authours absence, and the misplacing of his Copy, the Reader is desired to referre this Exposition of the 18. ver. of the 3. Chapter to its proper place.

Verse 18. Then shall ye returne] you wicked blasphemers that have slandered Gods house-keeping, and brought up an evill report of his providence and justice; as if in managing the matters of the world, he were lesse equall, or lesse carefull: You, I say, shall returne, not to your right minds by a through conversion, by an entire change of the whole man, from evill to good (alasse for your misery, tis past time of day with you for any such good work:) But you shall alter your opinions, when your eyes are once uncealed by the extremity of your sufferings

Plin.
Prov. 12. 26
Eph. 4. 30
Dan. 11. 21
Vajall's Christi. Socrat.

suffering. (as the Moles eyes are said to be, when pangs of death are upon her) to see and acknowledge a sensible difference between the righteous (ever more excellent than his neighbour, let him dwell where he will: because sealed up to the day of redemption) and the wicked who is but a vile person, an ens (let him be as great as Antiochus Epiphaneus the great King of Syria) between him that serveth God, accounting it the highest honour to be his vassall, as Constantine; Theodosius and Valentinian their Emperours) called themselves: And him that serveth him not, but casteth off the yoke of his obedience, being a son of Belial; and counteth it the only liberty to live as he lists, and not to be ruled by God.

Then shall ye returne ] Then when it is too late, when the day of grace is past, the gates of grace gone over, the gate shut, the draw-bridge taken up. Then shall ye wretched lingerers and loyterers Epimetheuses, postmasters, after-wits, that come in at length with your fooles Had-I-wist, returne, nor as the Prodigall did, who seasonably and savingly came to himself Luk. 15. 17. having bin before utterly bestraght, and quite beside himself, by the deceitfulness of sin, called foolishnesse of madnesse Eccles. 7. 25. nor as those true converts mentioned in Solomons prayer, that bethinke themselves and repent, and make supplication to their judge: But as Judas; who, whilst he playd alone, wan all, but haunted with the furies of a guilty conscience, which would needs make one with him, he repented after a sort, with a penitentie serva Iscariotica, as Pareus calleth it, had some after-thoughts, but not to a transmutation; some inward wamblings, but they boyied not up to the full height of a godly sorrow, and therefore came to nothing. Or, as James Abbes, with his hideous All too late, All too late: So these wicked ones in the text, when they shall see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdome of heaven, and themselves thrust out; Lazarus in Abrahams bosom, and their selves in the burning lake; Christs poor despised fellow-sufferers shining forth as the Sun in the kingdome of their father, and themselves cast out into outer darknesse; then shall they change both their minde and their note: then shall their odious blasphemies be driven back again down their throats, and then made to say with Pharaoh. The Lord is righteous, and so are all his people, Esay 60. 21. but I and mine associates are wicked, and therefore deservedly wretched. We once counted the proud happy, but now we see that of David verified which erst we beleevd not: Thou hast rebuked the proud that are cursed: for that they erred from thy commandments. We looked upon the righteous as calamitous, as worms and no men: as the nullificamen populi (Tertullians expression) fit to be set with the dogs of the flock, and as the off-scouring of all things. But now we can vote with that man of God and say, Happy art thou, O Israel! Who is like unto thee, O people, saved by the Lord, the shield of thy help, and the sword of thine excecution! and thine enemies are now found liars unto thee: for thou treadest upon their high places, when they are troden under foot as unfavoury salt. Woe unto us spoilers; for now we are spoiled &c. Who among us shall dwell with the devouring fire? Who can abide with everlasting burnings? Behold the day is come that burneth as an oven Mal. 4. 1. and we are now as stubble fully dried that it may burn the better Nah. 1. 10. We are put away (even all the wicked of the earth) like dresse Psal. 119. 119. thrust away as thorns 2. Sam. 23: 6. placed as vile things under Christs feet Psal. 110. 1. When the righteous shine as bright as silver upon the celestiall shelf (as that martyr said) and turpasse us as farr as the lily doth the thorns Cant. 2. 2. or as the gold doth the coals in the goldsmiths shop: yea they are the throne of Christ Exod. 17. 16. his Jewels Mal. 3. 17. his ornament Ezek. 7. 20. the beauty of his ornament, and that set in majesty ib. a royall diadem on the head of Iehovah. Esay 62. 3. and so they shall one day appear to be, though now they do not, 1 Iob. 3. 2. it shall be no hard matter to discern them.

John Careles.

Between the righteous and the wicked ] Here they are together in the church militant, and ever have been. Sinners in Sion Isa. 33. 14. sacrificing Sodomites Isa. 1. 10. a devill in Christs family Iob. 13. 10. All men have not faith 2 Thess. 3. 2. all the Lords people are not holy Num. 16. 3. that any are, 'tis a just wonder. What is man that he should be clean, and he which is born of a woman that he

he should be righteous? Iob 15. 14. None are so but such as are arraigned with that fine white linnen and shining, the righteousnesses of the saints Rev. 19. 8. that twofold righteousness Imputed and Imparted, of Justification and of Sanctification. See both 1 Cor. 6. 11. and seek after both by Christs Merit and Spirit, by his Value and Vertue. He is Iehovah our righteousness Ier. 23. 5. and of his fulnesse we all receive Iob. 1. 16. He it is that makes us to differ from the wicked of the world, that have hearts full of hell, and are ever either hatching cockatrices eggs, or at best, weaving spiders webbs; vanity or villany is their whole practise. The best among them would serve god, and yet retain their lusts too; as Solomon thought he could follow sinfull pleasures, and yet keep his wisdom. And with such we must converse whiles in this world. Tares will be with the wheat, goats among the sheep, righteous and wicked together. God permits it so to be for the glory of his free grace, and for the triall and exercise of his people. Our care must be the greater: for evill men indanger good men, as weeds do the corn, as bad humours the blood, or an infected house the neighbourhood. We must resolve (as Ioshuah) to serve the Lord, howsoever: because a difference shall be one day, betwixt him that serveth God, and him that serveth him not. Where we see, that not serving of God, not sacrificing is a sinne, Eccles. 9. 2. Not robbing onely, but the not relieving of the poor was the rich mans ruin. Not gluttony onely, but overmuch abstinence may overthrow the body. Omission of diet breeds diseases; so doth omission of duties: and makes work for hell, or for the Physitian of our souls. Let us therefore have grace whereby we may serve God with reverence and godly fear, Heb. 12. 27. Serve him as old Zachary in his Canticle faith we should do, Luke 1. 74, 75. First out of sense of his dear love in our deliverance by Christ: whereinto the deeper we dive the sweeter. This will make us love to be his servants, Esay 56. 7. fervent in spirit, serving the Lord, Rom. 12. 12. Secondly, serve him without fear, slavish fear, serve him with an holy security, in full assurance of his gracious assistance and acceptance; yea though thorough infirmity we misse, or marre his work, yet he will spare us, Mal. 3. 17. Thirdly, serve him in holinesse and righteousness, in all parts and points of duty: shew your integrity both for subject and object: not picking or chusing your work, nor sticking at any thing, but willing in all things to please God. He doth not Gods but his own will, that doth no more then himself will. Fourthly, serve him sincerely, in holinesse and righteousness (before him, or, as in his presence.) Set the Lord ever at your right hand; look him full in the face, approve your hearts and lives unto him, do him but eye-service, and it sufficeth. Fifthly, serve him constantly, all the dayes of your lives, hire your selves to him for terme of life: why should you desire to shift or fleet? where can you mend your selves, either for fairnesse of work, or fulnesse of wages? Can the son of Iesse give you vineyards &c. said Saul to his servants, so may God say, Can the world do for you, as I both can and will if you cleave to me with full purpose of heart? Sure it cannot &c.

*Servati sumus
ut serviamus.*

FINIS.

An Alphabetical Table of all the Principall things contained in this whole W O R K.

A

Abstinence Pag. 265 Admonition rejected p. 60, 61. the best need it p. 480. Rich. 1. admonished by an Hermite p. 321
Adoption: the whole Doctrine of it p. 912,
913, 914, 915, 916, &c.
Adultery goeth along with idolatry p. 69,
70, 71. punished p. 57, 664
Affliction is Gods thorn-hedge p. 27. 'tis usefull p. 26. humbleth us p. 89. teacheth us 90. maketh us pray, 'ib. is Gods vocall instruction to us 377. Consorts under it 385. Difference of afflictions that befall saints and sinners 414, 421.
Saints are thereby purged 591, 592,
661, 662. tried 593. gratified 593.
How to live by faith in affliction 888, 889. Despondency under affliction re-proved 890. Suffer it patiently 891, 892. though not presently delivered 893.
Helps therunto, 'ib. & 894. God a Father to his afflicted. 928
Alchemy a pick-purse p. 420
Alexander M. meeting the high-priest
p. 520
Ambition unsatisfiable p. 422
Amos, who p. 221
Amurath 3 stabbed to death p. 579
Angels readily serve the Saints p. 504, 537. and why 504. they are our Gardians 512. heavenly spirits, &c. 537
Anger rash, the evil of it p. 326
Antiquity falsified by Papists p. 561 Apostasie p. 67. Apostates 74. it is very dangerous 178
Apparrell: pride in it condemned p. 448
Assurance: labour after it p. 153, 208.
be not unsettled 618
Astrologie judicary condemned p. 446
Atheists practicall p. 450

B

Baal, who p. 30. Baalim What 37
B. Babingtons three-leaved book p. 686

Baptisme promised p. 583
Bastards reproached p. 652
Bath of Christs Blood p. 660 Beauty lovely p. 281. stained with evil manners 408
Be Best in worst times, and why 695, 696
697, 698, &c.
Blasphemy punished p. 676,
Blood-guiltinesse wofull p. 406
Borbonius anagrammatized p. 23
Bribery condemned p. 73, 354, 382

C

Calling of the Gentiles p. 623
Get a lawfull Calling p. 309
Calvins Institutions, when, and why written p. 273. Calvin belied
by A Lapide p. 601
Cardinals pompous creation p. 25
Censure not others harshly p. 936, 937, 940 Chemarims Who p. 446
Children soon corrupted p. 83. unnatrall children 384. degenerate children 642. a fathers huge love to his children 585. Sennacherib why slain by his own sons 399
Church described by her afflictions p. 594.
restlesse here 504. is invincible 527, 576. is under persecution 594. she shall be delivered 887. onely she must pray for it 888. she is married to Christ 897. hath him for her Head 13
Christ his yoke is easie p. 152. he is a thorough-Saviour 169. a dew to his 179.
King of his Church 360. Abyssines emblem of his works 457. his Deity asserted 485. he pacifieth the heart 488.
he shall reigne 492. his intercession answered 506. how he is sent of his Father 513. how anointed 522. his dolo-rous passion 523. his subjects have peace 'ib. why He is called the Branch Cccc 539.

The Table of this whole Worke

539. All prophecies are fulfilled in him
 557. his poverty stumbled at id. the Bath of his blood 583, 660. benefites thereby 682. he is Gods Shepherd 589.
 the Sun of righteousness 683. the souls physician 683. his Intercession 943.
 A false Christ p. 689
 Clouds p. 560
 Comfort: God comforteth the aliege 503.
 comforts of the scripture, and of the creature 423.
 Company: evil is contagious p. 490 513
 Conference: benefit of it p. 680, 700, 824.
 Satan hindereth it 680. it is an indispensable duty 812. and why 813. bar-rennesse in, and backwardnesse unto it re-proved 818. be forward and free that way 820. means and helps thereunto 821, 822, 823, 824.
 Conscience: naturall stoopeth to the image of God p. 700
 Consideration: its necessity, and utility
 p. 473. See thought, meditation Constantinople: covetousnesse was its ruine 403, 591.
 Conversion: turn to God, and how p. 197,
 498, 500. because God is gracious 499.
 Cyprian converted by reading I. i. i. 351.
 Covenant breach a great sin p. 643. dangerous 647.
 New covenant sweet p. 44. see 594
 Covetousnesse restless p. 340, 341. unsatis-fiable 405. accursed 428
 Councell of Trent p. 16 Courage for Christ, get it p. 482. and how ib.
 Cruelty inhumane p. 223, 225, 226, 227.
 gloried in 429. Parisian Massacre 227
 Curse of God lights heavy p. 626
- Devils first sin, what p. 899
 Divorce for light matters not lawfull p.
 654, 655
 Doctrine like rain, and how p. 246
 Drowsinesse spirituell p. 476 Drunkennesse: mischief of it p. 104. 'tis the mother of many finnes 426. 'tis a damning sin 432. gloried in by some 265. drunken-healing 431. drunken sois 187
 Duty: be much in it p. 834, 835, 891 shall be accepted 825. and why 827, 828, 829

E

- Earthquakes, terrible ones p. 597, 222, 394
 Eclipses portentous p. 210, 211
 Egypt fruitfull p. 604. converted, ib.
 Elizabeths clemency p. 309. her prayer
 436 Enemies of Gods people open and secret
 p. 214. their cruelty 215 Gods heavy hand upon them 601. set one against another 602. Woe unto them 870, 871, 916. who they be 871. see persecutors, Church.
 England: our ancient mearenesse p. 165.
 our Reformation wonderfull 205. our destruction may be sudden 278. God warned us by John Faiths Rock in a fishes-belly 321 Englands George 395. 'tis a blessed Countrey 674, 675. Peterus his prophecy of our ruine 505
 Enthusiasts slight the scriptures p. 129,
 130. see 209
 Exact walking required of saints p. 910, 911
 Self-Examination p. 452. do it, or God will punish 453, 475

F

- Dead digg'd up p. 228
 Deliverance the times of it p. 885, 866, 527, 903. Church shall be delivered 887, 888, 903. pray for it 888
 Dependance upon God for all p. 925
 Depopulation accursed p. 455
 Desertion p. 89. what to do in it 836
 Desolation fruit of sin p. 36
 Desires: seconded with endeavours p. 483
 Digressions when they are lawfull p. 441
 Diligence in well-doing p. 891 Disgrace a great judgement p. 633. more feared then sin is ib.
- Faith an hard work p. 43. wherein it consisteth 45. appropriate God by it 384. it quickeneth other graces 425.
 founded upon the power of God 546.
 live by faith 426, 888, 889: it ma-keth men couragious 602. do all in faith 662. beleve the goodnesse of God 936
 Famine: a sore plague p. 633, 245
 Fasting: the exercise of it p. 197, 201, 202.
 fruit of it 204
 Father: God is a Father to all his faithfull ones p. 911. Whence, and how 91, 914.
 he is not a Father to the wicked 915.
 yet they claim kindred 916. his mercy
 is

D

The Table of this whole Work.

is more then fatherly 927, 928.
Fear: it causeth hast p. 157. Panick fears 412, 577, 602, 805

Fear of God p. 614. every true Christian feareth the Lord 708, 709. how, and why 707, 800, 801, &c causes, effects, companions, and opposites of this holy fear 800, 801, 802, 803. kinds of it 804, 617, 708. who they are that fear not God
804. or other things more then God 805.
The best are defective in it 807. signes of Gods holy fear 807, 809. motives to it 810. means 810, 811

Few exalt God p. 154. few wise 182. few good 212, 377, 591

Scottish fire-crosse p. 217

Forgetting of God p. 121

Fortune how represented p. 237

Free-grace p. 179. all is of mercy 509.

magnifie free-grace in our adoption 920

Friends are oft persuasions p. 383

Fruitfulness p. 180

G

Gain of godlinesse p. 676, 849. many look onely at wages 177

Garments wherefore given p. 33

Geneva upheld by the hand of heaven p.
509, 510

Gentiles: your calling p. 623. disgusted
by Jews ib.

Gifts once abused, blasted p. 632

Glory: give all to God p. 412. in case of victory 612

Glory of saints here and hereafter p.
898

God: he is a great King p. 628, 629. his name is a readfull 629. his patience abused turns to fury 655, 656. his hatred of sin 22. his omniscience 78.
his liberality in rewarding 145. seek him ib. his patience 223, 238. his superabundant pardoning mercy 388, 389, 390. his subduing grace 390.
he frowneth the wicked to destruction 286. how he is a Rock 421. He seeth, therefore take heed 421, 652. how he hateth sinne 421. his faithfulness
425. We see but little of Him 438.
He is with his, and for them 479. his anger against sinners 497. his jealousie for his people. 506, 507. he com-forteth the abject 503. his tender mercies 508, 513. he effecteth great matters by small means 529. he is immutable 666, 667. how he is said to repent ib. wicked men have base and bald thoughts of him 855. He is Lord of Hosts 867, 869. what his hosts are,

and why so called 867, 868. his truth 883. his goodnesse ib. his justice ib.
he is not an hard Master 934. he taketh small things in good part 935.
let us beleeve his goodnesse 936.

Gospels three-fold operation p. 486

Grace of God is the greatest blessing p.

621. get it rather then gold ib. seek it first 472. it is free p. 14, 179, 518.

See free-grace.

Grace hath unspeakable comfort p. 909

Great mens sins do much hurt p. 322. they must be told of them 348

Grief causing death p. 133

Grow in grace p. 684, 685

Gunpowder-treason p. 58

H

Hardnesse of heart p. 544

Hear attentively p. 136. an hearing ear 501

Heavens rest and happinesse p. 889

Heavenly-mindednesse p. 605

Hell-fire terrible p. 591, 592, 681. torments thereof 601. not believed 681.

History usefull p. 166

Holinesse is honourable p. 907. and therefore to be sought 907, 908

Honour God in 1 thought. 2 words. 3 works p. 921. see glory and praise

Hope p. 40

The horrible Sophister p. 419

Hosea, when and how long he prophesied p.
1. how he took to wife an harlot 4

Humiliation must be hearty p. 678

Humility in holy duties threefold p. 376

Hypocrisie is an hatefull lye p. 157. an odious vice 244, 626, 627, 628

Hypocrites are accursed p. 627, 114.
their specious pretences 568. why they partake of Ordinances 569. they wrangle with God 677

I

Idolatry and adultery together p. 4, 69,

70, 71. It is an abominable sinne 99,

115, 116, 584. a senselesse sinne 433,

434. a land-desolating sinne 561

Idolaters are ever at uncertainties p. 368.
they kisse their idols 168

Jehovah Gods memoriall 161. the import of it 666

Jewes: their calling 121. their land fertile

The Table of this whole Worke.

tile 193. a disiected and despised people 288. their sublime drage 302. Satan stir'd up Herod to beautifie their Temple 487. of their conversion, and future flourish 515, 578, 592, 599, 602. their cruelty 548. how they are hated ib. they are a very numerous nation 564, cozened by a mock-Moses 565. their last dolefull desolation 571. they are discovenanted ib. sold 30 a penny 572, disiected 573. they are still vain-glorious 592. harsh husbands 650. earthly-minded 685. their great respect to the Law 686, 687. they reject the Gospel ib. and Christians ib. they falsify the text 688. their sects and dissensions 689

Ignorance, brutish 617, 57. affected 63, 64, 71. a blushtful sin 436

Ignominy the reward of iniquity p. 634

Images in Churches p. 80

Impudence in sin p. 534

Incorrigible 26, 27, 53, 77, 78, 94, 100

Ingo King of Danes his respect to poor saints p. 908

Injustities: what are p. 933. they deprive us of Gods favour 941. objections about them answered 942

Ingratitude how displeasing to God p. 29 a remedy against it ib. hatefulness of it 30, 109. it forfeiteth all 31, 33, 50

Joel who, and when he lived p. 185

Joy in wickeds downfall, limited p. 612

Joy of the wicked is short p. 34, 35. they joy in other mens misery 298

The just mans joy p. 207. in affliction 442

Judges, evil, a publike mischief 459. judgement perverted 418

Judgement generall: it shall certainly be 431. terrible 658, 682. the fire of that last day 406. where Christ shall sit to judge p. 596, 213

Judgements of God in this life: Observe them 612. rejoyce in them ib. He smiteth not till needs must 632. and then is resolute ib. He loveth to retaliate 643. He punisheth slowly, but surely 663.

K

K Now God as a Father p. 918, and how 919. grow in knowledge 92. sinne not against knowledge p. 635.

L

L And-mark removed and how p. 85

Lawes excellency and use 686. the Law judiciall, ceremoniall, and moral 688

Licentiousnesse under Nero p. 470

Lye not p. 264. 'tis a great sin 55, 378, 159. brings desolation ib.

Life a precious mercy p. 636. 'tis in Gods hand ibid. how and why mens lives are shortened 481. live apace 598

Lip-labour lost-Labour p. 110

Lord, whence p. 525

Losses of saints made up p. 563

Love God, and how p. 923, 924. suffer for him out of love ib.

Luke warmnesse condemned p. 701

Lutier over-magnified p. 689

M

M Accabees whence so called p. 558

Magistrates must countenance Ministers p. 470. Exaltours are a publike pest 573. they must fear God 666. See Judges:

Malachy, who p. 607, 608

Manner: do all aright p. 662, in faith ibid.

Marriages with Idolaters dangerous p. 648

Meditation on God p. 850, 852, 857. motives to it 859. matter of meditation 861. manner 862. measure 863. hinderances 864. helps ib. See Consideration.

Meek persons preyed on p. 230

Memory corrupt p. 373

Mercy and judgement to be kept p. 162. mercy abused p. 8. limited to the saints only 10. let it melt us 151. God delighteth in it 929

Merchandise usefull p. 448. but abused, and how 449

Merits p. 36

Ministers must bee blameable p. 613. well maintained 622, 669. may not preach till called to it 625. must speak truth howsoever they speed 638, 639. shall convert souls 640. must be able and apt to teach ib. and plainly 641. alledging Scripture ib. they must bee made welcome ib. scandalous Ministers 642. flatterers 645. they must repeat

The Table of this whole Work.

- repeat the same points 47. use all means to win men 95. bee faithfull 239. Ministers are Saviours, and how 303. must be content with mean things 329. parasiticall preachers a plague 347, 351. The best have small sucresse 300. they must both say and do well 441, 442. take their best opportunities 469. must bee knowing men ib. cry aloud 51. Satans spite at them 516. may lose their abused gifts 574. their hard labour 587. burthen 606. Ministers must bee exact 613, 639. they are slighted, if poor 617. they are the worst men if wicked 621. those that scant them are cursed 670. how they are beguiled, and beguiled 672. they must preach home to the conscience 690.
- Mocking: goodnesse derided p. 521
 Money monarch of this World p. 229
 Moses praised p. 166
 Multitude not to be followed p. 704 go to heaven alone rather 707
 Murder a foul sin p. 56, 58
 Mutuall help p. 492, 552
- N
- A Good Name gotten by holinesse p. 644
 ignominy fruit of iniquity ib. and 634. be not over-tenaer of thy good name 328
 Nationall sinnes bring nationall plagues p. 590
 Nineveh a great city 305, 320. desolated 305, 306
 Nullifidians p. 435
- O
- Obedience, Jehu's partiall p. 67. obey God rather than man 85, 86
 Obstinate in sin p. 77, 78, 94, 100. bee not so 654. some love to thwart God 609
 Occasions of sin: shun them p. 72
 Offers of grace slighted p. 604
 Old age kept unsported p. 106
 Omissions are dangerous sinnes p. 109
 945 Oppressours are Cannibals p. 349. their evil-got goods prosper not 295. but are cursed 474. Shun their sinne 646
- P
- Papists are idolaters p. 18. Pagansthey are 599
 Patience of God no quittance p. 5
 Patient, be in misery p. 892. and how 893, 894
 Paul censured p. 706. and Marg: Peace and truth together p. 552
 Perjury a great sin, and heavily punished p. 533, 664, 665
 Persecutours plagued p. 209. they help to increase the Church p. 220. wo to such 900. God is against them, and why 902. See Enemies.
 Pleasure-mongers p. 224. a notorious one, p. 266
 Pleny is from God p. 46
 Polygamy unlawfull, and why p. 651, 652
 Policy: reason of State p. 407
 Pope not infallible p. 640. his insolency and usurpation 269. his soul-murder 401, his bewitching superstition 408. he is over-magnified by his parasites 870
 Poverty preyed on p. 277. despised 454. no prejudice before God 909, 910
 Power of God p. 867, 869. fear him therefore 872. trust in him 873. submit unto him 874, 875. comforts flowing from it 878. See God.
 Practise: be doing p. 483, 684. saints practise 884
 Praise God for his mercy p. 930
 Prayer: pray and faint not p. 620. person must first be accepted 622. The power of prayer 37, 211, 217, 270, 440, 876, 877. ask and have 559. pray earnestly 541. 'tis a necessary duty 177. Gods liberall answers 205. He heareth prayers 218, 388, 424. bold access to him 417. wicked cannot pray 620. nor be heard ib. how to know our prayers are heard 837
 Preaching: what it is p. 84. twice a day, 493
 Pride 79, 80. its picture 420. it precedes a fall 456
 Prins stigmata Landis p. 589
 Processions, popish p. 165
 Procrastination is greatest folly p. 471.
 punished 944
 Prodigious in heaven p. 210
 Priviledges of saints p. 896. price of a saint 902. honour such ib. 108. their glory at the Resurrection 904, 905. their priviledges privative and positive 925, 926.
 Promi-

The Table of this whole Worke.

Promises of God : they shall be performed p. 636, 637. they are a strong-hold 558. pray them over 848. mixt with menaces and why 566.

Prophecy obscure p. 537

Prosperity : no sure signe of piety p. 163
it causeth pride 170, 420. slayeth the wicked 134, 71, 73, 74

Providence of God : Doubt not of it p. 424.
see 882. He will preserve his and provide for them 878

Psalms : book of Psalms praised p. 442, 443

Publike, most to be minded p. 476

Punishment waiteth upon sinne p. 59, 217, 531, 535, 545, 670, 843
punishment in kind 63. in all sorts of sinners 76. punishment insensible 87.
one mischiefe after another 260

R

Rain, how taken in Scripture p. 603.
it is from God 560, 673, 245. Doctrine resembled to it 246. rain of blood 210

Reformation was ever opposed p. 630. what Magistrates and Ministers are to do in it 631

Relapse not p. 587. let the relapsed return to God, and how 28

Religion reproached as rebellion p. 272, 273. otherwise reproached 455. mixtures in it 446. It is the beauty and bulwark of a land 512

Remission of sinne a great comfort p. 519, Christs righteousness imputed ib.

Repentance the parts of it p. 27. the vertue of it 39. mercy leads to it 40. necessity of it 192. there is a naturall and morall repentance 321. Reformation is the best repentance 324. See Conversion.

Resemble God, and wherein p. 922.

Restitution is necessary p. 324

Resurrection : it is sure p. 319. and will be glorious 562, 904, 905.

Retract errors and evil practises p. 586

Revenge p. 226

Reward of righteousness is liberall p. 673.
God remembreth and requirerh all his 839. and why ib. and 840, 841. his service is very gainfull 842, 843, 849.

See gain of godlinesse.

Righteousnesse of Christ imputed to us p. 932

Romish Edomites p. 610, Romish cruelty 347. Romes slib 611. its pride and downfall 65. avarice 66. 'tis degenerate 206. must be burnt ib. Romes ruine 609.

S

Sabbath profaned p. 128. must be our delight 276. benefit of it ib.

Sacrifices spirituall to be offered to God p. 625. our selves especially ib.

Sacriledge a great sinne p. 215. punished 668, 670

Saints are earthly Angels p. 608. their sinnes are most grievous 625. God will own them, and honour them 895, 896. despise them not for their outward meanenesse 906. their honour 907

Scandall to be shunned p. 239. scandalous Ministers 642. Professours 231

Scriptures commendation p. 120, 121. See Word.

Seek God p. 146

Selah what it importeth p. 432

Seducers dangerous p. 584. they must be stigmatized 585. not tolerated 584. see 588. they are hardly ever recovered 587.

Self-deniall to be studied p. 705, 801

Self-seekers p. 137. self-ascribers 423, 542

Sensuality p. 68, 224, 266

Septuagint translate amisse p. 629, 620, 628

Security fore-runneeth ruine p. 263, 427

Serve God with the best p. 615. not with slubbering service ib. 676. serve him with soul and body too 625. love Gods service 276. lame devotion 618. honour of Gods service 687. he highly accepteth our performances 825, 826, 827, &c. He rejecteth the services of the wicked, and why 829, 830. and that's their misery 831: let them therefore repent ib. Blesse God for acceptance of our services 834. get into Gods service 846. and serve him earnestly 846. God how to bee served 917. serve God, and why 937. He accepteth small services 938, 939. how he is to be served 945.

Setlednesse to be laboured after p. 618

Sickness fruit of sinne p. 378, 379

Sight of sin is before sorrow p. 580

Silence in due season p. 257
Similies

Be careful. Not Rrarily daing need p. 60.

The Table of this whole Work.

Similies how to be used	p. 164	are slighted 413. till felt 491
Singing a Gospel-Ordinance	p. 40	Time-servers	p. 701
Sincerity accepted	p. 98	Tithings, whence	p. 345
Sinne a great burthen p. 606, 607. It maketh God to disown people 634. to destroy them 23. remember it not with delight 42. the filth of sinne 78, 518. hatefull to God 143. especially if iterated 223. 'tis deceitfull 293. the greatest folly 317. hardly parted with 649. saints sinnes are most hainous 236. difference of their sins from other 933. adde not sin to sin 549		Tythes to be payed	p. 669
Sir, whence	p. 525	Tytbe and be rich p. 673, 674
Slandering p. 85, 86. make-bates 417		Tongue: order it well p. 383. an ill tongue destructive 407
Sorrow, godly p. 198. it follows upon sight of sin 580. 'tis deep 581. greatest of all sorrows 581, 582. 'tis secret ib. sorts of sorrows ib.		Treachery to be avoyded	p. 646
Souls have no sexes p. 373. the worth of a soul 429. it comes from God, and is like him 579. not propagated 653. precious ib.		Trinity of persons known of old	p. 484
		Truth: little is to be found p. 53. 'tis ill taken 255. bated 256, 274
		Trust in God hath security p. 396 413. the triumph of Trust 420. Trust in Gods mercy 930
		Tumults outragious	p. 147
		Turks Empire great p. 418. how they use their Alapi 420
		Turn to God. See Conversion, and Repentance.

V

Spanish greatnesse	p. 418	V ictory is of God, and a great blessing p. 686. especially that over corruption ib.
Spirits first work in the heart	p. 852	Unity seek it p. 646. study it 462. Christian union 690
Strength of a saint wherein	p. 579	Unsettlednesse in judgement	p. 618
Stumbling at the word dangerous	p. 642	Unthan'fulnesse a grave p. 608, 609. a great sinne 231. It exasperateth the Lord 572
Submission hath mercy	p. 249	Unworthy Receivers	p. 933
Suffer for God	p. 144	Vowes must be payed	p. 318
Superstition pompous p. 70. prodigall 375
Supper: Come prepared to the Lords Supper	p. 616
Swearing a common sinne p. 532. dangers 55
Sweating-sicknesse	p. 247, 310

W

		W ait upon God p. 49, 50, 162, 425
T ears powerfull with God p. 461, 197, 650		Walk exactly p. 520. worthy of God 706
Temporals are to be slighted p. 24, 25. saints oft have them 546		Wantonneffe: shun it	p. 17
Temptation: resist Satan p. 517. withstand first motions 544		Warre: the wo of it p. 566, 595, 148, 153. desolation is by it 445. 'tis from God, and how 549
Tempt not God	p. 672	Watch in prayer and meditation p. 524. the heart is to be watched 654
Thankfulnesse how it must be qualified p. 177		Wealth oft betrayeth the owner p. 403. it sinketh the soul 427
Think upon God, and why p. 850, 852. See Meditation. Wicked think not on God 854. or not well 855, 857, 858		Whale, a huge creature	p. 313
Thirst corporall and spirituall p. 20, 21		Whoredome: mischief of it p. 35. whores 75. impudent 230
Thought not free p. 342, 481, 551. evil thoughts argue an evil man 856. earthly thoughts when they are naught 863		Wicked: grow worse and worse 675. above measure 131. wittily wicked 398. they shall be surely and severely punished 843. let them therefore repent and meet the Lord 844, 845. They are
Threats shall be accomplished p. 643. wee should tremble at them 236, 237. they

T

VV

rouled
N. 6. 10. 10.
570.

The Table of this whole Worke.

are Satans slaves, and perish with him
ib. disavowed by God 899. specially at the Resurrection 900. they are vile persons 944

men must read it 481. It will lay hold upon the wicked 502

Words: look well to thy words p. 41, 383.
idle and evil words condemned 813

Widdows and Orphanes are Gods Clients p.
665

Works of God must be regarded p. 186 they instruct us 253. Sea is commanded

Wilfulness is destructive p. 358
Will-worship rejected p. 81, 261

by God alone 394
World: its vanity p. 169. mutability

Wisdom wherein it consist's p.183
Witches: seek not to them p.664

411
Worship of God: externall onely is little

Wives: why to be kindly dealt with p.650, 652

Worth 374
Wrongs done to the righteous reach to God.

Women wicked, boysserous p.242
Word of God stumbled at p.183.

_____

642. why things are repeated in scripture 189. famine of the Word 279.

Y

caused by contempt 280, 477. Word wrested 291.

Youth must be consecrated to God

word read converted Cyprian 351.
A short bible 375. the word is is plain in necessaries 424. word and sword go together 470. It is of God 473. It is 7 Eat of Gods people p. 699 made operative by the spirit 478. Lay-

Z

L Let's go to the people p. 699.
703,706.

FINIS.

The Contents of the Righteous Mans Recompence, Or,
A True Christian characterized and encouraged:
Out of Malachy, 3. 16, 17, 18.

CHAP. I.

THe Text opened, and Analysed. Pag. 693

CHAP. II.

Doct. 1. Saints must be Best in worst Times. p. 695

Sett. 1.

The point Confirmed, by 1 Precept. 2 Practise. p. 695

Sett. 2.

The point confirmed by Reasons from  $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} 1 \text{ God} \\ 2 \text{ Men} \end{array} \right. \left\{ \begin{array}{l} 1 \text{ Themselves} \\ 2 \text{ Others} \end{array} \right. \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{Good.} \\ \text{Bad.} \end{array} \right.$  p. 697
p. 698
p. 699
p. 700

Sett. 3.

Use 1 A sharp Reproof of  $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{Luke-warme Laodiceans} \\ \text{Timorous Temporizers} \end{array} \right.$  p. 701
p. 702

Sett. 4.

Use 2 A forcible Exhortation to courage for Christ, with 4 Helps thereunto. p. 703

CHAP. III.

Doct. 2. Of the severall sorts of fear; and that every faithfull Christian feareth the Lord. p. 708

Sett. 1.

The Doctrine cleared, and confirmed by Scripture. p. 708

Sett. 2.

The Doctrine further confirmed by Arguments drawne from 1 The Causes.
2 Consequents. 3 Companions. 4 Contraries to the true fear of God. p. 709, &c.
Sett.

Eccc

The Contents of the

Sect. 3.

Objections and Quæres touching the Fear of God cleared, and answered. p. 804

Sect. 4.

Use 1. Information: They that fear not God, are not His: and who these are, by their Character out of Psalm 36. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c. p. 804, 805, &c.

Sect. 5.

Use 2. Examination: where; Marks of the true Fear of God in respect of

{	1 Evil, both in	Judgement,	{	Others	{	Rich,
		Practise.				Poor.
	2 Good, toward	{	God,	{	Our selves in	{	Prosperity, Men,

p. 807, 808, 809

Sect. 6.

Use 3. Exhortation to get, and grow in this holy Fear, with 6 Motives, and 2 Means tending thereto: p. 809, 810, 811

CHAP. IV.

Dof. 3. The Text expounded, and the Duty of Christian conference propounded, p. 812

Sect. 1.

Christian Conference, and mutuall confirmation confirmed by Scripture, p. 812, 813

Sect. 2.

Reasons of the point, 1 From God { commanding, } 2 From Men: { rewarding. } and 1 our selves shall be hereby { sealed, } 2 Others: { secured. }

1 Good men shall be 1 curbed from sinne. 2 quickened to duty.
2 Bad men shall be 1 confuted. 2. defeated, p. 813, 814, 815, 816

Sect. 3.

Use 1. Reproof of idle and evil speakers together. p. 817

Sect. 4.

Use 2. Complaint against the better sort, too too barren and backward to holy Conference, p. 818

Sect. 5.

Use 3. Exhortation to be forward and free to godly Discourse, p. 820

Sect. 6.

Helps to a holy dexterity this way; How to 1 get it. 2. Use it, p. 821, 822, 823, 824

CHAP.

Righteous Mans Recompence.

CAHP. V.

Dof. 4. The Text further expounded : and withall the Doctrine of Gods gracious acceptance of our upright performances propounded, p. 825

Seft. 1.

The Doctrine confirmed by Scripture, p. 825

Seft. 2.

The Doctrine confirmed by reasons from God the { Father, onne, } p. 827
Holy Ghost.

Seft. 3.

The Doctrine further confirmed by reasons from the Saints, p. 828

Seft. 4.

Use 1. It's otherwise with the wicked. Their persons are hated: their performances rejected; and why, p. 829

Seft. 5.

Use 2. Admonition: Let the wicked break off their sine, that they lose not their services, p. 831

Seft. 6.

Use 3. Exhortation, to the best, to be humbled for their 1 not prizing their priviledge. 2 Not praising God for it. 3 Not improving it to the utmost, p. 833

Seft. 7.

Use 4. Exhortation to the saints, 1 To admire this mercy. Helps thereunto, respecting God, and themselves, p. 834

Seft. 8.

2 To retain it, and if lost, to recover it, and how: with answer to some Quares and objections, made by a misgiving heart, p. 835

CHAP. VI.

Dof. 5. God perfectly remembreth, and plentifully requiteth all our labours of love to him and His, p. 838

Seft. 1.

This truth confirmed by Scripture, p. 839

Seft. 2.

This truth confirmed by 6. Reasons p. 839

Seft. 3.

Use 1. Confutation of the contrary-minded, that say, or conceive at least, that it's in vain to serve the Lord, p. 841

Seft. 4.

Use 2. The wicked shall be surely and severely punished, p. 841

Seft.

The Contents of the

Sett. 5.
Use 3. Let them therefore hasten out of the Devils danger, and get into Gods service. How that may be done,	p. 844
Sett. 6.
Use 4. Exhortation to Saints to abide in Gods love, and to abound in his work: sith their labour of love is not in vain in the Lord,	p. 847
Sett. 7.	pag. 847
Sett. 8.	pag. 848

CHAP. VII.

Doff. 6. Such as fear the Lord will be thinking upon his Name. What it is to do so,	p. 850
--	--------

Sett. 1.
The point proved by Scripture,	p. 851
Sett. 2.
The point proved and enforced by 5. Reasons,	p. 851
Sett. 3.
Use 1. Those that habitually think not upon God, fear not God,	p. 953
Sett. 4.
Of those that think base and bald thoughts of God,	p. 855
Sett. 5.
Against thoughts of Atheisme, blasphemy, infidelity, and rebellion,	p. 855
Sett. 6.
Use 2. Examination: where, Trialls of the goodnesse of our best thoughts by their 1 Causes. 2 Effects,	p. 856
Sett. 7.
Use 3. Exhortation: Settle the soundnesse of your sanctification, by the goodnesse of your thoughts. Motives thereto,	p. 859
Sett. 8.
Directions, for 1 the matter of good Meditations.	p. 861
Sett. 9.
Directions for 2 the manner of doing this duty well, both for substance, and circumstance,	p. 862
Sett. 10.
Directions about the measure of divine Meditation: where is shewed how men offend 5 wayes, in thinking on earthly things,	p. 863
Sett. 11.
Directions to the Means of fruitfull thinking on Gods holy Name. Where, 4 Hinderances to be avoyded, and 7 helps to be used,	p. 864
Sett. 12.
The Conclusion.	p. 866

The

Righteous Mans Recompence.

The Contents of the second Part of the Righteous Mans Recompence.

CHAP. I.

The Text divided,	p.866
Sect. 1.
That God is Lord of Hosts. What these Hosts are: why called Hosts: what it is to be Lord of Hosts,	867
Sect. 2.
The Pope will needs be Lord of Hosts,	p.869
Sect. 3.
Wo to rebels against the Lord of Hosts,	p.870
Sect. 4.
Tremble before this mighty Lord of Hosts,	p.872
Sect. 5.
Trust in his power, for fulfilling his promises,	p.873
Sect. 6.
Stoop to his power, and submit to his Sovereignty,	p.874
Sect. 7.
Set his power awork by prayer: The power of prayer,	p.875
Sect. 8.
Be comforted in the consideration of his Power, where divers objections of weaker Christians are answered,	p. 877,878,879,880

CHAP. II.

The Lord will find a fit time to make up his jewels from the worlds misusages	p: 881
Sect. 1,2,3,4,5.	p.882,883
Reasons from Gods Providence, Power, Truth, Goodnesse, and Justice,	ibid.
Sect. 6.
Reasons from the Saints themselves,	p. 884
Sect. 7.
When God will make up his jewels,	p.885
Sect. 8.
Comfort under publike calamities,	p.887
Sect. 9.
Comfort under personall crosses and grievances,	p.888
Sect. 10.
Reproof of frowardnesse and faintheartednesse in affliction,	p.890
Sect. 11.
Exhortation to diligence in duty,	p.891

The Contents of the

Sect. 12.

Exhortation to patience in misery, p.892

Sect. 13.

Helps to patient waiting upon God for deliverance, p.893

CHAP. III.

God will own and honour his Saints, p.895

Sect. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.

Reasons and grounds of this gracious dealing of his, p.896, 897

Sect. 6.

It shall be farre otherwise with the wicked, p.899

Sect. 7.

Terrour to those that set themselves against the saints, p.900

Sect. 8, 9, 10.

Exhortation to honour them that fear the Lord : and what great cause men have, and shall have so to do, p.902, 903, 904, &c.

Sect. 11, 12.

Exhortation to practise holinesse, that hath so great honour put upon it: and why, p.907, 908

Sect. 13.

Let the saints see their dignity, and be thankfull, p.909

Sect. 14.

Let the saints see their duty, and be carefull, p.910

CHAP. IV.

God is a Father to all his faithfull servants, p.911

Sect. 1.

Reasons hereof drawn from the causes, p.912

Sect. 2, 3.

Reasons taken from the effects of his Fatherhood, p.913

Sect. 4.

God no Father to the wicked, whatever they pretend to him, p.914, 915

Sect. 5.

Terrour to those that maligne, or misuse Gods children, p.916

Sect. 6.

Try your Title to God as a Father. Marks, p.917

Sect. 7.

Settle this, that ye are Gods children : and how, p.918

Sect. 8.

Let all Gods children know their Father: and how, p.918

Sect.

Righteous Mans Recompence.

Sect. 9.

Let them thankfully acknowledge his free grace in their adoption: and why,
p. 919

Sect. 10.

Let them honour their Father: and how,
p. 920

Sect. 11.

Let them resemble their Father: and wherein,
p. 922

Sect. 12.

Let them love their Father: and how to expresse their love,
p. 923

Sect. 13.

Let them depend upon their Father, both for prevention of evil, and provision of good,
p. 924

Sect. 14.

Comfort of Adoption: where are shewed the priviledges of sonnes, privative, and positive,
p. 925, 926

CHAP. V.

God will pity and pardon his people their wants and weaknesses,
p. 927

Sect. 1, 2, 3, 4.

Reasons from God, out of Micah, 7. 18, 19.
p. 927

Sect. 5, 6.

Reasons respecting the saints themselves, who are 1 pure in heart, 2 perfect in Christ,
p. 931

Sect. 7.

Let none suck poison out of this sweet point,
p. 932

Sect. 8.

Reproof of such as censure hardly of God,
p. 934

Sect. 9.

Reproof of such saints as censure hardly of themselves, [and their performances,
p. 934

Sect. 10.

Reproof of such as uncharitably censure others,
p. 936

Sect. 11.

Exhortation: to put your selves into Gods service,
p. 937

Sect. 12.

Give God the glory of his Fatherly goodness,
p. 938

Sect. 13.

Bear with others weaknesses, and forbear harsh censures,
p. 939

Sect. 14.

Take comfort, and courage, notwithstanding infirmities, and failings in the manner, p. 941

Errata.

Faults escaped in the Commentary.

Page 2. line 30. read in the gall p. 7 l. 5. wall r valley. ib l. 7. Tent r. meal. p. 12 l. 32. spirituell r. spiritfull. p. 15 l. 53. required r. reserved. p. 18 l. 53. r. directly. p. 24 l. 49. Collier r. Caloier. p. 35 l. 28. r. Non mea sunt. p. 38 l. 18. lack r. like. p. 41 l. 43. duties r. deities. p. 44 l. 15. sutabler. sutable. p. 55 l. 5. harts r. houses. p. 56 l. 55. Edomites r. Sedomites. p. 60 l. 46. r. deided. p. 62 l. 9. r. blind) shall be darkned. p. 73 l. 11. And r. a pull. p. 77 l. 27. scribes r. stripes. p. 78 l. 13 r. world. p. 92 l. 43. r. acquired. p. 95 l. 42. taking r. talking. p. 107 l. 1 r. à res. p. 128 l. 2 r. observing. ib l. 4. priests. day r. devils. day. p. 137 l. 29. r. marred. p. 141 l. 35 r. Deaster. p. 166 l. 38. r. Cyrils. p. 189 l. 56 r. quieted. p. 193 l. 39. r. mansit. p. 194 l. 29. r. relieve. p. 242 l. 23 r. Zegedine. p. 261 l. 38. r. heat-lisse. p. 270 l. 29. r. others. p. 290 l. 18. r. Cabbalists. p. 291 l. 6. r. fat and. p. 295 l. 35. r. alive. p. 296 l. 51. r. Zopyrus & 55. Cyneas & l. 56. r. Pyrrhus p. 299 l. 38. r. Pyrgopolynices. p. 310 l. 40. r. due. p. 314. l. 30. r. thin. p. 315 l. 48. r. promises. p. 316 l. 2. r. right hand. p. 317 l. 3. r. affatu. p. 321 l. 32. r. exculed. & l. 34. r. fum. & 35. r. conceived. p. 326 l. 23 r. becagnas; ib l. 6. r. zeal. p. 331 l. 6. r. quartaa. p. 334 l. 8. r. pour out. p. 365 l. 33. r. eat. p. 372 l. 7. r. theirs. ib. 32. dele fin. p. 374 l. 53. r. dejected. p. 384 l. 45. r. well. p. 400 l. 31. r. Poliorcetes. ib l. 35. r. Dissipatores. p. 405 l. 6. r. Leb. p. 420 l. 53. r. devoting. p. 429. l. 47. r. angle. p. 435 l. 6. r. imposture p. 437 l. 34 r. that when. p. 438 l. 18. r. speciall. p. 441 l. 29 r. grievous. p. 445 l. 53. r. mawmers. p. 449 l. 54. r. nihil. p. 452 l. 14. r. Gaius. p. 458 l. 26. r. bare. p. 459 l. 35. r. premises. p. 465 l. 41 r. listlessness. p. 471 l. 9. r. mad. p. 472 l. 19. r. certè non. p. 486 l. 6 r. acclamation. p. 490 l. 40. r. e. rat. p. 513 l. 51. r. crattle. p. 527 l. 33. r. unpassable ib. 58. r. somewhere. p. 548. r. mors est p. 550 l. 49 r. few, true, and ponderous. p. 580 l. 43. r. can the waters flow p. 587 l. 46. r. ministry therefore. p. 589 l. 58. r. scattered and shattered. p. 610 l. 12. r. whilome. p. 614 l. 5. r. Of one not at all. ib l. 16 r. glove. p. 616 l. 48. r. they. p. 634 l. 47. r. pestilen. e. p. 635 l. 37. r. contrary to prevent p. 637 l. 8. r. falsifie. p. 642 l. 19. after father Afa, adde, Manasseh degenerateth into Abaz. p. 648. l. 1 r. by Gods good laws. p. 650 l. 35. r. fleu. p. 664 l. 24. r. adulterium. ib. l. 52. r. light. p. 677 l. 24. r. a flurre. p. 684 l. 16. r. inferiour bodies.

Faults escaped in the Righteous mans Repomence.

Page 695 l. 57 r. caring. p. 708 l. 46. r. character. p. 810 l. 54. r. set and serious p. 823 l. 3 r. vice. p. 824 l. 31. r. trading. p. 825 l. 33. r. he heard and took. p. 843 l. 44. r. we cannot better convince p. 849 l. 36. r. mock. p. 851 l. 18. r. light. p. 852 l. 0 r. fat abroad. p. 854 l. 10. r. jog; ib. 50. r. conservation. p. 860 l. 10. r. teachers. p. 861 l. 16. r. creatures. p. 865 l. 12. r. extracting. p. 871 l. 21 r. with them. p. 876 l. 7. r. from the p. 879 l. 6. r. invifible. p. 883 l. 14 r. dicere. p. 890 l. 3. r. frowardnesse. p. 897 l. 38 dele and such. p. 899 l. 28. r. waxed. p. 900 l. 40. r. Doege. p. 907 l. 39. r. coveting. p. 911 l. 33. r. good. p. 927 l. 38. r. setting. ib. l. 41. r. frailties. p. 929 l. 24. r. David. ib. 25 r. as rejoyceth. ib l. 41. r. quiets. p. 936 l. 15. r. baffled p. 938 l. 43. r. exhortation. p. 939 l. 38. r. then remembered they that. ib l. 52. r. induce. p. 940 l. 47 r. flow of heart. p. 943 l. 6. r. betternesse. ib l. 53. r. slandered Gods house-keeping.

